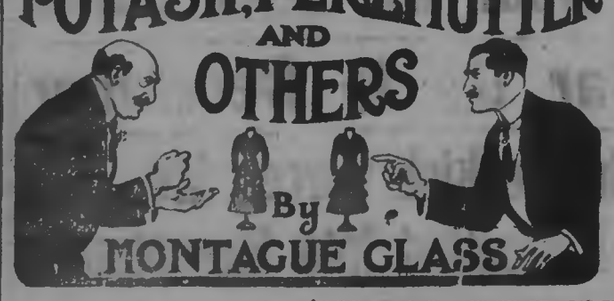
OUR SERIAL STORY

POTASH, PERLMUTTER AND OTHERS



By MONTAGUE GLASS

"What d'ye mean, going to make me work?" Meiselson asked indignantly. "I am working just as hard as you are, Mr. Shimko. When a feller is selling toilet soaps and perfumeries, Mr. Shimko, he couldn't see his trade only certain hours of the day."

"I ain't kicking you are not working, Meiselson," Shimko said hastily. "All I am telling you is what for a job is selling toilet soaps and perfumery? You got a limited trade there, Meiselson, because when it comes to toilet soaps, understand me, how many people takes it so particular? I bet yer with a hundred people, Meiselson, eighty uses laundry soap, fifteen ganvers soap from hotels and saloons, and the rest buys wunst in six months a five cent cake of soap. As for perfumery, Meiselson, for a dollar bill you could get enough perfumery to make a thousand people smell like an Italiener barber shop; whereas clothing, Meiselson, everybody must got to wear it. If you are coming to compare clothing with toilet soap for a business, Meiselson, there ain't no more comparison as gold and putty."

Meiselson remained silent.

"Furthermore," Shimko continued, "if Zamp sees a young feller like you, which even your worst enemy must got to admit it, Meiselson, you are a swell dresser, and make a fine, up-to-date appearance, understand me, he would maybe reconsider his decision not to take a partner."

"Did he say he wouldn't take a partner?" Meiselson asked hopefully.

"He says to me so sure as you are sitting there: 'Mr. Shimko, my dear friend, if it would be for your sake I would willingly go as partners together with some young feller,' he says; 'but when a business man is making money,' he says, 'why should he got to get a partner?' he says. So I says to him: 'Zamp,' I says, 'here is a young feller which heats going to get married to a young lady by the name Miss Babette Schick.'"

"She ain't so young no longer."

"She ain't so young no longer," Meiselson broke in ungratefully.

"'By the name Miss Babette Schick,'" Shimko continued, recognizing the interruption with a malevolent glare, "which she got, anyhow a couple thousand dollars,' I says; 'and for her sake and for my sake,' I says, 'if I would bring the young feller around here, would you consent to look him over?' And he says for my sake he would consent to do it, but we shouldn't go around there till next week."

"All right," Meiselson said; "if you are so dead anxious I should do so, I would go around next week."

"Say, looky here, Meiselson," Shimko burst out angrily, "don't do me no favors! Do you or do you not want to go into a good business? Because, if you don't, say so, and I wouldn't bother my head further."

"Sure, I do," Meiselson said.

"Then I want to tell you something," Shimko continued. "We wouldn't wait till next week at all. With the business that feller does, delays is dangerous. If we would wait till next week some one offers him a good price and buys him out maybe. Tomorrow afternoon, 2 o'clock, you and me goes over to his store, understand me, and we catches him unawares. Then you could see for yourself what a business that feller is doing."

Meiselson shrugged.

"I am agreeable," he said.

"Because," Shimko went on, thoroughly aroused by Meiselson's apathy, "if you're such a fool that you don't know it, Meiselson, I must got to tell you. Wunst in awhile if a business man is going to get a feller for partner, when he knows the feller is coming around to look the business over he plants phony customers around the store and makes it show up like it was a fine business, when in reality he is going to bust up right away."

"So?" Meiselson commented, and Shimko glared at him ferociously.

"You don't appreciate what I am doing for you at all!" Shimko cried. "I wouldn't telephone the feller or nothing that we are coming, understand me? We'll take him by surprise."

Meiselson shrugged.

"Go ahead and take him by surprise if you want to," he said wearily.

In point of fact, Isaac Meiselson was quite content to remain in the soap and perfumery trade, and it was only by dint of much persuasion on Miss Babette Schick's part that he was prevailed upon to embark in a more lucrative business. It seemed a distinct step downward when he compared the well nigh tender methods employed by him in disposing of soap and perfumery to the proprietresses of beauty parlors with the more robust salesmanship in vogue in the retail clothing business.

"Also I would meet you right here," Shimko concluded, "at half past 1 sharp tomorrow."

After the conclusion of his interview with Isaac Meiselson, Shimko repaired immediately to Zamp's tailoring establishment, and together they proceeded to the office of Mr. Boris Klinkowitz, manager of the Olympic gardens, on Rivington street. Shimko explained the object of their business, and in less than half an hour the resourceful Klinkowitz had engaged a force of cutters, salesmen and customers sufficient to throng Harry Zamp's store for the entire day.

"You would see how smooth the whole thing goes," Klinkowitz declared after he had concluded his arrangements. "The cutters is genuine cutters, members from a union already, and the salesmen works for years by a couple concerns on Park Row."

"And the customers?" Zamp asked.

"That depends on yourself," Klinkowitz replied. "If you got a couple real bargains in sample garments I would not be surprised if the customers could be genuine customers also. Two of 'em works here as waiters, evenings, and the other three ain't no bums, either. I called a dress rehearsal at your store tomorrow morning 10 o'clock."

On the following day, when Mr. Shimko visited his tenant's store, he rubbed his eyes.

"Ain't it wonderful!" he exclaimed. "Natural like life!"

Zamp winked.

"Only the cutters and the salesmen showed up," he replied.

"Well, who are them other fellers there?" Shimko asked.

"How should I know?" Zamp said hoarsely. "A couple of suckers comes in from the street and we sold 'em the same like anybody else."

Here the door opened to admit a third stranger. As the two "property" salesmen were busy Zamp turned to greet him.

"Could you make me up maybe a dress suit mit a silk lining?" the newcomer asked.

"What are you so late for?" Zamp retorted. "Klinkowitz was here schon an hour ago already."

The stranger looked at Zamp in a puzzled fashion.

"What are you talking about—Klinkowitz?" he said. "I don't know the feller at all."

Zamp gazed hard at his visitor, and then his face broke into a smile.

"Excuse me," he said. "I am making a mistake. Do you want a French drape oder an unfinished worsted?"

For the next thirty minutes a succession of customers filled the store, and when Klinkowitz's supernumeraries arrived at intervals during that period Zamp turned them all away.

"What are you doing, Zamp?" Shimko exclaimed. "At 2 o'clock the store would be empty!"

"Would it?" Zamp retorted as he eyed a well dressed youth who paused in front of the show window. "Well, maybe it would, and maybe it would not, and anyhow, Mr. Shimko, if there wouldn't be no customers here we would anyhow got plenty of cutting to do. Besides, Shimko, customers is like sheep—if you get a run of 'em one follows the other."

For the remainder of the forenoon the two salesmen had all the customers they could manage, and as Shimko watched them work his face grew increasingly gloomy.

"Say, looky here, Zamp," he said. "You are doing here such a big business where do I come in?"

"What do you mean where do you come in?" Zamp asked.

"Why, the idee is mine you should get a couple salesmen and cutters," Shimko began, "and"—

"What d'ye mean the idee is yours?" Zamp rejoined. "Ain't I got a right to hire a couple salesmen and cutters if I want to?"

"Yes, but you never would have done so if I ain't told it you," Shimko said. "I ought to get a rakeoff here."

"You should get a rakeoff because my business is increasing so I got to hire a couple salesmen and cutters!" Zamp exclaimed. "What an idee!"

Shimko paused. After all, he reflected, why should he quarrel with Zamp? At 2 o'clock, when he expected to return with Meiselson, if the copartnership were consummated, he would collect 10 per cent of the copartnership funds as the regular commission. Moreover, he had decided to refuse to consent to the transfer of the store lease from Zamp individually to the copartnership of Zamp & Meiselson save at an increase in rental of $10 a month.

"Very well, Zamp," he said. "Maybe the idee ain't mine, but just the same I would be back here at 2 o'clock, and Meiselson comes along."

With this ultimatum Shimko started off for Wasserbauer's cafe, and at ten minutes to 2 he accompanied Meiselson down to Canal street.

"Yes, Meiselson," Shimko began as they approached Zamp's store. "There's a feller which he ain't got no more sense as you have, and yet he is doing a big business anyhow."

"What d'ye mean, no more sense as I got it?" Meiselson demanded. "Always up to now I got sense enough to make a living, and I ain't killed myself doing it, neither!"

For the remainder of their journey to Zamp's store Shimko sulked in silence, but when at length they reached their destination he exclaimed aloud:

"Did you ever see the like?" he cried. "The place is actually full up with customers!"

Zamp's prediction had more than justified itself. When Shimko and Meiselson entered he looked up absently as he handled the rolls of piece goods which he had purchased for cash only one hour previously. Moreover, his pockets overflowed with money, for every customer had paid a deposit of at least 25 per cent.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Zamp," Shimko cried. "This is Mr. Meiselson, the gentleman which I am speaking to you about. He wants to go as partners together with you."

Zamp ran his hand through his dishevelled hair. He was more than confused by his sudden accession of trade.

"You got to excuse me, Mr. Shimko," he said. "I am very, very busy [illegible]"

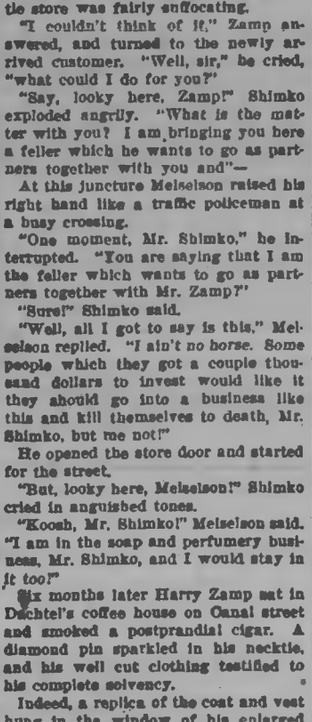
Shimko winked furtively at Zamp.

"Sure, I know," he said, "but when could we see you later today?"

"You couldn't see me later today," Zamp replied. "I am going to work tonight getting out orders."

"Naturlich," Shimko rejoined, "but couldn't you take a cup coffee with us a little later?"

Zamp jumped nervously as the door opened to admit another customer.



"Did you ever see the like?" he cried.

The two clerks, supplemented by a third salesman, who had been hired by telephone, were extolling the virtues of Zamp's wares in stentorian tones, and the atmosphere of the little store was fairly suffocating.

"I couldn't think of it," Zamp answered, and turned to the newly arrived customer. "Well, sir," he cried, "what could I do for you?"

"Say, looky here, Zamp!" Shimko exploded angrily. "What is the matter with you? I am bringing you here a feller which he wants to go as partners together with you and"—

At this juncture Meiselson raised his right hand like a traffic policeman at a busy crossing.

"One moment, Mr. Shimko," he interrupted. "You are saying that I am the feller which wants to go as partners together with Mr. Zamp?"

"Sure!" Shimko said.

"Well, all I got to say is this," Meiselson replied. "I ain't no horse. Some people which they got a couple thousand dollars to invest would like it they should go into a business like this and kill themselves to death, Mr. Shimko, but me not!"

He opened the store door and started for the street.

"But, looky here, Meiselson!" Shimko cried in anguished tones.

"Koosh, Mr. Shimko!" Meiselson said. "I am in the soap and perfumery business, Mr. Shimko, and I would stay in it too!"

Six months later Harry Zamp sat in Dachtel's coffee house on Canal street and smoked a postprandial cigar. A diamond pin sparkled in his necktie, and his well cut clothing testified to his complete solvency.

Indeed, a replica of the coat and vest hung in the window of his enlarged business premises on Canal street labeled "The Latest From the London Pickadillies," and he had sold, strictly for cash, more than a dozen of the same style during the last twenty-four hours. For the rush of trade which began on the day when he hired the "property" salesmen and cutters had not only continued, but had actually increased, and it was therefore with the most pleasurable sensations that he recognized at the next table Isaac Meiselson, the unconscious cause of all his prosperity.

"Excuse me," he began. "Ain't your name Meiselson?"

"My name is Mr. Meiselson," Isaac admitted. "This is Mr. Zamp, ain't it?" Zamp nodded.

"You look pretty well, considering the way you are working in that clothing business of yours," Meiselson remarked.

"Hard work never hurted me none," Zamp answered. "Are you still in the soap and perfumery business, Mr. Meiselson?"

Meiselson shook his head.

"No," he said. "I want out of the soap business when I got married last month."

"Is that so?" Zamp commented. "And did you go into another business?"

"Not yet," Meiselson replied, and then he smiled. "The fact is," he added in a burst of confidence, "my wife is a dressmaker."

He Was Let Off.

A schoolmaster was giving his pupils instruction in the elements of physiology, and, among other things, told them that whenever they moved an arm or a leg it was in response to a message from the brain.

"The brain always sends a message down your arm or leg whenever you wish to move the particular member," he explained.

At length a mischievous boy roused his ire by his apparent inattention to the lesson.

"Hold out your hand," cried the irate pedagogue.

No response.

"Why don't you hold out your hand?"

"Please, sir, I'm waiting for the message from my brain," said the lad, coolly; and he was let off for his sharpness.

Who Discovered America?

In an American school, attended by differem races, during an examination in history the teacher asked a little chap:

"Who discovered America?"

He was evidently thrown into a panic and hesitated, much to the teacher's surprise, to make any reply.

"Oh, please, ma'am," he finally stammered, "ask me somethin' else."

"Something else, Jimmy? Why should I do that?"

"The fellers was talkin' 'bout it yesterday," replied Jimmy. "Pat M'Gee said it was discovered by an Irish saint. Olaf he said it was a sailor from Norway, and Giovanni said it was Columbus, an' if you'd 'a' seen what happened you wouldn't ask a little fellow like me."

Had Terrible Pains in Kidneys and Back.

Dear Mr. Editor—I want to write you about "Anuric." I was very sick, could hardly be up; I was in bed most of the time. Had terrible pains in my kidneys and back, so much so that I had to scream sometimes when I was sitting down and wanted to get up, the pain was so great. I had tried a well-known kidney medicine but it didn't help me. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets so I thought I would try them. I took only one box of the Tablets, and my back is now free from pain and I can work and take care of my family. I feel I cannot say enough for this medicine. Sincerely, Mrs. Wm. Keller.

Note: This "Anuric" is adapted especially for kidney complaints and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine and urinary troubles. The physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's great Institution, at Buffalo, N. Y., have thoroughly tested this prescription and have been with one accord successful in eradicating these troubles, and in most cases absolutely curing the diseased kidneys.

Patients having once used "Anuric" at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, have repeatedly sent back for more. Such a demand has been created that Dr. Pierce has decided to put "Anuric" in the drug stores of this country, in a ready-to-use form. If not obtainable send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to make rich, red blood, which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and organs of the body. You feel clean, strong and strenuous.

THE LORD JESUS AS A YOKE-FELLOW

"Come Unto Me, All Ye That Labor and Are Heavy-Laden."

Self-Surrender Absolutely Essential to Discipleship—Advantages of the Poor—The Church's Course Contrary to That of the World—"Prize of the High Calling" Compared With "Restitution"—Jesus' Mercy Toward Honest Doubters—Blessedness of Yoke-Fellowship With Christ.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 16.—Pastor Russell gave a practical address here to-day from the text, "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me . . . ; for My yoke is easy and My burden is light." (Matthew 11:28-30.) The Pastor said in part:

We are to remember that our Lord used these words to the Jews; and that He was not addressing so much those who labored and were heavy-laden in a physical sense as those who were burdened in a mental and moral sense. This class had been striving to keep the Law. They knew the terms of the Law Covenant, that "he that doeth these things shall live by them." (Leviticus 18:5.) But they were all dying; and they well knew that if they had been keeping their part of the covenant, God would have kept His part.

This class is illustrated in the case of the rich young ruler who came to the Master, saying, "What good thing shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" (Matthew 19: 16-22.) He had been striving hard to keep the Law. It was no wonder that Jesus loved him; for he was a noble character. Then in kindness the Master told him in what respect he was still lacking. His heart was set upon his riches. So our Lord put him to the test. "If you are weary and heavy-laden with trying to keep the Law from your youth up," was the thought which Jesus presented, "and still cannot gain life, I will tell you the only way by which you can obtain life everlasting. It is simply to cease from your own works, and accept through Me, as a gift from God, the forgiveness of the sins which you cannot avoid. Then renounce all earthly things, become My disciple, and lay up treasure in Heaven."

But the young man departed sorrowfully; for he had much possessions. Others, poorer than this young man in worldly possessions, had also been striving to keep the Law—Peter, James, John, Nathaniel, and the rest. Jesus presented Himself to them as the Messiah, telling them that if they would become His disciples and share with Him in the sacrifices of the present time, they should also share the Heavenly Kingdom hereafter. They gladly complied, unlike the rich young ruler, for they had less to fetter them to the earth.

We can readily see how riches of learning, of knowledge, of experience, of honor, of men, of social standing, of wealth—riches in any form—would be something to hinder the majority of men from becoming followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. But our Lord has just one set of terms under which any and all may come to Him. There is no royal road to the Kingdom of God. Whoever does not care to come on His terms may stay away and wait for the opportunities of the next Age. God has a great deal in the future—Times of Restitution for a needy world. The Call of the Gospel Age is unique. Some learn of this Call; fewer accept it; and still fewer prove faithful to the end.

The Church vs. the World.

God's Plan for the world is to lift them up out of sin, degradation, and death, back to all that was lost by Adam. But no one can get this Restitution now. However, it will not hurt men to know in advance that God is gracious, and that He has provided something good for mankind. As the Love and the Mercy of God shine into their hearts, they will come to love Him more and more. At present God is selecting the soldiers who wish to enlist in the battle now being waged between right and wrong. All others may in the future come into the family of God on a lower plane.

As Adam lost his sonship and all his possessions because of sin, so because of the deliverance which Christ will accomplish by and by these sinners may come back into harmony with God and to all that was lost in Adam. Let us thank God on their behalf. But this will not hinder us from having some still better thing. The more we come to know our Heavenly Father, the better we love Him.

When we find that it costs something to be a disciple of Christ during the present time, we are all the more convinced of the value of the good things which He has for them that accept His Call of the Gospel Age. But during the Millennial Age it will cost something not to do God's will. For all such there will be stripes, and eventually destruction if they continue to be disobedient. But there will be blessings for all who will then walk in the way of the Lord. Now, whoever walks in the footsteps of Jesus must walk contrary to the spirit of the world. Yet this class are the happiest people in the world, even though the world, their own flesh and the Devil are all against them. Satan pays more attention to them than to other people. There is no need for him to give special attention to those who are asleep. But whoever is waking up will be beset with persecution, with worldly inducements, and with everything to oppose his way.

But since He that is on their part is greater than all that can be against them, if only they retain their love, faith, and obedience, the opposition will become a blessing. The Master told His disciples that all manner of evil would be said against them falsely for His sake. St. Paul also declared, "Yea, all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" in the present time. But there is a far greater reward for following Christ, for doing the Lord's will under present unfavorable conditions, than there will be for doing the Lord's will in the future. We are glad to suffer now that we may reign then, when the world's opportunity shall come.

The Church's Glorious High Calling.

The High Calling of the Church is the most wonderful opportunity which God has ever given to any of His creatures. Those who have made a Covenant of Sacrifice with God may have severe experiences now; but later the faithful ones amongst them will have glory, honor, and immortality, and in the ages to come God will show the exceeding riches of His grace toward them through Christ Jesus. (Ephesians 2:4-7.) But who amongst those that have this hope would surrender it and take Restitution instead—a perfect human body, a perfect home in a perfect earth, perfect fruits, beautiful flowers, and all the grandeurs of Restitution Times? Not one!

How did we attain this hope? By obedience to the Call contained in our text. By nature we were sinners, even as others, members of the fallen race. But as the Apostle points out, we recognized in our nature the Law of right and wrong. We still retained a part of what was originally given to Father Adam and lost by him. Humanity still has something left of the image of God in which Adam was created. The world in general know about the Golden Rule. "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." But "there is none righteous, no, not one." Fallen humanity find it a hard battle merely trying to live right, to do justly by their neighbors, to be kind and just to family and friends. So this class that have been trying to do the Lord's will and that have found it a hard task to live up to the Divine standard, our Lord Jesus says, "Come unto Me"—you who are weary and heavy-laden in your attempts to do what is right, to speak no slander, to treat your neighbor always as you would have him treat you. This class have found out that if God were to require perfection of them, they could never come to Him at all; for fallen humanity cannot measure up to His perfect standards.

But why should we come to Jesus, instead of going directly to God? It is because Jesus is God's appointed Way. (John 14:6.) God is aware of our fallen estate. He knows that we have inherited our weaknesses of mind and body. He could not accept us thus; hence He has provided for us a Saviour and Advocate. He is seeking now for those who are striving to do right, those who realize the grandeur of His requirements in the Golden Rule. To this class He is sending a special Message. He is inviting them to have a share in the sacrifice of Christ.—Romans 12:1, 2.

His Glorious Provision in Christ

But no sacrifice can come to the altar of the Lord except that which is without spot or blemish; and we are spotted and blemished. Therefore unless our Lord Jesus imputes of His merit to cover these spots and blemishes, we never could be accepted as joint-sacrificers with Him. He must do this before we can receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit.

Thus those who realize that they come far short of God's standard and need a Saviour may come to the Lord. These enter by faith into the rest of God—not merely that future rest for the people of God who enter into the Kingdom, but even now, "We" who have believed do enter into rest." (Hebrews 4:3.) We have rest even in these imperfect human bodies. We knew that there were weaknesses before, but we did not know how to get rid of them. Now we know that "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin," from all unintentional weaknesses. How glad we are that Jesus died for our sins; that He has furnished by imputation a covering for all of our imperfections. So we are resting, trusting, refreshed by this knowledge.

"According to thy faith be it unto thee," says the Master. Our justification is all by faith. God does not purpose to justify those who cannot believe. Some can believe more easily than can others. But the time will come when all can believe.

For my own part, I cannot believe as easily as do some people. I must have a certain amount of evidence. But the Lord was willing to accept St. Thomas even if that disciple could not exercise faith quickly in what he had not seen; in fact, the Master even gave him the demonstration which he needed in order to believe. But unless we can accept the Gospel Call with the evidences which the Lord has furnished, we cannot be of the Kingdom class at all. We do accept. We are resting in the promises by faith. The Apostle says, "The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus," (Philippians 4:7.) Just as surely as we are children of God, and are living in covenant relationship with Him, so surely is this promise ours.

So then, if there be any dear friends present to-day who have not yet come to the Lord, we would give them this Message. "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden; and I will give you rest." If you have not been trying to do the will of God, then you are not weary and heavy-laden. But if you have been trying, and feeling your impotency, then listen to this Call. Do not stop there, however. "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me," advises our Lord and Saviour.

Our Great Yoke-Fellow.

A yoke is a symbol of servitude. By the use of this symbol our Lord implies that those who are set free, either from the yoke of the Law Covenant, as were the believing Jews, or from the yoke of Satan, as were the believing Gentiles, should take His yoke, should become His servants, should learn to do His will. A yoke is generally arranged for two; and since our Lord speaks of it as His yoke, we are to understand that He also is a servant. Having come to do the Father's will, He invites us to become true yoke-fellows with Himself in the doing of the Father's will, to be co-laborers with Christ in the great work of the world's deliverance from sin and death.

The secret of the ability to wear this yoke, to have companionship with Christ in His service, and to have as a result a great blessing in our own hearts, lies in our learning to be meek and lowly of heart, as He was. It is impossible for the proud, haughty, self-willed, ambitious, or worldly-wise to labor in the same yoke with Jesus, or to find the true rest of soul which we properly seek. But if we are meek, teachable, humble-minded, ready to know and to do the Lord's will at any cost, then indeed we shall find rest.

Those who wear this yoke have the Divine assurance that all things are working together for good to them; that the heavier the burden now the greater will be the blessing and the reward by and by; that the severer the experiences now, the brighter shall be their character and the surer shall they be of preparedness for the Kingdom. From this viewpoint every burden is light, not only because the yoke is easy, but because the Lord is their Yoke-fellow, and assumes the weight of the load for those who walk close to Him.

Having a strong, efficient Yoke-fellow is very different from trying to pull the load alone. Of our Lord it was written, "Of the people there was none" with Him. (Isaiah 63:3.) But how different it is with His footstep followers! Not only do they have brethren to encourage and assist them, but above all they have the Master with them. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the Age," is His promise. Although we are now in the end of the Age, yet the Age will not close until the last member of the Church is called and proven. Moreover, the Lord will be with His followers all the way as a true yoke-fellow.

"Learn of Me."

"Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me," says the Master. If we have taken His yoke upon us, we are in His School, learning of Him. Yet at the same time we are being taught of the Heavenly Father. He says, "I will put you into the School of Instruction; and the One who has redeemed you I have appointed to be your Teacher. You are to be under the care of your Elder Brother." So we are learning the necessary lessons day by day, growing in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Redeemer, in all the fruits of the Holy Spirit.

What are the fruits of the Spirit? Meekness, faith, gentleness, patience, self-control, brotherly kindness, love. The Apostle says that these fruits are manifest—can be seen. "If these things be in you and abound," declares St. Peter, "they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Peter 1:8, 10,11.) We must therefore exercise ourselves according to the Divine arrangements; and then we shall be ready for the graduation, when our Master shall say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things"—you did not do very much, but you had the right spirit, you did the best that you could—"enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

"For I am meek and lowly in heart." This is one of the main lessons in the School of Christ. Whoever has learned to be humble-minded, submissive, gentle, obedient, shall find rest of soul, and finally shall enter into His rest—the Kingdom rest. Then the sons of God will have perfect bodies, complete in every sense of the word. They will have the glory, honor, and immortality which God has in reservation for those that love Him supremely.

Those who have learned of Christ have made God's work the chief interest in life. Therefore they do not give all of their time to the ordinary vocations of mankind. On the contrary, they are determined to follow the Master, to labor for the good of others, and to let the light of Truth shine out wherever they may go. Having become members of the Christ company, henceforth for them to live is Christ. Their work is to serve the Truth and the brethren, to suffer with their Lord now, and to reign with Him hereafter.

The Christian who has been making progress for years, growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, gradually comes to know the Father and the Son in the intimate sense, to become well acquainted with them, knowing their mind as one knows the mind, the heart, of an intimate friend. It is a great privilege thus to know the Father and the Son, a privilege not to be attained by every one. It must be carefully sought and earnestly desired. Such a growth in grace should be eagerly sought by all of the true followers of our Lord, by all who long to be His joint-heirs in the Kingdom; for without this intimate fellowship and communion they cannot make progress in spiritual things. In proportion as we know the Father and the Son, in that same proportion shall we love them and strive more and more to do the things which are pleasing in their sight, and the greater shall be our rest of faith.

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubiniecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills, they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

The Flying Sixpence.

Place a sixpence in each hand, and extend the arms shoulder-high. Now, can you bring both coins into one hand, without allowing the arms to approach each other? To do this, place yourself so as to bring one hand just over the mantelpiece, and so drop one of the sixpences on to it. Then, keeping the arms still extended, turn round till the other hand comes over the coin. Pick it up, and you have solved the puzzle, both coins being now in one hand. an you take one from nineteen and leave twenty? Write down 19 in Roman numerals— XIX Now remove the I, and you have XX. What is it that you can put in your left hand which you cannot possibly take in your right? Your right elbow.

There are various accounts for the making of women. Some say out of a rib, some out of earth and water, another out of foam, another out of an alder tree, another out of the slough of a god. If she was made out of all these various things there is no wonder that she is such a contradiction.

LONDON. — Poor little Queen Augusta, King Manuel's wife! I can't help being sorry for her. I met her the other day at a big bazaar where she was lavishing money in the cause of the suffering of the Allies, but when you think that every one belonging to her is German—she was from Sigmaringen — you realize what the unfortunate little queen, so full of dignity and restraint, must be suffering.

You should see her wonderful earrings. They are marvellous, the pearl pendants being quite six inches long. Queen Alexandra, who is kind to every one, bless her, invites little Queen Augusta round to tea at Marlborough House often.

Mrs. Harcourt Aids Soldiers.

Every one is asking what has come over Mrs. Lulu Harcourt, so retiring has she become, never mixing herself up in any of the war charities, though, mind you, she is more generous than most people. And though she doesn't show up at bazaars or at the war hospitals, she sends, I am told, about £20 or £30 worth of things to the soldiers at the front every week.

Somebody was telling me that it was because of the wartime swindles in places outside society, of course, that horrified her so much, that she determined to do everything off her own bat. She's very proud of her young son and heir, who has a bevy of small sisters. When he was ill some years ago as the result of an accident to his face, Mrs. Harcourt had a piece of her own flesh removed so that it could be put over the wound.

The operation was managed so successfully that he shows not the slightest trace of the occurrence, and was one of the most festive of the attendants the other day at the Asquith wedding. Mrs. Harcourt is a daughter of the late Walter H. Burns, of New York, and a niece of the late Pierpont Morgan.

No Economy at Asquith Wedding.

There was nothing of war time economy about the presents to the Prime Minister's daughter. They were really quite splendid and frightfully costly, although the bride and bridegroom are going to settle down in a very modest little house off Baker Street at a rent of about £120 a year.

For years she used to say that she would never marry because of the death of Archie Gordon, the son of Lord and Lady Aberdeen, to whom she was engaged when he was killed in a motor accident. She is the living image of Mrs. Asquith, although she is only her step-daughter.

For once in his life the Prime Minister looked spruce and well dressed in honour of the wedding. A week or so ago, I hear, the bride and her step-mother went to a fashionable tailor's and ordered a new suit for the first commoner in England, and simply made him wear it. He just loves his old clothes and it is when a coat is getting threadbare that it is dearest to him.

On the other hand, Mrs. Asquith is one of the most fashionably turned out women in London, so it's awkward for her to have a husband who doesn't care a straw about his clothes.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Dusclos, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. MADE-IN-GERMANY MIRACLES REALLY NOT SO WONDERFUL

"Miracles Made in Germany" has been the subject of many an effusion from German worshippers both before and since the war began.

The latest appears in the New York World from the pen of a Mr. Roeder, headed: "Wizard of German Empire Has Found Substitutes for Supplies England Cut Off."

Concerning which the New York Evening Post ironically comments:

"The sentence correctly reflects the general impression in this country of what Germany can do when she tries. We have heard of substitutes for nitrate of potash, for rubber, for cotton, for copper. England, in fact, has been the making of Germany, by forcing her to invent commodities she used to import. After the war, Germany will be more self-sufficient than ever. It all comes down to the marvelous German Organization can do anything when put on its mettle. It borrows a hat from the audience and pulls out synthetic nitrates, synthetic cotton, rubber bread, in the wink of an eye-lash.

"But Mr. Roeder ever heard of atmospheric nitrates before this? Before the war, Germany made a fair proportion of her nitrates. The industry has been for some time on a commercial basis in Scandinavia, where the requisite of water-power is available. It may be that Germany under the spur of necessity, has developed the process. Since it is a question of making nitrates or going without, the problem does not take commercial factors into consideration. Leaving cost out of account any nation can make nitrates out of the air.

"Or rubber. Has Germany really solved the problem the scientists have been busy with for years? Synthetic rubber of a kind has been made for some time in England, and presumably elsewhere. The hard tires which German 'wizardry' has invented have been used for years on motor trucks in New York city. Our manufacturers are like M. Jourdain. They have been wizards for years without knowing it.

"And one reason for skepticism regarding the magic of German science and organization is that we have plenty of evidence to show that in one field which is just as important as nitrates, or copper, or rubber, German resourcefulness has not reached the point of wizardry. That is the question of food. Germany is living to-day on potatoes.

"There is one real substitute which Germany has discovered for the necessities of war and of life. She has learned to go without. The present German substitute for bread is less bread. The substitute for meat is much less meat. The substitute for milk is no milk. Will they get there just the same?"

BRITAIN PERILED BY MAN HUNGER OF DEPENDENCIES

LONDON, Jan. 14.—"We at home are torn in two ways. We certainly desire to see the British Empire everywhere expand and to have these fertile lands filled by people of our own race.

"On the other hand, I do not think any of us would look with any pleasure at the prospect of a very large number of the men who are now fighting for us, men who are the very best of our population, suddenly leaving the country."

So said Bonar Law, British Colonial Secretary, in reply to a deputation.

Here is stated the broad outlines of a tremendous problem as seen from the point of view of the British administrative department.

There is another side, the side of the self-governing British colonies, and in so far as they are mutually irreconcilable you have brewing one of the most tantalizing scraps in the history of Britain's relations with her possessions.

Shortage of Men Sure.

Efforts are now being made, not only by the home Government and the colonial Governments, but by many semi-private public spirited bodies to work out an agreement to ward off the impending fight.

There will be a terrible shortage of able men after the war. Hundreds of thousands, doubtless, will have been killed and even more will have been so grievously injured that no longer will they be able to work with hand or foot. Canada will want men; Australia, South Africa, New Zealand will want men. And, above all, they will want British men—English, Scots, Irish, and Welsh.

They are willing to spend something like $2,500 to entice each good healthy settler to their virgin fields, and mean to do so unless the home Government interferes.

Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and perhaps South Africa, before the war is finished, will have contributed thousands of their best men to the defence of the Empire. What will then be the situation in these countries, which, even before the war, were man hungry?

They Want Britons.

Their whole future is bound up in the problem of getting men, more men, and still more men. It is a question of self-preservation.

South Africa, from which more Britons emigrate than immigrate every year, threatened by the predomination of the Boers and fearing the swamping of the white population by blacks, Chinese, and Indians; Australia, an enormous continent, set in a distant sea, fearful of the land hunger of its ambitious yellow neighbours; Canada, capable of supporting a population many times its present number, anxious to ensure the predominance of the British, yet in desperate manhunger, throwing open its doors to an alien immigration from all over Europe. What are these countries to do if they may not entice the Briton from his British home and his overcrowded labor market to the limitless expanses awaiting only the touch of human hand and human ingenuity to yield riches such as few lands can boast?

Can Britain Hold Trade?

Viewing the problem from the British angle, the subject presents many fascinating ramifications. What will happen after the war depends largely upon the rapidity with which industry not only in this country, but abroad, recovers from the devastation of war.

Quite aside from the important question of working capital, how much of the trade which she lost will Britain regain? The United States is seizing and hopes to hold a considerable portion of it. Japan is taking much and means to retain it. In the world-wide competition after the war, British manufacturers will be at a distinct disadvantage as compared with the American and Japanese manufacturers, to name only two of the most important competitors for world trade.

This means that thousands of working men, principally the skilled labour upon which Britain has for many generations prided herself, and upon which firm foundation her world wide commercial supremacy has been built, will be anxious to emigrate.

Faces Labour Shortage.

Yet Britain cannot afford to lose many of these men if she is ultimately to regain her pre-war position in the commerce of the world. For many years her falling birth-rate, and especially the growing predominance of women over men, so far as numbers were concerned, have given her Government many hours of serious doubt. When the war started there were one million fewer men in the country than women.

The disproportion if ever so much greater to-day and is steadily increasing. Across the North Sea the superior German birth-rate and the predominance of men over women is year by year adding to the numerical, and therefore the commercial, strength of Britain's most formidable European competitor, while the population of the United States, the most active and dangerous rival of both in the war for the future trade of the world, is increasing by leaps and bounds.

Britain is already fully alive to all these impending problems, and Lord Selborne, Secretary of State for Agriculture, has appointed a committee under the chairmanship of Sir Harry Verney, Permanent Under-Secretary of the Department, to draw up plans for keeping the returning soldier in Britain.

However, the Government, despite repeated past failures, is not discouraged and the Verney committee has made a modest start. It is realized that one of the chief needs of the times is a trained peasant class and an experiment is to be made with fifty soldiers and sailors who have been discharged for disablement.

Various representatives of the British self-governing colonies some time ago made an attempt to induce the home Government to allow one of their number to sit on the Verney committee, but Lord Selborne turned down the proposition with emphasis.

It was proposed to the Government that Sir Rider Haggard, the famous writer of fascinating tales of adventure, chiefly in South Africa, and an expert on small holdings and farming, be sent on a mission around the world to sound the various colonial Governments and to examine at first hand the many schemes proposed. No official decision on this matter has been divulged, but it is reported in some quarters that the Government thinks favourably of it.

Fear Alien Ascendency.

This fear of being swamped by an alien and possibly an enemy alien population is present to all the colonies. It is disclosing no secret to say that the strong German populations of Australia and Canada have given both of these Dominions serious concern since the start of the war, and this feeling of insecurity will be tremendously intensified if, after the war, British immigration does not more than keep pace with the arrivals from other European countries.

The Canadian Government has already appointed a committee to examine the whole question of post war immigration, and that committee is now sitting.

France Short 235,000,000 Bottles Due To Glass and Potash Famine

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The bottle deficit of France to date is about 235,000,000, resulting from the occupation of territory comprising some of the important glass works of the departments of the North and the Department of the Marne. The wine and other French industries require about 310,000,000 bottles each year, and the French glass works produce normally about 325,000,000, of which between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 are exported. The glass works now in operation produce only about 90,000,000 bottles a year. The consequence is mineral water bottles that were purchased before the war at one cent each now bring a little more than two cents. Lamp chimneys have trebled in price, as well as goblets and window glass. Wine bottles containing about a quart have gone up from $4 to $7 per 100, while in the Saumur district bottles intended for naturally sparkling wine brought $9 a 100.

"The reason for the bottle crisis," says Mr. Sauvegeot, general secretary of the Glassmakers' Association, "is not entirely the occupation of part of our glass producing territory by the enemy. Our industries in departments that were not invaded are also seriously affected by the inroads made upon their workmen by the mobilization. It is very difficult to replace these men and the mobilization of one skilled glass blower puts a furnace out of business.

"American workmen and labour from Brazil and Spain were imported by bottle makers in the Cognac district, while Arabs and Kabyles were brought from Algeria by glassmakers in the Department of the Allier. These measures increased largely the wage scale without entirely remedying the difficulty. Women have helped out in certain districts, and in time the glassmakers would be able to bring their production up to the normal were it not for the further complication of a deficit of material. Glass sand has doubled in price, as well as lead, while potash is almost impossible to find. Before the war we bought it at $10 per hundredweight; to-day we pay $90 when we can find it. Add to this the doubling of the cost of our coal and you have the elements that explain the troubles of the glass industry."

This glass crisis would have been all the more serious had not the consumption of wine, brandy and mineral water bottles declined fifty per cent. The measures taken against the sale of alcohol have also resulted in a diminution of fifty per cent. in the consumption of bottles used in that line.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

This pretty gown is a good example of what is known as the "baby" style of dress. It is one which spells comfort and suggests itself for maternity use as well as for general purposes.

It is made with a straight yoke across the front and back. Below this yoke the material is arranged with a group of pleats in the centre of the front and back and with the sides plain. The neck is open with small collar and revers, and there are little pocket flaps at the line of the yoke on the bosom. There is also a substantial patch pocket lower down on the garment and a wide girdle at the waistline.

The sleeves of this dress are plain and without fulness. They may be finished plainly or with a cuff as preferred.

These dresses are great favorites with slender women, as their effect is extremely girlish. They are made of serge, gabardine, taffetas, crepe de Chine, charmeuse and of other materials which are soft and which yet have body enough to hang well in the long lines, which are unbroken even at the waistline.

The dress pattern, No. 7389, is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4¾ yards of 50-inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 20c.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous and you appear years younger.

WAR AND TEETH.

(New York Press)

Professor Potter, of Harvard University, in a lecture before the Forsythe Dental Infirmary said:

"The teeth of the English soldier in the trenches are in poorer condition that the men of any other Power. The French rank much higher as regards mouth hygiene efficiency, with the German heading the list, almost 100 per cent. perfect.

"The German soldier is faring the best of any as regards his teeth. For more than fifteen years Germany has been caring for the teeth of its subjects establishing clinics in the public schools, dental infirmaries in the smaller towns and villages as well as in the cities, and on the whole making sure that no child, especially a boy, is allowed to let his teeth get into that state of decay which would necessarily cause his rejection at the time of a call to his colors."

Franz Joseph—"And if we are beaten, when our troops return aren't you afraid of a revolution?" Kaiser William—"Don't worry about that. They will never return."

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Rocking The Boys to Sleep.

I sit me down in the twilight cool
Of a busy summers day,
And close my eyes and live again
The time so far away.
When Eddie and James and John were here;
And the tears to my eyes will creep,
For I seem to sit in the old brown chair,
A-rockin' the boys to sleep.

I bring John back from a home of wealth,
Where fame and honour dwell,
And sing and rock him to sleep once more.
More happy than tongue can tell.
I brave the storms on a shoreless sea
Where tempest and surges sweep,
And James is here and I rock again
"My wandering boy" to sleep.

I build a stair to the heavens tall,
And reach in its sweet domain
For little Eddie and bring him back
To my lonely home again;
My throbbing heart is heavy now
With a yearning strong and deep,
As I smooth the curls of my only babe
And rock him once more to sleep.

They say the old chair is useless now
'Tis creaking and dull with age
And must forever be put aside,
Like a well-leaved, wormout page.
But the old brown chair sings a song to me
As it whispers of other years;
And it tells of roughened places smoothed,
And murmurs of childish tears.

Yes, the old chair tells in an undertone,
In a voice so creaking and old,
Of comfort it gave through summer's heat,
As well as in winter's cold;
How those little dependent lives were soothed
Through their childish sorrows deep,
As it did its best to ease each pain,
While rocking the boys to sleep.

Every mother should take the time and the money to keep herself and her children neatly and becomingly dressed. It is especially necessary that children should be taught both by precept and example the value of dress. In childhood habits are formed. The children who are accustomed to seeing their mother with her hair becomingly arranged and in a pretty gown and who are themselves compelled while young to pay attention to little details of cleanliness and dress, will never grow up into slatternly men and women.

Swine brings in larger returns than any other live stock except poultry. Swine may be made to yield returns twice a year, the total number of offspring frequently numbering as high as 18, whereas ewes produce seldom over two lambs, and often only one.

The British Win Again Over The Turks in Mesopotamia

Russians Have Also Defeated Sultan's Forces in the Caucus Where Turks Have Had to Retreat---Prisoners Report Bulgarian Troops Along the Greek Border Are Starving

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Turks have suffered severe defeats in the important struggles now raging in two of Asiatic theatres of war it was officially announced this afternoon.

The British under General Aylmer, advancing to the relief of the beleaguered garrison at Kut-el-amara in Mesopotamia, captured a Turkish position in the heavy fighting Saturday and Sunday. Secretary for India Chamberlain made this announcement in House of Commons this afternoon. The Russians have thrown back the Turks on a wide front in their new Caucasus offensive Petrograd reported. The Turkish defeat is admitted in an official statement issued at Constantinople reporting the otoman advanced posts have retreated several miles before superior Russian forces under the Grand Duke Nicholas, former commander in chief of all the Russian armies. In Persia Rssians are pressing closer to Kermansah, where a battle with the Turkish and Persian force is imminent, Petrograd reported. Secretary Chamberlain informed Commons that the Turks continue in retreat in the Kut-el-amara region, having fallen back from the positions to which they were forced to retreat several days ago. Bad weather is hindering the British pursuit but it is believed the siage of Kut-el-amara will be lifted within a few days.

Because of the marshy condition of the country between Shieksaad and Kut-el-amara, the relief forces have been unable to march directly westward to the relief of Gen. Townsend but have been forced to follow the windings of the Tigris river. They are now within a days march of the outer defenses of Kut-el-amara itslf.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—General Aylmer forces marching to the relief of British at Kul El Amara have inflicted another defeat on the Turks capturing a Turkish position it was officially announced this afternoon.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin, Jan. 17.—Turkish advance posts in the Caucasus have been forced to retreat several miles before the new Russian offensive it was officially admitted to-day.

The Turkish war office reports were confronted by superior forces under Russian Grand Duke Nicholas and after holding off the enemy for a week retired.

The official statement referred only briefly to the situation in Mesopotamia where a British force is surrounded; reported also artillery firs near Kutelamara. In the Caucasus the Russians have made great attack against the Turkish positions of both banks of Aras river said official statement. This especially true in district between the Aras and in the Id valley where the Turkish advanced posts retired several miles.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Turkish Gallipoli forces have begun arriving at Constantinople and are being rushed into Asia to meet a heavy onslaught on the different fronts according to Athens advices to-day. One body of the Dardanelles veterans is being moved toward the Caucasus where the Russian Grand Duke Nicholas has launched an offensive.

A second force is entraining for Bagdad and the Mesopotamia campaign and some detachments will reinforce the Persian army at Kermansah now threatened by the Russians. The fighting in the lands of ancient Asian Empires eclipses for the present all operations in modern Europe.

SALONIKI, Jan. 17.—Prisoners brought in here from fighting line as result of recent skirmishing say the Bulgarian troops on Greek border are starving.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—After two days' investigation, the cause of the internal explosion which killed for men and injured ten aboard the submarine E-2 is still a mystery. Authorities to-day scoffed at the suggestion that the explosion was the result of a German plot.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—England and the United States prepared to-day to join issue definite and clear cut over the question of British trade interference. An agitation in London for a declaration of an actual blockade of Germany to replace the paper blockade of the orders in council promises to bring the Anglo-American disputes to a head. State department officials said the effect upon this country of England actually blockading Germany would have some good and some unsatisfactory results.

The Declaration by Britain of a real blockade of Germany, officials here declared, would remove one of the principal issues between the countries. If Britain failed to enforce it however American shippers right to sell to Germany would still be maintained.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Morning newspapers to-day comment extensively on both Germany's notes to Great Britain concerning the Baralong incident and the papers seized from Capt. Von Papen the former German military attache at Washington. The Baralong note is generally characterized as a piece of legal petti fogging which will not likely get much support in the United States.

The Daily Chronicle expresses the belief that only a small part of the evidence found on Capt. Von Papen has yet been revealed. The Americans have had plenty of time to appreciate the novel developments of functions of accredited diplomacy says the Daily Chronicle, "but direct evidance like Capt. Von Papen's banking documents deserve to make great impression. It tears off last mask as far as former military attache is concerned and convicts him by the proof of his own papers.

VIENNA, Jan. 17.—Austrian Government has protested against the Anglo French occupation of Greek Island corfu in a note transmitted through American ambassador

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Spanish steamer Belgica, 2,000 tons has been sunk by a submarine. Twenty-three of the crew were rescued.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—A full page "ad" captioned "The Kingdom of Grief" and appearing to-day in all New York newspapers is the appeal of the greater New ork committee of the Belgian relief commission. It points out that a penny a day from every American will cloth the ragged women and children of Belgium and Northern France.

ROME, Jan. 17.—Pope Benedict will appoint a commission within a short time to conduct an impartial investigation of the charges of German atrocities in Belgium, it was learned to-day. This is the first result of Cardinal Mercier's visit to Rome for an audience with the head of the Catholic church. The Belgian prelate presented to the Pope a huge envelope of documents supporting the Belgian Episcopates charges against the Germans, when he was received in audience by His Holiness yesterday. These carry allegations of atrocities and violations of international law in Belgium especially in the dioceses of Namur, Liege, and Brussels, including charges of crimes against women and children made earlier in the war.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 17.—An English syndicate to-day closed a deal for the purchase of eight thousand cars of Rumanian grain, paying fifty millions in gold. The entire Rumanian grain surplus will be purchased by the Allies in conformity with the plan of crippling Germany in the matter of food supplies.

PRIVATE J. H. WILSON, another of Major Bennett's boys who returned home from England on Saturday. He was injured at Givenchy and is ready to return again.

PTE. J. H. WILSON REPORTED MISSING RETURNS TO HOME

Went Through Langemarck and Was Injured at Givenchy on Same Day Capt. Ackerman Was Hit

CAME HOME UNHERALDED

Wounded at Givenchy on June 16th last, Private J. H. Wilson of the 2nd Battalion, was mentioned in the casualty list as missing and his friends here concluded that he had gone the way of many another of the brave boys of that first Peterborough platoon.

On Saturday evening he returned to the city unannounced, and surprised Mr. Wm. Jackson, Sherbrooke street, with whom he had boarded before the outbreak of the war and who had given him up as lost.

Private Wilson went through Langemarck and participated in the other actions utnil June 16th when at Givenchy he had four ribs broken. A shell burst on the parapet of his trench, dropping a couple of sand bags on him and pinning him to the ground. His injury terminated his participation in the action. Private Wilson has spent the intervening months in French and English hospitals. He left England on December 31st on the Scandinavain. He will spend several weeks in Peterborough and will then report at Kingston. Passing through that city on Saturday he met some of his old pals in Chas. Stenson, Ernie Mesley and others.

Langemarck was the biggest engagement Private Wilson was through and his description of those April days is similar to that related by other Peterboroufh boys invalided home.

To The Womanhood Of The City

Womanhood! The solemn sense of duty, the priceless things that tremble in the balance, the unique service that Womanhood can render in such an hour as this will I trust be accepted as at least some excuse for this great Audacity. We men were nursed on the breast of Womanhood, cradled in the arms of Womanhood and inspired for those tasks by the faith of Womanhood.

There is a horrible suspicion that one hears whispered again and yet again that the Womanhood is holding back the Manhood frem responding to the call of King and Country.. For myself I do not believe it. It is true that God has dowered Womanhood in matchless measure with the instinct of protection and war has very grave dangers. I salute the fortitude in the heart of Womanhood which endures sleepless nights and the terrible imagenings that fill the dark hours before the dawn, it is a fortitude which is not surpassed by that which wins men fame on the fields of battle. But that very instinct of protection which is thoughtlessly blamed for leading Womanhood astray when the call for men sounds long and strong and loud is not so blind as not to see that to persuade a man to do violence to his own sense of chivalry is to inflict upon him a wound more deadly than that which any German bullet can produce. It is to strangle a soul in the very hour when it is struggling into being. It is to lay up for ones self sleepless nights which will have only well begun when the war shall have come to a close.

The Manhood of our City is not too proud to say to the Womanhood of our City. It will help some. It will help a whole lot for us to know that you want the war to end and to end right and that the chivalry that bears your name or buys you bon bons has your command to complete the establishment of the 93rd Overseas Battalion AT ONCE. And when the 93rd is far away the memory of the Womanhood at home—the Womanhood that took up the Cross—will nerve the arm and cheer the heart and steady the aim and strengthen the resolve to do their bit not only to defend the Empire but also to avenge the dastardly outrages perpetrated against Childhood and Womanhood.

Bandmaster Hughes and Sergts. Naples and Leader Are Honoured---More Recruits Added to the Strength--93rd Men Will Be Out Strong To-night---To-day's Military News.

A most enjoyable banquet was held under the auspices of the 93rd Battalion Band in the recreation room of the Armouries on Saturday evening. In addition to the members of the band and Battalion Sergeant-Major Miller, W.O., who presided, the guests present were: Lt.-Col. Johnston, O.C.; Capt. C. R. Widdifield, Acting Adjutant; Hon. Major Davidson, Chaplain; Lieut. R. Gliddon, bandmaster, 57th Band; Adjutant McElhiney, Messrs. R. J. Devey and I. H. Renwick, and a representative of the Examiner.

After an appetizing repast prepared under the direction of Sergeant Cook Wride, and served by khaki clad waiters had been done ample justice to, an enjoyable programme of speeches was given. In the first place there was a surprise for Bandmaster Walter Hughes, when Sergt. Leader called upon him to accept a very handsome gold-headed ebony cane, the gift of the members of the band. Sergt. Leader expressed the affection and regard that every member of the band had for Bandmaster Hughes. The latter, in expressing his hearty thanks for the gift, referred to the good feeling that had existed in the band. The Bandmaster also expressed the thanks of the band to Lieut. Gliddon, Adjutant McElhiney and Messrs. Devey and Renwick for the great assistance they had rendered the band.

Then came surprise No. 2, when Sergt.-Major Miller presented Sergt. W. Leader with a gold ring as a mark of the appreciation of the band.

There was also a surprise presentation for Sergt. R. Naples in the shape of a pipe, but as the sergeant was unable to be present, this part of the programme was postponed until later.

Speeches were given by Lt.-Col. Johnston, Lieut. Gliddon, Adjutant McElhiney and Messrs. Devey and Renwick.

The affair was a most enjoyable one.

At the 93rd Band banquet on Saturday night, Hon. Major Davidson told those present a military story composed by himself, entitled "Boy Brandon of the Band." In conclusion he presented Bandmaster Hughes with a cheque for $15.00 with which to buy music for the band

ROUSING ADDRESSES AT SUNDAY RECRUITING RALLY

MR. JOHN METHERAL. — A well known citizen whose death occurred on Saturday. The funeral took place to-day from the family residence, 146 Murray street.

Meeting in George Street Church Last Night Largely Attended—Appeal Made For the 93rd Battalion.

CARDS HANDED OUT

Peterborough's week of unprecedented recruiting endeavour to complete the enlistment for the 93rd Battalion opened with an unique and unusual meeting in staid old George Street Methodist Church last night, at the conclusion of the regular Sunday evening service. Addresses by the chairman, Col. Walker, and by Col. Johnston, Col. Arthur Stevenson, Mr. J. W. Flavelle of Toronto, formerly of this city, Mr. R. R. Hall, and Sergt. Fred Wells, a returned prisoner from Germany, covered the Empire's present extremity and particularly presented the necessity of filling up the Peterborough Battalion during the present week. Musical numbers varied the programme arranged by Mr. J. H. Renwick, an orchestra of many pieces and composite of musicians from George Street Church and the 93rd Battalion Band, playing patriotic selections and accompanying vocal solos sung by Mrs. Renwick and Miss Kemp. The active participation of the church in this present work apparently had a strong appeal for the citizens in the fact that the auditorium showed scarcely an empty seat, and in the large audience was noticed a considerable sprinkling of men. To the men present, officers of the 93rd handed cards bearing the following inscription:

"I hereby offer my services to my King and Country, and will enlist if I pass the Medical examination.

Name . . .

Address . . .

Women's Share in Industry.

To a cogent consideration of the principles in conflict in this war, Mr. Flavelle, chairman of Canada's Munitions Board, added several practical suggestions, among them the proposal that in Peterborough, as elsewhere, women should relieve acceptable men in stores, in factories, and even on the farm. The reply that business would be disturbed thereby should not be thought of with the world in the melting pot and the Empire needing all the available men who are physically fit. In England women are working at lathes, are taxi-cab drivers, are in charge of street 'busses, and are otherwise replacing men who are thus freed for the greater work now before them. All over this land there will be help required on the farms. Why not call on the patriotic women in the country places to assume some of this work to drive reapers, to feed cattle and bear burdens possible to them. It would be rough work for them, but God knows it is rough work in the trenches. Mr. Flavelle referred to similar opportunities open to women in the cities and suggested a committee to wait upon employers requesting them to accept women for certain work now performed by men. In a tribute to the patriotism of the women Mr. Flavelle said he believed they would try to accomplish anything they were asked to do.

Mr. Flavelle told of a young clerk who was supporting a feeble mother and his sister. He wanted to enlist but felt that he could not leave them unprovided for. Speaking to his elderly employer one day he mentioned his position. His employer asked the young man how much he was giving his mother and sister, and the lad

Every man and woman in the district is urged to attend the meeting in his or her particular district, and assist in the work. There will be an officer from the 93rd Batalion present at each meeting, as well as representatives of the Speakers' Patriotic League and the Womens' Auxiliary.

On Wednesday night there will be a mass meeting in the Opera House, at which Mrs. Huestis of Toronto will be one of the speakers. This meeting is open to every one and not particularly for women as some people seem to think.

Membership Growing.

The membership in the Women's Auxiliary to the Speakers' Patriotic League is growing apace and bids fair to attain to several thousand. The members agree to wear the badge of the League and use their influence on behalf of the league's work which is to create an atmosphere favourable to recruiting. The members are all anxious to see the ranks of the 93rd Overseas Battalion filled up at once. The spirit of the Spartan Mothers is spreading among the women and the men who do not enlist will have to find some better excuse than 'Mother or sister or wife is not willing, and I would not think of going against their will.'

THE PEOPLE PAY.

Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, has stepped down and out, presumably for the good of the province. But the province, as is generally the way of the world, has to pay for its benefits. Sir Richard goes to London as Agent-General of the Province—at a good, fat salary—and Mr. J. H. Turner, ex-premier of the province, complains that he is being "kicked out" to make a place for Mr. McBride, and is thrust aside in his old age. But British Columbia will be made to come to the rescue, and provde the price for this political shuffle. Premier Bowser says that "liberal provision will be made for Mr. Turner, by way of retiring allowance."

ADJUSTING THE BOOT.

The Toronto News is in a really pitiable plight over the opera bouffe treason of Col. Armand Lavergne, who is talking treason at a great rate in Quebec. He made a treasonable speech in the Quebec Legislature and repeated it at the banquet given to celebrate the sixth anniversary of Le Devoir, the organ of the Nationalists. At this banquet Mr. Lavergne was unusually vigorous. As reported by the News, he "denounced fighting abroad, and said that Canada should send not a man, not a rifle, not a gun. Then once more he dared any one to arrest him for treason. "There are three thousand peasants in my county," he said, "who would offer their lives to defend me. It would be necessary to pass over their bodies to touch me."

This is really awful, and one does not wonder that the imperially-minded and loyally lipped News takes it so deeply to heart. One, however, may feel that there is reason for thinking that remorse adds poignancy to the regret of the News. The party which the News champions was the foster father of the Nationalism, now represented by Mr. Lavergne, the open-mouthed traitor whom the News has ready for banging, drawing, and quartering, Mr. Henri Bourassa, Deputy Speaker Blondin, and Hon. Albert Sevigny, speaker of His Majesty's parliament, and divers Cabinet Ministers, are other representatives. Mr. Armand Lavergne, the declared, the boasted, the defiant, traitor, is an undoubted, if he is an unwelcome and inconvenient product of the partisans of the News, and a most important member of the Nationalists. It is his boast that he nominated the three Nationalist ministers taken into the Borden Cabinet, as an undoubted result of the party compact. He probably spoke the truth. We expect the truth from a man who has the courage to boldly declare his treason at the risk of having his head chopped off.

Mr. Lavergne is, moreover, a Colonel in the militia, wearing His Majesty's uniform. But it must be remembered that Mr. Lavergne is a shining type of the Nationalism which is a product of the policy of the Conservative party. When the then unknown, headless Nationalists put up a candidate in Drummond-Arthabaska, against a Laurier candidate, the Conservative party saw therein an opening for a campaign to "kill Laurier." Accordingly, the Nationalist candidate got the moral, if not official, support of the Conservative party, with the result that the Nationalists' candidate was elected, and "Laurier killed." The election of the first Nationalist candidate was the birth of Nationalism in Canada. Here it took its first place in Canadian politics with the help of the Conservative party. The Nationalist victory was hailed as a death blow to Laurier and the successful National candidate was applauded, a leading member of the Conservative party, since become a cabinet minister with a "handle" to his name, sending a personal telegram of congratulation.

The Nationalism first warmed into life in Drummond-Arthabaska, then first taking concrete form, first gaining its grip on existence, was farther adopted as an auxiliary of the Conservative party. In the general election of 1911 the campaigns of the Nationalist candidates were financed from the Conservative party fund. Mr. Henri Bourassa, the acknowledged head and front of Nationalism, was brought into Ontario, and appeared on a Conservative platform, and spoke in the interests of the Conservative candidate. When, by the aid of Nationalism, Laurier was defeated, and Mr. Borden called upon to form a cabinet, he gave official recognition to Nationalism by including three Natonalists in the list of His Majesty's advisers—three gentlemen whom the fiery Lavergne claims to have selected.

Now, if, in the person of Mr. Lavergne, Nationalism has shown its true colours; now that the viper which the News and its party warmed at its hearth, has begun to sting, it becomes the part of the News and its party to take action; "it is up to" the News to stride over the bodies of Mr. Lavergne's "three thousand peasants" and seize him and bear him off to the block. The News and its party fostered the cult of treason, gave it official recognition, and now that Nationalism has become an embarrassment, a source of injury to imperial interests, a discouragement to recruiting, those who encouraged it and used it for partizan advantage, even at the risk of domestic schism and imperial damage seem to have some prefunctory responsibility for dealing with the malign consequences of their initial and subsequent encouragement to existence.

This is a small matter to occupy so much space, but it is as well to put the boot on the right foot, and modestly suggests the advisability of some concrete kicking.

THE FRUIT OF THE CULT.

The systematic teaching of the cult of force in Germany has succeeded in creating a national sentiment of cruelty which is held to be justified as a consequence of the policy of making everything subservient to military success, the only religion the people know, thanks to the teaching of a generation. A German journalist commits no violence upon the popular sentiment of the militarists when he emits diabolical sentiments like these, in reference to the treatment of war cripples. He says:

"The crippled body aches with pain when it moves for the first time on stiff, artificial supports. Let it ache with pain! It will ache and ache, and ache before the crpple can walk unaided! To every cripple undergoing the Spartan course of treatment we must say: 'Your every nerve is racked with pain till the tears force themselves into your eyes. Do not expect our sympathy! Sympathy would ruin your soul, which nothing but ruthless hardness can save. Wipe away your own tears, and summon to your aid your own heroic, iron will!'"

Yet is a nation with sentiments like these that impiously invokes the God of Christianity to bless its accursed cause.

PENALTY OF CARELESSNESS.

A letter from Fire Chief Howard of the Fire Department, printed in another column of to-day's issue, calls attention to the penalty of carelessness—in the case mentioned a rather substantial one. It appears that the conditions of a fire insurance policy were disregarded by placing ashes in a wooden box, and the insurance people naturally refused payment, as they were justified in doing by law, as witness the following statutory conditions endorsed on all insurance policies:

"The Company is not liable for the loss following, that is to say: Where the insurance is upon buildings or their contents, for a loss caused by the want of good and substantial brick or stone or cement chimneys, or by ashes or embers being deposited, within the knowledge and consent of the assured, in wooden vessels, or by stoves or stove pipes, being to the knowledge of the assured, in an unsafe condition or improperly secured."

Carelessness in regard to the conditions of insurance policies is something to be avoided, but the practice of putting hot ashes in wooden receptacles is a form of carelessness which rediments common sense would counsel against. In fire, as in other "accidents" nine-tenths of the so-called accidents are the result of carelessness or thoughtlessness. Our minds are given us for thinking with, and if neglect to thus use them we generally have to pay the penalty.

FOR CAUSE.

When knighthood is conferred for distinguished military service it has some meaning and recalls past years. —London Advertiser.

A GOOD REASON.

A hired man enlisted and was asked why. "Well," he said, "I'd be a long time on the farm before I'd be ordered to stand at ease."—Kincardine Review.

THE BROAD BACK OF THE BREADWINNER BEARS THE BURDEN

The Ottawa Citizen, Conservative Independent, is not only one of the best edited journals in Canada, but invariably is fair in its utterances, and is always timely in its comments on public matters. Under the heading "The Burden of The Breadwinner," is discussed the question of the drag on the purses of the consumers, because of the rigid tariff regulations of the government. At the time of the last general election the Citizen approved, while giving a general support to Mr. Borden, and the Tory party, of the efforts to obtain better trade relations with the market immediately south of the 49th parallel. No doubt it felt at that time and continues the same opinion that it would be to the greatest advantage of Canada to have a form of reciprocity with the U. S. right at our door. It also possessed the knowledge that in the campaign of 1891, the late Sir John Macdonald, a few months before his death, in a manifesto to the electors gave the subject of improved trade relations a paramount place in his request for support at the polls. It was in a way the last "will and testament" of the great Conservative chieftain. The capitalistic interests, big and powerful, opposed the proposition and it was defeated. Nevertheless the Citizen remains a believer in the principle and thus discusses the effects of the present method of hitting the people's pockets:

The people of this country are bound to waken up before long to the tricky way they are taxed and made to pay tribute to a growing class of privileged interests. So too the genuine business interests of the community—particularly the retail merchant—must realize how the burden of taxation on the people is a direct barrier to commercial prosperity. The high protectionist tariff of this Dominion, including the well-nigh prohibitive tariff on imports from the Mother Country, is no benefit to the Canadian merchant; nor, apparently to anyone else but the professional politician and a few undesirable groups of special privilege fastened on the nation.

Owing to the Dominion policy of imposing a heavy customs tax on imports, the cost of living is artificially inflated. Prices are increased. The merchant is compelled to charge the price, plus the 30 per cent. or more customs tax, without deriving any benefit from this indirect method of taxation. It simply means that the purchaser cannot afford to buy so much; must wear boots longer, cannot get a new outfit of clothing so often, cannot afford blankets, household utensils, even food and all the necessities of life in such plentiful quantities as if there were no protectionist tariff loaded upon them. The community is taxed into stringent economy for no good purpose by the protectionist tariff.

The tribute the Canadian people are compelled to pay largely for political extravagance and special privilege, such as the groups of protected interests, will average probably $45 per head yearly. The customs department will collect about $15 per head, and the protected interests about $30 per head, all added to the price the Canadian consumer has to pay, and the marchant has to collect—without benefit to either the consumer or the merchant.

This is a moderate estimate of the annual tribute paid by the Canadian people on account of protectionism. But, even so, let the head of a family of five work it out, and he will see that he has to pay an average of $225 per year as a dole, with little or no return for it. The part of it appropriated by the Dominion government is, among other public expenditures, squandered over such white elephants as the Hudson Bay railway scheme, and the unnecessary outlay over Halifax terminals. The remainder is largely taken by the privileged interests to pay dividends on watered stock; and it might as well be spent in trying to grow coffee in the Yukon so far as the general prosperity of the community is concerned. In the meanwhile the country is told there is no money to provide for the dependents of the Canadian soldiers on active service; and disabled Canadian soldiers are not allowed pension enough to keep them above the margin line of bare existence. The breadwinner would gladly pay all the Dominion asked for its disabled men and soldiers' defendants; but it is time to have done with the $225 yearly dole to political contracting and special privilege.—Brockville Recorder.

IT IS OUR WAR.

"This is as much our war," said a speaker at a recruiting meeting in Wiarton, "as if it were being fought in the Bruce peninsula."

CAN'T BE SCARED.

Up in Manitoba the antis are trying to scare the suffragists by saying that if women get the vote they can be members of the Legislature. Well, they could scarcely be worse than the other kind of members.— Hamilton Times.

A FAIR BARGAIN.

Sir George E. Foster intimates that Canadians may be asked for a Government loan of $300,000,000. If Sir George will only guarantee us another crop such as we have this year, secure a preference for it in the British market, and get these internal elevators running properly we can take care of half of western Canada. That's a fair bargain.—Calgary News-Telegrm.

RECORD RECRUITING IN THE WEST.

The Toronto News says that "the magnificent enrollment of 19 per cent. has not wearied the west," but asks if the country can afford to lean so hard upon that section. If the solicitude of The Toronto News spreads, the west may soon hear kind words from quarters whence only scoldings have come for many years. Before the war when prosperity was sagging, the regular thing for eastern newspapers to do was to blame the west for all the country's woes. But with the war in hand, and the nation needing fighting men, the west may be rated as a fine place. The call goes out for 220,000 men from the west's 414,000, but for only 160,000 from old Ontario's 663,000. The west can afford to smile, and, smilingly, will take on the big job the Militia Department gives it and will, we believe, see it through.—Port Arthur Chronicle.

GOAT'S MILK IN GERMANY.

Under the maternal prompting of necessity the German people have shown a remarkable degree of invention in discovering adequate substitutes for those necessities of life and industry which they can no longer obtain from abroad. It was reported in a cable dispatch to The Times recently that the Prussian Ministry of Agriculture is planning to meet the serious shortage of cows' milk in Berlin by herding large numbers of milch goats and distributing their milk free to the children of the poorer classes. There is no reason why the plan should not succeed. Goats' milk is a perfectly satisfactory food for children, and in some respects it is superior to cows' milk. It was strongly recommended for more general use in this city in a recent statement of the Health Department:

A number of medical authorities have advocated the more extensive use of goats' milk for infant feeding, the main reason being the well-known immunity of goats from tuberculosis.

Thus a substitute which the German people will have to adopt under the spur of necessity may prove to be more beneficial than the product it replaces. As a result of the war Germany is learning to utilize sources of supply that were scorned in more prosperous peace times. The knowledge she obtains she cannot monopolize, and neutral nations would do well to note and make their own the lessons which the German people are compelled to learn.—New York Times.

replied, "ten dollars a week." The employer gladly offered to contribute that sum weekly to the boy's dependents, since he, himself, was too old to fight. Elerly men can also take the places of the youth. "What odds if we wear out five years sooner, or that women have hard hands instead of soft hands. Thank God we have not lost the qualities of the British people. What odds if our homes are made desolate, if the world comes through this struggle with the right prevailing?"

Col. Johnston of the 93rd.

Col. Johnston thanked the gentlemen for the assistance they had given toward the recruiting of the Battalion, in arranging this meeting, and also the citizens, for their attendance. Peterborough has done its duty in the giving of money and munitions, and had given generously in men, but the most urgent call to-day is for men. There was not one person in the audience but had a friend or relative at the front, and there was not one who in his heart did not wish to help them. Col. Johnston appealed for a brisk enlistment during the present week.

Col. Stevenson.

In a thoughtful address Col. Stevenson spoke of the British system of voluntary enlistment which is Canada's privilege, and under that system many men had joined the colours. But it was not fair to them that they should bear the brunt, while others hald aloof. Following up this argument Col. Stevenson said that the relatives of these men had a right to appeal to others and to their relatives to share in the present sacrifice.

Col. Stevenson pointed out that Peterborough's factories are working over time, its stores are busy, and the farmers have gathered rich crops. So peaceful and secure is the city that many fail to realize that the country is facing the greatest war in which it has ever engaged. To use this very protection as a reason for not enlisting is the excuse of a coward. If the people do not respond to voluntary recruiting they may be confronted with one in which the present method is replaced with one carrying the words 'you must.' Canada has no compulsory service. She relies upon the devotion and loyalty of the people. The state trusts in the individual conscience, of the people who constitute it. Britain is contending for and exhausting her resources that the moral code received from Galilee shall not succomb to the frightful ethics that have emanated from Berlin.

Speaking of those who are avoiding their duty, Col. Stevenson said there was no law to bring them out, but there is the force of public opinion which directed in a righteous cause is irresistible. He referred to former crises England had combatted, that in 1588, with Spain, and with Napoleon one hundred years ago. Now it is with Germany, whose offensive has reached the crest of its wave with a recession near at hand. This is the very crisis at which every man should be put into the field. A little later may be too late. This is an opportunity which may never come a-gain that in this crisis the extra forces from the colonies may prove the decisive factor in turning the course of this war.

Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mr. Hall presented in a few words a complete review of what he termed the colossal task now before the British people. Every possible man should see that Germany does not accomplish her resolution to vanquish Great Britain, for which the enemy had been preparing forty years. With a scholarly reference to the ancient civilizations of Babylon and Greece destroyed when their peoples failed to accept opportunities for their preservation, Mr. Hall spoke of the present opportunity before our own race. What is going to be the answer of the young men who had cards placed in their hands to-night? In your pride of race and enjoying the liberty and freedom that has been preserved for you, are you going to hand to future generations, not liberty and your British privileges, but a sullied name, with chains and slavery?

Col. Duncan Walker, in his address spoke of the fact that Peterborough's men had proved themselves of the finest, and he read a letter from Col. Gray, of the 21st Battalion, in which the commanding officer highly praised the men from this city. Col. Walker urged the raising of six hundred men here this week in order to uphold the honour and good name of Peterborough, but also to put the 93rd on a footing of establishment with many others in the province.

Sergt. Fred Wells made a moving appeal in an address peculiarly his own.

Stirling—"I've had another addition to my family since I saw you last." Ashley—"You don't say! Boy or girl?" Stirling—"Son-in-Law!"

THEY HAVE UNDERGONE A GRADUAL TRANSFORMATION

By C. F. Bertelli,

Headquarters of the France-Belgian Army in Flanders, Jan. 12.—Political theories in fact, abstract ideas, have no official existence among this nation in arms, but in the course of my tour of the front I have had many opportunities of ascertaining that, confronted hourly by death and the grim business of killing for national protection, these millions of citizen soldiers have undergone a gradual transformation in their idealistic convictions.

This wonderful change is of far-reaching importance for the future of French national life. Generally speaking, advanced socialistic ideas have been badly hit by the war's trials.

On the other hand Roman Catholicism, which, previous to the war, was almost a dead letter in France, has made wonderful strides. The same must be said of other religions, though the change in this case is of minimum importance apart from the tendency which it illustrates, because of the small percentage of worshippers outside of the Catholic pale.

Now Convinced.

Such are the absolute facts sustained by all the evidence of my tour. They are confirmed and supplemented, not only by priests and Catholic officers, but also by officers of the fighting force and intellectual soldiers serving in the ranks who cannot be suspected of bias.

Before the war these men, who could be counted by the hundred thousands, were the strongest supporters in Europe of the Marxian policy of no international frontiers and promotion of the brotherhood of nations. The were prepared to lead Europe in an anti-war strike, on the eve of the conflict.

But actual experience has convinced them that their plan, however desirable theoretically, is unworkable. Brought face to face with the stern necessity of defending their own homes and families against invasion, and later brought into immediate contact with the unspeakable horrors of invasion, they realize overwhelmingly that their Utopia was a mere fantastical dream.

Former Pacificist Won the Military Medal.

Such was the description of their conversation to patriotism supplied to me near the battle line by one of their most prominent leaders, whose name I am not permitted to give because of the official anonymity of the army.

"This man, who began the war as a private," his colonel told me, "is now an officer of such keenness and efficiency that I have attached him to my personal staff. Although his life has been spent in combating armament, he has distinguished himself so often for acts of exemplary courage that he has won the military medal and the war cross.

"I asked him the other day what he thought of his old theories.

"'They were only theories,' he replied, 'and after the war the majority of those who shared my views will have a very different story to tell.'"

The general opinion prevailing among thinkers at the front is that the war, while it has killed anti-militarism has given a tremendous impetus to practical socialism.

They say more socialistic measures have been introduced all over Europe since the beginning of the conflict than during the whole period before the war, and they foresee a wonderful era of constructive socialism, which, indeed, will be absolutely necessary for the solution of ante-bellum problems.

Citizen Soldiers unanimous Against Future Armaments.

Sentiment among the French citizen soldiers is unanimously against future armaments with aggressive designs, but it is emphatically in favor of a defensive military machine.

So far as religious principles are concerned, the wonderful behavior of the priests on the battlefield has done away entirely with that contempt which the masses were won't to have for the ministers of churches.

Everywhere these Catholic chaplains, armed only with their faith and animated by a wonderful spirit of sacrifice, have provoked the admiration of unbelievers as well as of the soldiers of all creeds.

I had a long talk with one of them, who is famous throughout France for his innumerable acts of bravery and utter disregard of death. He was in the retreat from Mons, and ever since whenever his men have been in action they have always found him in the very front line of fire, ready at any moment to administer the comforts of religion to those who wanted them, or to help the wounded out of danger whether believer or atheist.

Idealistic Side Has Tremendous Influence.

"It is most striking what a tremendous influence over men the idealistic side of this war has had," he said. "In my experience I have never known a man in the hospital or on the battlefield to refuse extreme unction.

"Without a question, for years before the war religious feeling had declined tremendously in France, either from indifference or scepticism, divided the men into four categories; those who had received Christian education but had dropped out of it the daily struggle for life; those in the same condition, but who had become atheists through materialistic convictions acquired later in life; those who had received the church's education and never lost it, although worshipping in a perfunctory way, and, finally those to whom faith was a dead letter because they had never been taught to believe.

"In the first instance, the first class of men voluntarily returned to the church once they were brought into contact with death and the hereafter. The second class also came back as soon as the war had forcibly made them realize the emptiness and cold comfort of their theories in the supreme hour.

"Only Unbelievers are Entirely Refractory."

"The third class revived all the enthusiasm of their youth, while the fourth class I have found absolutely refractory. These men are like grown up children. They question every statement you make and refuse to budge from their stand that they must have actual proof of the efficacy of the church's teachings.

"They won't realize that you cannot explain faith and, having never known it, they are ignorant of its great comforting influence. This is not a numerous body.

"However, we never insist nor exercise any pressure. Religious practise is partly optional and the result is highly satisfactory. Seventy-five per cent. of the men of my section never fail to attend mass.

"Let me tell you one incident that will show how deeply the soldiers desire priestly assistance in the hour of death. Recently a heavy shell fell right among a body of men on their way to the trenches. I was with them and immediately attended to the stricken and dying.

Smiles Peacefully and Dies in Arms of Priest.

"Deep in the shell crater I bent over a youth frightfully mangled. I took his hand and whispered in his ear:

"'I am a priest. Make an effort and press my hand to let me know you have recognized me.'

"The dying boy's eyes were closed and his face was hideously contorted in the grimmest agony, but no sooner had I whispered those few words than he seemed to heave a sigh of relief.

"His eyes slowly opened. There was a slight pressure of my hand and his face relaxed into a sublimely peaceful smile. With my ear close to his lips I caught the faint words:

"'Why a priest here? God be thanked!'

"I rapidly administered absolution and he died in my arms. The vision of this wonderful experience ever haunts me and spurs me on in my work.

And with these words the chaplain leaped into the saddle and, with a military forage cap cocked over one ear, galloped swiftly away, a lonely, black figure on the desolate yellow dunes.

ACCUSES MRS. MOHR OF PLOTTING CRIME

Prosecutor Asserts She Baited Negroes to Kill Her Husband by Offering Them Large Pay

She Also Sought Her Husband's Fortune, Says State's Attorney—Jury Visits Scene of Crime.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 15.—"The most cold-blooded murder ever committed in the State of Rhode Island," was the characterization given to-day by Assistant Attorney General Abbott Phillips to the killing last August of Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, for whose death his widow and two negroes, whom she is charged with employing to slay the surgeon, are now on trial in the Superior Court here.

Mr. Phillips made this statement to-day in opening the prosecution's case before the jury. He described Mrs. Mohr as a woman driven to desperation by jealousy, worry, and cupidity, with the desire to obtain her husband's reputed wealth as the strongest of the three motives. Saying that the woman was determined to cause the death of her husband, and, if possible, that of the object of her jealousy, Miss Emily G. Burger, Dr. Mohr's housekeeper, Mr. Phillips gave the State's theory of how Mrs. Mohr tempted three negroes with promises of "big money," and of how the negroes finally committed the crime after making detailed preparations for it, and after their plans had once been frustrated through Miss Burger's failure to make an expected trip from Providence to Newport with Dr. Mohr in his automobile.

Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger started on this trip four days later and they were both shot from ambush on a lonely spot on the Washington Road about eight miles from Providence, where George W. Healis, a negro chauffeur, stopped the automobile. Healis, who was originally charged with complicity in the murder, has turned State's evidence, confessing that he stopped the automobile, so that Cecil Victor Brown and Henry H. Spellman, the negro defendents, might make the assault. It is upon Healis's story, according to report, that Mr. Phillips based his recital of the details of the killing.

The recital was the more vivid because it followed a visit by the Judge, lawyers, and jurymen this morning to the scene of the murder. There was a great deal of comment because none of the defendants went on this visit, although Judge Charles F. Stearns announced that they were entitled to make the trip. John J. Fitzgerald of counsel for Mrs. Mohr replied that his client would waive her right. William H. Lewis, the negro lawyer, who is chief counsel for Brown and Spellman, followed with a similar statement. The lawyers admitted that none of the defendants cared to visit the scene of the murder.

While, because of the stage of the trial, the prosecution took the lead in the day's developments, the defense had reason for encouragement in the arrival here this morning of Augustus D. Mohr and Mrs. Ella Hogan of McEwensville, Penn., brother and sister of the murdered surgeon, who are expected to testify for Mrs. Mohr.

They were met at the station by Mrs. Mohr and her seven-year-old son, and accompanied her to the courtroom, where they remained all day.

Mrs. Mohr Nervous.

Mrs. Mohr, small and pale, seeming the more ashen in her black mourning dress, sat silent, with no pronounced expression on her face, while the State's lawyers depicted her as the principal plotter in a "cowardly, dastardly crime." Apparently her worst moment was as the Judge, jurymen, and lawyers were leaving for the scene of the murder. It was plainly evident that she was agitated, and one of her lawyers patted her reassuringly on the shoulder, saying:

"Now, don't you worry; it will be all right."

The automobile in which Mr. Mohr was shot was placed in the Washington Road where it stood at the moment of the murder, and Attorney General Herbert A. Rice called the jury's attention to the bullet-torn upholstery at the top of the rear seat, over which, according to the State Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger were shot from behind. The stains of blood upon the mudguard of the car were also pointed out.

Attention was then called to the fact that the automobile stood in what would be at night the darkest part of the road. It was also brought out that the automobile had stopped on a slight declivity, this being meant to show that it was brought to a standstill intentionally and not because of an unavoidably "dead" engine.

The jurymen were then taken around a curve in a branch of the road, where there is a bridge over a spillway from Echo Lake and later Mr. Phillips said that, according to the State's theory, the murderers ran through this branch after making the assault and threw their revolvers into the spillway. A little further on was a spot where, according to Mr. Phillips the two negroes hid Brown's motor cycle while they waited in ambush for Dr. Mohr's automobile. A hole in a barbed wire fence bordering the road, through which the negroes were said to have crawled, was also pointed out, and the jurymen were asked, too, to notice Echo Lake, where two men will testify for the State that they saw two negroes with a motor cycle in the vicinity at the time of the murder.

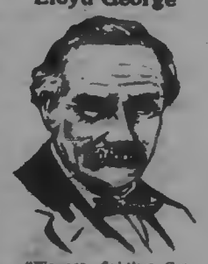
Returning to Providence, the jurymen were taken to the homes occupied by Dr. Mohr and his wife after their separation last March. The twelve men were asked to notice that the two houses, that of the surgeon in Pinwood Avenue and that of Mrs. Mohr, in Reservoir Avenue, were in plain view of each other, with only an open square between, it being the State's theory that Mrs. Mohr spied upon her husband and was aroused by seeing him frequently in the company of Miss Burger.

When the afternoon session of court opened Mr. Phillips began the conclusion of his address. He described how Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger left the surgeon's office in the automobile on the evening of Tuesday, Aug. 31, and of how they were assaulted after the chauffeur had stopped the machine. He said that Dr. Mohr was shot first, that Miss Burger stood up after being shot in the ear, and that she was shot a second time while standing.

At this stage the court adjourned.

The Empire's Call to Ontario: "ECONOMIZE"

Lloyd George



"We are fighting Germany, Austria, and drink, and, so far as I can see, the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink."

Lord Kitchener

"The men who have recently joined the Colours are doing their utmost to prepare themselves for active service with the least possible delay. This result can only be achieved if by hard work and strict sobriety they keep themselves thoroughly fit and healthy."

Admiral Jellicoe

"In the Navy there are three qualities upon which efficiency mainly depends. They are discipline, straight shooting, and endurance; and Temperance unquestionably tends greatly to the promotion of these qualities."

Baron French

"There is no doubt that the work which the Royal Army Temperance Association carries on makes men infinitely better soldiers and better men. If men want to see regiments, battalions, squadrons, batteries, smart and efficient, they must practise these great qualities of self-control and self-sacrifice."

The existence of the British Empire depends upon the outcome of the War. All our resources must be thrown into the scale.

The Empire's call is for men, munitions, food, clothing, and, above all things, MONEY. We are being called upon to give our millions to carry on the war. Sir Geo. E. Foster has stated that the Dominion Government might even ask for a Domestic Loan of $300,000,000. It is only a few weeks ago that Canadians subscribed over $100,000,000 to a War Loan.

These facts bring right home to us that this is, as Premier Asquith stated, "A War of Money as well as Men."

Sir Robert Borden, Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, and other prominent men have emphasized the necessity of economy.

Conserve our wealth. Cut down expenses. This is what we must do.

Something to Think About

Did you ever seriously think about the millions of dollars expended annually for alcoholic beverages in the Province of Ontario?

As nearly as can be estimated from figures, based on Dominion Government returns, the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the Dominion in 1914 was $103,049,129. Assuming that Ontario, whose population is one-third of the Dominion, consumes one-third of the alcoholic beverages, her share amounts to $34,349,709.66. Let us say $33,000,000.

In other words, Ontario's Annual Consumption of Alcoholic Beverages represents the cost of---

1st. Rifles, Machine Guns and Field Guns for an army of 690,523 men on active service for a period of 12 months.

2nd. Or Accoutrements, Camp Equipment, Harness and Saddlery, Transport Vehicles, Signalling and Telephone Equipment, Tools and Miscellaneous Requirements for 1,269,231 men at the front.

3rd. Or one year's Clothing and Necessaries for 330,000 men.

4th. Or Rations, Subsistence or Money Allowances for 226,027 "boys" on active service for one year.

5th. Or the Canadian Government's Separation Allowance for 117,773 dependents for the entire year of 1916.

The foregoing figures are based on the war estimates of the Department of Militia and Defence for 1916-17, as published on December 31st, 1915, in The Toronto Globe.

Eliminate This Expenditure

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred believes that as a war-time measure, if for no other reason, this colossal expenditure for alcoholic beverages in Ontario should be eliminated. The Committee also has every confidence that the Provincial Government will move in this important matter as rapidly as public opinion will support them.

The function of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred is to organize, crystalize and give expression to the present state of public opinion on the question of prohibition. The Committee believes that it can demonstrate to the Government that Ontario is overwhelmingly in favor of prohibition. The people will shortly be given the opportunity of signing a petition for presentation to the Government.

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred is the executive head of this big new prohibition movement. It represents the whole Province. It numbers men of both political parties—men who welcome this chance to work for prohibition now that it has been taken out of politics—earnest men who are working together for the common good.

The public are urged to join hands with the Committee and insure the success of the movement. Ontario cannot afford the liquor traffic. It is claiming millions of dollars, and sapping the strength of the manhood of the Province, all of which the Empire vitally needs in the present crisis.

It costs money to organize and advertise. If you think the object good and approve our method, one way to express approval is by a liberal financial gift. Make cheques payable to Frank Kent, Treasurer, and send to Room 1404, C.P.R. Building, Toronto.

Signs of the Times

England

The sale of liquor has been curtailed to five and one-half hours per day. WHY?

France

The French Government has prohibited the manufacture or sale of Absinthe, and provided heavy penalties for any person supplying any such liquors to soldiers. WHY?

Russia

The most outstanding example in the world's history of the prohibition of the liquor traffic is Russia. Our ally has enacted absolute prohibition with incalculable results—both economic and moral. Vice and poverty have given way to happier homes and enormously increased savings accounts. WHY?

Germany

On February 17th, 1915, the General Commander issued a proclamation that any saloonkeeper serving alcoholic drinks to any soldier would be sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and his business closed up. WHY?

United States

Seven more States voted "yes" on December 30th, for State-wide prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor. WHY?

Canada

Prince Edward Island is dry.

Nova Scotia is all under prohibition except the city of Halifax.

New Brunswick has prohibition in ten out of fifteen counties and in two of its three cities.

Quebec has 906 dry municipalities and only 257 wet.

Manitoba will vote on prohibition this year. Saskatchewan—Every bar was closed on June 30th last.

Alberta—Declared for prohibition on July 21st last by 18,293 votes, as against 37,549. British Columbia—The Government is pledged to take a plebiscite.

Ontario

573 municipalities are now dry and there are licenses in only 274. This counts as dry the municipalities voted dry on January 3rd. During the past five years only a single municipality in Ontario has gone back from prohibition to license. Local prohibition has proved an immense success. You are asked to join with the Committee of One Hundred in the demand for a chance to pronounce on Province-wide elimination of the traffic.

BOYS, READ THIS.

Have you ever noticed that the fellows that run most of the big concerns of the country are the ones who always return courteous answers? If you address the president of a railroad he will listen attentively and make a decent reply. But you ask a civil question of the cub at a depot in a country town and you get a smart and flippant reply. Go into a big city store and ask for the manager. He will talk pleasantly and give you the desired information. But happen to get in the way of the bright young fellow who is washing a window and he will hand you a package that will make your blood boil. But drop around 20 years later and the cub at the depot may have advanced to the local freight and the window washer will likely be driving one of the delivery wagons for the store. The presidents of railroads and the managers of big concerns are the fellows who in flowery days of their youth acquired the habit of returning soft and courteous answers. That is one of the reasons they became railroad presidents and managers of big concerns. The cub who knows more will always be a cub, and the smart alecky window washer will be polishing glass in the autumn time of his days.

A DEBT OF HONOUR TO HELP THE BELGIANS

"They preferred to go starving rather than dishonour and soil their hands by work for their enemies and the invaders of their country," said T. P. O'Connor in a recent speech, appealing for assistance for the destitute population of Belgium. Mr. O'Connor had reference in this particular passage of his address to those Belgians in that part of the country under German occupation, where the invading forces attempted to press the prisoners into doing work for the German army.

Mr. O'Connor's address was a powerful one, embodying many details of the Belgian situation which the whole world should know but lack of space precludes the possibility of our treating at this time with more than this one passage.

They preferred to starve rather than work for the invaders of their country, says "Tay Pay." They preferred death to dishonour, they were willing to give up their lives rather than aid their enemies.

Nay, they did more than this. They gave to the world a display of courage such as has never been known and have placed upon the British Empire a debt that must be paid. England can never fully repay Belgium for what she did in the dark days of August and September, 1914, for she can never bring back to the mourning widows and mothers the men who fell at Louvain, Liege and on the other fields of battle. But Britain can, must and will partially pay this debt of honour when the opportunities are presented as we have them to-day.

Winter is upon the Belgian men, women and children, who are forced to stay at home, and with winter comes the dark shadow of misery and want. Relief has been extended in food and clothing and is still being given, but to-day Belgium finds herself facing imminent starvation, and England and her dominions have a debt to pay.

Now is the time for its payment. Bread is needed. Literally bread is wanted. This is no figure of speech but a cold fact that no Canadian who prides himself on being British can dodge. Canada cannot send bread, but Canadians can send wheat or flour and a bag of flour will keep one Belgian family from starvation an entire month.

Will not Canada pay this debt of honour, or at least her share? We have the wheat, we have the flour. Can we sit snug by our fires, fat with the glorious harvest of this year, and let our debt go unpaid? Are we going to let the poor women and children, who gave their men to save the British Empire, starve and die miserable deaths because we will not pay?

Canadians must hold up their heads and open their purses and help. Let us come forward with the aid that is needed. Let us help pay Britain's debt of honour to Belgium by feeding their starving.

We are all working— some of us fighting—for the Empire's victory over our enemies and Belgium's enemies, but no victory could be lastingly glorious if it involved the decimation by famine of a small nation that deliberately sacrificed itself rather than sacrifice honour.

Chief Howard's Timely Warning

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you permit me to sound a note of warning to the citizens through the columns of your paper?

A fire which occurred recently in Peterborough caused, presumably, by ashes being placed in a wooden box, the damage resulting therefrom amounting to $123 to the building and $173 to the contents, was sufficient cause for the insurance companies to withhold the payment of the claims, as the placing of ashes in wooden boxes is a direct violation of the statutory conditions printed on the back of every insurance policy, and consequently neither the landlord nor the tenant could collect any insurance for this fire.

While the loss was only $300.00, divided between the landlord and tenant, it was too much for people to lose when they had been paying insurance rates for a number of years. I sincerely hope the case referred to will be sufficient warning to the citizens of Peterborough to prevent a similar occurrance. The accumulation of waste paper or other rubbish in or about any building within the city limits is also prohibited. Yours truly,

W. A. Howard,
Chief Fire Department.

TWO NAMES WERE OMITTED

In the account of the I.O.F. installation supplied to the Examiner, and published in Saturday's issue, two names were unintentionally omitted. Bro. Harold Webb acted in his usual efficient manner as Supreme Marshall. Bro. A. H. Webb, the new Court Deputy, was unavoidably absent owing to the serious illness of a relative. Bro. Webb, however, will be presented with his High Court Commission at a later meeting

Committed For Trial

Local Man Was Relieved of Sixty Dollars While In a Local Hotel

Robert Anderson and E. McNutt appeared in police court this morning on a charge of theft. They were represented by Mr. F. D. Kerr. After considerable evidence had been heard the two men were committed for trial. Anderson is a member of the Canadian overseas forces. This morning he wore a civilian coat over his regular uniform.

Joseph Byers, complainant in the case, was the first witness called. In answer to Crown Attorney Hatton's questions witness said he visited a local hotel on Saturday evening in company with the prisoners. He had about sixty dollars in his pocket, including one fifty dollar bill. After indulging in a little libation, witness went to leave the hotel and was set upon by somebody from behind. He was relieved of his roll. He immediately notified the police and the arrest of the two men followed.

To Mr. Kerr witness said he could not identify the fifty dollar bill other than the denomination. The number of the bill was 11650. Witness was shown a fifty dollar bill that was found on one of the prisoners and which witness claimed to be the one he lost. Mr. Kerr reminded witness that 11648 bills of similar denomination had been issued by the same bank.

"Do you frequently have fifty dollar bills," asked Mr. Kerr.

"Not often," replied witness.

"When did you last contract a fifty dollar bill?"

"About a year ago."

Baptist Minister Is To Don Khaki

Rev. W. A. Cameron Announces Decision to His Congregation

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—Rev. W. A. Cameron of Bloor Street Baptist Church, is to don khaki, not as a chaplain, but as a member of the Dominion's fighting forces. Mr. Cameron made the announcement of his decision to his congregation Sunday morning, stating that he had received a commission in the 109th Regiment, with the temporary rank of captain. The minister's action will not mean immediate severance from his Church since he does not expect to get into training until Summer.

"I desire to make a personal statement to the Bloor Street congregation this morning," was the first intimation Mr. Cameron gave his congregation that something unusual was coming. "In view of the increasing demand for men to serve the Empire one cannot escape the question, what is my personal relation to the great struggle for freedom that is now on in the world? Ever since the outset of the war I have tried to do my bit as time could be found amid the many duties of this pastorate, and I had hoped that it would not be necessary at any time to leave the pulpit to take up arms. But as the months have gone by, bringing no decisive victories to our armies, it has become increasingly clear that the supreme duty of every able bodied single young man is to equip himself for military service if he desires to have the title to manhood. I have offered myself to the 109th Regiment and have been given a commission with the temporary rank of captain. As soon as circumstances will permit I intend to qualify for this position. This will not involve an immediate break in our relations, but it will enable me to identify myself more closely with the cause at home, and, by giving my Summer vacation to active training, I hope by the Fall to be qualified for service overseas."

Annual Report Concerning The Queen Mary Hospital

Fifty Patients Were Treated

Isolation Hospital Was Open 237 Days of the Year and Closed for Lack of Patients, 128 Days—All Patients Were Discharged as Cured —Number of Improvements Were Made During the Year.

COST OF MAINTENANCE

The following is a report concerning the work and expenses of operation of Queen Mary Hospital for the year 1915:

DAYS OPEN.

The hospital was open and had patients undergoing treatment during 237 days of the year. It was closed for lack of patients on 128 days as follows: June 10 days, July 31 days, August 30 days, October 26 days.

1914 (for comparison) closed for 79 days.

The scarlet fever wards were open 127 days, and diphtheria wards 102 days.

1914 (for comparison) scarlet 142, diphtheria 274.

DISEASES OF PATIENTS.

The cases treated were as follows:

For 1915—Diphtheria, 25, scarlet fever 13, measles 12, mumps 0; total 50.

For 1914—Diphtheria 47, scarlet fever 9, measles 0, mumps 0; total 56.

RESIDENCE OF PATIENTS

1915—	In city	Outside city	Ttl.
Diphtheria	22	3	25
Scarlet fever	12	1	13
Measles	9	3	12
1914—
Diphtheria	37	10	47

AGE OF PATIENTS.

Total number of adults and children treated were as follows:

1915—Adults 29, children 21, total 50.

1914—Adults 15, children 41, total 56 (for comparison.)

RECOVERY OF PATIENTS.

Out of 50 cases treated all were discharged as cured, none having proved fatal.

STAFF AND SALARIES.

The permanent staff consists of matron, assistant and such other nurses as are temporarily employed from time to time, depending on number of patients and the different kinds of contagion treated.

Nurses were temporarily employed as follows: 1915, 201 days at a cost of $383.36; 1914, 119 days at a cost of $302.89 (for comparison.)

The 201 days during which temporary nurses were employed includes 20 days' relief for matron during absence for military training.

Outside of the staff proper as enumerated above there are employed in operation of hospital, caretaker, cook and laundress, who are giving excellent satisfaction.

The expenditures for operation of hospital were as follows:

	1915	1914
Salaries	$1205 67	1744 00
Groceries and provisions	778 93	1071 87
Drugs	80 80	147 20
Fuel	600 35	992 60
Light	51 57	54 05
Water	50 00	50 00
Ice	54 50	56 00
Telephone	40 39	40 00
Improvements	939 53	609 30
Total	$4538 74	4374 90

Groceries and provisions may be sub-divided as follows:

	1915	1914
(a) Groceries and supplies	$297 18	$341 75
(b) Meat	279 64	324 73
(c) Milk	74 18	185 76
(d) Bread	43 80	56 36
(e) Eggs	36 53	46 11
(f) Fowl	17 50	16 26
(g) Tea, coffee, cocoa	25 10	31 00
(h) Fish and fruit	100 00	122 61
	$778 93	$1071 57

Improvements, repairs, and incidentals include items for permanent improvements, necessary supplies, etc., and may be tabulated as follows:

Root house and cellar	$190 74
Hardwood floor on 1st flat (north side)	138 25
Painting walls and ceiling (south side	103 50
Paint for basement, etc.	44 29
Fire escapes	26 87
Cheesecloth, towelling, etc.	67 92
Small items	199 96
Total	$930 53

IMPROVEMENTS.

One of the larger items in the above is that of root house and cellar costing $190 74 but this expenditure has been and no doubt will prove to be a very profitable one as perishable supplies have since been bought in larger quantities; also products of garden can be properly stored and preserved which was not the case formerly as large quantities of such produce decayed owing to the lack of proper storage, and had to be discarded.

The building of a new cellar and root-house has also left available more storage for fuel in the basement with the result that the supply of coal was put in immediately after the contract was made, thus saving additional charges for delayed delivery. Of the total supply contracted for and delivered last June about 22 tons are still on hand.

NUMBER OF DAYS.

The total number of days for patients, staff and help for the year was as follows:

Patients, 1915, 903; 1914, 1177.
Nurses, 1915, 644; 1914, 756.
Help, 1915, 1125; 1914, 1676.

No expense for labor was incurred outside of plowing and harrowing in spring, as all subsequent work was efficiently done by the caretaker.

With regard to the present condition of hospital building the following items may be presented for your consideration:

(a) The floors on second floor are of very poor quality and badly opened up, and unsanitary and should be replaced by hardwood similar to the first floor.

Mrs. Hopkins of Lindsay Reaches Her One Hundredth Birthday

Has Four Grandsons on Active Service—One Brother is Ninety-Four Years Old—Received the First Cable Message Ever Sent Across the Atlantic Ocean.

ENJOYS GOOD HEALTH

LINDSAY, Jan. 17.— On Saturday Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins attained her one hundredth birthday.

Mrs. Hopkins, who is the oldest living resident of the town, was born on the 15th day of January, A. D. 1816, at Arundel, Sussex, England. She came to Canada and Lindsay in 1858 with her husband the late James Holmes Hopkins who died in 1872, and consequently has been a resident of Lindsay for 58 years and a widow for 44 years. For the past few years she has resided with her son, Mr. James Hopkins, but prior to that she always insisted on keeping her own house, and for many years had her summer residence at Sturgeon Point, and was known as "The Mother of the Point."

It is claimed that the first cable message ever sent across the Atlantic ocean, from England to Canada, in the year 1858, was sent to and received by Mrs. Hopkins.

Mrs. Hopkins has three sons: Major Eustice H. Hopkins, Mr. G. H. Hopkins, K.C., and Mr. James H. Hopkins, well known to the public. Her maiden name was Elizabeth Holmes. She comes from a good old fighting stock and a long lived family. All her relatives outside her own family live in England. She has a brother still alive, 94 years old. Four of her grandsons are on active service, viz.: Lt.-Col. F. Holmes Hopkins, Captain Lester Hopkins, Lieut. Robert Hopkins and Engineer Herbert Hopkins, and she takes particular pride and interest in them.

She tells many amusing stories of Lindsay as she first knew it, and how a farmer in Ops paid her husband a $100 note with 100 cords of body birch and maple wood and was glad of the opportunity. Think of a dollar a cord for the best hardwood with present prices. For many years her numerous friends have made a point of calling on her upon her birthday. On Saturday they had the opportunity of seeing the traditional birthday cake with one hundred candles on it.

It is interesting to note that the councils of both Lindsay and Sturgeon Point have instructed congratulatory addresses to be conveyed to her.

RECRUITING METHODS USED BY THE 109th

In reply to a letter from Capt. Burnham inquiring as to the recruiting methods used in Lindsay, Lt.-Col. Fee, O.C. 109th Battalion, replies as follows:

From Officer Commanding
109 O. S. Bn. C. E. F.

To Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P.
Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Yours of January 12th received and in reply wish to state that the method which we have carried out in this County for recruits has been as follows.

We met the County Council when in session and asked their co-operation. We got the Reeves of the various municipalities to act as Chairman for their township and they arranged a series of recruiting meetings to be held in their respective townships. At each of these meetings the Reeve acted as Chairman and outlined the nature of the meeting that was being held and introduced the various speakers. We always make it a point to have as many officers as possible speak at these meetings. The speeches to be short and to the point. I am usually the last speaker and I make a final appeal to the young men of the required age to do their duty and enlist. The men were informed that if any of them wished to enlist then their names would be taken and arrangements made as to where they were to report. Following these meetings we have a Recruiting Officer remain in that locality and if posible personally visit all the young men and we have found this to have brought good results.

We are going over the ground the second time and carrying out the plan outlined to you. I might suggest that we don't force any young man to enlist, but inform him of his duty and lave the rest to himself.

If I or any officer of this battalion can be of any assistance to you in your work, we will be pleased to help you along in any way we can and we will be only too pleased to await any instructions from you.

I am enclosing herewith a pamphlet which we have had printed and distributed throughout the County.

Very truly yours,
J. J. H. FEE, Lt.-Col.

"A LIFE OF SERVICE THE SUPREME TEST"

Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, Chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board, Delivers an Illuminative Address at the Anniversary of the George Street Methodist Sunday School.

"When Time who steals our years away
Shall steal our pleasures too,
The memory of the past will stay,
And half our joys renew."
—Thomas Moore.

The Sunday morning session of the George street Methodist church resolved itself into a real "Love Feast"—a feast of memories—memories of the olden days, when the speaker, Mr. J. W. Flavelle, LL.D., of Toronto, in a delightfully reminiscent manner, recalled the affections of his youth, particularly his connection with "the old church across the way."

Memory is the golden thread linking the present with the past, and what we learn with pleasure we never forget. Memory is the delight of old age, the only paradise of which they can not be dispossessed.

How the faces of the old people beamed with joy as he recalled some amusing episode of the past, or mirrored their sorrow as he touched upon cherished scenes which shall be nevermore!

It is seldom that a service intended primarily for young people becomes interesting to old and young alike.

It is seldom that a service intended primarily for young people becomes interesting to old and young alike. To the young it teemed with comparisons, impressing the advantages which they enjoy, while to the old it brought back to mind the pioneers of Methodism in Peterborough, when whose lives counted so much in the formation of the character of the present generation.

It was the occasion of the anniversary of the George street and Grace church Sunday schools, when the members of both organizations gathered in the body of the church for divine worship. A special platform over the pulpit accommodated an orchestra of about thirty pieces, as well as Mr. S. R. Armstrong and Mr. Hagerman, superintendents, Mr. D. W. Dumble and Mr. T. W. Robinson, past superintendents, Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor, and Mr. J. W. Flavelle, a onetime scholar, teacher and superintendent of the George street schools.

An interesting feature of the programme was the presentation of monies by the various classes towards the erection of a new Sunday school hall. George street school long ago outgrew its ancient quarters in the basement, and last March it was authorized to form a nucleus for a building fund, which is to be kept in a separate account, and added to from time to time until sufficient is raised to warrant the trustees in proceeding with the construction. Since that time a total of $1300.57 has been raised in amounts ranging from $1.00 to $4.30, the latter having been earned by the ladies of the Co-workers' Bible Class, of which Mrs. James Kendry is teacher. Other classes which did particularly well were then taught by Mr. Stewart, Mrs. Carlisle, Mr. Hone, Mrs. Stubbs and Miss Hardill, having raised respectively $140.00, $115.00, $100.00, $77.50 and $60.00.

"Nothing is too good, nothing too costly for these boys and girls," observed Mr. Flavelle, "for they represent the potentialities of our coming citizenship. These boys and girls are worth more than thousands of dollars," and, addressing the officers of the church, he said: "it is incumbent on you to give and support the best equipment obtainable, that they may do better work; all money expended on these young people will be the best investment the church ever made."

His talk to the school was replete with character-forming suggestions. Taking as an objecti lesson a piece of putting which h rolled and squeezed into all sorts of shapes, he admonished the lads: "Don't be a putty boy, that kind of boy that everybody goes by leaves an impression on; instead, bring into your life purpose, determination, discipline, character.

These are developed unconsciously, day by day as we go through life. This lesson was illustrated by reference to an experience of his while crossing from England to New York on the S S Umbria. One of the passengers had taken his life. He had come on board in an intoxicated condition at Liverpool where he was a cotton-broker. He had had a dispute with his family and the first morning he was found dead on the floor of his state room with an ugly gash in his throat inflicted with the broke bottle from which he had been drinking. At three o'clock that afternoon the engines of the great ship were slowed down and as the boat rolled in the stormy sea, the captain, chaplain and stewards carried his body in a box wrapped with a Union Jack to the side of the boat, where they cast it into the ocean. As the vessel squared away the box was seen to rise and fall on the waves, a sad reminder of the derelict it contained. Back on deck was a dear little baby in the arms of its grandmother on its way to Hamilton. Behind the vessel a human wreck, on board an innocent baby full of life. Forty years before that man had been as beautiful, as sweet and as innocent as the child. We may ask: What is the reason? Why should he have such a tragic end? Simply the things he had put into his life, the things he chose to do day by day.

Life is a wonderful thing. We may make it honourable and be respected, or we may make it dishonourable and become an abhorance. We may become wise, unselfish and helpful to the state, or we may become selfish and of no use to the state.

As we go through life we are not left in ignorance of the progress we are making; it will reflect itself from our every act. This was indelibly impressed upon the minds of the children by the recital of a series of little acts which took place on a C.P.R. train as he was journeying from Harriston to Toronto. It was a hot sultry day in the summer; before him sat a woman nursing a small baby. Both were tired. The mother lost control of herself and her baby, and they had an uncomfortable time. Across the aisle sat two young couple. One young lady was industriously working at some fancy work, and beside her the young man pored over a book of poems. As he came to some striking passage he leaned over and recited it to his companion. Presently this young woman said something to the young man, rose from her seat and going to the tired mother, she said cheerily:

"Let me take the baby. Up went the little one's arms to its new found friend, who bore it across the aisle, where she amused it and soon stopped its crying. Presently both mother and child were asleep.

In the seat in front sat a young couple who seemed to have nothing to engage their attention. Presently the youn gwoman unrolled an unsightly newspaper parcel, took from it two ill-cut and ill-trimmed sandwiches, one of which she gave to the young man beside her. When through with these the young fellow took out of his pocket two sticks of gum, one of which he gave to the girl. From there in to Toronto they did nothing but chew gum and talk.

Where in was the difference? What made it natural for the girl to do fancy work, the young man to read a book of poems, while the other pair were satisfied to eat sandwiches and chew gum? We hear in our own homes the real test, of our attainments or character. Before people we are on dress parade, as it were, not so in our homes, however. There we hear the marks of kindness, helpfulness or sincerity.

We should ask ourselves quietly in the seclusion of our own room: "What am I at home, what qualities of courage, of helpfulness, of truthfulness do I possess?

On one occasion while in London, England, the speaker went to hear Canon Farrar. He preached from the text, "They have no wine." In his inimitable fashion he proceeded to picture an eastern wedding feast, the young people all gathered together, the look of dismay and disgrace when it was discovered there was no wine. Some one in the company brought the word of relief that there was a man there who could make water into wine. "Young friends," said he, "you'll have betrothels, you'll have wedding feasts, you'll make out you lists of invited guests, put first on the list the Lord Jesus. Of all the guest that attend none will be so full of helpfulness, none so full of power as He."

In the consideration given to the plans of our life there is nothing can compare with the presence and power of the Lord Jesus Christ. He will come square across our life when we go to do a mean or vile thing. He will make our life abundantly free, full of helpfulness and a blessing in the service we perform. It is not what we possess but what we part with that tells. The supreme purpose of His life was to serve others. The supreme need at the present time is that we may learn to serve others.

"PICTURES OF MEMORY" FROM THE EARLY DAYS OF METHODISM IN PETERBORO'

Interesting Address Given in George Street Methodist Church By Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto—Speaker Was in a Reminiscent Mood —Sunday School Anniversary.

"Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me:
The smiles, the tears,
Of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone,
Now dimm'd and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken!"

It was in a particularly happy and reminiscent mood that Mr. J. W. Flavelle greeted the youth and age that came to hear him on the occasion of the George street Sunday school anniversary, yesterday morning.

For fully half an hour he delighted the hearts of the old timers as he refreshed their memories of the good old days gone by, as he recalled scenes, sometimes joyous and sometimes sad, as he reviewed the past and almost forgotten little dramas that were enacted when he was a boy.

"It is no wonder," said he, "that my mind has been chiefly occupied, since entering the church, with memories of days long ago; not so much with this church as with the church across the way—"Memory is youth in action and easily impressible, and as we get older it still retains vividly those recollections of earlier years, and the old church is the dearest memory I possess."

It was not as beautiful as this church, with its long lines of stovepipes supported on cast iron arms extending from the wall and by wire from the ceiling, with little pails to catch the drip at the dips. There were two wonderful pews at the front of the church, two immense square boxes where sat the families of James Stevenson and Thomas Bradburu. In the middle were two more for William Cluxton and George Cox, while behind them sat John R. Benson and his great family. Well did he remember the high box pews with their doors, when, if a boy went to sleep his head would strike the back and make a noise like a drum.

Back of that sat Squire Henthorn, who always wore a high hat in summer and a beaver cap in winter. He could walk up the aisle with his hat on. Reaching his seat, and still standing, he would take off the hat and a red silk handkerchief underneath it, say his prayers into his hat and then sit down. All this seems but yesterday.

Then there were three saintly men, father Morrow, father McBurney, and father Thompson, men who visited the sick. How they helped the people! All over the country there are men and women to-day who will remember the ministry of these three men.

Back of the pulpit was a class room where a group of forty lads once held a great meeting, where "we promised that if God would help us we would give our lives to Him." It was continued under the guidance of "Willie Dixon. The boys were divided into praying bands which held meetins around the town on Monday evenings. The leader of one was Johnny Hartley, who became very ill. Retiring into an old shed the boys of his band prayed for their leader. An evidence that their prayers were answerd is the brother sitting before me in the gallery."

Another great man of the church, the superintendent of the Sunday school at that time, a man who left an impress upon the town, was Robinson Rutherford.

Then there was Thomas Donnelly, grown mellow in years, who sometimes made him stand in Sunday school when he became troublesome, and Arthur Allin and Frank Dobbin who frequently touched him on the shoulder to come and help them in the library. Also William Mason of gentle life, and Mr. Dumble. How his heart thrills as he remembers the day, during the great temperance campaign, when Mr. Dumble came upon the platform wearing the little blue ribbon on the lapel of his coat! How the school responded to the stand taken by their superintendent! Also George Hilliard, solid and firm, T. W. Robinson and with the coming of the Bible Christians, William Yelland.

"Those were the days when the church was everything to us."

Hot Lemonade and Warm Sleep Will Stave Off Grip

"Take the greatest care, by dressing warmly, not to catch cold in the morning.

"If the trouble seems to be chiefly in the throat, wrap the neck in a wet woolen cloth covered by a dry woolen cloth.

The official qualified his recommendation as far as the hot bath part of the treatment is concerned, saying that none should do this unless they were very sure that they would be able to keep themselves perfectly warm during the night and the morning afterward.

"But the hot lemonade, the cathartic and the warm sleep stand as the official preventive for the dread disease which is adding from 10 p.c. to 40 p.c. of the weekly death records in many parts of the country."

How to keep from having the grip when everyone about you is suffering from this aggravating disease and you are beginning to have the symptoms yourself—this is the question that has been uppermost in the minds of hundreds of thousands during the present epidemic.

In an attempt to answer it a representative of the New York Tribune interviewed a large number of prominent physicians and submitted to Health Commissioner Haven Emerson a summary of their advice. The latter put his official O.K. on the following treatment:

"Take a cathartic.

"Then take a brief hot bath to warm up the body and start the blood running freely.

"Drink a large bowl of hot lemon ade and go to bed early. Cover one's self thoroughly and warmly, even to

Voice of The People

Gentlemen,—May the writer make a suggestion with regard to next Saturday's Recruiting Campaign? Would the management of the Patriotic Speakers' League ask the proprietors of the Pool-room saloons of this city to close their rooms for the time that the recruiting meeting is taking place, so as to encourage every young man who would spend the time in same if open, to go to the Armouries? The writer thinks this closing of pool-rooms by the proprietors would be doing a great service.

Do not think the writer is against the sport of pool playing, for he is not, and encourages every kind of clean sport. Can any sporting club in Peterborough beat this for one sporting club? The Peterborough Nomads Football Club. They had a membership of 39 before the war; 33 players and members have joined the ranks; nine are now on the firing line; two, Sgt. Major F. Howarth and Sgt. F. Stevens are both on the roll of honour; the other 22 boys are in the Old Country, training, and in the 93rd Battalion.

Respecting the other six members, four have been turned down as medically unfit, but hope to get a chance, one being your humble servant.

Mr. I. Moffatt, our old President, as every sportsman in Peterborough knows, is also unfit, being a cripple "worse luck."

Now, lads of Peterborough, join the 93rd, and swell the ranks. Your pals and school mates are calling for your help, somewhere in the mud, in Europe. Do your duty for Canada.

Harry M. Smith,
Sec. Peterborough Nomad F. C.

Wilbert McMillan the Victim of a Painful Accident

The many friends of Mr. Wilbert McMillan of the local C.P.R. freight staff will regret to learn that while returning to work on Wednesday afternoon's last, and while walking along the sidewalk along the market square he fell heavily on the icy pavement. He was picked up and carried into the Empress Hotel, and a physician summoned. Upon examination he was found that the right leg was fractured just above the ankle. He was later removed in a cab to his home, 258 Charlotte street. He is now resting easily and progressing as favourably as can be expected.

Members of the 21st Battalion Acknowledge Receipt of Christmas Gifts —Wish the War Was Over

On November 12th, last, a sale of work was held by four sisters in the Woodmen of the World hall. The proceeds was used in supplying comforts for the Peterborough boys in the trenches. One of the sisters Mrs. R. Veitch, 273 Downie Street, has received the following replies from three of the boys:

Dear Mrs. Veitch,—Just a line or two to thank you for the Christmas box sent by you to the Peterborough boys, one of which I was lucky enough to receive, and I must say it was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated. Thanking you again for your kindness and wishing you all the compliments of the season, I remain

Yours sincerely,
Corp. W. A. McIntosh,
No. 3 Company, 21st Battalion.

Dear Mrs. Veitch,—I have just received a parcel with your card, and I wish to thank you for same. The contents were greatly appreciated by us all in the dugout. We are having very weather and a few fine days would be very nice. We are all sticking to our job and hope that the day is not very far distant when we shall all be back again. Peterborough is certainly doing its share of recruiting but I hope we won't need them all. The sooner this war is over the better for all concerned.

Yours very sincerely,
Cecil E. Newman.

Dear Madam,—Your gift received to-day and thanking you for same. I am sure the boys from Peterborough appreciate what their friends at home are doing for them in these troublesome times. We are going to make the best we can of our Christmas in the trenches and give 'Fritz' a few shells to wish him the compliments of the season. We have only had two Peterborough boys in our Battalion wounded. In conclusion, I wish you the compliments of the season and hope we will be able to spend next Christmas at home.

Yours sincerely,
H. Strickland—50929.

VON PAPEN FINANCED THE GERMAN PLOTS

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Copies of correspondence seized from Captain Franz von Papen, the recalled German Military Attache at Washington, when he reached Falmouth on his way to Germany, have been turned over to the American Embassy for transmission to the State Department. They show that Captain von Papen made frequent payment to persons charged with the responsibility for blowing up munition works and bridges in the United States.

One entry shows that Captain von Papen gave $700 to Werner Horn, who was arrested in connection with the blowing up of a Canadian Pacific railway bridge at St. Croix, Me. The day before this cheque was issued the German embassy paid $2,500 into Captain von Papen's account.

PAYMENTS TO BERNSTORFF.

Captain von Papen's cheque stubs, bankbooks and letters from his bank, the Riggs National Bank of Washington, show about 500 items, many of which had to do with routine expenditures. Others however, revealed payments to various persons who have figured prominently in the activities of German agents in America, and to at least one spy who committed suicide in a cell in an English prison.

Several large payments were made to Captain von Papen by Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador at Washington. Most of these were for salaries or bonuses. A number of entries show payments made by the Ambassador to the Military Attache for "war intelligence office." One of the payments on this account, made in October of 1914, was for $2,500.

ENGINEERS SEATTLE EXPLOSION

Another stub shows that about two weeks before the explosion in Seattle on May 30, 1915, Captain von Papen sent $600 to the German consulate at Seattle. In February of 1915, he sent $1,200 to the German Consulate in that city.

Among the letters taken from Captain von Papen there is little of interest with the exception of a letter from the German Consul at New Orleans condoling him on his recall from Washington and criticising severely the attitude of the American Government.

In January, 1915, Captain von Papen gave a cheque payable to Amsink & Company, New York, but with the name "E. Kuepferle" in brackets on the stub. This is believed to have reference to the man named Kuepferle, who after being arrested in England on a charge of espionage, committed suicide, leaving a written confession in his cell. As an example of the size of the captain's financial operations, his bank book shows that in January of 1915 he received approximately $6,000, and paid out $5,000.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA

THE newspaper in the Peterborough zone of Ontario to be granted Newspaperdom's "Winning Daily" emblem was the EXAMINER. After investigating the local field, the following conclusions were established: First, the EXAMINER has a materially larger circulation than any other Peterborough daily; second, it is the leading evening newspaper of Peterborough and the tributary territory; third, it is supreme in volume of advertising published—and this volume is made up of gilt-edged business from local and foreign advertisers in Canada and the United States. Local advertisers unanimously endorse it for its result-getting efficiency. It invites correspondence regarding the Peterborough zone as a business possibility in 1916; the possibility of dealer cooperation, etc.

MR. J. W. FLAVELLE GAVE ADDRESS

Spoke to Temperance Workers Yesterday Afternoon

A largely attended meeting of the temperance workers and sympathizers of Peterborough in connection with the committee of One Hundred's campaign to make Ontario dry by July 1st, 1916, was held yesterday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. Ald. Wm. Langford, Jr., recently elected chairman of the county committee, was in the chair. Reports were received from the organizers as to the progress of the campaign, including a report from Mr. Lewis, organizer for the counties of Peterborough, Ontario, and Victoria and Haliburton.

Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, chairman of the Imperial Munition Boards and a member of the committee of One Hundred, was present and delivered an inspiring address, in which he laid stress upon the fact that the campaign was to be of a non-partizan nature, embracing men of all shades of political opinion. He also pointed out that there would be no personalities used — the campaign was to be against a system, against the group of men involved in that traffic.

Canadians Not in a Fight With Heavy Casualties

OTTAWA, Jan 17—"No foundation whatever for the report," was the reply made by General Alderson, commanding officer of the Canadian army corps in France, to a cabled request by the Minister of Militia for information as to the despatch received from a London special correspondent and published in the Toronto evening papers on Saturday to the effect that the Canadians had been in a fight with several hundred killed and wounded.

It is thought that the correspondent must have seen the casualty list for the month and made an incorrect deduction therefrom. As a matter of fact at no time during the past month have the casualties among the Canadian troops been heavy. General Sam Hughes stated tonight that he would take steps which would render the publication of an alarming and baseless story of this kind impossible.

Casualties among members of the Canadian forces with English addresses are published simultaneously in London and Canada, while the losses among members with Canadian addresses are usually published in London only once or twice a month after being confirmed by the Ottawa casualty office, and mailed to London, although publication in Canada of the latter takes place from day to day as soon as relatives are notified.

Recently the same correspondent cabled a story that the first battalion had been nearly wiped out.

manding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E.F.

Here are some of the parodies the 93rd rooters will introduce at the Brock street rink to-night when the 93rd intermediate O.H.A. team clashes with the Electrics:

1 Tune—"My Little Girl."

Our soldier team, we're cheering for you
As to win the game you play.
Our soldier team, you'll make Electrics
Wish they were many miles away
As down the ice go our fast forwards
Nothing can make them stop.
Our soldier team, they sure are winners
And they're coming out on top.

2—Tune, "Farewell, Isabelle."

Farewell, civvy team, civvy team
We're going to beat you, you are too slow,
Farewell, civvy team, civvy team,
We're going to beat you, you have no show,
You know very well civvy team
As the contest we go through
We'll do our best when we're in it to win it,
So we'll beat you.

3—Tune, "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder."

When the roll is called in Berlin,
When the roll is called in Berlin,
When the roll is called in Berlin,
When the roll is called in Berlin we'll be there.

4—Tune, "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

"Keep the old speed going
The Electrics now are showing,
We are going to win the game
There's no mistake.
We will do the rooting
While you're doing the shooting.
Turn the Electrics inside out
Till the whistle blows.

At St. John's church yesterday morning, the Anglican members of the 93rd Battalion attended divine service at St. John's church. Maj. Davidson, chaplain of the battalion, in the course of his remarks, extended a welcome to Pte. Bruce Mills and Pte. J. H. Wilson of the second battalion, who recently have returned from the front. Both young men, previous to their enlistment, were members of St. John's congregation.

Sergt. Crozier of Lindsay, who is carrying on the work of interesting Canadian people in the prisoners of war in Germany was one of the speakers at the Opera House on Saturday night. Sergt. Crozier has a list of the prisoners in place where he was confined and is anxious to have charitable people in Canada 'adopt' these prisoners and see that they are sent parcels of food regularly. Lieut. Quackenbush of the 93rd Battalion, acting in conjunction with the Daughters of the Empire will act at Sergt. Crozier's representative here. He may be seen at the White House or at the armouries and will be glad to supply information about the work.

At a preparatory meeting last week of the 93rd Battalion, at which Hon. Major Davidson presided, a soldier's club for religious, musical and social purposes was launched. The first regular meeting of the club will be held to-night at 6.30 o'clock in the recreation room at the armouries.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Emmeline Pankhurst was released from Ellis Island on parole.

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—Session opened for business to-day and both sides are speculating hard upon the course which events will take place during the coming weeks. It is practically certain that the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne will last for a couple of weeks as both sides are desirous of discussing at length Canada's war policy past and future. Dr. Thompson, M.P., for Yukon to-day moved the address and Dr. Paquet, M.P., for L'Islot seconded it. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will come next and Sir Robert Borden will be present to follow the leader of the Opposition.

From present indications the Government will desire the resolution providing for the necessary amendment to the British North America Act to extend Parliament and they will insist that it be disposed of before any other business is tackled. The Liberals on the other hand while not opposed to the principle of the extension believe that first business to be discussed should be that of providing the sinews of war.

The canvass of members of the Commons indicates that total prohibition movement has made impression on the members of both parties and that resolution calling for legislation banishing the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicants throughout all Canada for duration for the duration of war, will be supported probably by a good majority of the House.

Whether the Government will act, however, is another matter.. It is said that Sir George Foster, acting Premier, and chief temperance advocate in government, take view that the government has no mandate from people at present for such drastic legislation.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Montenegro has asked Austria for peace, Count Tisza said in Hungarian Parliament and has laid down its arms unconditionally.

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—Eleven thousand troops in training here for overseas service including cavalry artillery ,infantry and all other branches, were reviewed by the Duke of Connaught to-day in cold stormy weather. There were many cases of frost bites, but men stood it well and His Royal Highness complimented General Logie warmly on the appearance of the men.

STENOGRAPHER WAS RESCUED

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—In a spectacular fire in an eight storey manning chambers opposite the City Hall Miss Molly Carter, a stenographer on fourth floor overcome by smoke and had to be carried down extension ladder by firemen. The fire was extinguished after five thousand dollars damage was done.

RILEY GETS TIME TO FIGHT CHARGES AND KEEP HIS JOB

Denies Governor's Accusations and Demands to Cross-Examine Witnesses

Affidavits of Facts on Which Whitman Acted to be Submitted on Friday.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—State Superintendent of Prisons John B. Riley has had his day in court. For two hours and a half this afternoon his case was up for consideration before Governor Whitman in the Executive Chamber, which was jammed with an eager crowd of office holders, legislators, and curiosity seekers, who had come expecting sensational developments.

Through his counsel, ex-Senator Edgar Truman Brackett of Saratoga, Superintendent Riley filed a formal answer, embodying a complete denial of the charges of misconduct in office preferred against him by the Governor, after he had failed to tender his resignation in compliance with a peremptory demand.

Before the hearing began it was generally expected that it would end with the summary removal of Riley after his defence had been heard. This expectation was not realized because of the formal demand made upon the Governor by Mr. Brackett that his client be confronted with and have an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses on whose statements to the Governor the charges against him were based.

The Governor would not consent to an oral examination of witnesses and suggested that both sides of the case be submitted in the form of statements. Mr. Brackett insisted that these be sworn, in order that the statute defining perjury might be applied to the depositions. After an agreement to this effect had been reached, the Governor directed an adjournment until noon on Friday.

It is the expectation at the Capitol, however, that no new move in the case will be made until Monday of next week at the earliest. In the meantime unless the Governor should change his mind, Superintendent Riley will be left in undisturbed charge of the State Prison Department.

Only one witness, Warden George W. Kirchwey of Sing Sing Prison, friend and successor in his present position of Thomas Mott Osborne, was summoned at the hearing to-day. He said with much feeling that the list of prisoners involved in the transfer from Sing Sing to Dannemora, which caused the upheaval resulting in the demand for Supt. Riley's resignation, included "the pillars of society in Sing Sing."

"The pillars of society in Sing Sing —the most influential men among the inmates—the founders of the new system on whom reforms at Sing Sing largely depended, the most trusted men in the prison, thirty-five or forty such men were included in the transfer order," the Warden testified. "Every man in the Warden's house except the cook, was on the list. A clean sweep was made of every man upon whom a new and green Warden had to depend for the proper performance of the routine work in connection with the administration of the prison."

Mr. Kirchwey added that two of the trusted clerks in the principal keeper's office and the auditor and principal clerk in the office of the Superintendent of Industries had been listed for transfer

While it is not known whether the Governor depended entirely on the statement regarding the situation made to him by Warden Kirchwey in formulating the charge against Superintendent Riley, it was more than intimated here this evening that before a final decision is reached Thomas Mott Osborne might be compelled to appear as a witness in the proceedings. Mr. Brackett made it plain that he would stop at nothing in order to safeguard the interests of his client.

One of the specifications in the charges preferred by the Governor against Supt. Riley was that the list submitted, with his order of Jan. 4 for the transfer of a batch of prisoners from Sing Sing to Dannemora, had contained the names of eight out of fourteen witnesses whom Mr. Osborne had urged District Attorney Weeks of Westchester County to summon before the Grand Jury this week as witnesses who could shed a more favourable light on the situation which had led to the indictment of Mr. Osborne on charges of malfeasance in office, perjury, and immorality. Supt. Riley in his answer to the charges, declared that he was not aware these men were to be summoned as witnesses for Mr. Osborne, and that if he had been informed that such was the case their names would have been eliminated from the list.

Superintendent Riley, accompanied by his young son, his counsel, and George S. Weed, Chief Clerk of the Prison Department, came into the Executive Chamber about five minutes before noon, the hour set for the hearing. As he took his seat in front of the Governor's desk it was noticed that Riley was even more pale than usual. A few minutes later Governor Whitman, accompanied by his military aid, Major Lorillard Spencer, in full uniform, entered the chamber, and proceedings began. Superintendent Riley arose and in a low voice told the Governor that he wanted Mr Brackett to represent him at the proceedings.

Recruiting Urged In Sunday Sermons in Catholic Churches

In each of the three Catholic churches of the city announcements were made in connection with the campaign for recruits this week. The urgency for immediate action was emphasized and the men of the congregation were seriously exhorted to consider their responsibilities and duty to their country and to enlist. At the Cathedral Rev. Father Phelan spoke on this subject, Rev. Dean McColl at the church of the Immaculate Conception, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien at the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Leaders of Culture Declare For A German Republic

LONDON, January 17.—It is reported from Zurich and corroborated from Berne and Geneva that a Republican manifesto will be issued in the near future at Zurich. It is said that behind the movement are scientists and other leaders of culture in Berlin and the opinion is expressed that that when these persons declare for a republic in Germany some 2,000,000 Social-Democrats and Syndicalists will at once rally to their support.

However strong or weak may be the feeling in support of a change in the form of the German government it is said that there is no question but that the reported Republican manifesto will be issued.

Among its contents as is described in the Zurich story, will be a passage declaring that truly German ideals have been trampled under foot by the present rulers and that the removal of these is essential if the Fatherland is to escape irreparable disaster.

SWEARS GIRL KNEW THAT HE WAS MARRIED

St. Mary's Private and First Wife Testify—Case Enlarged.

WOODSTOCK, Jan. 17.—As a result of the bigamy charge against Pte. Gooding, a member of the 71st Battalion Bugle Band, who was arrested in company with the girl he had gone through a form of marriage with about a week ago, Miss Stella Munro, of this city, the girl in the case, was tried in police court this morning on the charge that she married Pte. Gooding with the knowledge that he had a wife and two children living in St. Mary's.

In the witness box, Pte. Gooding said he had told Miss Munro that he was a married man, and Mrs. Gooding (the first, testified that she had often been with her husband in Miss Munro's presence.

Contradiction was made of this statement by Miss Munro, who declared that Gooding had strenuously denied that he was a married man.

The case was enlarged for a week.

JOINT MEETING OF FARMERS' CLUBS

On Saturday afternoon the Council Chamber was well filled by members of the six local Farmers' Clubs, existing about this city. The object of the amalgamated clubs is to unite for buying and shipping of their products and supplies in car-load lots, and to consider the erection or rental of a central work house in Peterborough.

The first speaker was Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers' Co., Toronto. The speaker told of exorbitant prices charged for certain articles sold in the West owing to lack of original work. He mentioned the subject of such a staple article as sugar. There is no reason why the local farmers' clubs cannot get fair prices. He advocated the purchase of a warehouse near the railway. A committee for handling matters should be formed. Collateral notes should be issued for necessary funds. This note need not be discounted but, with the various signatures, would advance the credit of the individual farmer.

Credit with the banks is absolutely necessary for advancing the interests of the club.

The Secretaries of the local organizations were formed a committee to go into the matter thoroughly.

This is the first meeting between the two local teams, each of which has won two games and as the leadership of the group race depends upon the result there is bound to be plenty of excitement, especially, as there is enough feeling between the teams to ensure each being on its mettle. The game is called for 8.15 o'clock. The soldier team will be accompanied by their band, while every member of the 93rd battalion who is not on duty will be on hand to cheer for the khaki seven. Canadian League To Undergo No Changes

Circuit To Be Composed of Same Clubs as in 1915—Prospects Good

HAMILTON, Jan. 17.—At an informal meeting of the Canadian league here to-day delegates were present from all the clubs but St. Thomas. That city had already expressed an eagerness to continue next season, and the others were of a like mind. The circuit will be composed as before of London, St. Thomas, Brantford, Hamilton, Gueph and Ottawa.

Industrial and financial conditions are good and getting better in all the cities of the league. It is expected that the grounds difficulty which has faced the local club will be straightened out soon. The preliminary schedule meeting will be held in Toronto in about four weeks. There will be no further retrenchment in the matter of player and salary limits.

BASEBALL

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Roger Bresnahan holds the most unique position in baseball to-day. He's got a job and he hasn't. He gets $80,000 for the next two years, regardless. Bresnahan's situation is one of the queer tangles caused by the planned cessation of the baseball war. When Charlie Weegham, former Federal league magnate, bought Charlie Taft's Cubs, he said Joe Tinker would manage the club. But Weeghman didn't say what he was going to do with the former manager, nor whether there was any stipulation regarding Bresnahan, in the bill of sale. Roger Bresnahan will probably be shipped to Toledo.

This is a great year for baseball comebacks, Joe Tinker, Cub castoff, who worried his way through a season of managing the Cincinnati Reds and them made the jump to the Chifeds, comes back with a vengeance to the job of piloting the Cub players who guffawed when Joe was let out by Murphy. But the real comeback is Fielder Jones, one of the miracle men of baseball, who led the White Sox hitless wonders do their lone world pennant. Fielder will enter the big league again with the amalgamated St. Louis Browns and Sloufeds. Jones has accomplished two feats that put him in a lone class; He led the mediocre bunch to a world's penmant, then last season took a bunch of Sloufeds and made them over into pennant contenders, which they certainly had not been.

JUNIOR HOCKEY.

This evening at eight o'clock there will be a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. of the junior hockey league.

Why Hotel Clerks Go Crazy.

"Please send up a hammer and a chisel, so I can break off some of this soap."

"What time does the 2:27 train leave?"

"Do you know a man in this town by the name of Jones?"

"Where can I have my lap dog manicured?"

"Can't you make that old gink in the next room stop snoring?"

"I lost my handbag when I changed cars down to the junction to come here. Can't you get it for me?"

"I want you to find out for me at once the quickest way to get to Peavey Junction, Mass.?"

"I tried to eat in your dining room and everything was cold but the ice water. What kind of a dump are you running here?"

CALLING BALLS BEGAN IN 1871

In Early Days of the National Game No Penalty Was Attached to Wildness of Pitchers

In the early days of the national game, when only a few contests were played during the season, and later when barely more than one game a week was the average, there was no penalty attached to the wild work of the pitcher. "Base on balls" was a thing unknown. The batsman was punished if he missed three strikes, but the pitcher was privileged to fling the ball as wide, far and high as he pleased. He was even allowed, without severe comment, to soak the batter in the ribs or smash him on the head.

It was not until 1863 that his wildness was curbed and put under restraint, and this was the beginning of the historic warfare between the pitcher and the batter. That year saw the introduction of the "called ball" The rule reads as follows: "Should the pitcher repeatedly fail to deliver to the striker fair balls, for the apparent purpose of delaying the game, or for any cause, the umpire, after warning him, shall call one ball, and if the pitcher persits in such action two and three balls; when three balls shall have been called, the striker shall take the first base, and should any base be occupied at that time each player occupying it or them shall take one base without being put out. All balls delivered by the pitcher striking the ground in front of the home base, or pitched over the head of the batsman, or pitched to the side opposite to that which the batsman strikes from, shall be considered unfair balls."

Under this rule, as will be seen, the calling of balls was left to the discretion of the umpire, and a pitcher could send a score or more unfair balls over the base before the umpire picked out the three bad ones.

In 1870 that part of the rule requiring the umpire to warn the pitcher was rescinded, and in 1871, the first year of professional baseball, the discretionary power was taken from the umpire, and he was compelled to call balls in "the order of their delivery"—that is, in succession, but "no ball shall be called on the first ball pitched, and not until the ball has passed the home base." This really limited the pitcher to five unfair balls.

Explanation of Rule.

The explanation of this rule by the chairman of the Committee on Rules was as follows: "Suppose the first ball delivered touches the ground before reaching the home plate, and the second is sent in over the striker's head, and the third so as to touch him, while the fourth is too far off from his bat, and the fifth not at the right height designated. In such case the first ball is not to be 'counted' or 'called' at all; the second is not to be 'called,' but is to be 'counted' as an unfair ball, as is the second and third, the later two being, in addition, 'called,' as by his time the pitcher has thereby 'repeatedly'—viz., twice—failed to deliver to the striker fair balls, and, of course, the fourth and fifth are to be 'called.' It will, therefore, be seen that the rule under certain conditions — as above shown—admits of three balls being called in succession out of five balls delivered, but under the circumstances can three balls be called with a less number delivered. The object is to put a stop to wild pitching, whether it be willfully wild, or through a lack of command of the ball."

Another rule was adopted that year insisted that "no player shall be put out on any hit ball on which a balk or a ball has been called, and neither shall a strike or a foul ball be called or a base run on such a hit ball. But base can be run on called balls not hit, and players can be put out on called balls thrown to bases, and any player given a base on called balls shall be privileged to run all bases he can beyond the base given him."

The explanation of the rule says: "If the batsman, almost simultaneously with the umpire's call of 'One ball' or 'Two balls,' hits the called ball and it is caught on the fly it is not out, and, under similar circumstances, if a player attempts to run a base he must return to the base he left. If a player desires to attempt to run a base he must return to the base he left. If a player desires to attempt to run on a balked or a called ball not hit he can do so, but he cannot attempt such a run on a hit balked or called ball. It should also be borne in mind that if the striker hit a balked or called ball foul, the umpire is not to call foul, as the striker cannot legitimately hit a ball foul unless he strikes at a fair ball. The difference in this case between the act of a player running a base on his own risk and that of taking a base as provided in a special rule should be remembered in connection with a correct interpretation of the rule."

Giving Bases on Balls.

The base on balls rule received a modern trimming in 1876, the first year of the National League, and for really the first time a fixed number of called balls was introduced. It will be seen by reading the rule that nine balls gave the batter his base. The rule reads: "All balls delivered to the bat which are not sent in over the home base and at the height called for by the batsman shall be considered unfair balls, and every third ball so delivered must be called. When 'three balls' have been called the striker shall take first base, and all players who are thereby forced to leave a base shall take one base. No 'ball' shall be called until the ball has passed the home base."

The rule calling void a hit made on a balked or called ball was eliminated in 1877, when also a ball that hit the batter was counted among the "called" balls, in addition to being a "dead ball." In this year also the batter, after getting nine balls, was compelled to run to first base. The old rule read that "the batter (after getting nine balls) shall take one base without being put out." The new one had this addition: "Provided he do so on the run."

This innovation evidently caused some dispute, as the following paragraph by the Chairman of the Rules Committee would indicate: "This is a newly worded rule, and by the new reading it apparently conflicts with itself. The words 'without being put out,' Harry Wright says, refers to the base runners' being put out from walking to his base instead of running. Should he not 'run' the ball can be fielded to first base and the umpire, under the rule, must decide him out. In no other way can a runner given his base on called balls be put out in taking such given base. Of course, if he attempts to make an additional base to that given him on the call of three balls he can do so but only at the risk of being put out the same as in the ordinary running of the base."

For the space of ten years the recipient of a base on balls was compelled to run to first base or risk the chance of being called out, although he may have been disabled by being hit by the pitcher with the ninth ball In 1887, however, the "run" provision was cut out, and both the batter and the base runners were allowed to take their sweet time in going from base to base, a privilege they still enjoy.

British Peerage Torn to Pieces By German Guns

LONDON — Britain's prospective peerage is being rapidly wiped out. Of every 10,000 casualties in Flanders and in Gallipoli one heir to a seat in the house of lords is reported killed.

Forty prospective wearers of the purple have already made "the great sacrifice"; have proved by their examples that the aristocracy of Great Britain, in the supreme test, is not degenerate. No other class in the country, proportionately speaking, has paid so big a price.

The house of lords, three years ago distrusted by the nation, discredited by the politicians, humbled by the house of commons, and threatened by the cabinet, has, on the blood-stained fields of France and Turkey, won a new charter through the self-sacrifice of its sons. To-day the upper chamber is stronger in the affections of the people than it has been for many generations.

Greatness in Mourning.

But what a price to pay! Hardly a great family in the country is unvisited by the angel of death. The house of lords seems crowded with peers who have to mourn the loss of their first sons. The personnel of the upper house of the next generation is being made over and, in many cases, men who previous to the war were three and four times removed in succession to titles are now presumptive or prospective peers. And we are apparently only at the beginning of the terrible war!

It has been reckoned that no less than 200 heirs to peerages are serving with either the army or the navy. When it is realized that the peers number only 600, it will be realized how great is their immolation. Yet a few days ago, when Lord St. Davids, who, by the way, has lost his only son—proposed that a record be compiled of these 200 men in the two services, half a dozen peers opposed the idea, while Lord Parmour repudiated any suggestion that the peers were doing more than their simple duty.

One Notable Example.

England's low birthrate is bearing especially hard on the peerage at this moment. A score of peers have lost their only sons in the terrible fighting. Such is the case of Viscount Hardinge of Penshurst, now Viceroy of India, incumbent of the almost regal position once occupied by Lord Curzon, who married Mary Leiter.

Lord Ribblesdale, the picturesque peer whom the late King Edward was fond of calling "The Ancestor," because of his old-world manners and style of dress, has lost his only remaining son, the Hon. Charles Lister. The latter's elder brother, Capt. the Hon. Thomas Lister, after being three times wounded in the Boer war, was finally speared and shot to death at Jidballi.

His is one of the cases in which a special remainder to a daughter may be granted. He has three, all of whom are famous for their looks.

By the death in action of Capt. Richard Long Dawson, of the Coldstream guards, the only male member of his family of this generation, the earldom of Dartrey threatens to become extinct. This is of particular interest to Americans because of the connection of the family with the founder of Pennsylvania, William Penn.

Touches King Closely.

Lord Stamfordham also has lost his heir, the Hon. J. N. Bigge. Lord Stamfordham is the king's closest personal friend and is his private secretary. He was the intermediary between the monarch and the government in the negotiations that led up to the royal promise to create the new peers to override the lords' veto and more recently he played a big part in the Ulster drama when, just before the war, Irish affairs promised to give British statesmen a hard nut to crack.

The Hon. J. N. Bigge was attached to the King's Royal rifle corps and was killed at Festubert on the night of May 1. He was a great favourite of the late Queen Victoria, to whom he acted as page of honour. He was only 27 years of age and just before the war had been gazetted for service in Egypt.

In the death of Lieut. Lord Spencer Douglas Compton, a son of the late, and brother and heir-presumptive of the present Marquis of Northampton, the prospective peerage has lost one of its most important personages.

For the title carries with it almost unlimited wealth — in fact, so much wealth that the present peer, upon succeeding, was able to present to an actress with whom he found it necessary to break, in accordance with the dying wish of his father, the unprecedented sum of $240,000 as heart balm.

Lord Balfour of Burleigh also mourns the loss of his heir, as do the Marquis of Lincolnshire and Lord Knaresmborough, the Viscount Bridport and Lord Valentia.

Among the actual holders of peerages who have given their lives is Prince Maurice of Battenberg, brother of the Queen of Spain and cousin of King George, and Lord Crichton, while among the relatives of peers, more or less distantly concerned in the succession, is the brother of Baron Rodney.

She was born in Port Hope, her maiden name being Mary E. Deakill. She had resided in Peterborough for the past 46 years. She was an earnest and faithful member of the Murray St. Baptist church, and was greatly beloved by all who knew her.

NEW TEMPERANCE MOVE MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

Encouraging Meeting of Non-Partisan Effort Yesterday Indicated Possible Strength of This Plan

A meeting of the local branch of the Committee of One Hundred 100, an organization which has for its object the presentation of petitions from the people all over the province to the Government, asking for a prohibition law for the whole of Ontario, was held in the Y.M.C.A. Rooms yesterday afternoon.
There is a branch organization in each county called a Committee of Fifty and sub-committees of ten for each municipality. Each polling subdivision will also have a team of five or more, who will carry out the work of getting the petitions signed.
Ald. Langford, who is the chairman of the Committee of Fifty for the County of Peterborough, presided, and Mr. A. E. Dixon acted as secretary. Mr. Lewis, of Toronto, who is the general organizer for Ontario, Peterborough, Haliburton and Victoria counties, gave a brief outline of what has been done. Mr. Pascoe, who is the organizer for Durham and Northumberland, told of what is being accomplished in those counties. An address from Mr. I. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, who is a member of the Committee of 100, was a very interesting feature of the meeting. He laid stress on the fact that the movement is non-partisan, having the sole object of getting the petitions signed and placed before the Government. He also urged that the workers be careful to treat everybody in a kind and considerate manner, and to remember that there should be no animosity towards those who are in the liquor business, as in a great many cases they were born into the business or had been brought up to it. Mr. Flavelle told of how he worked for the Duncan Act when he was a young man in business in Peterborough.
The organizations are being rapidly completed in the city and county, and the petition forms will be presented for signatures by the workers in a few days, when it is hoped that the people will sign them quickly so that they can be placed before the Legislature as soon as possible.
Among those present were Mayor Duffus and Mr. M. J. Maher, president of the Amalgamated T.A.S.; Mr. John Dwyer, Mr. Ed. Hyland and others were present, and the assurance was given that in this province-wide movement the cooperation of T.A.S. members would be thrown in with the movement.

Council Meeting This Evening

Deputation Will Visit Ottawa To-morrow—Will Support Recruiting Campaign

A special meeting of the City Council has been called for this evening. It is expected the Council will endorse the proposed recruiting campaign and will take steps to assist in the work. To-morrow a deputation will go to Ottawa to interview the powers that be respecting the proposal to reconstruct the Pigeon Creek bridge. The Council hope to secure some financial assistance from the Government. The Counties of Peterborough and Victoria are co-operating in the matter. The deputation from the City Council will likely comprise His Worship Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Dobbin, Stratton and McIntyre.
The deputation will remain over for the meeting of the Civic Improvement League, which will be held in Ottawa on Thursday.

DEDICATION SERVICES CONTINUED

Former Pastors Spoke at Trinity Church Yesterday

The dedication services in connection with Trinity Methodist Church were continued yesterday, when the pulpit of the Church was occupied by two former pastors of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, Rev. Mr. Shorey and Rev. Mr. Henderson, both of whom gave inspiring addresses. There were large congregations at both services and the music was of a special nature.

What Will The Answer Be?

By a Peterborough Woman

The great recruiting campaign which the Patriotic League, together with the 93rd Battalion of Peterborough, has arranged for this week, in the hope of enlisting in three days time, 500 more men for overseas service, is making, I feel sure, a very special appeal to the thoughts and imaginations of all of us.
Freedom, high honour, and even women and little children seem to cry aloud: "Who is on our side?" "Who will go over and fight for us against the enemy?" And we await with a great hope and much eagerness the answers. Yes, the great war to-day is surely "not against flesh and blood but against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places," so we ask with double fervour: "What will Peterborough's answer be?" Will the "soft job" or the lucrative one, or any other material consideration, hold back our boys from arraying themselves on the side of right? And of fitting themselves into the khaki to go to the assistance of their own countrymen and comrades, and whose call from the trenches: "Pal come over and help us," should appeal to any one with a man's mind and heart in him. And we believe this double call will be nobly answered by all Canadians worthy of the name Canadian, and proud of the sacred names of Ypres, St. Julien and Langemarck!
If shirkers there be, after this clear call, they will surely get their reward in dollars and cents. But we seem too, to hear again the words: "Curse ye Meroz, saith the angel of the Lord, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Judges v., 23. The worst curse surely being the natural shrivelling of soul in the man who puts material things before spiritual things, by refusing so urgent a call to fight for right and to go to the help of those who are now hard pressed in the fight, and such men will be objects for pity in the future.

Thin Men and Women

Here's a Safe and Easy Way by Which You May Gain 10 Pounds or More of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. A splendid way of working to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to try Sargol, the famous flesh-building agent, that has been so widely sold in America in recent years. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and see if your cheeks don't quickly fill out, and rolls of firm, healthy flesh form over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point.

All good druggists have Sargol or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee of each large package. It is inexpensive, easy to take, and highly efficient.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

UNDERSEA CRAFT SUGGESTED FOR CARRYING FOOD

From The United States to Germany ---Milk For The Babies

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Picture a submarine loaded with condensed milk scouting along underneath the troubled, war-scarred surface of the Atlantic, taking food to the starving babies in Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russian Poland.

Some one in that nebulous group often called "influential people" has suggested this under-sea method of transportation to the Citizens' Committee for Food Shipments, of which Dr. Edmund Von Mach is chairman. And the committee has issued a statement on "this most surprising, but upon investigation, perfectly feasible offer."

"The submarine would carry no war equipment of any kind," says the statement, "but would be used solely for commercial purposes. As the United States does not admit that the blockade of Germany exists, no complication over clearance papers would arise. The submarine would merely submerge to avoid capture and detention. As condensed milk is not contraband, no loss would result, even if the boat were captured. Although the committee has taken this suggestion under advisement, it hopes that it will not be necessary to resort to such an expensive expedient."

A CHILD GETS CROSS, SICK AND FEVERISH WHEN CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Clean Little Liver and Bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if the breath is bad; stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Large Bodies of Anglo-French Troops Are Being Landed All Along the Greek Coast

To Reinforce Gen. Sarrail and Meet the Austro-German-Bulgarian Drive Which it is Believed Will Not Long Be Delayed

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Large bodies of Anglo-French troops are being landed all along the Greek coast to-day to reinforce Gen. Sarrail and meet the Austro-German-Bulgarian drive which is believed will not be long delayed. These inforcing troops presumably are veterans of Gallipoli. Berlin reports of the landing of a British force at Piraeus five miles from Athens and also Pialeron has not been confirmed.

In diplomatic circles it was persistently rumored to-day that important developments are imminent in the situation in Greece. The meeting of the Greek Parliament next Monday may bring the re-opening of the discussion of some of the matters in dispute between Greece and the Allies.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 18.—Swedish steamer Kehler 5,010 tons has been abandoned in a sinking condition, the crew was rescued.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—German Government has protested vigorously to Greece for allowing allied troops to land five miles from Athens.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—In Commons Premier Borden declared no conscription was required in Canada which could easily raise its five hundred thousand men.

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—Ontario is asked to contribute four million of eight million asked for patriotic fund in Canada this year.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Great Britain will immediately declare a full blockade of Germany and proceed to enforce it.

SALONIKI, Jan. 18.—Teutonic forces now have a quarter million men massed for an attack outside Saloniki.

TOO MUCH SAND USED IN MIXING WEAKENS CONCRETE

A Barrel of Cement Should Weigh 280 Lbs. Net and a Sack 95 Lbs.

Editor Ottawa Valley Journal:

1.—I intend building a stable at the end of a barn and to have a threshing floor between, the size of the stable to be 30 feet square. Would you advise building with studding 2 in. by 4 in., the wall to be 15 feet high?

2.—How much cement, gravel and sand will be required for a wall 30 feet by 30 feet, 8 feet high and 12 in. thick? How many sbgs of cement are there in a barrel?

The Journal's Reply.

(Answered specially for the Ottawa Valley Journal by its Farm Building Architect, A. A. Gilmore.)

1. Use 2 in. x 6 in. studs set on 24 in. centres for your barn wall.

2. Mix the concrete one part cement, three parts sand and five parts gravel.

This will require for your proposed wall, built with 4 sides 30 ft. long, 38 bbls. cement, 17 cubic yards sand and 28 cubic yards of gravel.

You need only screen or separate the first batch of sand and gravel if you find that the gravel in its natural form continues about the above proportion of sand. Much more sand than I have specified weakens the concrete to a considerable extent.

3. A barrel of cement contains 4 bags usually but in some cases I have known 3 larger sacks paper being called a barrel. A true barrel contains 3 1-2 cubic feet of cement. By weight a barrel of Portland cement should weigh 380 lbs. net of cement. When sold in sacks, each should weigh 95 lbs.

TEUTON RETREAT WAS TERRIBLE

Had Only Two Wooden Bridges to Accommodate Artillery

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A Petrograd despatch to the Times says:

"According to prisoners, the Austro-German retreat to the western bank of the Stripa, was terrible. They had erected on a 20-mile front only two wooden bridges across which they might transport their artillery. The infantry forded the stream over treacherous ice, which was flooded at many places, and retired under a ceaseless fire from the Russians.

"The Russian fire wrought frightful havoc. A single division took an entire day to cross, and just barely reached its destination.

"Great masses of wounded remained on the eastern bank, and fully 2,000 unwounded men were captured by the Russians.

"A sudden thaw in the Polesie region caused the Austro-German transport and heavy guns to stick in the mire. They will be fortunate if they succeed in extricating themselves in time to save them from the Russian advance, which is being conducted along the entire breadth of Polesie."

The Austrian Claims.

The Austrians report that the Russians have resumed their offensive in eastern Galicia and Bessarabia, and, after desperate fighting, the Russians have suffered heavy losses. The Russians, it is claimed, attacked in columns twelve to fourteen lines deep, and made four to six attacks at some places, leaving 1,000 dead in front of one brigade and losing 240 prisoners.

2,000,000 Belgians Depend on us for Bread!

Since shortly after the German invasion, the Belgians have depended for food entirely on the "Commission for Relief in Belgium". Their own store of food, even if not destroyed or pillaged, would last only three weeks—they have had no chance to raise more—and the ruthless Germans refuse to supply them!

Backed by the

so generously contributed in the British Empire and the United States, the neutral Belgian Relief Commission has imported enough wheat, flour and other foods to feed the whole nation so far. The great majority of the 7,000,000 Belgians left in the country have been able to pay for their daily allowance of bread—but a steadily growing number have no money left.

Unless we are willing to let these hundreds of thousands of women, children and old men starve, they must be fed at the expense of the Belgian Relief Fund. To make this possible someone must contribute nearly $3,000,000 a month—every month—all this winter!

No people under the Allied Flags are as well able to contribute generously as we Canadians! No cause has ever been more deserving of help! In the name of Justice and Humanity—for the sake of our own self-respect—let us give all we can to help our martyred Allies!

VIII.—THE CENTER OF POPULATION

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

THREE generations life commonly said to complete the cycle from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves. Even though it is not encompassed in six or seven, collateral branches of the same family, at all times during the transition, may disclose not only shirtsleeves, but patched overalls and Horace Greeley whiskers to boot. Thus, while Frederic Goodel pursued the lucrative occupation of a dealer in "investment securities," his cousin, Lafayette Goodel, tilled the ancestral farm in Sullivan county and each year came within perhaps a hundred dollars of clearing expenses.

The deficit was supplied by Frederic, who took in exchange an occasional basket of small sour peaches. Once he had paid his cousin a visit projected to last for ten days. He rowed on the lake, climbed the mountain, grew bilious from drinking too much milk and at the end of the third afternoon waved an adieu from the rear platform of the observation car, into which he immediately disappeared, not to emerge again until the porter's whiskbroom heralded his imminent arrival in town.

"What a place!" he ejaculated to his brother-in-law, Rushmore Luddington. "Hard beds, soft water, unripe fruit and everything fried to a crisp!"

"That's the way our ancestors were raised, though," Luddington replied, "and what a sturdy lot of fellows they were!"

"Of course they were. They simply had to be if they survived at all."

"But then, you know, there's the lake and the mountain, the whole," Luddington concluded, "providing an ideal place for a boy's holiday."

Goodel struck the desk.

"By Jove, an admirable suggestion!" he exclaimed. "Jimmie shall go there next week. Sour peaches at a hundred dollars a basket are too expensive for me. I once had Jimmie out to lunch, and if he doesn't eat Cousin Lafe out of house and home I'm no judge of a good appetite!"

At this juncture Mr. Goodel's only clerical assistant, the sixteen-year-old Jimmie Brennan, entered and deposited a bundle of canceled vouchers on his employer's desk.

"Now, Mr. Goodel," he said, "dat guy at de bank wanted me to sign a receipt for dem cut checks."

"And did you?" Mr. Goodel asked.

"I did not," Jimmie replied, and produced the unsigned receipt from his breast pocket.

"Quite right," Mr. Goodel commented as he adjusted a pair of gold glasses on his shapely nose. "Never sign anything for me unless I tell you to do so, and never sign anything for yourself unless you read it over first."

Then, adding example to percept, Mr. Goodel carefully perused the printed slip. He crossed out one or two words and appended his signature with characteristic neatness.

"Beware of printed forms," he continued to Jimmie.

"My boy, beware of printed forms," he continued to Jimmie, who received the admonition with a scared gravity. "Everybody signs them and nobody reads them. Hence the supposed order for the encyclopedia, with an appendix, proves to be a promissory note for $500." He emphasized the remark with a vigorous wink to Luddington.

"And now, Jimmie," he went on, "how would you like to have a vacation?"

"A vacation!" Jimmie cried. "Why, I ain't sick, Mr. Goodel."

Goodel gazed critically at Jimmie's shining red cheeks and neatly combed hair.

"I admit," he said, appealing to Luddington, "that he doesn't look it."

Jimmie's face expanded into a broad grin, and Luddington nodded slowly.

"True," he agreed in solemn accents; "but there may be some internal disorder, and therefore"—

"And therefore," Goodel interrupted, "Jimmie leaves for Cousin Lafe's next week!"

Many years of plowing had reduced the action of Lafe Goodel's mare to a deliberate amble, which as much resembled the gait of a normal horse as the progress of a baby's bassinet compares to the onrushing touring car. She had been dubbed Olympia by Lafe's sister, who deemed the name not only euphonious, but an apt allusion to a slight lameness with which the mare was afflicted. For the rest Olympia was blind of one eye and very timid about automobiles, at which she invariably shied. This was evidenced by a certain switching of her attenuated tail, and at periods of great emotion, such as a locomotive might engender, she waggled her right ear.

When Jimmie Brennan stepped from the New York express to the platform of the little flag station at Goodel's Corners, Olympia's ear and tail twitched a frenzied equivalent to the running away of the normal horse, and Lafe was alarmed in proportion.

"Whoa, dern ye!" he bellowed. "What ails ye?" He seized the lines with a tense grip and sat bolt upright, prepared for any emergency, as Jimmie approached. "I never see nothin' like it!" he declared. "This blame hoss can't never git used to no engines. I bet I druv her down here four times, countin' this year an' last, an' she always kicks up the same foolerel!"

Jimmie flung his valise on the back of the wagon and climbed up beside Lafe.

"That's right," Lafe said. "Jes' make yerself ter hum. I'd let yer drive, but I dassen't trust her to ye."

After a sharp "Gidap!" from Lafe, the old mare moved slowly away from the tracks. Jimmie and his host maintained an embarrassed silence. The boy furtively glanced at his employer's cousin and made mental note of the ragged fringe of whiskers that adorned the farmer's neck. As Lafe shifted a huge mouthful of tobacco from cheek to cheek his Adam's apple jerked convulsively. Apparently, it roamed about at will, and disappeared beneath his shirt collar only to bob up among the thicket of whiskers with an agility that completely fascinated Jimmie.

"Say," he said at length and by way of conversation, "was you ever to Pastor's?"

Lafe bestowed the cud in one corner of his mouth, voided a pint or so of the attendant moisture and wiped his lips on the back of his hand.

"Which was?" he asked.

"On Fourteent' street."

"No," he answered. "I never was to the city. Gidap!" He fell again to the rumination of his fine cut. "Why d'ye ask?"

"I t'ought I seen yer dere wanst," Jimmie replied, "wid a lady wot played on de trombone. You was tellin' her about de circus comin' ter town, an' den yer did a sand dance togedder."

Lafe gasped in astonishment and almost swallowed his tobacco.

"Land a-mercy, young feller," he said, "I dunno what kind o' dominies you've got ter New York, but up here ministers of the gospel don't allow no such carryin's on in their houses. Gidap!"

Jimmie felt vaguely that he had offended and offered prompt reparation.

"Excuse me," he said humbly. "I didn't mean to make no break."

"Freely granted!" cried Lafe. "City ways ain't country ways, I guess, but you seem a right nice young feller. Gidap!"

Jimmie blushed, and for the rest of the ride neither ventured on any further conversation. Lafe's sister met them at the head of the farm lane and greeted Jimmie with a motherly smile.

"Well, Lafe," she cried, "'Lympia ain't no spry as some. You'd better come right in an' set down. Biscuits is bustin' this half hour past."

For almost an hour Jimmie tucked in honey and hot biscuit, with steaming coffee and ham, until his ruddy cheeks glistened and the waistband of his trousers grew taut. By this time the conversation assumed a more intimate tone, and even Lafe thawed out.

"Well, sister," he said, "y'otter seen 'Lympia when the train came in. I swan she was scairt out of her wits!"

"She'll get over it fast enough," Miss Goodel commented, "when they cut the railroad through the pasture lot."

Lafe slapped his knee.

"By Gregory," he cried; "she'll never get over it, if that's what she's waiting for! That derned railroad company won't own my pasture lot for less than $500 an acre unless they steal it from me."

"Mebbe they will," said Miss Goodel, "if you stay up till all hours of the night. You need to have a clear brain if you want to get ahead of the railroad company."

Lafe rose and stretched lazily.

"All right, sister," he grunted, and, taking the lamp from the table, he piloted Jimmie to the spare room on the second floor.

Under Lafe's tutelage Jimmie rapidly acquired all the accomplishments of a hired man, and when his vacation drew toward its close it had proved to be as profitable for Lafe as it had been enjoyable for Jimmie. A profusion of freckles obscured the healthy glow in the boy's cheeks, and a cast-off suit of Lafe's overalls completed his transformation into as rustic a youth as never saw Fulton market or the Brooklyn bridge.

It was, therefore, not at all surprising that he should be hailed as "hud" by the thickset gentleman with the jet black mustache who drove a smart looking horse and buggy up the farm lane.

"Who lives here, hud?" he asked out of one corner of his mouth.

Jimmie took in at one comprehensive glance the panama hat, the diamond breastpin and the general air of Tenderloin insouciance that pervaded the stranger's personality.

"Come again," Jimmie said.

"Where's yer pap?"

"Pap?" Jimmie repeated.

"Oh, rats!" the stranger broke in impatiently and drove rapidly up the lane. Jimmie gazed after him in unaffected surprise. That essentially urban presence in its strange setting of pasture and meadow afforded the boy like a whiff of East river breeze, and he turned to his task of mowing the border of the lane, almost glad that his vacation approached its close.

A moment later the buggy drew up near the barn, where Lafe was busily engaged currying Olympia's rough coat with a handful of straw.

"Mr. Lafayette Goodel?" the stranger asked.

BRONCHITIS

NEGLECTED COLD.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis is usually at its worst in the morning on account of the phlegm becoming lodged in the bronchial tubes during the night, and it very often takes some time coughing and gagging before you can get the throat clear of the phlegm.

When this happens you may be sure that if the bronchitis is not attended to immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia, or some other more serious lung trouble.

The best remedy for to cure the cold is DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Roy Conner, Greenwood, Ont., writes: "I must tell you what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Whenever I got a cold I would be troubled with bronchitis, and sometimes I would almost choke to death. After taking two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25c and 50c. per bottle. See that you get the genuine.

ABOUT SWALLOWS

SEVEN common species of swallows are found within the limits of the United States, four of which have abandoned to some extent their primitive nesting habits and have attached themselves to the abodes of man.

In the eastern part of the country the barn swallow now builds exclusively under roofs, having entirely abandoned the rock caves and cliffs in which it formerly nested. More recently the cliff swallow has found a better nesting site under the eaves of buildings than was afforded by the overhanging cliffs of earth or stone which it once used and to which it still resorts occasionally in the East and habitually in the unsettled West. The martin and the white-bellied, or tree, swallow nest either in houses supplied for the purpose, in abandoned nests of woodpeckers, or in natural crannies in rocks. The northern violet-green swallow, the rough-winged swallow and the bank swallow, still live in practically such places as their ancestors chose.

Field observation convinces an ordinarily attentive person that the food of swallows must consist of the smaller insects captured in mid-air or picked from the tops of tall grass or weeds. This observation is borne out by an examination of stomachs, which shows that the food is made up of many small species of beetles which are much on the wing; many species of mosquitoes and their allies, together with large quantities of flying ants, and a few insects of similar kinds. Most of these are either injurious or annoying, and the numbers destroyed by swallows are not only beyond calculation but almost beyond imagination.

Unlike many other groups of birds, the six species of swallows found in the Eastern States extend in a practically unchanged form across the continent, where they are reinforced by the northern, or Pacific coast, violet-green swallow.

It is a mistake to tear down from the eaves of a barn the nests of a colony of cliff swallows, for so far from disfiguring a building they make a picturesque addition to it, and the presence of swallows should be encouraged by every device. It is said that cliff and barn swallows may be induced to build their nests in a particular locality, otherwise suitable, by providing a quantity of mud to be used by them as mortar. Barn swallows may also be encouraged by cutting a small hole in the gable of the barn, while martins and white-bellied swallows will be grateful for boxes like those for the bluebird, but placed in a higher situation.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, colour or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness; soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

Rub the shoelaces of children's shoes with beeswax and they will not come untied easily. A bit of the wax applied to the end when the metal tip is lost will facilitate the lacing.

Jimmie's Valentine Ruse

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Ma," said Jimmie Wilkinson, aged seven, "how much are you goin' to give me for valentines this year?"

"Oh, dear! Has St. Valentine's day come around again already? It seems to me that it was only a few months ago that I was giving you money to buy valentines with."

And Mrs. Wilkinson remembered that three days after the day—the 17th of February—she would pass another birthday, and this year would bring a round figure; she would be thirty. She had lost her husband five years before, and it was beginning to occur to her that a single life had its disadvantages. There was no chance for her to marry again, because men never came into her life. She had one child, Jimmie, who kept her busy, for he was always getting himself and her into trouble. But Jimmie did not fill the whole of her life. She craved the society of one of her own generation, and it is natural for the sexes to prefer their opposites.

Jimmie got his mother into one scrape that appeared to be never ending. In a moment of weakness she had consented to his having a dog. A measly creature of yellow color came whining about the door one day for something to eat, and Jimmie begged so hard for permission to keep him that his mother consented. That was the great mistake of her life. The dog was a barker. He would bark at those he loved by way of salute and at those he hated by way of antagonism.

Jimmie declared that he wouldn't stop the dog barking for the world. He said that the beast was splendid protection against burglars. Perhaps he was, for a warning, but Bob—that was the dog's name—was the most cowardly brute in the world.

In a house that backed up against the widow's place lived an old bachelor, aged forty. His rising hour was 9, but his waking hour was 7, for Bob was let out every morning at 7 and frisked and barked till 8. Mr. Barker, the old bachelor, hated Bob primarily; Jimmie, his owner, secondly, and the widow, Jimmie's mother, thirdly. Only Jimmie knew this, for Mr. Barker was too much of a gentleman to let a woman know how Bob annoyed him. Such was the status when Jimmie asked and received money for the annual love campaign.

"I'm goin'," said Jimmie to himself, "to send a valentine to mamma from Mr. Barker. I reckon that would be a good thing for me to do."

The basic reason for this was, fearing that the bachelor would complain of his dog to his mamma and he would thereby lose him, Jimmie was interested in keeping the peace between the two. So he spent the principal part of the money given him for the prettiest valentine he could find and asked the man of whom he bought it to address it to his mother. On St. Valentine's day he left it at the front door, then ran around to the back of the house and climbed a trellis to his room.

"Jimmie," called his mother, "mamma has got a valentine. Whom do you suppose it's from?"

"I don't suppose it's from any one," grumbled Jimmie, "because I know."

"Know?"

"Of course I do. Didn't I see that Mr. Barker, who lives back of us, stealin' around the house with it and then run back and jump the fence in a hurry?"

"Why, Jimmie! You're fibbing; you know you are."

"Well, if you know better than I do it don't make any difference to me. I don't like that old curmudgeon, anyway."

Mrs. Wilkinson could not at once learn what Jimmie had told her, but she had been conscious of being observed by the bachelor when she stood at a mirror near her back window prinking and he was at his back window shaving.

"Well, Jimmie," she said, "if I had a valentine I might be tempted to return the compliment."

This put another idea into Jimmie's head. If he should send Mr. Barker a valentine from his mother he would re-enforce his chances for keeping Bob. He asked his mother for money to buy another valentine to send to a little girl she very much approved of, and she gave it to him. This time the clerk who served him was a woman, and he asked her to address the envelope to Mr. Barker. Then between daylight and dark, seeing the bachelor looking out of a window, he ran past it to the front door, rang the bell and vanished.

The next day Mr. Barker began inquiries among his neighbors for some one to introduce him to the widow, and presently a lady asked permission to bring him to call. Mrs. Wilkinson, believing from the fact of his having sent her a valentine that he had been smitten with her, received him very graciously, and Mr. Barker, believing the same with reference to her, made himself as agreeable as was possible with her.

Mr. Barker was a frequent caller on Mrs. Wilkinson after that. He gave Jimmie candy and even petted Bob. Jimmie was delighted with the success of his ruse till one day his mother informed him that Mr. Barker was going to be his new papa. Jimmie was not particularly pleased with this new feature of the case. In speaking about it to a friend he remarked:

"Doggone it, I only wanted to keep Bob, and I got a stepfather!"

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

ONLY 2,000,000 SHELLS HAVE BEEN SENT TO BRITAIN.

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—Of orders placed in Canada for 23,800,000 shells, only 8,000,000 have been sent to Great Britain, of which only one-fourth were "fixed" shells. A projectile to which has been attached or "fixed" a cartridge case containing the propelling charge constitutes "fixed" ammunition, whether the shell contains the bursting charge or not.

The cost of all the component parts required in the manufacturing of that many shells, including the machinery and assembling, is estimated at $223,000,000. In addition there have been orders from the War Office for cartridge cases, primers, forgings, etc., amounting to $20,000,000, making a total slightly exceeding $300,000,000.

The different kinds of shells that are being manufactured for the British Government are 15-pounder shrapnel empty, 18-pounder shrapnel empty, 18-pounder shrapnel fixed, 18-pounder high-explosive empty, 18-pounder high-explosive fixed, 4.5 howitzer empty, 4.5 howitzer fixed (except loading), 60-pounder high-explosive empty, 6-in. high explosive empty, 8-in. high-explosive empty, 9.2-in. high explosive empty.

The "18-pounder shrapnel fixed ammunition" contains the following parts in addition to the special machining and assembling that have to be done in connection with the finishing of each shell: Forgings, copper bands, br. tubes, tin cups, steel discs, br. sockets, plugs, bullets, buckshot, resin, grub screws, paint, cartridge cases, primers, clips, cordite, pellets, powder, fuses, loading and 4 rd. boxes.

There are now 422 plants in Canada engaged in munitions work, but there are only two places where shells can be "fixed."

Some wives never say yes or no, they answer, it becomes, maybe, I don't know, would I say. Too much of this would irritate a sense, much less a mortal man.

HAD WEAK HEART
HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box. 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about $2, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle, and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of pine on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

HOW THE WOUNDED PRISONERS OF WAR ARE EXCHANGED

Over 900 Repatriated in Two Weeks by Way of Switzerland

Madam Bohny, the wife of Col. Bohny, physician in chief of the Swiss Red Cross, has written the following account of the manner in which totally incapacitated prisoners of war are exchanged between France and Germany, by way of Switzerland. In one period of over two weeks the number of these thus repatriated amounted to over 9,000.

"The selection of prisoners to be exchanged was made at Constance on the German frontier and at Lyon, by two doctors belonging to the Swiss Army Medical Corps. The Swiss Red Cross organized two hospital trains, one at each point, to carry the wounded released by the medical examination.

"The personnel of each train was composed of a doctor major, in complete command of the train; a doctor captain for medical services exclusively, and a secretary whose task was to draw up an accurate list of the wounded. The feminine personnel was composed of a nurse in each carriage, or fifteen to every train under the supervision of a Red Cross matron, who had complete charge of the equipment of the train and the distribution of the presents, received at the railway station.

Meals Arranged.

"Meals were arranged for in the following manner. The French received coffee and white bread at Zurich and warm milk at Geneva. The Germans received supper at Geneva and breakfast at Zurich.

"I was of the belief at the outset," says Madame Bohny, "that one can grow accustomed to the sight of human miseries and become little by little indifferent to them. But no! The frightful aspect of all these young men in the prime of life mutilated, maimed and disfigured for the rest of their existence, creates always a most poignant impression. One would imagine that the sight of such wretchedness would infallibly extinguish every thought of gaiety in the beholder. Nevertheless the spectacle of the courage and joy wherewith they resign themselves to their lot enable you to share with them hours which are truly happy.

"To die for one's country is nothing in comparison with a life full of pains and infirmities such as these men have in prospect. Nevertheless they face this lamentable future with admirable courage.

A Pitiable Invalid.

"Here is an example. One of our invalids the most deserving of pity, was a young man who had both his legs and one arm amputated and at the same time was totally blind.

"I scarcely dared to address him a few words of consolation, but I was soon made aware that he asked for none. He talked gaily with me on all subjects and exclaimed with imperturable heroism: "Although I have lost everything, my heart still beats safe and sound in my breast."

"The most of our unfortunates think and speak in the same manner whether they are French or German.

"Our train was overflowing. No less than 380 severely wounded were distributed in 15 cars. Amongst them were madmen, tuberculosis sufferers and many sick whose lives were in hourly danger. The good nurses had certainly work in abundance. As soon as we had crossed the German frontier into Switzerland we were overwhelmed with ovations. A veritable cyclone of gifts fell on our train from station to station. Soon our carriages were transformed into moving gardens fragrant with flowers. All along the way enthusiastic crowds acclaimed us even in stations where the train did not stop.

Card of Admission.

"Only those provided with a card of admission from the state department had the right to enter a train. This privilege was enjoyed principally by members of the various diplomatic bodies and by the Swiss Red Cross. These visitors made themselves useful by distributing gifts, and speaking words of consolation to the wounded.

"After leaving Geneva the wounded received at Bellegarde the first welcome from their compatriots. To the strains of the Marseillaise the train drew slowly into the railway station which was sumptuously decorated as on great festival days. The guard presented arms. Handkerchiefs and hats were waved. All voices were mingled in a thunder of patriotic welcome.

"It is impossible to describe the reception which we received in Lyon. An innumerable assemblage, officers in resplendent uniforms, high functionaries of category, numerous ladies of the French Red Cross in elegant white costumes, the richly decorated station, all formed a setting of extraordinary brilliance and magnificence.

Receive Gifts.

"As soon as the train was emptied of French prisoners of war it was filled with Germans and proceeded on its way to Switzerland. Every night from station to station were renewed the joyous demonstrations above mentioned, as well as a rain of gifts of every variety. During all these journeys to and fro, animated by an enthusiastic feeling of charity the inhabitants of the districts through which the train passed flocked to the railway station at no matter what hour of night.

"Thus journeyed for three weeks from Constance to Lyon and from Lyon to Constance a whole series of trains, exhibiting always the same spectacle and giving rise to sympathy, the same demonstrations and the same heartfelt welcome, but also affording always the same spectacle of the same misery of maimed unfortunates, galvanized into a momentary life by the joy of seeing their native land once more.

"Once, during this period of ingurious exchanges two trains stopped for a moment on opposite tracks in the middle of the night. Heads leaned out of the windows. Flowers were thrown from one train to the other. The one train sang the Marseillaise, the other Deutschland uber Alles. Then the wheels moved and the trains disappeared in the darkness."

Temperance Measures in War Time

THOSE who would enforce prohibitory law throughout the length and breadth of Ontario, under the guise of a war measure, should turn to the great European nations at war and learn what they are doing in the cause of TEMPERANCE, as a contributory factor in the winning of the war.

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred recently made public statement regarding such measures, but twisted the facts until it looked as though the various countries at war were dry.

HERE ARE THE STRAIGHT FACTS:

ENGLAND

The Committee stated that in England the sale of liquor has been curtailed to five and one-half hours per day. This is only true in Munitions areas, and does not apply to the rest of the country. Indeed, in several districts the dissatisfaction caused by such penalization has caused the Government to withdraw several drastic proposals.

The British Government serves out to its soldiers 2½ ounces of rum twice a week, with an additional half ration on each of the other days to the men in the trenches, while during the very bad weather the full ration of 2½ ounces has been given daily to the men in the trenches. It is worthy of note that in cases where the hours of sale have been reduced the British Government have compensated the license holders affected, thus recognizing in principle the right of the latter to proper compensation.

RUSSIA

Russia's contribution to temperance reform is the abolition of the manufacture and sale of vodka, a cheap and dangerous spirit. Whether the results will be entirely satisfactory is yet in question, owing to the enormous increase in illicit stills, manufacturing vodka, wood alcohol and other noxious preparations. The element of compensation does not enter into the Russian question, as the manufacture of vodka was a Government monopoly.

The Minister of Commerce recommends the sale of beer and wines containing not more than 16 per cent. of alcohol. Ten thousand bottles of wine per day were distributed among the troops at Warsaw.

FRANCE

Apart from the abolition of absinthe, a very dangerous spirit, the French Government has not adopted prohibitory measures. In fact, the French soldiers are regularly supplied with wine, and, at times, spirits. The entrance of beer and wines into towns and cities of France is facilitated by the removal of the octroi duties.

In the matter of compensation, the French Government has paid almost $3,000,000 to those injured by the abolition of absinthe.

BELGIUM

The last statistics supplied by Belgium form interesting reading, in view of the outstanding vigor and valor of her people. Apart from wines and spirits, the annual consumption of beer per capita in Belgium was 58 gallons—over a gallon a week—an astounding figure when one considers the corresponding figure in Canada is less than seven gallons per annum.

GERMANY

Germany might also be cited, but, unlike the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred, we do not care to go to our ENEMY to support our cause.

If in these countries where the problems of the war are closer home, Prohibition is not thought necessary, why does the Committee of One Hundred introduce Prohibition to Ontario as a Necessary War Measure?

THE BEST METHOD

MANY of us after purchasing linoleum are rather in doubt as to just what is the best method of cleaning it so that it will look well and wear well as long as possible. The following information on this point comes from the Colorado Agricultural College:

Linoleum is made of linseed oil, rosin, and ground cork, with mineral coloring matters. In cleansing and renovating linoleum, the above ingredients should be taken into account. Therefore, linoleum should not be washed with soap, soda or other alkaline cleansing agents. Neither should hot water be used on it.

To clean linoleum properly, it should be first swept gently, then wiped up with a damp cloth. The surface should be treated every two or three months with some good floor wax, well rubbed in. A solution that may be used to preserve and renovate linoleum is the following: Dissolve two and one-half pounds paraffin in one gallon of oil of turpentine, using gentle heat; apply while warm with a piece of flannel; let remain on the linoleum about twenty-four hours, then polish with flannel.

New linoleum should be warmed before unrolling or bending, as it cracks very easily when cold. Furniture should not be rolled or skidded over linoleum, but lifted and carried. Small blocks of wood or scraps of linoleum placed under furniture casters prevent unsightly denting.

The greatest amount of wear on linoleum comes, naturally, from walking over it. Plain linoleum shows such wear much less than figured, which often becomes unsightly from "paths" and worn patches. This is especially true of the cheaper printed linoleums. When properly laid and cared for, however, the very best inlaid linoleums are quite satisfactory, and are the cheapest in the long run.

BIG RANCHING SCHEME.

It is proposed to utilize the Vermilion Valley, in Alberta and east of Edmonton, where millions of tons of fine grass feed have been going to waste every year, to grow and fatten cattle for the British and Continental trade.

An immense ranching enterprise one of the most interesting in the history of Western Canada, will probably be launched in connection with the offer of the Canadian Government to supply Great Britain and France with beef.

The scheme is being supported by the Alberta and Dominion Governments, and a large number of the foremost and wealthiest stock men of Ontario are taking an interest in it. Recently there arrived in Calgary forty of Ontario's best known stock men, en route to Vermilion to inspect the country, where it is proposed to establish ranches and where half a million acres of land have been secured for the purpose.

It is not intended to start big ranches, but small ones, which will be stocked and maintained under experienced cattle men.

Dardanelles Campaign Cost the Allies 114,559; Commenced in February

With the withdrawal of the British and French forces from the southern tip of the Gallipoli peninsula, following the evacuation of the Anzac and Suvla Bay positions on the western coast in the middle of December, there has come to an end a movement which was begun with expectations of achievement which would have a great bearing on the outcome of the war.

Thousands upon thousands of men lost their lives in the enterprise of effecting landings on the Turkish coast and in the fighting that has been in progress since. In addition, a number of battleships and smaller war craft of the entente allies have been sunk or damaged as they poured a rain of shell against the Turkish fortifications in an endeavor to aid their forces on shore.

Began February 1915.

The chief military purposes of the Dardanelles campaign, which was begun in February, 1915, with the bombardment of the Turkish forts at the entrance to the straits by the entente allies' warships was the capture of Constantinople and the opening of the Bosphorous, which connects the Mediterranean with the Black Sea, so that Russia might have an avenue for the receipt of arms and ammunition and also for the exportation of Russian grain. For England success meant the prevention of another Turkish invasion of Egypt and the permanent safety of the Suez Canal and England's communication with India.

Politically a victory was expected to have a powerful effect upon the then three neutral Balkan states, Greece, Bulgaria and Roumania, whose political status has for generations been balanced with that of Turkey in the ever-changing scale of Balkan politics. There was cited the possibility, now realized by Bulgaria's entrance into the war, of preventing the establishment of a Balkan link between the central powers and Turkey, and also of the possible opening of a land route to India, an ambition with which the English have long been credited.

Criticism of Campaign.

In October, after the successful invasion of Servia by the Teutons and the Bulgars, and the reports that German ammunition was on its way to Turkey, a storm of bitter criticism of the Government's Dardanelles campaign broke loose in England. Sir Edmund Carson attorney-general, resigned from the cabinet because of a disagreement with his colleagues over the campaign, it was said, and Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty the principal target of attack, also resigned. Churchill placed some of the blame on the shoulders of Admiral Fisher, first sea lord.

There was a complete reorganization of the French cabinet, which was generally attributed to the Balkan-Dardanelles campaign.

The sending of the fleet in force to the Dardanelles without the co-operation of land forces was generally conceded to have been the big initial blunder of the campaign. The inadequacy of the land forces when they were sent were criticized as another. The Government assailants said the campaign should have been delayed until better preparations could be made. Some thought the result would have been different had the attack been launched immediately upon the declaration of war with Turkey.

Apologists for the Government pointed to the fact that at least a large Turkish army had been prevented from operating elsewhere, particularly in Egypt and the Caucasus. They argued also that the Balkan situation might have developed much sooner had the effort not been made when it was.

Three Major Operations.

The campaign was marked by three major operations, one by the fleet alone and two by the land forces assisted by the fleet. The net result was the conquest of the tip of the Gallipoli peninsula for a distance of three miles and a narrow segment of its middle western coast, about twelve miles in length and hardly a mile deep.

The first disaster came March 19, when mines blew up the French battleship Bouvet and the British battleships Irresistible and Ocean while they were attempting to dash for the Narrows, the fortifications of which they had been bombarding for several weeks. Several other vessels were damaged at the same time, and the fleet withdrew to the Aegean Sea. On the same day it was announced that Admiralty Garden, the British commander, had been replaced by Admiral DeRobeck.

DeRobeck Naval Efforts.

Admiral DeRobeck continued the bombardment with an occasional dash into the straits by the ships until April, but it was not productive of any great results, according to accounts from the Turkish side. The Turks, however, reported that with their mobile batteries of heavy cannon they were able to damage many more allied vessels. Land forces were landed March 4 at Seddul Bahr, the tip of the peninsula, but they were not strong enough to hold their positions, though they destroyed the fortifications. Allied troops for a landing came April 26, but meantime the British battleship Triumph had been sunk and the submarine E-15 went aground and fell victim to Turkish fire.

The first contingent of British troops under the command of Ian Hamilton, relatively small in numbers, landed at Seddul Bahr April 25, but not without heavy losses. French troops landed on the Asiatic side, but they stayed there only three days. The French subsequently formed the left wing of the British on Seddul Bahr. Meanwhile the general bombardment of the Turkish positions by the battleships was resumed.

Expedition at Anzac.

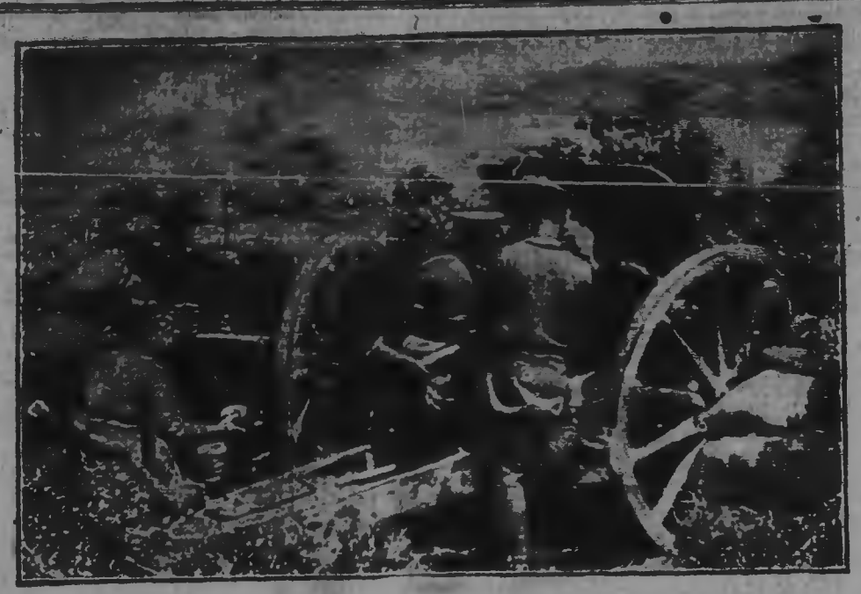
Early in May other British troops landed on the north side of the peninsula, near Avi Burnu, which afterwards became to be known as Anzac Cove. The name was taken from the initials of the Australian and New Zealand army corps, which comprised the landing forces. Their object was to cross the peninsula and cut the communications of the Turkish divisions at Seddul Bahr and storm the Turkish forts on the Gallipoli side of the Narrows, thus opening the way for a safe entrance of the British fleet. They sustained terrible losses during the landing and the troops found themselves in a sort of bowl whose rock brim bristled with machine guns. It was a case of entrenchment immediately, and almost from the moment the fighting settled down into trench warfare, which was maintained until August 6, when reinforcements landed, again with great casualties, in the famous Anzac and Suvla Bay positions.

Failure at Suvla Bay.

The veteran Anzac troops won a victory, capturing the Turkish positions before them, but the failure of one of the divisions of the Suvla Bay expedition to accomplish the task assigned to it prevented them from driving it home. General Ian Hamilton, in his report, said this campaign failed partly on account of inexperience of generals and troops and partly on account of failure of the water supply. The British succeeded in affecting a junction of their forces, but gained no great military advantage. The fighting here has been described as the most awful of the war, both sides suffering tremendous losses.

On November 3, Premier Asquith told Parliament that the Dardanelles campaign had been a failure. Up to December 9, the total British casualties on the peninsula were 114,585 men killed, wounded or missing.

The losses in the evacuation of the Suvla Bay and Anzac regions were declared by the British at the time to have been only three wounded, making the total casualties in leaving the peninsula four men.



COVERING RETIREMENT OF BIG ARMY—Evacuation of Gallipoli Peninsula by Allied forces will go down in history as one of the greatest military feats of the present war. The re-embarkation was made possible by brilliant work of the gunners, who with the loss of only a few guns kept the Turkish hordes at bay till all their thousands of comrades were safe aboard—then they blew up the guns and took to the boats in the middle of the night. The picture shows the artillery of the rear guard at the evacuation of the Suvla Bay region on the Gallipoli Peninsula some weeks ago.

Hughie's Bargain.

Wee Hughie wanted to go to the circus very badly, but his father was adamant. "Nay, laddie," he said. "Ye'd better gang till the schule an' dae yer lessons, an' some day mabbe ye'll be Lord Provost o' Glesgae." "But, father," protested Hughie, "there's thousan's an' thousan's o' boys in Glesgae nana there?" "Ay, there is that," agreed father. "Weel," concluded the "laddie," "I'll swop my chance o' bein' Lord Provost for a ticket for the circus."

Better at Figures.—Mother (to newly married daughter)—"Yo udon't mean to say, Marie, that you have kept your grocery book three months and haven't balanced it yet?" Marie—"Oh, no, mamma! I let the grocer balance it. He's so much better at figures than I am, and I know he's honest, for he always tells me that he has forgotten to charge something which should have been in."

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESSING SACQUE.

By Anabel Worthington.

The dressing sacque is the garment of ease. It may serve our purpose when we have an hour of leisure and choose to relax, or it may be our all sufficient clothing when we are hurried in the morning and don a shirt but have no desire for collars and belts and other details of the really dressed hours of the day.

The garment which we show in the accompanying illustration is one of the most simple of this large class. It is cut with both front and back quite plain, the front accommodating the closing. The neck of this sacque is high and it is finished with a flat collar of moderate size. There is a peplum, which is divided in the centre of the back as well as in the centre of the front. This is separate from the upper part of the sacque, which is gathered at the waist line, while the peplum is plain. The sleeves are plain and full length, gathered into a cuff at the wrist. If preferred it may be allowed to flare and have the edge finished with a band of ribbon or other trimming.

No. 7888

The dressing sacque is made of challie, cashmere, French and Scotch flannel, cutting flannel, cotton crepe, not to mention the many handsome materials of the crepe and silk class.

The dressing sacque pattern, No. 7888, is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material, with 5 yards of ribbon.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

GOOD RECIPES

THE following is taken from the Pacific Woodman, and has so many excellent points that we pass it on.

A nervous headache may frequently be cured by several slices of lemon in a cup of strong tea, and a bilious headache is almost invariably put to rout by a tablespoonful of lemon juice in a small cup of black coffee. The juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water first thing in the morning is an excellent liver corrective and successful subsitute for calomel and similar drugs.

Honey, alum, and lemon juice is an old-fashioned but good remedy for croup. A dash of lemon juice in water makes a pleasant and effective tooth wash, cleaning the teeth and sweetening the breath. In fact, a lemon is pretty much of a concentrated drug store. Outwardly applied, lemon juice and rose water will remove tan and whiten the skin, and taken inwardly, lemon juice on lump sugar is fine for hoarseness.

Lemon juice with olive oil is far superior as a salad dressing to vinegar, and a teaspoonful of lemon juice adds a dainty flavor and whitens the grains of boiling rice or sago. Salt and lemon juice removes rust stains from white goods, and tough meat may be made tender by adding a teaspoonful of lemon juice to the water in which it is to be boiled. If the hands become stained, lemon juice will make them white.

PRINCE GOES BACK TO WAR.

His Bravery and Simplicity Endear Him to Troops.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—A cable from London to the New York Herald this morning says:

I am informed that the report that the Prince of Wales will not return to the Front because the heir to the throne has personally exposed himself to the enemy is unfounded. While it is true that during the King's cost vale-cence he may be retined here for the public duties usually performed by his father, he will rejoin the Army in France, where his bravery and simplicity have made him the idol of all ranks, as soon as the King has completely recovered from his recent accident.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt, and dandruff.

WHY THESE POLES LIKE BEING HELD IN BRITISH CAMP

LONDON, Jan. —(By Mail)— Alexandra Palace, England's largest single internment camp for civilian prisoners of war, corresponding to Germany's Ruhleben, near Berlin, is the fascinatingly interesting British Military City I was permitted to visit to-day. No other press representatives were there; and this is the first time a press man has been permitted to enter this camp.

More than 8,000 enemy aliens, rich and poor from all parts of the world, are living at Alexandra Palace, north London. Hundreds of Croats and Poles from Pittsburg and Detroit, captured on their way home to figiht; well known European musical artists, interned while performing in England; Germans and Austrians, taken from ships in the Atlantic and the North Sea and Austro-German directors of big British firms, together with alien inhabitants of England, some of thirty years' residence, make a unique and remarkable colony,—for the duration of the war.

There is no social distinction in the three battalions of a thousand men each. Military discipline prevails. It effects the English-German aristocrat and the lowliest Pittsburg steel worker alike. A company of British soldiers guards the palace which in peace time served as a London Coney Island, or White City.

Many Societies.

There are benevolent societies, directors' meetings, institutes of painting, drawing, sculpture; a theater that would do credit to Broadway workshops for dozens of trades, a fully equipped hospital; school, post-offices, football and Swedish drill; laundries, mammoth spotless kitchens, stores and shops, commodious bath rooms and dozens of other things inside the barbed wire enclosing this multi-[illegible].

"They are 'making the best of it and it is my duty, to let them enjoy life to the limit of military possibilities," remarked Colonel Frood Walker, a British regular army veteran of twenty years in the Orient, who is the commandant.

The commandant's words voice the British attitude toward prisoners of war, both military and civilian. It considers the human side of those forced to live behind wire entanglements. Once a week the commandant turns over his office to prisoners who have complaints. He hears the stories and does what he can. The man with a grouch tells his troubles to the captain of his men. If it is meritorious, the complaint is passed to the alien commander, another alien who governs a thousand men. Then the complainant may appear in person before the veteran commandant, who never "waives" the enemy.

Twice weekly the commandant personally inspects every one of the 3,-000 beds housed under the great roofs of the palace. These beds are neat and clean, with four blankets and a soft mattress for each.

Ample Food Allowance.

There are eight cooks for every thousand prisoners. The food is prepared and taken to the great mess rooms each of which can compare in floor space to the main lobby of New York's Grand Central station. Here is the food allowance per man per day: 1½ pounds of white bread, ½ pound of meat; ½ pound of potatoes, two ounces of peas, lentils, beans or rice; two ounces of sugar, ½ ounce of tea or two ounces of coffee; one ounce of margarine or two ounces of cheese, tinned milk, salt and pepper. There is afternoon tea with bread and butter.

Each battalion has a large canteen where a prisoner may augment his food supply. The wealthier interners freely patronizes the canteens, but the ordinary fare is better than the average Pittsburg steel worker ever had in his life. These Pittsburgers aren't anxious for the war to close. They're satisfied.

The American embassy, God-father of all enemy aliens in the British Isles, works hand in hand with a special committee of the wealthier interned men to care for the special wants of the poor. The women and children of the outside are the principal beneficiaries of this joint benevolent society. More than 3,000 cases have been attended to since September.

A Weekly Theatre.

Almost every prisoner looks forward eagerly to the weekly theatre. Here artists, some high in the profession performs vaudeville stunts. Professional actors present latest plays. The Theatre will seat 1,500 persons. The scenery was painted by artists who rank high in British and German art circles and is infinitely better than that found in the average London playhouse.

A smaller hall, for 500 persons is set aside for the evening musicals. This hall is always crowded. At tonight's concert Herr F. Lorant, an Austrian violinist who will be heard in America after the war, was the star attraction. His program, much applauded was: Teufel's Trille, by Tartini; Nocturne, Chopin-Sarasat; Zephyr, Hubay; Ballad & Polonaise, Vieuxtemps. An evergreen wreath was presented to Lorant by his admirers, the commandant doing the honor. Herr Lino Veaco, a Hungarian grand opera singer, reaped plaudits with Romanza aus Don Sebastiano by Donizetti. A piano solo, "Ballade As Dur," by A. Reschofsky, who studied under Paderewski, also was vociferously received.

Wonderful rose gardens surrounding the palace are kept by the aliens. In these gardens the married men receive visits from their wives or friends once a month, for fifteen minutes.

Special dispensation is granted to interned business men. To-day a meeting of the directorate of a big British company. Both British and German members attending, was going on in a room provided for the purpose. A British officer was listening. One of the German directors has lived in England for twenty years. He owns a mansion in London, a summer home at Margate, and has ten servants and an income that runs into six figures.

On Sunday there are church services for all creeds—Catholics, Lutheran, Jewish included; the latter for the scores of interned Polish and German Jews. Prisoners may write two letters each week. They smoke when they want to and do what they want to and there is no grumbling.

BERLIN ADMITS THE RUSSIANS WERE SUCCESSFUL IN A SURPRISE ATTACK

German Advance Posts Were Routed on Eastern Front ---Britain and France Have Presented Virtual Ultimatum to Greece Demanding That Diplomats of Central Powers Be Handed Their Passports, Says Sofia Despatch.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

BERLIN, via wireless, Jan. 18.—Under the protection of darkness and heavy snow storm Russians made surprise attack and routed the advance German posts near Duenshof south east of Riga, and south of Widey the war office admitted this afternoon. "On the western front the artillery is again active owing to the generally clear weather" said official statement. The British artillery has again shelled Lens. OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—To-day's cable report by Windermere from England to the effect that 302 casualties recorded by War Office in the 24 th 19th, and 5th Canadian batalions is denied by General Sam Hughes at militia department this morning. The last report of this kind received on Saturday from same source and later was to denied effect that there had been 500 casualties in the 31st Calgary regiment and the 3rd Canadian Mounted Rifles of Medicine Hat.

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—A cable received here to-day says flight Lieut. Ross, supposed to be Gordon Ross, aged 21 of Toronto, was burned to death, when a tank burst in his machine yesterday. His parents here have had no official word.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The thinly veiled warning of the Swedish King in his address to Rikesdag will have absolutely no effect upon Britains sea policies, it was stated in well informed circles to-day neither threats from Sweden nor protests from United States and other neutrals will cause the Government to alter its present programme, which is designed to cut Germany off from intercourse with the outside world. Any marked concessions at this time probably would prove so unpopular that the Government might be forced ot of office. The press is engaged in a vigorous campaign for an actual blockade of the whole German coast and would promptly resent any move that would make the present measures less effective.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Bulgarian troops are being withdrawn from Albania of dissensions among the Austro-Germans and the Bulgars, according to a wireless despatch from Rome to-day. "Advices from Athens state that Bulgaria and Turkey are inclined to conclude peace with the Allies," added the Rome message.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—It was officially denied that Von Papen, ever paid any money to Worner Horn, accused of attempting to blow up the C.P.R. bridge at Vanceboro, Maine.

LONDON, Jan. 18—Premier Asquith announced in the Commons to-day that Jos. Albert Pease has been appointed Postmaster-General to succeed Herbert Samuel, who became Home Secretary when Sir Jno. Simon resigned. The new appointee was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in 1910—11, and is a banker.

ROME, Jan. 18.—Miss Stefanichampte of New York, a Red Cross nurse, was among those drowned when the Italian steamer Brindisi struck a mine and san in the Adriatic recently.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The greatest revolution in all history if the present war is not soon stopped was predicted to-day in a speech in the house by Moye. London, Socialist. He warned the house against a popular uprising, denounced the preparations agitation, and asserted that the time for peace has arrived.

WASHINTON, Jan. 18.—In a final effort to get quick action by the Senate on the Mexican situation, a resolution calling for immediate intervention was offered this afternoon. Senator Lippitt of Rhode Island was author, but the Senate forces opposing the administration course, backed the effort and an acrimonious debate resulted.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—An Athens despatch says that 120,000 Teutonic troops, with 400 guns, have concentrated for an expected drive on Saloniks.

C. B. WIDDIFIELD,
Capt., Acting Adjutant for Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

It was announced to-day that in addition to Capt. Burnham's prize of $10 for the private of the 93rd bringing in the most recruits this week that the chaplain, Hon. Major Davidson has offered a second and third prize of $4 and $2 respectively.

Lt.-Col. Johnston and nearly all his staff were in attendance at last night's hockey game. The hold the commanding officer of the 93rd has on the affections of his men was evidenced by the reception he received when he entered the reserved seat section. The rank and file of the 93rd were grouped on the east side of the rink and they greeted Col. Johnston with three cheers and then followed with "He's a jolly good fellow". The men of the 93rd proved loyal supporters for their team and they also took advantage of the opportunity to put on a recruiting demonstration singing the new recruiting song, "Come on Men the King Needs You".

Congratulations are due Sergt. Herb O'Hearn of the machine gun section of the 93rd battalion who joined the ranks of the benedicts to-day.

Messrs. Harold Jobbitt, Cost Clerk in the Duffus Automobile Garage, and H. M. Smith of the White Rose Garage left this morning for Cobourg to join the Mechanical transport of the Imperial service.

The following units of the C.E.F. are now located in the 3rd Division, under Colonel Hemming:

Artillery—32nd Battery, Kingston, commanded by Major Mackenzie; 33rd Battery, Kingston, commanded by Major Sears; 34th Battery, Kingston, commanded by Major Massie; Queen's University Battery, Kingston, commanded by Captain Gill; "C" Battery, R.C.H.A., Kingston, commanded by Captain Steacy; Divisional Ammunition Column, commanded by Lt.-Col. Hurdman.

Infantry—59th Battalion, headquarters Brockville, commanded by Lt.-Col. Dawson; 77th Battalion, headquarters Ottawa, commanded by Lt.-Col. Street; 80th Battalion, headquarters Belleville, commanded by Lt.-Col. Ketcheson; 93rd Battalion, headquarters Peterborough, commanded by Lt.-Col. Johnston; 109th Battalion, headquarters Lindsay, commanded by Lt.-Col. Fee; 130th Battalion, headquarters Perth, commanded by Lt.-Col. d'Hertel; 136th Battalion, headquarters Port Hope, commanded by Lt.-Col. Smart; 139th Battalion, headquarters Cobourg, commanded by Lt.-Col. Floyd; 146th Battalion, Kingston, commanded by Lt.-Col. Low; 154th Battalion, headquarters Alexandria, commanded by Lt.-Col. McDonald; 155th Battalion, headquarters Belleville, commanded by Lt.-Col. Adams; 156th Battalion, headquarters Brockville, commanded by Lt.-Col. Wilkinson; Engineers' Training Dept., Ottawa, commanded by Major McKenna.

The Kingston Standard says: Lt.-Col. Johnston, officer commanding the 93rd Battalion of Peterborough, was in the city for the week-end conferring with Colonel Hemming on matters pertaining to his battalion. The 93rd are making excellent progress, and the O. C. reports that he has the hearty co-operation of the citizens in all his work, and everybody shows a willingness to assist in the task of recruiting and training the 93rd. The 93rd have a good lot of officers, a fine band, and good quarters. Lt.-Col. Johnston returned to Peterborough, and those who met him during his stay in this city will be pleased to have him visit Kingston a little oftener.

Recruiting Scheme Is Endorsed By Council

Civic Body Met Last Evening and Unanimously Decided to Support the Campaign—Mass Meeting To-morrow Night.

MEETINGS TO-NIGHT

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening for the purpose of endorsing the recruiting campaign to fill up the ranks of the 93rd Battalion. Mayor Duffus and his colleagues were unanimous in their approval of the efforts that are being made to complete the establishment of the Battalion. The following resolution was adopted:

That this Council has learned with gratification that a general effort is to be made this week to have the ranks of the 93rd Battalion filled quickly with the full number required, and wishes to express its hearty endorsation of the movement undertaken by the 93rd Battalion and the Speaker's Patriotic League for this purpose. The necessities of the great struggle in which we are engaged, the security of the British Empire and of Canada as a part of that Empire, the continuation of the political freedom that we enjoy and the protection of our homes, as well as our duty to the allies with whom we are united in the conflict, all demand that we as a community put forth our full strength to assist the other parts of the Dominion in reinforcing the overseas forces that have gone from Canada and that we are preparing to cross the ocean to do battle with the ruthless army.

We hope and are confident that the offer from the city and county to provide a battalion will be carried out, and that it will be carried out so cheerfully and promptly that we will feel that we have done our duty in a manner that will show that we are true Canadians and worthy of our great heritage as Britons.

We wish the effort now undertaken complete success, and feel confident the people as a whole will co-operate to make it most successful.

Meetings To-night.

To-night the following meetings will be held:

No. 1 district—Salvation Army Hall, Byersville.
No. 2—Knox Church.
No. 3—All Saints' Parish Hall.
No. 4—Trinity Church.
No. 5—St. Andrew's Church.
No. 6—Normal School Assembly room.
No. 7—Collegiate Institute.
No. 8—East City Town Hall.

Every man and woman in the district is urged to attend the meeting in his or her particular district, and assist in the work. There will be an officer from the 93rd battalion present at each meeting, as well as representatives of the Speakers' Patriotic League and the Womens' Auxiliary.

On Wednesday night there will be a mass meeting in the Opera House, at which Mrs. Huestis of Toronto will be one of the speakers. This meeting is open to every one and not particularly for women as some people seem to think.

PETERBORO' IS HIGH UP IN THE LIST OF CITIES

Few Canadian Cities Have Made a Higher Per Capita Contribution to the Coffers of the Canadian Patriotic Fund

FIGURES FOR LAST YEAR

OTTAWA, January 17.—A statement of per capita contribution by various cities and towns in Eastern Canada was issued to-day by the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The figures are up to the end of the calendar year. The explanation is made that the larger contributions are not necessarily the most generous or patriotic, as some of the smaller figures taken in conjunction with local conditions, "represent not merely generosity but sacrifice."

Toronto is credited with a total of $555,463.34, or $1.45 per capita.

Montreal Island gave $1,494,545.69, or $2.25 per capita, this being exclusive of large contributions from the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Dominion Sugar Refinery.

Halifax City and County gave $156,759.29, or $1.98 per capita.

Others in the list are: St. Catharines, $96,583.82, $6.51 per capita; Galt, $46,811, $3.70 per capita; Ottawa, $368,288.97, $3.36 per capita; Berlin, Ont., $60,00, $5 per capita; Peterboro, $46,372, $2.20 per capita; Belleville, $27,000, $2.25 per capita; Hamilton, $220,404.67, $1.10 per capita; Kingston, $42,862.32, $2 per capita; Quebec City and County, $182,057.76, $2 per capita; Brantford, $30,864.36, $1.60 per capita; Guelph, $25,181.91, $1.50 per capita; Sault Ste. Marie and Steelton, $20,000.36, $1.10 per capita; Port Arthur, $9,569.44, 84c per capita.

Two Women Arrested On Murder Charge

SEQUEL OF INVESTIGATION INTO THE DEATH OF MRS. McKERRON.

TORONTO, January 18.—Following the protracted investigation into the death of Mrs. Elizabeth McKerron of 443 Hillside Road, who died in the general hospital on Dec. 19, the Crown ordered the arrest of Mrs. Louise Cull, of 45 Helena Avenue, and Mrs. Christiana Hay, of 81 Marlborough Avenue. Each woman is charged with murder. Both will appear in the police court.

When Coroner Cotton opened the inquest into the death of Mrs. McKerron, the doctor who performed the autopsy swore that she was the victim of an illegal operation. The allegation of the police is that it was Mrs. Cull who performed the operation. She was arrested at her home about 9 o'clock by Detectives Twigg and Taylor.

Mrs. Hay appeared as a witness at the last session of the inquest and when questioned by the Crown Attorney emphatically denied all knowledge of the alleged operation. The police allege that Mrs. Hay was an accessory to the crime.

Coal $40 a Ton In Italian Cities

Examiner Special:

ROME, Jan. 18.—In spite of the cold weather Italy is a country almost without coal fires. The only smoke to be seen is that from railroad locomotives, factories and a few hotels. The peasants in the mountains and the poor of the cities are able to make a few fires of wood, but coal is beyond the reach of any except the most wealthy. American coal lies unsold at the seaports. On account of high freight anthracite costs more than $40 a ton.

POPULARIZING ART.

We are a very busy people; we are waging war; we are raising armies; we are keeping the machinery of peaceful occupation busy. All the functions of ordinary life are in operation, and with all this busy-ness we are finding time for the refinements of life and the cult of culture. The Woman's Art Association, active even in the atmosphere of war, commerce and gainsaying—which we breathe from day to day—is doing its bit. The Association is doing a great and effective work, though results are not as tangible and visible as the products of a saw mill. Anything that provokes even thought of the artistic side of life is educative and uplifting. The Women's Art Association has began at the right point— the beginning— in placing an influence upon child life. It has offered prizes for competition among school pupils. There has been a fairly active competition and the results will be exhibited in the rooms of the Central school kindergarten on Thursday and Friday of this week. The rooms on these days will be open to the public and all who have an interest in art, even in the primitive stages of its development, will find in the exhibits much to interest and encourage.

NO TIME FOR CHANGE.

One of the Hearst journals, the Chicago American, lauds Lloyd George, "slams" King George, and demands that King George be deposed, and Lloyd George be made president of a British republic. By all means make Britain a republic, if that will give the country the back-bone, bravery and moral courage the government—not the people—of the United States is showing to-day. If Great Britain had been for the past two years a republic, with a president like complete-letter-writer Wilson, the Kaiser might have been taking his breakfast in Buckingham palace, any morning the past year. There is no republic on the face of the earth that has the extended personal freedom and good government of the limited monarchy of Great Britain. It would be a distinct loss to the world to make Great Britain a republic. We should lose a model of free government and free institutions for republics to aspire to imitate, and live up to. Britain may be an "effete monarchy," but she has this weakness, her flag protects her subjects in any part of the world. Britain would go, has gone, to war, to redress an insult to the flag even if it involved only the rights and liberties of a single British subject. This is no time for a change.

REFINE OUR OWN NICKEL.

There is an indefinite sort of proposal that Canadian nickel be refined in Canada. There is no other way that is the right way. For years the Examiner has been preaching the doctrine that all the natural resources of the country should be reduced to the ultimate form of development in Canada, so that Canada would not only thus receive the whole or chief benefit of absolute value, but should have the benefit of the value of the labour and industrial operation involved in home manufacture. In the case of nickel there is not only economic, but patriotic, reasons why our nickel should be refined at home. By doing that we should have absolute control of the destination and use of our refined nickel. As things are, and have been, we permit, and have permitted, the export of crude nickel matte to the United States—to a refinery in which German capital and control largely, if not predominately obtain. Thus it can easily have happened that Canada, as a part of the Empire, has been contributing to the perfection of German warships and munitions of war, to be used against herself.

Private capital would see to it that Canadian nickel were refined in Canada, if the Government provided the necessary conditions and restrictions.

There seems to be no reason why Canadian nickel, instead of going to build up a hostile German navy, should not have been exclusively employed in building either a Canadian navy or have been reserved for the sole use of the British navy. In the past, in regard to home refinement of nickel, governments have been influenced by two considerations—the lack of urgency and lack of opportunity for initiative. The conditions are ripe now for enforcing the refinement of nickel in Canada. There is both urgency and opportunity. The occasion creates the way. There is urgent need for home refinement of nickel and the occasion is propitious. We are at a crisis when we can and do do things that seemed impracticable and impossible at other times. We needed zinc for making Canadian munitions. We took our courage and our enterprise in our own hands, and have achieved the refinement in Canada of our own zinc ores. A little amplification of this same spirit and we can have Canadian nickel refined in Canada.

We can certainly accomplish this when we have done much greater things. Any one who had foretold three or four years ago what Canada has done in raising and equipping armies and financing a war campaign would have been laughed to scorn. If we can raise, equip and place on a war basis 250,000 troops, which we have done, or are doing, simply because we did it, and are doing it, we can certainly, by a similar course of procedure, procure that similar patriotic achievement can be accomplished in the matter of nickel refinement.

We should seize the propitious moment. Canada is making great sacrifice in this war, but it needs all sacrifice. In what we are doing, we are finding ourselves. We are finding our soul, and we are having a self revelatinn of our capacity for doing things. In the spirt of this discovery we should demonstrate that we are capable of the comparatively little thing of having Canadian nickel refined in Canada—for the benefit of Canada exclusively, in a development sense, and for the benefit of the Empire, and on behalf of imperial interests.

LONG-IMPENDING DOOM.

The German secretary of the treasury makes a speech declaring tha the British Empire is doomed. Bu the British Empire has been hearing that statement in its own parliament for hundreds of years.—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

HEARST'S AMAZEMENT.

Why, even a little, despicable, contemptible bandit nation like Mexico murders our citizens, drags our flag in the dirt, and spits at and defies this Nation of ours with truculent insolence AND WITHOUT PUNISHMENT!—New York American.

NO CANADIAN BATTLESHIPS.

The battle cruiser Australia, the property of the far-off commonwealth, is a very real part of the British navy to-day. Stripped ready for action, with its eight 12-inch guns sniffing the air as if trying to scent the enemy, it seems to breathe the defiant spirit of the Australian in war. A magnificent sight, his first view of the grand fleet, with lines of battleships flanked and guarded by destroyers but it is the Australia's position in the line that delights the proud colonials, for its nearest neighbours are none other than the war-scarred Lion and Tiger.—London Daily Telegraph.

ANOTHER STIMULUS FOR PRESIDENT WILSON'S PRIDE.

Probably there will not be much complaint from the United States Government over the censoring of the mails since Captain von Papen's correspondence has been turned over to the American Ambassador in London. It proves that the German officials were concerned personally and officially with the plotting and conspiring which has been going on in the United States against friendly nations.

The blowing up of a C.P.R. bridge is a matter which concerns Canada only a little more nearly than the other affairs in which these nefarious conspirators were active. In the C. P. R. bridge matter Capt. von Papen gave his cheque for $700 to Horn, who attempted the crime, and the day previously the German embassy paid $3,000 into Von Papen's account. Germany has flouted the United States beyond all ordinary endurance —The World.

WHEN THE BIG GENERAL OFFENSIVE COMES.

Any offensive now undertaken by either of the Allies now has more than a local significance. That is the result of the recent establishment of an Allied War Council to arrange co-operative strategy in all the theatres of war. Thus we hardly need the reminder of a Petrograd correspondent that the great offensive just undertaken by the Russians in Bessarabia was carefully planned by the Russians, in conjunction with the other Allies, with a distinct purpose in view. We are told that that purpose, which was not only the general one of attrition, but the particular one of drawing Hun troops away from another theatre, succeeded.

This see-saw game has been played more or less all along. Under the close co-operation now existing, we may expect to see it played with much more powerful effect in the future. It will probably lead up to a tremendous offensive in every theatre of war—an offensive which will prevent the Germans rushing reinforcements from one field to another, and will strain their long-drawn-out lines to the breaking point. Then one of the links in their chain will break, and we shall see the beginning of the end. When the vast Russian armies are fully equipped that general offensive will come. Till then we must be content to wait. —Montreal Herald.

THE PRODUCTS OF CANADA'S SUB-POLAR TREASURE FIELDS

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 17.—The Dawson Daily News estimates that the mines of Yukon have poured into the world's coffers gold dust to the value of $165,000,000. The article says:

"The Yukon territory has contributed to the outside world approximately $165,000,000 in virgin gold. This magnificient sum has come chiefly from the placers within fifty miles of Dawson. Other rich creeks within 100 miles of Dawson have furnished the bulk of the remainder while the remaining portion has come from more distant locations.

"A tabulated statement shows the fluctuating condition of the output, covering the ten years previous to the famous discovery on Bonanza Creek in 1896; the tremendous yearly increase until the banner year of 1900 ($22,275,000), the gradual decrease until the lowest ebb was reached in 1907, and the continued upward leap from that time due to the installation of hydraulics and giant dredges. Since 1910, the fluctuation has been but slight, and the shipments from Dawson have approximated $5,000,000 annually. Last year they went slightly under $5,000,000, and a little below the total of the year previous, the slight shrinkage being accounted for to considerable degree by the breaking down of one of the largest dredges just as it got into the best of pay.

Some Rich Claims.

Some Eldorado claims yielded much better than that by old methods. Tom Lippy, of Seattle is said to have cleaned up more than a million and a half from No. 16 Eldorado, and No. 17 which was owned by Jim Hall, was a marvellous producer. Both of these claims, like nearly all the best Eldorado properties, were worked by steam thawing and hoisting methods. The old system required five or six years to work out a claim, whereas the dredges now work out several of the claims in a single season, and take up several feet of bed-rock, and get therefrom much gold which the miners by the old methods could not get.

"The yield now is slightly lower than a year or two ago. Bonanza and Eldorado are now worked by the new methods to a large extent, and other creeks which have been under preparation for the new methods are expected to begin yielding in another season. The Treadgold properties totalling many miles, on Dominion and Quartz Creeks have been in preparation for several seasons, and the first excavator or machine for working there on the large scale has just arrived. It is now being hauled to the creek, and is to be set up this Fall. Mr. Treadgold is expected to arrive here this Fall to see it work. The machine was worked in England as a test before being sent here. Similar excavators are used for other classes of mining on an extensive scale in other parts of the world.

Where the Gold is Produced.

"The gold is extracted from the Klondike River, between Bear and Bonanza Creeks, and from Bonanza, Eldorado, Hunker and Gold Run Creeks. The largest hydraulics are along Bonanza benches. Milvain is working a dredge on Miller Creek. Individual production also comes from Sulphur which now leads in activity on old time creeks near the city and elsewhere in the territory.

"It has been estimated by some that the placers in the old Klondike district, that is, within fifty miles of Dawson, still contain $150,000,000 to $160,000,000. The Treadgold property of Indian River, Dominion Creek, Quartz Creek, Sulphur and tributaries alone aggregating 75 miles or more, have been estimated in the company's prospectus to contain fully 300,000,000 cubic yards carrying 30 cents to the yard, or $90,000,000. It was stated some time ago that eight miles of gravel between Bear and Bonanza Creek on the Klondike, remaining to be worked and carrying gravels worth 25 cents a yard contain fully $20,000,000. The Yukon Gold Company's properties remaining in the camp are believed to contain fully that much, if not far more. They include, besides properties on Hunker, Eldorado and Bonanza yet unworked, a large portion of Gold Run. Upper Gold Run, comprising 70 claims, also is practically unworked. Many other creeks in the territory being worked by individuals may yet yield millions.

PROHIBITION FOR CANADA

SYMPATHY AT OTTAWA.

Measure Would Pass Easily in Parliament, it is Said—Might Conflict With Provinces.

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—Proposals for a measure of Dominion-wide prohibition in the time of war and for a reconstruction period of three years afterwards, and a referendum then as to repeal, have been submitted to Parliament. Each member of the House has received a letter asking for an expression of his views upon the question, and at the end of the week there is to be a meeting of those in sympathy with the cause. Some resentment was expressed today at the fact that the gathering is thus to be limited. It is held that it would be better if the meeting were an open one, not only for sympathizers with prohibition, but also to those who have open minds on the subject.

Sympathy Prevails.

Efforts were made to-day to secure a symposium of opinion from representative groups of members from each province. So far as the Government is concerned, the question is one of policy, and on such matters it is not customary, to express any advance opinion. Among the members of Parliament varied views are expressed. Temperance sentiment strongly prevails beyond question, and on principle the majority of members would even favour prohibition. The question is, however, recognized as a very large one, and a disposition is apparent to let the provinces deal with it, as they are already dealing with such marked effect.

May Conflict.

It is also pointed out that so far as Ontario is concerned, the move for a Dominion prohibition measure may conflict with that of the Committee of One Hundred aiming at provincial prohibition. If there is to be a Dominion Act, a provincial one would be unnecessary.

Foster's Opinion.

On the other hand, Sir George Foster, whose temperance proclivities are well known, has written a letter to the local committee stating that there is no doubt of the great saving that would be effected were liquor done away with, that the saving would go far to finance the war if it could be collected and devoted to that object, that even were the amount saved to the people themselves, it would contribute very largely to both the ability and desire to support war funds, and that whenever it is made absolutely manifest that the people of Canada desire this action, public men will be found ready to coincide with their wishes.

If the Government were induced to introduce such a bill, it doubtless would pass easily.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

Sandy—"Man, I was at the varieties last night and heard a chap sing a gran' song." Jock—"Was it patriotic?" Sandy—"Weel, to tell you the truth, I didna hear a programme to confirm, tell ye if the name was Pat Riotic or Pat it wis."

Soldiers Prayer.

We take the following paragraph from the Bible in the World for January:

Even rough men, who for many a long day have been strangers to prayer, are fervently repeating in the trenches the simple petitions they were taught when they were little children. A Lancashire lad, whose wife wrote to him, "Be sure and say your prayers," confessed in hospital that since getting her letter at the front he had prayed every night

"Now I lay me down to sleep
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
And if I die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

"My mother learnt it to me," he said; and in the trenches these words of his childish prayer came back to his mind, and he began to say them again. The roughest of the rough pray out there; sometimes you can hear them repeating "Gentle Jesus, meek and mild."

We know an insurance agent who always has a good list of prospects. When he closes one contract, he asks the insurer about any friends that might be interested, and often gets a note or a verbal message of recommendation to some of those friends.

Merchants could use similar methods to advantage, modified to suit their business. First give your customers perfect satisfaction; then get them to recommend you to their friends. If you sell a washer, wringer, stove, piano, a brand of paint, or baking powder, get your customer to write his experience and publish it in your advertisement.

PETROGRAD ENTERS ON A GAY WINTER WITH WAR CHARITY FIRST IN INTEREST

The Stampa of Turin, publishes an interesting letter from its correspondent in St. Petersburg in which the writer gives an enlightening picture of life in that city from which so little news has reached the world.

"Since October the thermometer has hovered around the freezing point," says the correspondent, "and now it is getting gradually colder. The city is full of life. The wealthy residents who pass the summer and autumn at their country estates have returned to the city, and dinners and entertainments are given every evening. The streets are crowded and nearly every one wears heavy furs, fur caps and boots lined with fur. After dark nearly every one entertains eats and drinks, and laughs behind the silver samovar in which tea is prepared. The butler passes softly from chair to chair and distributes sweets and grapes among the guests. After dinner bridge or poker is played. In French the hostess announces:

"'We have champagne to-day.'

"'How is that possible?' asks a guest.

"'In Russia everything is possible,' she replies, genially.

"In the houses of the well-to-do champagne and wines of rare vintage are always served. The time is at hand when St. Petersburg has only four hours of real sunshine daily, and yet this is the gayest time of the whole year. The night is long and Russians have their dinner early and feast and entertain until three o'clock in the morning.

"The theatres are all open and do a good business. More soldiers are seen in the streets and in the theatres than ever before.

"The only real sign of the war is the inscription 'For the Soldiers' in show windows and in placards along the street. Beautiful women in expensive furs are seen on street corners, and any man who looks as if he had some means is approached by them and asked to contribute for the care of the wounded. The women do this in such a fascinating manner that they cannot be refused.

"They are so like the French, these women! The other day thousands of recruits from the interior marched through the city to the garrison. They stared in wonder at the handsome buildings and the well dressed throngs in the streets. They were dirty and ill-kempt, but now they have been fitted with uniforms and fully equipped, and each looks a soldier every inch of him. They drill daily in the large open places. They go through the exercises in silence. It is remarkable characteristic of the Russian soldier, no matter of what rank, that in the performance of his duty he seldom utters a word. Only when wounded to the death will he utter a sound or call for help. The spectators who watch them drilling also look on in silence, but there is a feeling in every one's heart that Russia will win, and so the populace is care free and gay."

"Tea and Coffee Don't Hurt Me"

Can he get away with it?

The drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee, from 1½ to 3 grains to the average cup, hurts many tea or coffee drinkers, at some time of life, and often hurts them hard.

Caffeine is a powerful irritant that unsteadies the nerves, races the heart, disorganizes the digestive organs and plays havoc with the health of a large proportion of tea or coffee users.

Of course, there are some who go on drinking tea or coffee for years, without apparent harm, at least they don't suspect it, until the cumulative drug, caffeine, has got in its work. Isn't it the best plan to play safe with health—quit both tea and coffee and use

CANADIANS LACK HUMOR?

English Clergyman Thought So and Gave Instances

LONDON, Jan. 18. — Archdeacon Madden of Liverpool, who died after a very short illness, was always fond of relating his Canadian experiences. Of the Canadians he made one complaint —they would not respond to the humorous side of his speeches. He invited them to encourage him with a little applause, or even groans, but they sat stolid. Even one night when the speeches were long, and the evening late, and the chairman gave out as the closing hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking,' no one smiled.

One day he was strap-hanging in a Liverpool tram when he heard close by certain mutterings, and perceived a strong smell of Scotch. Then up rose a big workingman. Steadying himself for one minute, he glared round on the passengers, saying "Am I the only religious layman in this car? Here, Archdeacon, take my seat."

SHE GAINED 35 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont. writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 35 pounds in Patient (to pretty nurse): "Will you be my wife when I recover?" Pretty Nurse: "Certainly." Patient: "Then you love me?" Pretty Nurse: "Oh, no! That's merely a part of my treatment. I must keep my patients cheerful. I promised this morning to run away with a married man who had lost both legs."

FEARLESS BUT DREAD GAS

Ghurkas Push Aside German Bayonets With Bare Hands.

Describing the fighting qualities of the Ghurkas, H. C. Haskin, a Detroit soldier who has been invalided from the Front, says:

The Ghurkas are absolutely fearless in a charge, but they aren't put in trenches any more. In a charge they throw away their guns, and advance with nothing but their long, deadly knives. They reach out their bare black left hands and push the German bayonets away while with their right they stab and stab and stab with the brutal knives until man and bayonet fall together. Their arms are full of healed welts caused by pushing bayonets aside with their naked arms. They have no fear of the bayonet or the bullet, but they go crazy when they meet the gas. They cannot understand the gas. They think devilish spirits are after them.

On one occasion word was received that a German ammunition train was six miles back of the German lines. Recruits were called for, to make an attempt to blow it up. It was a forlorn hope, and we never expected to see them again. But they did not fail. The Ghurkas are as stealthy in their movements as our American Indians, and they crossed three lines of German trenches that had been dammed up between the sections, each man swimming under the water with his knife in his teeth. They blew up the ammunition train, and they came back—all six of them.

Telling the Tale.

The old soldier was telling his thrilling adventures on the field of battle to a party of young fellows, one or two of whom were very sceptical as to his veracity. "Then," he said, "the surgeons took me up and laid me carefully in the ammunition waggon and—" "Look here," interrupted one of the doubtful listeners, "you don't mean the ammunition waggon. You mean the ambulance waggon." But the old man shook his head. "No," he insisted; "I was so full of bullets that they decided I ought to go in the ammunition waggon."

School Teacher: "Why is a certain part of the church called an altar?" Willie: "Because it is where people change their names."

There is nothing that can hold a place with Gin Pills for Pain in the Back, to which women are subject."

The Board of Directors was re-elected—Messrs. W. H. Moore, B. Shortley, T. H. G. Denne, T. A. S. Hay, Dr. Bethune, T. P. Lundy, H. D. Hall, W. G. Morrow and A. Stevenson. At a subsequent meeting of this Board Mr. Moore was reappointed president and the following committee of management elected—Messrs. Shortley, Hay, Denne, Morrow, and Moore. Mr. Peck is secretary.

Messrs. Jas. A. Hall and T. O. Quartermaine were re-elected auditors.

The reports presented showed that during the year the cemetery underwent considerable improvement but there were no large undertakings.

The Directors' Report.

Mr. Moore read the following report of the directors for the past year.

Your directors desire to report that during the past year no very expensive work was undertaken, but only careful superintendence exercised towards a continuation if possible of improvement in the ground. Several driveways have been laid with cinders, and much improvement in this way done. The breakwater along the river has been strengthened and very much protected from the wash of the river. Considerable improvement has been made at the South entrance of the Cemetery, in the driveways and the grounds generally, which has made this part of the Cemetery much more attractive. Your directors consider that a new serpentine driveway might be made near the high ground at the South East corner, which would be convenience, and give pleasing effect.

The City Debentures held by the Company as a future maintenance fund, amount to $15,617.31. The cash in the bank at the end of the year was $206.97, to which sum will be added about $2,000 from the year's outstanding accounts.

It has been gratifying to the Directors to hear frequent favorable comments on the improvement and beauty of the cemetery from the County and City, and to know that their efforts have generally been so referred to.

The Superintendent and Treasurer and auditor's report will be laid before you.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. MOORE,
President.

Superintendent's Report

Mr. Wise, superintendent, read the following report of the year's work:

Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit an outline of new work undertaken in your cemetery during the past season.

A new fence having been erected on Haggart Street it did not look complete until something was done with the watertable and boulevard on the outside, so the former was cleaned out and the earth used for filling the holes in the boulevard, and now instead of having to be cut with the scythe as formerly, the lawnmovers, four or five time during the season, are able to keep it in a very presentable condition.

Enough stone has been placed along the river bank on the south east side of the Cemetery to complete the break-water formerly commenced, and will be placed in position as soon as the water is sufficiently low.

Several new roads in the south side have been graded and coated with cinders, and most of the old roads have received a coat where necessary.

The improvements at the south entrance have been completed excepting the planting of flowers and shrubs, which I expect to complete in the spring. This part of the work has proved very gratifying to the lot owners in its vicinity.

The open drain running through the flats to the south received attention, the banks being sloped to prevent their sliding in. This was an improvement, but has not been found satisfactory, and I would recommend that a large tile or concrete drain be constructed and the open drain filled in. Owing to raising the new road over this drain it was found necessary to construct a more permanent bridge and concrete was used.

The heavy rainfall during the past season necessitated the continued use of the lawnmowers, and also the raising and sodding of a great number of graves, of which there are still a number left to be attended to in the spring.

MR. JAMES MENZIES HAS DISAPPEARED

Missing Man is a Cousin of Mr. Donald Menzies of Peterboro

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—Any person who can give any information leading to the discovery of the whereabouts of Mr. James Menzies, of 368 Wellesley Street, should communicate with Mr. Brant Hill, Hillcrest 2633. Mr. Menzies disappeared on Saturday morning. He left for his work at the Methodist Book Room, where he was employed as a printer, as usual on Saturday, but nothing has since been heard of him. His wife is very ill and it is known that he was much depressed on this account. He is a man of 5 feet 6 inches, weighing 115 pounds and slimly built, of dark complexion, with a black moustache. He was wearing when he left home a brown suit, black overcoat, black and white turned-down collar.

Mr. James Menzies referred to above is a cousin of Mr. Donald Menzies, 280 King Stret, Peterborough.

No Reason Whatever—One man said to another—"But, on your income, are you justified in marrying?" "Not at all," the other admitted. "The girl has no money, I understand?" "Not a bob." "And they tell me she's got rather extravagant ideas?" "That's the truth." "Then, my dear fellow, what reason have you for taking this very serious step?" "Reason? No reason whatever. I'm in love."

CONVICTS WIN IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan 18.—Information reached the District Attorney's office in Kings that through William Willett, convicted of purchasing a Supreme Court nomination in 1911, certain convicts at Sing Sing have conducted extensive stock speculations, and in some instances have made large winnings. The broker who acted for this ring of convict-financiers, is known.

Just now Willett was able to communicate quickly with the broker on turns of the market has not been revealed, but District Attorney Cropsey hopes to clear up the entire procedure. The men said to have profited with Willett include two former lawyers, a taxicab bandit, and another convict.

CHAMPION

One-Legged Dancer and Singer Today at Royal Theatre

Every show yesterday at the Royal Theatre was crowded with large and delighted audiences who thoroughly enjoyed the magnificient performance of Reese Brothers' Africander Company of fifteen talented artists. The word "artist" is used advisedly as every man and woman who participated in the laughable musical comedy is a star in his or her line and the jokes were new. The chief lady dancer was as light on her feet as a butterfly. The band and orchestra were composed of all star performers. This excellent company appears again tonight. Wealthy Chicago Men Plotted To Murder Parents

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Irving and Herbert Updike, 23 and 19 years respectively, taken into custody on Sunday night after the police had obtained evidence of an alleged plot to murder their father, Furman Updike, millionaire commission man, and their mother, are still held in jail at Oakpark, a suburb.

Chief of Police Lee, of Oakpark, said Herbert, the younger son, is being held merely as a corroborative witness but he refused to tell what charge, if any, had been lodged against Irving, the elder son. According to a statement by the police a stenographic conversation between the two young men in the Updike garage, gave details of an alleged plot to kill Mr. and Mrs. Updike, because the police say, the son feared his father would change his will, and leave the greater portion of his estate to other members of the family.

Herbert, according to the police, entered into the alleged plot with the intention of frustrating it. It was Herbert who reported the matter to the police.

"Irving told me first he was going to kill father and mother more than a year ago," the younger son told the police. "We used to go down in the basement nights and talk about it."

When arrested, according to the police, Irving first tried to implicate his brother, and then make a complete confession.

HOW PNEUMONIA STARTS AND HOW OFTEN PREVENTED

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere; large size, containing two months' treatment, costs $1.00, small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.

The Grand Opera House And Fixed Assessment

The Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Permit me a little space to refer to a matter in which the course of the City Council has somewhat surprised me. I refer to the action of dealing with the fixed assessment of the Opera House.

The City Fathers seem to go upon the assumption that their first duty is to pile on taxation, and in no moderate measure, either. If it had seemed the duty of the Council to raise the rate of fixed assessment, it need not, it seems to me, to have been done by leaps and bounds. Ten years ago, the Council, in a proper spirit—to encourage the provision of a worthy opera house for Peterborough—gave Mr. Bradburn a fixed assessment of $3,000. It was well known that the new Opera House was not as complete as might have been. It passed into the possession of J. J. Turner & Sons, and at once it was remodelled, improved, inside and out, and made one of the handsomest an best theatre buildings in Canada outside the larger cities. And the process of improvement has been continuous. The building in all respects — construction, equipment and decoration, cleanliness and neatness, has been kept up to date, and Peterborough now has an Opera House of which it can justly be proud, and would be a credit to any city in Ontario.

All this has cost money and is due to the enterprise and public spirit of the firm which not only in this respect, but in others, have shown that they are good, industrious, hard-working and public-spirited citizens always to the fore when the credit, interests and welfare of the city are to be promoted.

Any business man knows that such an Opera House in a city the size of Peterborough, and especially in re cent times, is not an ideal investment. It is not a money-maker; but its maintenance in a first-class condition—kept that way all the time—is matter of pride and public spirit to Turner & Sons. Not only their credit and their name for enterprise would be lowered if the Opera House were to be abandoned, but the good name of the city would be discredited.

It seems to me considerations like these should have some influence upon the Aldermen and modify their demand for the pound of flesh. They seem to have begun the year with the idea that their first and main work is to boost the taxes and penalize public spirit and enterprise.

If the building of the Opera House ten years ago justified the encouragement of a fixed assessment of $3,000, the additions and vast improvements that have since been made justify the keeping of the assessment at a similar encouraging figure. The nearly six-fold advance proposed seems like putting a penalty upon enterprise and public improvement—things that should lessen taxation, instead of increasing it.

Do the Aldermen not think that the city needs a place of amusement, and such a splendidly creditable one as we have in the Opera House? Are our citizens supposed to be as much machines as the machines they operate, and is need its amusement such as a first-rate and well-conducted opera house provides?

Do our aldermen not think it is worth something to have such an Opera House, one of which we can be proud, proud to show visitors when we are showing them the public buildings — churches, schools, factories, etc. of the city? We shan't have it if we tax it out of existence.

Do our aldermen not think that the amusements and the pleasures of the people are something to strive for and pay for? Our parks cost us nothing and surely we can afford to pay something for the pleasures and amusements of the people—by remission of taxation? On principle it is just as logical to tax our parks—the most valuable lands in the city—as to tax such a place of amusement as an Opera House, to the hilt?

In some countries the pleasures and amusements of the citizens are a matter of public policy. In France theatres and Opera Houses are, if not maintained, largely subsidized from the public treasury. It is considered as much a part of public duty to provide such amusements as it is to provide parks and music in parks.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. Men and women who work, and that means nearly all of us, want some pleasure and recreation to their fancy, just as much as people of leisure who can pick and choose their forms of pleasure. We who work from bell to bell, need some recreation and we must have it.

If we can provide it in Peterborough so much the better, and he who provides it is a public benefactor.

A few years ago Martin & Orme started manufacturing pianos in this city. They failed to make it go. Mr. Martin told the writer that the skilled workmen they had to get from the large cities would not stay where there were no theatrical amusements —no chance to take the pleasures they preferred. So the firm left the city.

This may be an extreme case, but it proves that the people demand amusements of varied kinds. People value residence in a city by the advantages for work and pleasure it affords. We can't all knuckle down to do nothing but work and pay taxes.

We must ask our City Fathers to take large views, to help give citizens well rounded lives—a chance to work and make money, and a chance to enjoy themselves.

I have no more personal interest in Turner & Sons than in any other group of public-spirited, hard-working, city-building citizens. But I feel that in the case in question, they should receive special consideration. They have for years spent money, built up a big business, paid thousands year by year in wages, and whether as manufacturers or Opera House operators reflect credit upon the city.

We lavish exemption and fixed assessment favours on new-comers who may not stay long or bring as much credit.

Yours truly,
Long-Time Ratepayer.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE IN CAUCASUS

Russians Are Employing Very Strong Armies—Heavy Attacks on the Arasa River

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—The Turkish official statement received here says: "In the Caucasus, the Russians repeated their attacks against Turkish positions on both banks of the Arasa, suffering heavy losses, especially in the district between the Arase and the Inid Valley. Here Turkish advanced posts retired some kilometers after having delayed strong enemy forces for one week.

Regarding operations in Mesopotamia the statement says: "There has been intermittent artillery fire near Kut-El-Amara."

The Constantinople statement of yesterday said: "The enemy on the Caucasus front repeated his fierce attacks in the sector to the south of the Arasa river as far as the Karadach mountains. All attacks were successfully repulsed, the Russians suffering terrible losses."

Extraordinary Vaudeville Performance

Supporting Harry Lauder, the Greatest Comedian of All Times at the Grand Next Monday

Harry Lauder, the greatest comedian of all times, and probably the only man in the world who can hold an audience unaided for nearly an hour and a half will include this city in his eighth annual tour of America under the direction of William Morris, and will be seen at "The Grand" next Monday, Jan. 24.

Mr. Lauder brings with him besides the old favorites a budget of new songs and will be supported by one of the largest vaudeville companies which have ever been brought together for a single engagement. These include the Al Golem Troupe, a company of 16 daring comedians, dancers and acrobats in glimpses of the Far East and its customs; Mlle. Lucille and her marvelous talking bird; Selwyn Driver, the piano humorist in a novelty offering; Dave Genaro and Isabelle Jason in a series of dancing specialties, and Albert Donnelly, the silent humorist in shadowgraphic act. The seat sale opens at the box office on Friday next, Jan. 21, when the remaining seats, of which there are only $3.00 ones left, will be offered for sale.

IS GLAD THAT HE HEARD CALL

Peterboro Boy Who Left With First Contingent Has Never Repented That He Joined

In acknowledging a Christmas parcel sent to him by a Peterborough lady, one of the Peterborough boys who left with the 57th quota in the first contingent, writes as follows:

Somewhere in Belgium,
Dec. 27, 1915.

My Dear Friend: I received your parcel last night and certainly am grateful to you for your kindness. It certainly is good to know that your old friends still remember you. I guess you often wonder what I am like now; well, I am not the same reckless kid that used to think of nothing else but sport. I certainly think that this war has made a man of me, and I have never repented for a minute joining the first contingent. It is very seldom that I see any of the Peterborough boys as I am the only one in the M.G., and there are so few in the company.

When I was on pass in England I went up to Shornclife and saw Alex. Butcher, Percy Neil and a few others. It certainly did me good to see some of the old boys once more. Well, I guess I had a happier Christmas than poor old Reber Edgery had. I certainly do feel sorry for him. Thanking you again for your kindness and wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year.

Allies Land At Phaleron Five Miles From Athens

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—Berlin newspapers, according to the Overseas News Agency, express the belief that the landing of allied troops at Phaleron, five miles south-west of Athens, is considered as supplying proof that the Entente powers intend using extreme means to force the hand of Greece. The news agency's statement says:

"Berlin newspapers, commenting on the latest news regarding Greece, unite in stating that the Entente seems to have abandoned all regard for Greek neutrality and sovereignty. The landing at Phaleron is considered as proof that the Entente is now going to use extreme means for forcing Greece.

"According to private reports the Greek Government has transferred part of the state archives to Larissa, in north-western Greece, where eventually the Greek Government likewise will be transferred.

"The fact that the British are blockading the Greek coast more tightly and are subjecting Greece to other inconveniences is integpreted by the papers as meaning that the Entente is fomenting and preparing the overthrow of the Greek Government in order to substitute a republic with Venizelos at its head.

"The Zeitung Am Mit Tag declares that the Entente intends the assassination of a country which refuses to commit suicide."

GERMAN DOCTOR INTERNED, WORKED UNDER POLICE

Serum Produced Under Difficulty —Sent Phial With Coded Letter to Germany, Which Was Seized

LONDON, Jan. 18.—According to the Daily Mail, the recent death of a well known English diplomat revealed some remarkable facts about Dr. Mohnarto, whose tuberculosis experiments were featured in The Mail and Empire about three years ago. Dr. Mohnarto at the outbreak of the war was interned in Alexandria Palace, an ausement building in the North of London, converted into an internment camp. His house in Marley street and his laboratory at Notting Hill were closed.

When the diplomat was suffering from a disease a few months ago for which Dr. Mohnarto's serum was considered a possible cure, it was agreed to allow him to return to his laboratory, as he alone could manufacture the serum. Dr. Mohnarto left the palace daily under escort. One initial difficulty had to be overcome. A number of vipers which he had kept for his experiments were now dead. He was given facilities for obtaining what was required from the Zoological Gardens, and thus was supplied. He worked months in the laboratory producing the serum under the eye of Scotland Yard officers, and also continued experiments perfecting a serum to take the place of salvarsin. He claims satisfactory results at this while working as a prisoner.

As he was thus engaged word was sent him from Germany that his mother was stricken with tuberculosis, contracted, it was feared, through a visit to his laboratory in London before the war. A request that a phial of her son's serum be sent her was allowed by the British authorities. A messenger was sent to Germany with it, and also with a coded letter to Mohnarto's sister containing the secret serum's composition.

The messenger was seized entering Germany, the letter and phial confiscated and the sister arrested. So far as is known she is still a prisoner.

Meanwhile the illness of the diplomat did not yield to treatment, and eventually the permit to leave the palace was revoked. The scientist is now there with other Germans who hold high places in science, art and medicine. At the time of his interment, it has been disclosed, Dr. Mohnarto was negotiating with the physician of a crowned head for a supply of the serum.

INTER-COLLEGIATE PROHIBITION ASSOCIATION

Trains Students For Intelligent Leadership in Anti-Liquor Movement

The Intercollegiate Prohibition Association is an important American Association now reaching 270 colleges and universities in 31 states, and of these some seventy colleges provide courses on the liquor problem. The purpose of the association, says Mark R. Shaw, its eastern secretary, as quoted in "The Christian Science Monitor," Boston, Dec. 18, 1915, "is to train students for intelligent leadership in the anti-liquor movement, and it has taken as its slogan, 'Training for service.'" The organization promotes the study of the problem in all its phases, affecting the individual and society, and last year had 2,500 students in its classes. The world-wide progress of the anti-liquor movement is particularly interesting to Ontario people just now in view of the petitions regarding prohibition being circulated next week by the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred. This organization seeks an opportunity for a provincial vote on the question.

The Kitchener League Ships Socks To Soldiers

Yesterday in response to an appeal received from Lieut. Johnston, formerly of the 9th Mounted Rifles, but now with the 6th Mounted Rifles in France, for socks for the Peterborough boys in that unit, the Canadian Kitchener League forwarded three bales, containing 388 pairs of socks, knitted scarfs and helmets, assorted candies and gum, reading matter, and six dozen candles. The shipment was valued at $95.

That the need for socks—and more socks—is very urgent was further evidenced by a letter received from Gunner Clarke of the 4th Battery, acknowledging a box received from the League a short time ago. He was loud in his praise of the ladies doing this good work. He said that people could hardly realise what a positive luxury it was for the men to pull off wet and frozen socks, and pull on warm, fresh hand-knitted ones.

A letter was received from a member of the 39th Battalion, thanking the League for the box sent to them. He, too, emphasizes the fact that socks are the most needed and welcome article in the trenches.

Just now our boys are enduring all sorts of discomfort from frost and mud, and the Canadian Kitchener League want enough ladies to knit for them to forward a large bale, at least every three weeks.

Yarn for knitting may be had at 401 Gilmour St., 329 Charlotte Street, or from Miss Mowat, at the Peterborough Creamery.

Germany Will Not Get Supplies From Neutrals

LONDON, Jan. 18.— Accepting as authoritative cabled quotations from American newspapers to the effect that President Wilson is about to demand a modification of the British methods of restricting maritime trade, the Evening Standard asserts such a demand has "no chance of success." It continues:

"The patience of the British public is exhausted. The Ministers are going to be forced to stop the loopholes through which Germany is getting supplies from neutrals and (to our shame) from this country. So, if the American Government believes its demand (promoted by Berlin) for more loopholes is likely to be successful, Washington is making a big mistake."

The Daily Mail finds fresh material for its blockade campaign in America's latest export statistics, whereby it declares the British nation and the allies will be stupefied, as the figures show that the ineptitude of the British Foreign Office has completely nullified naval effectiveness in the blockade.

"The Foreign Office," it says, "having shackled the navy and paralyzed its army, has allowed the enemy to purchase meat, flour, bacon, maize, cotton, automobiles, motor parts and American boots in stupendous quantities through neutral countries.

"Germany obtained from the United States in 1915 some 4,000,000 pairs of boots, enough to give every one of the Kaiser's soldiers on the western front two pairs, and the Foreign Office calls this a blockade. Enough of such tomfoolery. The nation cannot feel secure until the control of the blockade is taken from the Foreign Office and made over entirely to seamen who alone have the requisite knowledge and experience to conduct it.

"A department which allowed itself to be dismally tricked by Bulgaria must not be permitted to meddle further in the siege of Germany. Instead of their extraordinary solicitude for neutrals, let them show a regard for the safety of our soldiers and their allies.

"The feebleness of the Foreign Office has rendered even the great strength of our navy unavailing. The history of our blockade is one long record of cruel deception; the famous orders-in-Council are a dead letter. The whole episode illustrates our Gallam manner of making war. One department impedes and hampers the operations of another department; no Minister attends to his own business, and at the apex of the system is a committee of lawyers and politicians—not of soldiers and seamen—to dictate the grand operations of war. These are the methods of defeat and not of victory."

THE DE LAVAL CALENDAR FOR 1916

As usual the De Laval Separator Company's calendar for 1916 is not one of those that look-alike other calendars. Everyone has a calendar but you can be excused for feeling as if you were a little better off if you have one of the De Laval's inspiring five feet work of art to hang up in your office. It's a big calendar, just like the big firm it represents, and it can't hide its identity in a carload of other date-fixers.

The pictoral feature of the calendar portrays in pleasing colours a scene in many a Canadian farmer's home, where the busy farmer's wife is depicted standing over a new De Laval Separator, pouring out the foaming lusciferous pailful, fresh from the newly milked cows. And, as the happy face smiles over the labour-saving process, which is to save her hours of hard work, her little daughter, as if catching her mother's thoughts, reaches up and exclaims: "I want to be a De Laval girl, too!" The object lesson is a complete and effective one.

Three Years in Pen For Ex-Bank Watchman

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—Thomas Davidson, formerly employed as watchman at the Merchants' Bank, and who was arrested at Terrebonne for assailing a constable, and charged later with stealing a revolver from the bank, the revolver being in his possession when arrested for the assault, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Judge Lect.

Davidson, when arrested on St. James street, was acting as janitor of the building from which much stolen good were recovered. The Merchants Bank had been robbed of $4,000 worth of furs, clothing and jewellery, and they were discovered by Detectives McCann and Markey, in the janitor's room. Most of the goods have been identified, although Davidson denied the theft of the collected booty. He pleaded guilty to stealing $1,000 worth and was sentenced on his plea, the Crown not pressing the other charges

Electrics Win One Goal Victory Over the Soldier Intermediates

Hard-fought Battle at Brock Street Rink Last Night, Gives Electrics the Leadership of the Group —Soldiers Were Ahead for Two-thirds of the Game.

LOST IN LAST PERIOD

In the hardest-fought and most exciting game of the season the Electric Intermediates defeated the 93rd Battalion by 4 goals to 3, in an Intermediate O.H.A. game at Brock Street Rink, last night, thereby taking the lead in the group race with three wins and no losses to their credit. To turn the trick last night the Electrics had to come from behind, for when they entered on the last period they were facing a 2 to nil deficit. Cutting loose from the face-off in the final session, the red, white and blue sweaters team notched four goals in a row and staved off the soldiers for the balance of the game, although the men in khaki threw six men up on the attack, scored one goal, and made things interesting at the finish.

It was the most closely contested game seen here this year and the rooting was something to remember. The officers and men of the 93rd were out in force and both brass and bugle bands added to the hilarity of the occasion. The 93rd team gave their supporters something to cheer for, too, as they never stopped trying and the final whistle found them fighting desperately to snatch back the lead they had held for two-thirds of the game.

In spite of the game fight of the men in khaki, the winners earned the decision when the night's play is balanced up. Although they failed to score in the first two periods, while two brilliant plays by Recruiting Sergeant Montgomery gave the soldiers a counter in each of the sessions, the Electrics had four shots to one, good work by Widdifield and erratic shooting averting goals on many occasions when a score seemed certain. Half a dozen times, with only Widdifield to beat, the ultimate winners missed the net by inches, hit the post, or, if they shot straight, saw the soldier goaler pick off the shot. On the other hand, although they set up a two-goal lead in the first forty minutes, the 93rd had not nearly the scoring opportunities that the Electrics had.

The checking was close and hard, and half a dozen players took the count during the night. Referee Jerry Lafiamme had the game well in hand, however, and any un-orthodox methods resulted in penalties, while nothing in the line of off-sides got away from him.

The Electrics used three of their Junior players, and the youngsters gave a good account of themselves. Montgomery, the junior goal-keeper, had comparatively little work to do in the early stages, but made several fine stops in the last few minutes when the soldiers were pressing. On the defence Pete Spratt and Billy Hamilton checked and rushed well, and the latter was responsible for the Electrics' first two goals. Spratt contributed some of his old-time rushes on the forward line. Lornie Rose, the Junior Captain, especially distinguished himself by his stick-handling and skating. He was always working, and his dashes down the side were dangerous. Evans was effective all through at centre, and his rush for the Electrics' last goal was the prettiest piece of stick-handling of the night. Graham, the Junior rover, although he naturally had a rough passage, owing to his lack of weight, was always in the game as was McMartin, who had a great battle along the boards with Ketchum.

For the 93rd, Montgomery was the bright, shining star. He showed more speed than in any previous game and was going like a dynamo, while he scored all three goals for the soldiers and what is more, got all three without any assistance. Next to the rover Widdifield was probably the most useful, his work in the first two periods keeping the soldiers out in front. Matthews and Dupuy, on the defence, proved a strong checking pair, and the latter packed a shot that was generally on the net. Blewett was a steady, hard-working forward, and Ketchum showed some fine rushing at times, although he did not appear to be in the best of shape. Wedlock worked hard at centre.

The teams lined up as follows:

93rd		Electrics
	Goal
Widdifield		C. Montgomery
	Defence
Matthews		Spratt
Dupuy		W. Hamilton
	Rover
R. Montgomery		Graham
	Centre
Wedlock		Evans
	Right Wing
Blewett		McMartin
	Left Wing
Ketchum		Rose

The pace was hot from the start with both teams working hard and the checking very close. The Electrics were sniping at the 93rd nets from well out, but failed to get any results. The soldiers also tried a couple of long-distance efforts with the same conclusion. Graham was tripped and hurt his ankle, and there was a delay until he was patched up. Finally Montgomery put the soldiers in the lead with a sparkling play, getting the puck at centre he bounced it off the boards, swooped between two Electrics, nailed the rubber and slammed a beautiful goal past his brother in the Electric nets. The Electrics tried hard to even up, but they were a goal behind at the end of the period.

The second period found the Electrics knocking desperately, but they could not find the nets. With five and sometimes six men up, they forced the play, but there was nothing doing in the scoring line. Rose hit both posts from close in, and Evans missed a rebound by inches, while Widdifield saved cleverly on other occasions. Wedlock and Ketchum collided in trying to sandwich Evans, and both were temporarily knocked out of commission. Soon after Pete Spratt had to stop for repairs from a jolt in the ribs after he had taken a shot at the nets. After many close calls around the 93rd nets, Montgomery broke away and catching the Electric defence away from home outskated the whole pack, and tore in on top of his brother for Goal No. 2, putting the soldiers two in the lead, and they held that advantage until the end of the period.

It was do or die with the Electrics in the last session. With two goals to make up it looked like a hard task. However, hardly had the last period commenced when Rose, Graham and McMartin broke through with a pretty piece of combination. Widdifield nailed the shot, but the puck drifted out to Hamilton, who slammed it into the nets for the first goal.

The Electrics continued to press, and Hamilton tied it up with a long shot from centre. Then Rose grabbed a pass from Graham and the Electrics were ahead for the first time. A few minutes later Evans, securing the rubber at centre, dodged through the soldier defence and beat Widdifield from the goal mouth. That left it 4 to 2, but the soldiers were not through. The Bugle Band showed the old fighting spirit by a lively march and, with Matthews and Dupuy up on the forward line, the khaki brigade tried desperately to pull the game out of the fire. Knowing the time was nearly up the Electrics commenced shooting the rubber down the ice instead of rushing it, and Montgomery nailing one of those shots, heaved a hot one into the Electric nets, the puck glancing in off one of the Electrics' sticks. Only a goal behind, the Soldiers stormed around the Electric citadel, and Montgomery had several busy moments. The Electrics, however, managed to hold their slender lead and skating off the ice group leaders.

The summary:

1st period—
1—93rd, Montgomery.

2nd period.
2—93rd, Montgomery.

3rd Period—
3—Electrics, Hamilton.
4—Electrics, Hamilton.
5—Electrics, Rose.
6—Electrics, Evans.
7—93rd, Montgomery.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS CAUSE HER ARREST BY LONDON POLICE

Pretty Girl-Wife Pleads Guilty to Charge of Possession

HUSBAND SERVING TIME

SENT DOWN ON SIMILAR CHARGE — ALLEGED TO HAVE CIRCULATED MEXICAN MONEY.

LONDON, January 18.—London has always been a bad city for anyone who has anything to do with passing spurious coin and Mrs. Alma Gualtieri realized this fact late Saturday afternoon when she was arrested by Detectives Egelton and Down as she left the office of the Dominion Express Company on Richmond street with a package of counterfeit Mexican bills totalling $200 under her arm. She appeared in the police court and pleaded guilty to having counterfeit money in her possession.

"Did you have the money in your possession?" asked Magistrate Judd.

"Well, I went and signed for it," replied Mrs. Gualtieri, who gave her name to the police as Alma Vigna.

"That looks like a plea of guilty, Mr. McKillop," said Mr. Judd to the crown attorney.

BAILED FOR A WEEK.

Mr. McKillop asked that the case be adjourned for a week until he communicated with the authorities at Ottawa. This was done the prisoner being bailed in the sum of $400 to appear in the court next Monday morning.

Mrs. Gualtieri's husband, Petro, was sentenced two months ago in Ottawa to a prison term for having been caught with counterfeit money in his possession. His partner, Joseph Segaro, was also sent down for a term.

WORKED CHINESE LAUNDRY.

At the time of their arrest in Ottawa photos of the two men were sent to London, and as the result of investigations made by the Sergeant of Detectives Thos. Nickle, it was learned that the pair were the men that had passed counterfeit money off on a number of Chinamen in London last summer. While here they worked on the Dundas street sewer.

Mrs. Gaultieri, a pretty, well dressed girl, appeared in the court with her infant baby in her arm. She is but 20 years of age and told the police that she had been married to Gaultieri for two years. The package of money had been sent to Quebec from Texas, and it is alleged that Mrs. Gaultieri wrote the express company there to have the package forwarded to London to Frank Vigna, 1067 York street. This was where the police stepped in as it is said that Detectives Nickle and Egelton can sniff counterfeit money around the corner. At any rate, it was sniffed on Saturday, and will probably go to make up Chief Williams' collection of spurious coin.

CLEAN MILK ON THE FARM

Clean milk on every dairy farm is a possibility that may be easily reached. The farmer holds the key to the situation. It is absolutely within the power of his being to improve the quality of the product of his cows to that point where it may be beyond criticism, so far as its quality and cleanliness are concerned, says the Wisconsin Agriculturist.

It is safe to say that on the general run of dairy farms the pollution of milk comes mainly from two sources: First, dirty udders and flanks; second, dirty hands and clothes. Neither unconscious indifference which has come to exist among milk producers rather than to the spirit of wilful disregard to sanitation. It is a matter of regret with every thinking, painstaking farmer that they do exist, and when once the general run of the others is aroused to the importance of the situation, and the blight of it, they will undoubtedly join the campaign against it. Their personal pride will urge them into it.

To keep cows' udders and flanks and one's hands and clothes clean is not a difficult task, even though on the farm there is much work to be done which soon soils the latter. Properly constructed, though not necessarily expensive, stall floors and plenty of bedding go far in keeping the cows' flanks and udders clean, and a little regular grooming, in addition to wiping those parts with a damp cloth just before milking, will keep them in perfect condition for the production of clean milk so far as they are concerned. It really does not take much time.

On the other hand, a little soap and water used on the hands, just before going to milk, and stripping over a special suit, made of cheap, but durable goods, which is used only for the milking, and frequently washed, will take care of the milker's personal cleanliness. The very fact that he does this much will make him more thoughtful, hence more cleanly in other respects in regard to milking. One should never come in from the horse barn after feeding and cleaning the horses, or from doing other chores about the barns or barn yard, and sit down to do the milking without first washing the hands and getting into the special milking suit. Both the hands and the clothes are sure to be laden with dirt and dust.

Milk With Dry Hands.

Perhaps the filthiest and most careless practice of milkers is that of milking 'wet'; dipping the fingers into the milk in the pail or stripping milk into the palm of the hands to moisten the teats, presumably for the purpose of making the "stripping" easier.

Any one who has seen the dirty hands that result from this practice and the dirt laden drops that drip into the milk from them while milking, must have felt utterly disgusted with it. Yet it continues as a result of that unconscious indifference which we sometimes allow to come over us in performing our work.

The cleanly habit in milking demands that milking be done with the dry hand and dry teats. It is not difficult so to milk. An udder and teats wiped perfectly clean with a dampened cloth are more easily milked out with dry hands than an unclean udder and teats with wet hands, and gives the added satisfaction of a clean and wholesome product.

O'HERON—HARRINGTON.

The marriage of Miss Mary Florence Harrington, daughter of Mr. Cornelius Harrington of Emismore, and Sergt. Herbert O'Heron of the 93rd Battalion, machine gun section, was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral, at 8 o'clock this morning, Rev. Father Phelan officiating.

The bride was assisted by Miss Bertha O'Heron, sister of the groom, while Mr. Harrington, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

Presentations To Soldiers

An interesting ceremony took place at Centreville last night. At the meeting of the debating society, presentations of wrist watches were made to two newly enlisted soldiers, Private Jacob Isbister, who joins the 130th Northumberland battalion, and Private Leonard Dunstan, who joins the 93rd battalion.

Mr. W. T. Donaldson read the following address, and Mr. H. Hutchinson made the presentation:

Mr. Jacob Isbister.

Dear Friend and Neighbour,—You have taken the noble step of enlisting for active service in the cause of Canada and the Empire and human freedom.

We, your neighbours and friends, wish to take this opportunity of applauding your action, expressing the esteem and good wishes we feel towards you. It has been often said that Canada is sending the flower of her young manhood to the fighting ranks, and we feel that is true in your case.

You have spent your life amongst us and have been foremost in promoting the interess of all local enterprises. In the church, in society, in the musical community your services have always been at the public service, and we do not know of a member of this community that would be more greatly missed than you will be in the time to come. But you have chosen the better part yielded to the highest duty, and while we praise your patriotism, we desire to present you with a reminder of the high place you hold in the hearts of the whole neighbourhood, and ask you to accept this wrist watch, which we are sure will mark for you, hours of duty nobly and faithfully done.

We also wish to assure you that you also take with us our prayer and good wishes for safety in danger and a happy return to your old home and old friends.

Mr. W. T. Donaldson also read the following address, and Mr. Thomas Thompson made the presentation:

Mr. Leonard Dunstan—

You have not long been a member of this community, but for the comparatively short time you have been amongst us, you have shown qualities of faithfulness to duty and of good citizenship generally.

In joining the ranks of the 93rd Battalion, you have taken a noble and manly step, and we wish to praise you for the course you have taken, and wish you every success. We are sure you will do your duty in war, as well as you have done it in peace; and we ask you to take with you this gift of a wrist watch, with our prayers and wishes that you will be sheltered from the dangers in which your duty will call you, and have a safe and honoured return to the land and home of your adoption.

The brave and patriotic lads made suitable acknowledgments of the kindness of the donors, and also received the personal congratulations and good wishes of the large number present.

Boots: "A good deal depends on the formation of early habits." Coote: "I know it. When I was a baby my mother hired a woman to wheel me about, and I've been pushed for money ever since."

Mounted Scouts of the Russians in Daring Work

Headquarters of the Russian Army of the Centre, Jan. 1.—One of the most perilous branches of army service in Russia is that of mounted scouts, an organization peculiar to the Siberian corps. There are one hundred of these scouts to each regiment, and a hardier, more daring lot of rough riders would be hard to find. They are the most part plainsmen, whose life has been spent in the open and on horseback.

This organization played an important part in the Japanese war, where by their impetuous attacks they saved the Russian troops in many instances from heavy losses. After the Japanese war they were disbanded, but with the outbreak of the present conflict were reorganized by Capt. Benjamin Pessotsky, who became their commander. During the recent months, while the Russians and Germans have been facing each other in the trenches these scots frequently have raided the German lines, and during the last week in November on the eastern front they bagged a German staff, consisting of two generals, a doctor and six non-commissioned officers. A colonel and many soldiers were killed in the action.

Dashing Work.

The following incidents concerning the scouts' activities earlier in the war were given by an officer at the front who participated in events related.

At 3 o'clock on the afternoon of September 29 the last companies of the first division left their positions before Warsaw to take up other behind the defence of the city. The entire defence of the city was left to the Siberian scouts. Commander Pessotsky, who had remained with the scouts, took upon himself to order his men to spread out and occupy the left wing of the position between Yulanova and Ivitchni in front of a wood.

The Germans began to advance on Novo Ivitchni, sending a flying column in front. Pessotsky ordered his men to open fire. The German column, to their surprise, began to fall back, firing. Pessotsky got on top of a small house and through his glasses, observed the enemy, ordering changes in position to give the impression that the trenches were fully manned. The Germans began shelling the village and the house where he was. In fact of this, he sent an officer to the rear, saying that he was holding the position and asking that reinforcement be sent. The enemy began pressing forward in force, but Pessotsky's heroic action had given time for the whole Russian column to move forward again, and by a flanking to drive back the Germans. This was the beginning of the Geramn retreat that ended at their frontier.

It may also be said that during this war the Russian Red Cross has done more than ever could have been expected of it. The doctors, surgeons and sisters on the one hand and the volunteer organizations on the other have worked with marvelous efficiency.

Flying Columns.

One of the most interesting phases of the work is the operation of the flying columns, which move along with the army and work while engagements are in progress. In each flying column there is an officer in charge with all the rights of a military unit, although he may come from civil life. Besides him there are two or three aides. The medical side of the organization is represented by three surgeons, eight students and two sisters. One hundred and eigthy men to each column are assigned and trained to the work required of them, from the ranks of enlisted men. The column has also a large number of sanitary carriages, several field kitchens, field operating rooms and, in case of necessity, tents to live in.

During battle the column is divided into three sections. The commander, either mounted or a-foot, moves forward with the sanitars, as near as possible to the trenches. Sometimes they locate in the trenches themselves. Very often, when trenches or positions change hands, the flying column has to stay on until the last, to take away the wounded in spite of the danger of falling into the enemy's hands. Two columns have been entirely destroyed by the fire of the enemy, and several have been captured, to say nothing of individual losses among other columns. Not only have they to bring first aid to the trenches, but frequently they must transport the wounded in their sanitary carriage through the zone of artillery fire.

During the battle the colums also organize field feeding points and bring to the trenches not only first aid, but food for the wounded, who often must lie for hours before they can be moved.

Death in Toronto of Mr. Gouinlock

Summer Resident at Stoney Lake For Many Years Passes Away

Many of our citizens who summer at Stoney Lake will deplore the unexpected death of Mr. John Gouinlock at the residence of his son, Mr. Jas. C. Gouinlock, Ellis Avenue, Toronto, a few days ago.

Mr. Gouinlock, assisted by his sons conducted a large insurance brokerage in Toronto, and also acted as District Agent for the Sun Life Assurance Co. in the West Indies. Spending the winters in the South, he returned early each Spring to Stoney Lake, where he built a summer home some years ago.

While not identifying himself much with public matters at the Lake, he was always a genial host in his home and the annual celebration of his birthday in August each year, was an event which many cotagers looked forward to with pleasure.

Surviving him are two sons and one daughter, all living in Toronto, his wife having predeceased him two years.

Terrified Girl Was Rescued By Fireman

OVERCOME BY FRIGHT AND SMOKE, SHE WAS BROUGHT DOWN LADDER

TORONTO, January 18.—Though the fire which broke out at the corner of Queen and Terauley Streets was confined to the DeYoung store on the ground floor of the Manning Chambers Building, smoke ascended in great volume to the upper storeys, and Miss Carter, employed in one of the offices of the fourth floor was so overcome by the fumes and fright that she had to be brought down a ladder by one of the firemen and was sent to the hospital soon afterwards. A number of other persons, mostly women who were in the upper storeys had to be assisted down the stairs by the fire-fighters.

The fire was not a very big affair but occurring as it did at a very busy corner in the heart of the city and the immediate vicinity of the City Hall, it caused a brief commotion. Damage actually done by the flames was small but the DeYoung stock was considerably damaged by smoke and water. The total damage to the entire building and contents is estimated at $4,000.

"Did you divide your Christmas bonbons with your little brother, Doris?" "Yes, mamma. I ate the sweets and gave him the mottoes. You know he is awfully fond of reading."

REPORT THAT MONTENEGRO WANTS PEACE IS DENIED

Announcement Made in Vienna That Little Kingdom's Army is Unconditionally Surrendered---King Nicholas Issues Denial---Will Fight to the Last Man.

BERLIN, Jan. 19. (by wireless to Sayville, L.I. — The King and the government of Montenegro on January 13, asked a cessation of hostilities and opening of peace negotiations, it was officially announced by Austro-Hungarian headquarters.

The Austro-Hungarian government repiel to Montenegro that peace negotiations were only possible if the Montenegrin army unconditionally laid down its arms, the headquarters statement, as received here from Vienna, says. The Montenegrin government, adds the statement, yesterday accepted the Austrian conditions.

Count Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, announced in the Hungarian Parliament in the morning that Montenegro had asked for peace, the Overseas News Agency says. The Montenegrins offered unconditionally to lay down their arms and the offer had been accepted, the Premier declared. The agency's report follows:

"Montenegro asks for peace,' stated Count Tisza in the Hungarian Parliament.

"The proceedings under the first paragraph of the order of the day had just been completed when Count Tisza asked permission to interrupt the discussion. He stated that the King and government of Montenegro had asked the inauguration of peace negotiations.

"The announcement caused a great commotion in Parliament.

"'Montenegro was asked unconditionally to lay down her arms,' continued the Premier.

"Joyful shouts followed this statement.

"'Just at this moment,' continued the Prime Minister, 'the news has arrived that the unconditional laying down of arms has been accepted.

"'Since the preliminary condition has been fulfilled,' added the Premier, 'peace negotiations will be entered into immediately.".

Deny Peace Report.

A despatch from Rome said the Montenegrin authorities officially denied that Montengero had ever adhered to or intended to adhere to any separate proposal of peace or to any armistice with Austria. It was declared, added the despatch, that King Nicholas and his army and people would continue to fight till the last man.

The announcement in the Berlin news agency despatch that Montenegro has asked for peace, if accurate, marks the first known definite step taken by any of the belligerents in the European war toward the making of peace.

Montenegro entered the war on August 8, 1914, when the government of the country informed the Austrian Minister at Vienna that Montenegro considered herself in a state of war with Austria. For more than a year after war was declared Montenegro was comparatively free from hostile operations, and in fact the Montenegrins themselves pushed into Austrian territory and for months held positions outside their frontier. Austrian attacks were largely confined to the south-western frontier, occasional bombardments of Mount Loveen and Antivari being the chief demonstrations against the little kingdom.

The real drive against Montenegro began in October of last year, almost simultaneously with the beginning of the Teutonic and Bulgarian operations that resulted in the crushing of Serbia.

After this had been accomplished, the Montenegrins having meanwhile offered stout resistance and kept their foes from penetrating far into their territory, the Austrians, with what evidently was an overwhelming force, began their final determined effort, which rapidly beat down the Montenegrin defence on the east, while on the southwestern frontier a sudden and forceful thrust at Mount Loveen resulted in the fall of that Montenegrin stronghold and virtually gave the kingdom over to Austria, as King Nicholas' forces had little further means of resistance.

The evacuation of Cettinje, the Montengrin capital, was announced on January 14, and what was left of the Montenegrin army retreated toward Albania, which was hardly friendly territory, owing to the hostile attitude of the tribesmen there. It was said officially, however, that the Motenegrins would, of they continued to be forced back, concentrate their defence at Scutari.

After the fall of Mount Loveen the report became current that Montenegro had asked for an armistice for the discussion of peace, but the continuation of the Austrian operations, resulting in the occupation of Cettinje, showed that none had been arranged then, and later cable what were said to be the authoritative denials already mentioned that Montenegro had either asked for or contemplated asking for peace.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

NO MERCY.

A cadger was selling fish in a rather steep street. When his old horse stuck he strated whipping it very cruelly. A sympathetic old lady went up to him and said "Here, here, ma man, hae ye no mercy left?" "Na, ma, mistress," he says, "I hae naething but herrin'!"

WATCH SORE THROATS

because swollen glands or inflamed membranes often affect other tissues and lung trouble easily follows.

As Nature's corrector of throat troubles the pure cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is speedily converted into germ-resisting tissue; its tested glycerine is curative and healing, while this wholesome emulsion relieves the trouble and upbuilds the forces to resist tubercular germs and avert the weakening influence which usually follows.

If any member of your family has a tender throat, get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion to-day. Physicians prescribe it to avert throat troubles, overcome bronchial disorders and strengthen the lungs. No harmful drugs. Always insist on Scott's.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Ontario's Enlistment Leads Other Provinces of Canada

Furnished Half of All Canadian Enlistments During December—One Man in Seven Now in Khaki in This Province

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—Official figures up to the end of December show that Canadian enlistments for overseas service amounted to 207,568.

Yesterday in the House the Premier said that 8,000 had enlisted in the first two weeks of January, bringing the total now up to approximately 220,000.

By districts the enlistments have been furnished as follows:

Ontario	84,752
Quebec	24,357
Maritime Provinces	20,765
Manitoba and Saskatchewan	38,955
British Columbia	21,703
Alberta	20,136
Total	207,568

In December the number of recruits enlisted was 21,805, of which 11,933 were secured up to December 15 and 9,872 in the latter half. These were divided as follows:

Ontario	10,897
Quebec	1,475
Maritime Provinces	2,161
Manitoba and Saskatchewan	3,714
British Columbia	1,856
Total	21,805

A noteworthy feature of these figures is the fact that Ontario's percentage of enlistment is increasing, while that of the other Provinces is either stationary or decreasing. The decline is noticeable in the case of Quebec, British Columbia, and Alberta. Reduced to percentages, the parts furnished by each of the districts are as follows:

Enlistment By Percentages.

	Total up to Dec. 31	For Dec. alone.
Ontario	40	49
Quebec	11	6
Mar. Prov.	10	10
Man. and Sask.	18	17
British Columbia	10	8
Alberta	10	7

It might have been expected that Ontario at the outset set a pace which would not be maintained, and that some of the other Provinces, moving slowly at first, could scarcely have failed to surpass their first efforts. But this was not the case in December at least.

The fairest comparison to make as between Provinces is that furnished by the percentages of eligible men who have enlisted. Figures of eligible men are not available, but the census of 1911 shows the number of men between the ages of 18 and 45 in that year. Setting these figures beside the enlistments up to December 31 we get the following comparison.

Males between Elistments 18 and 45 up to Dec. 31.

Ontario	985,397	81,752
Quebec	390,827	24,357
Mar. Prov	178,497	20,765
Man. and Sask.	275,577	38,955
B. C.	163,978	21,703
Alberta	120,264	20,135
Totals	1,674,540	207,568

This figure shows that of every seven men in Ontario between the ages of 18 and 45 one is now in khaki. Reduced to percentages, the showing by Provinces follows.

Percentages of Men Between 18 and 45 (1911) Enlisted.

Ontario	14 per cent.
Quebec	6 per cent.
Maritime Provinces	11 per cent.
Manitoba and Sask.	13 per cent
British Columbia	13 per cent.
Alberta	16 per cent.

The grouping of Provinces followed in the foregoing figures is due to the arrangements of military districts by which military figures are available. Thus the Maritime Provinces are grouped into a single military division. So are Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Ontario has three divisions, headquarters of the first of London, the second at Toronto, and the third at Kingston. Of the 207,568 enlistments up to December 31, the Toronto divisions has furnished 44,442.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Chittick

In Smith—Two Pieces of Silver From the Young Men, and a Linen Shower From the Ladies

On Friday evening, Jan. 14th, a merry party of Lakefield young people drove out to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Chittick in Smith. During the evening the young men of the party presented them with an address and two beautiful pieces of silver.

The young ladies' gift was a miscellaneous shower of pretty and useful things. Mr. and Mrs. Chittick were taken by surprise and thanked their friends for their kindness. The party returned home at an early hour after spending an enjoyable evening.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled as given. Go to the Warne Drug Company, or to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless but old solution bathe the eyes three to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefit from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only the crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Talmo Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

Duke of Connaught at His Coldest Review.—On January 17th in Toronto, His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, officiated in what is said to have been his coldest review—and he has seen hundreds of reviews—when he stood at the saluting base for two solid hours, while eleven thousand troops for overseas service—cavalry, artillery and infantry, with auxiliary corps, passed him in review. It was a severe trial for the horses, very slippery under foot. The temperature hovered around zero and there was a biting west wind at forty or fifty miles an hour. There were many frost bites among the men. Picture shows the Duke with his famous little cane, congratulating Brigadier General Logie, who is in command in Toronto, on the fineness of his troops. Other figures on the platform are, Col. Stanton and Capt. MacIntosh, Duke's personal staff, Col. Septimus Denison, C.M.G.; Sir Henry Pellatt; Brig. Gen. Bacon and others.

No Forget.

The sermon was over and they were at home again. He was still perturbed by what had happened and proceeded to relieve his mind. "Nothing reminds me so much of Balaam and his ass as two women stopping in the church aisle and obstructing the way to indulge in their everlasting talk." "You forget, my dear," returned his wife sweetly, "that it was the angel who stopped the way, and Balaam and his ass complained of it."

GREEK TROOPS TO BE WITHDRAWN

From the Greece-Bulgar Frontier —Important Developments in the Balkans

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Allied War Council met here to-day with the air full of rumours of important developments in the Balkans.

ATHENS, Jan. 19—All Greek troops except one Battalion will be withdrawn from the Greece-Bulgar frontier, it was announced to-day, because of the difficulty of obtaining provisions for them. It was officially stated Britain has agreed to export enough coal to Greece, eliminating the possibility of a tie-up of Greek railroads. It is possible that a reason other than the difficulty of provisioning the Greek troops forced their withdrawal from the Greco-Bulgar frontier. Allied diplomats for several weeks have urged the Greek King to withdraw troops from both the Serbian and Bulgar frontiers.

$12,500 VERDICT FOR WINDOW LEAP

HOSPITAL ATTENDANT FAILED TO GUARD WALTER A. ROBINSON—WIDOW HAS FIVE CHILDREN.

MINEOLA, L.I., January 19.—A verdict of $12,500 was brought in by a jury in the Supreme Court here today with Justice Kelby presiding, in favor of Sara A. Robinson of Great Neck, against Charles B. Townes, and the Charles B. Townes Hospital, in Manhattan. The verdict was for the loss of her husband, Walter A. Robinson, who was sent to that hospital by his wife on March 11, 1915, to be treated for alcoholism and in a fit of delirium jumped from a bathroom window.

Elisabeth Sheridan, a nurse in the hospital, told how she heard that Robinson had gone to the bathroom alone and she at once told Dr. Howard Cooper to go after him as they never allowed delirious patients to go alone. When Dr. Cooper entered the room Robinson was half out the window. The doctor caught his bathrobe but was unable to save him, and he fell to the street, three stories, and was killed.

Henry Utehardt told how Robinson was sent to the hospital for safekeeping and said he had been allowed to escape.

Robinson was superintendent on the estate of W. Gould Brokaw, Nirvana, at Great Neck, at the time of his death and was in receipt of a salary of $1800 a year. Mrs. Robinson has five small children.

Lafe nodded, and his visitor's head was rested on Olympia.

"That's a nice looking mare you've got there, friend."

"I lay great store by her," Lafe replied dryly.

"About how much do you ask for her?"

Lafe surveyed the stranger's three-year-old trotter for one admiring second.

"I'll make an even swap," he answered, "and give yer $100 to boot."

"She ain't mine."

The stranger laughed, "as if he were being paid for it," Lafe said afterward.

"She ain't mine," he volunteered. "She belongs to the United States government."

"Sho!" said Lafe, resuming the chewing of a straw.

"And so do I," the stranger continued, flashing a gilt badge.

"Do tell!" was Lafe's comment.

"Topographical department."

"Ain't nothin' ter do with sellin' trees?" Lafe suggested.

"Nope."

"Nor books?"

"Nope."

"Nor lightnin' rods?"

"Nope."

"Then put up yer horse an' step round to the house."

"Fanning is my name—William K. Fanning."

Lafe was not impressed.

"Well, I s'pose canvassers must have names, same as other people," he said.

Mr. Fanning grew slightly purple.

"I ain't a canvasser, and I don't want to sell you anything. You understand? I'm here to talk business." He hurried along before Lafe could get in a word. "The United States topographical department is making a map of this country, and you may or may not know it, but right on the creek that runs through your pasture lot, next to the white oak tree,"—here Mr. Fanning consulted a paper—"and thence twenty-four degrees forty minutes east ten chains and thirteen links"—

"Excuse me, Mr. Fanning," Lafe interrupted. "I ain't no land surveyor!"

Mr. Fanning waved an airy gesture with his large white hand.

"That's all right," he went on; "there ain't no necessity for me to continue. The point is this—right next to that white oak tree is the center of population of New York, Vermont, Pennsylvania and Connecticut."

"Pretty lonesome there in winter, all the same," Lafe suggested. He shuffled his feet uneasily. "I'd be glad to visit with you some more, but I got a heap o' chores an' no help to speak of."

"That's all right," Mr. Fanning assured him again; "my time's worth money and so is yours. I won't mince words about it, but the United States government has decided to put up a monument in your pasture lot similar to the one I show you here."

Mr. Fanning produced some photographs of small cairns, or monuments, erected by the United States geodetic survey in the course of its work and made a running comment on each picture.

"Now, here's one of the monuments built on Mount Pisgah, the highest point in the northern tier counties," he said. "Handsome piece of work, don't you think?"

"Some might say so," Lafe replied, "but I don't know as I want any such contraption in my pasture lot."

Immediately Mr. Fanning dug down into his trousers pocket and produced a roll of bills, from which he peeled ten crisp five dollar notes.

"Uncle Sam ain't no niggard when it comes to paying for what he wants," he declared, "and here's $50 for the privilege of building a small stone monument in your pasture lot. Take 'em!" He thrust the bills into Lafe's hand and seized his hat. "Now, that's settled," he said and strode out of the house.

"See here," Lafe commenced, "I don't know as I ought to"—

"You mean," Mr. Fanning broke in without pausing in his progress toward the barn, "you don't feel like taking the money without giving a receipt. Well, that's all right; your word's good enough for me."

"Tain't that," Lafe corrected, "but"—

"Well, all right, if you insist," said Mr. Fanning, pausing. "Have it your own way."

He searched in his breast pocket and pulled out a sheet of paper. Then he handed a fountain pen to Lafe.

"Sign here," he said.

Folding the paper so that only the spot he indicated was visible, he held it against his horse's flank while Lafe appended a very shaky signature. Without waiting to blot it, Mr. Fanning took the document and started to leave.

The buggy had proceeded a couple of hundred yards when Lafe woke up. He immediately commenced running and shouting at his lungs' capacity, whereat Mr. Fanning gave his trotter a vicious cut with the whip and started off at a 2:40 gait.

In the meantime Jimmie mowed peacefully at the bend of the farm lane near the pasture lot. He had straightened up for a moment to take the kinks out of his back, when the clatter of the trotter's hoofs and Lafe's discordant roaring broke on his ear.

"A runaway!" he cried, and sprang into the middle of the lane.

There he yelled and brandished his scythe full in the path of the oncoming horse until it was almost on top of him. It was nip and tuck, but Jimmie stood it out, and at the last moment the trotter swerved and started up the bank. Then it was that Jimmie dropped his scythe and seized the plunging animal by the bridle just as Lafe arrived on the scene, flourishing the bills in his right hand.

"Here, you!" he gasped to Fanning. "Take 'em!" He threw the bills into the wagon. "I don't want 'em!"

Jimmie held on to the horse, gaping at the sight of the money.

"Did he give it to yer?" he asked, nodding toward Fanning, who stood up in the wagon and dropped the lines.

"What's biting you?" the topographer bellowed, purple with rage. "You leave go that horse's head or I'll whale the life out of you!"

He grabbed the whip, but Lafe jumped in beside him, pinning both his arms to his sides.

"Now, you behave!" Lafe growled. "This may be the center of population of all the universe. I dunno and I don't care. Pick up that money o' yours, an' be quick about it!"

Fanning stooped to recover the bills from the bottom of the wagon.

"Did he give yer dat money?" Jimmie repeated.

"He did," Lafe replied, "but I don't want it. Ain't got no use for it, an' I ain't got no use for no monuments, neither."

Jimmie only heard the first part of Lafe's answer.

"An' did yer sign any receipt for it?" he continued.

Lafe slapped his knee.

"By Gregory, I did sign one, an' I come near forgettin' all about it!" he cried.

"An' did yer read it before yer signed it?" Jimmie went on coldly.

"Now, you let go that horse!" Fanning shrieked, fairly frothing at the mouth. Seizing the lines, he slapped them violently on the trotter's back. The horse reared and bucked, but Jimmie clung tight to the bridle. There ensued a wild struggle in the wagon. Lafe clearly had the advantage of muscle if not of weight, and in another minute Fanning's 200 pounds landed in a heap on the dusty surface of the farm lane.

As the descent was made head first, the contents of his pockets fell in a shower about him, and prominent among the scattered papers was the document bearing Lafe Goodel's sprawling signature. Lafe pounced on it with an exclamation.

"Leggo the mare, Jimmie!" he cried. "We're all through!"

Jimmie released the bridle, and no sooner had he sprung to one side than horse and buggy disappeared down the farm lane in a cloud of yellow dust. Fanning rose to his feet, and, hastily gathering up his belongings, took to his heels after the trotter, shouting curses as he went.

"An' now, Jimmie," said Lafe, "we'll take a look at the pesky thing. You'd better read it. Your eyes are better than mine."

Jimmie took the document from Lafe and unfolded it.

"'Know all men by these presents,'" he began, "'that I, Lafayette Goodel,

for and in consideration of the sum of $50'"—

"That's all right, so far," Lafe said. "Go ahead!"

"'The sum of $50, lawful money of the United States'"—

"It looked like good money," Lafe admitted.

"'To me in hand paid by the Midland Railroad of New York'"—

"Stop!" Lafe shouted. "Read that over!"

"'By the Midland railroad of New York,'" Jimmie repeated. "'Do hereby grant, bargain, sell, assign and convey all that land'"—

"That'll do!" Lafe gasped. "That's enough! I see it all now!" He stood up unsteadily. "The dirty rascal!" he cried. "So that was his trick, was it?" He turned to Jimmie. "Jimmie, boy," he said earnestly, "Gimme your hand. That pesky railroad can't buy my pasture lot for less than $800 an acre, and when they do you'll get your share, and a big one too!"

And six months later Lafe was as good as his word.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

"Do you know where Johnny Locke lives, my little boy?" asked a gentle-faced old lady. "He ain't home, but if you give me a penny I'll find him for you right off," replied the lad. "All right; you're a nice little boy. Now, where is he?" "Thanks—I'm him."

Debt Collector: "Is your master at home?" Servant (curtly): "No, he isn't." Debt Collector (suspiciously): "But I can see his hat hanging in the hall." Servant: "Well, what's that got to do with it? One of my dresses is hanging on the line in the back garden, but I'm not there."

Agent: "What was the matter with your last place?" Domestic: "The couple had only been married a month, an' I couldn't stand th' lovemakin'." Agent: "Well, here's a chance in a house where the couple have been married ten years." Domestic: "That's too long. I like peace and quiet."

WENT TO THE DENTIST.

After suffering a long time with toothache the young colored girl got up her courage enough to go to the dentist. The moment he touched the tooth she began to scream. "Look here," he said, "you mustn't yell like that. Don't you know I am a 'painless dentist?'" "Wel, mebbe yo' is painless, sah," she said, "but ah aint."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A PAYMASTER'S FLIGHT.

[Original.]

When I was a sergeant in the —th United States cavalry in the far west I was detailed one day to command eight men acting as a guard to Major B., who had paid off the force at our post and was going to pay those at the next. He was a small, baldheaded, lean man, except a round stomach, which begins to protrude upon some people after they pass forty, with a crafty eye and a silent tongue. The only words he spoke were directions as to handling his safe, a small affair that could easily be lifted by two men and for which a place was arranged on a buckboard wagon which the major always used to transport the treasure. His clerk drove the horse, while the paymaster sat beside him, the safe between his legs.

The country through which we escorted the paymaster contained a wild and lawless people. I thought at the time that eight men, though drilled soldiers and well armed, were a small guard for such a purpose. Whether the major thought so or not I didn't know at the time, for he said nothing about it. I learned afterward that the colonel commanding wouldn't give him any more, and the paymaster entered on the trip under protest.

We were crossing a part of what is called the Great American desert or alkali plains, with nothing there higher than a man's waist. I rode a couple of hundred yards in advance, keeping a sharp lookout in every direction. For more than half a day not a living thing except the members of our party and gophers was in sight. But suddenly in turning to look to our right and rear I saw on a rise far in the distance a mounted figure looking at us. I judged from the general outline of horse and man that he was an Indian. After what appeared to be a careful survey of us he disappeared on the other side of the rise."

I felt a bit uneasy. Turning, I directed each man to see that his arms and ammunition were in order and notified the paymaster of what I had seen. It didn't seem to trouble him much. We jogged on for a few miles and when emerging from low ground suddenly heard a mingling of yells and saw on our right a motley crew several times as large as our own coming down on us. They were evidently a mixture of road agents and cowboys, with a sprinkling of Indians. Their leader rode in advance, a revolver in each hand, the only one of the lot who was not yelling.

I had just time to draw my men up in line between the oncomers and the buckboard before they came within close range, and I told each man to pick one in front of him as nearly as he could estimate. My men were armed with repeating rifles, while the attacking party had some guns, but mostly revolvers. I waited till they came within 200 yards before I gave the order to fire. Nearly every one of my troopers brought down his man. The gang hesitated, and I gave a second order to fire. This halted them; but, rallied by their leader, they came on, bringing us within range of their revolvers, and my men began to get hurt. For some minutes there was a continued firing on both sides, several of my men being put out of the fight, though but one was killed. My effective force was reduced to four men besides myself, Major B. and his clerk. It began to look as though the robbers were going to get the safe.

Suddenly I was astonished to see Major B., who had stood in the buckboard using a rifle, jump down from the wagon, cut the traces, spring on the horse's back, and away he went like an arrow. The act demoralized my force so that they broke. I failed to rally them, and we were all soon tumbling after the paymaster. His clerk mounted the horse of the man who had been killed and joined in the flight.

Never have I been so incensed in my life. The paymaster, a commissioned officer, by his cowardly act had cast discredit on me and my men. I had the mortification to see the bandits ride down on the safe and caper joyfully about it. All I could do was to help the wounded men of my command along, supporting them by turn in their saddles.

But what surprised me was the fleetness of the major's horse. I am no judge of horseflesh, and I had mistaken the animal that drew the buckboard for a mere beast of burden. Looking ahead, I could see the paymaster miles in advance, fleeing as for dear life, and in time he disappeared altogether. For once in my life I placed money before human life and wished he were in the safe and the fiends were on his horse. I thought with some satisfaction how I would prefer charges of cowardice against him as soon as we reached the post we were making for.

The bandits, having secured the safe, paid no further attention to us, and we rode on to our destination. What was my astonishment on riding into the garrison to see Major B. sitting coolly smoking before an extemporized desk with heaps of bills before him paying off the enlisted men. His belly was gone. It was plain that he had taken it off and placed it—a heap of money—on his desk.

"Thanks, sergeant," he said, "for your fine defense. I have reported you for gallantry, and you'll hear from it. The robbers got a safe with nothing in it. I'd rather rely any time on that mare of mine than a safe. Sorry any of your men got hurt. Next!" And, having paid off the man before him, he devoted himself to the next in line.

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

PEERAGES DYING OUT

War Plays Havoc With Brave Sons of Nobles

There are at least five peerages where the title will disappear by a death in the war unless the law is changed. These are the baronies of Knaresborough, Playfair, Ribblesdale and Stamfordham and the marquessate of Lincolnshire. Six peers, Lords Congleton Brabourne, Annesley, Hawarden, De Freyne and Petre, and about thirty heirs have been killed. In all, fifty sons of peers have perished in the struggle. There are known to be 213 peers and 424 sons of peers serving with the colors. Many of those who have died are well known to Canadians. International turfmen heard with especially keen regret of the death of the Hon. Francis Lambton, the youngest brother of the Earl of Durham. He was a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards, and before the outbreak of Armageddon, he directed a successful training stable at Newmarket for the plutocrat, Sir Ernest Cassel.

German Weeping Gas

Several German shells charged with lachrymose gas were brought to the Paris Municipal Laboratory for exhibition. In spite of the precautions which had been taken, the gas escaped into the ground of the city barracks just when a number of Republican Guards were crossing with their horses, with the result that for several minutes the guards and their horses shed copius tears. The incident at first caused considerable excitement, but this soon gave way to mirth, when it was realized that the effects of the gas were not serious.

PRISONERS SAY GERMANS RAN FROM TYPHUS CASES

Released Men Declare 1600 Died at Wittenberg—Abandoned to Fate

Prisoners of war were abandoned to their fate and left to die without medical attendance when typhus swept the Wittenberg camp in Germany, according to the accounts of 73 exchanged British prisoners of war who have just arrived in England after 14 months in the enemy's hands.

Mere wrecks of humanity, some of them with both legs, both arms, or an arm and a leg missing, the prisoners landed at Tilbury, where a crowd of sobbing women awaited them on the pier.

One thousand six hundred prisoners —1,000 Russians, 500 French, and 90 British—died in the camp, the men said, before the typhus was stamped out. When the disease became serious the Germans guards ran away—simply kept guard outside. They sent the food over chutes into the ground to the prisoner cooks. Some Russian doctors tried to do what they could, but were unable to handle the thousands of cases, and men died every day in batches.

Then six British officers of the Army Medical Corps, who were prisoners in another camp, heard of the epidemic and volunteered to go to Wittenberg and treat the unhappy prisoners. Five out of the six caught the typhus and three of them died.

All the prisoners are loud in their praise of Ambassador Gerard. "It was a treat to see Mr. Gerard at work," said the men. "He came straight to us and asked for particular cases of cruelty; he got them, and learned the truth. From that hour improvement began. Wittenberg is a hundred per cent. better to-day."

Prisoners from the Limberg camp declare that Sir Roger Casement is actively pursuing his campaign to try to persuade Irish soldiers to go over to the Germans and enlist in the Irish Legion, which the Germans are attempting to raise from among the prisoners of war. Two prisoners from Limberg — Lance-Corporal Mahoney of the Royal Irish Rifles and Private Higgins of the Dublin Fusiliers—told me a story of Sir Roger Casement's activities in that camp. Mahoney was moved to Limburg from another camp. "We were told," he said, "that all the Irish were to go together and that we would be better treated than in other camps. Then Sir Roger Casement came and visited us. He told us that now was our chance to strike a blow for Ireland. He promised us all kinds of things if we would join the Germans. We were being starved at the time. No parcels were coming, for people at home did not know where we were. Our food had been cut down to half.

"The Germans made no secret of their intention to starve us into joining them. Sheer hunger drove 50 of them, some of them English and Scottish, to submit. We hooted the first two out of the camp. The others were taken right away.

"A month ago Sir Roger Casement began his campaign again. One man arrived as his agent. Two of the soldiers who had joined him came to camp in the uniform of the German Irish Legion. They were now underofficers, and the German guards saluted them. Each of us was taken before the Casement agent under an armed escort. We were again urged to join. None of us would do it, but 35 promised to think the matter over or asked for further information. They were placed in a room by themselves. But remember it was sheer hunger drove them to join. The two who came back for the new campaign looked very ashamed of themselves."

Some of the prisoners declare that after their capture by the Germans they were brutally ill-treated, particularly the Gurkhas and the Highlanders. Private Standbridge of the Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment who was captured at Ypres, said it had been a long fight and the men were parched. "We asked for water," he said. "A bucketful was chucked straight over us. Some of the men were so dry they licked the wet off their coats. There were four kilties and four Gurkhas in our party taken to Gustrow camp. At every place we stopped there were brought out for fun. The guards mocked at them, pulled their clothes about, and then kicked them back into their place."

Private Pardon of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, who was wounded and taken prisoner at Mons, said: "When the Germans first got us they treated us very badly. Our wounds were dressed as well as possible, but our guards would kick our wounds, smack us in the face, and knock us about. One thing they frequently did was to slash the bare legs of the kilties with their riding whips."

The only men of the party who made no complaints were Lance-Corporal Long of the 10th Battalion (Canadian) and Lance-Corporal Brisbane of the Black Watch. Long had his leg broken by a bullet in the famous charge through the woods at St. Julien, near Ypres. "The Germans treated me well," he said. Brisbane, captured at La Bassee with a wounded arm, had to have it amputated by his captors. He said he had no complaint to make.—New York Sun.

The Lee-Corp. Long referred to above is presumed to be Fred Long of Peterborough, an account of whose serious injuries and his exchange for German prisoners, recently appeared in the Examiner.

SWOOPED IN SPIRALS

How British Aviators Bombed and Sank a Submarine

Personal details of how Flight Sub-Lieutenant Viney and Lieutenant De Sincay in a British aeroplane, sank a German submarine off Nieuport are as follows: "It was about mid-day, and we had started about half an hour before, on a French biplane to look for submarines, whose presence had been reported in the offing. While cruising at an altitude of ten thousand feet, we sighted west of Nieuport about five miles from the coast, two submarines navigating on the surface side by side. We felt pretty sure they could not escape us by diving, as the sea is not deep at that spot. Descending in spirals, we selected one for attack. Our conjecture was right. It was over a sandbank, and as it was impossible to escape by diving, it sought to elude us by a hurried flight in zig-zag.

"Seeing that we should have little chance of hitting it, we turned our attention to the consort, which appeared to answer the helm less readily, and could not get out of the circles we described above it. Thus we descended to 650 feet above the surface, and then certain of our aim, we dropped the first bomb, which took effect. Even with the naked eye it was easy to see the serious damage done to the deck. Two more circles above the doomed submarine, the second bomb, and she broke in two and sank. An ever-widening sheet of oil was spreading over the surface, and told us all we wanted to know."

Refuse to Mention War

A strange effort to bring about peace is reported from Holland. As all offers of mediation have been declined by the belligerents, a group of Dutch idealists is organizing a unique league. The members of this organization pledge themselves not to mention the terrible conflict publicly or in private conversation. All members wear a badge with the inscription: "Please do not talk of the war." The founders of the organization believe that their efforts will strengthen the peace movement.

Unsightly Pimples
Covered His Face.

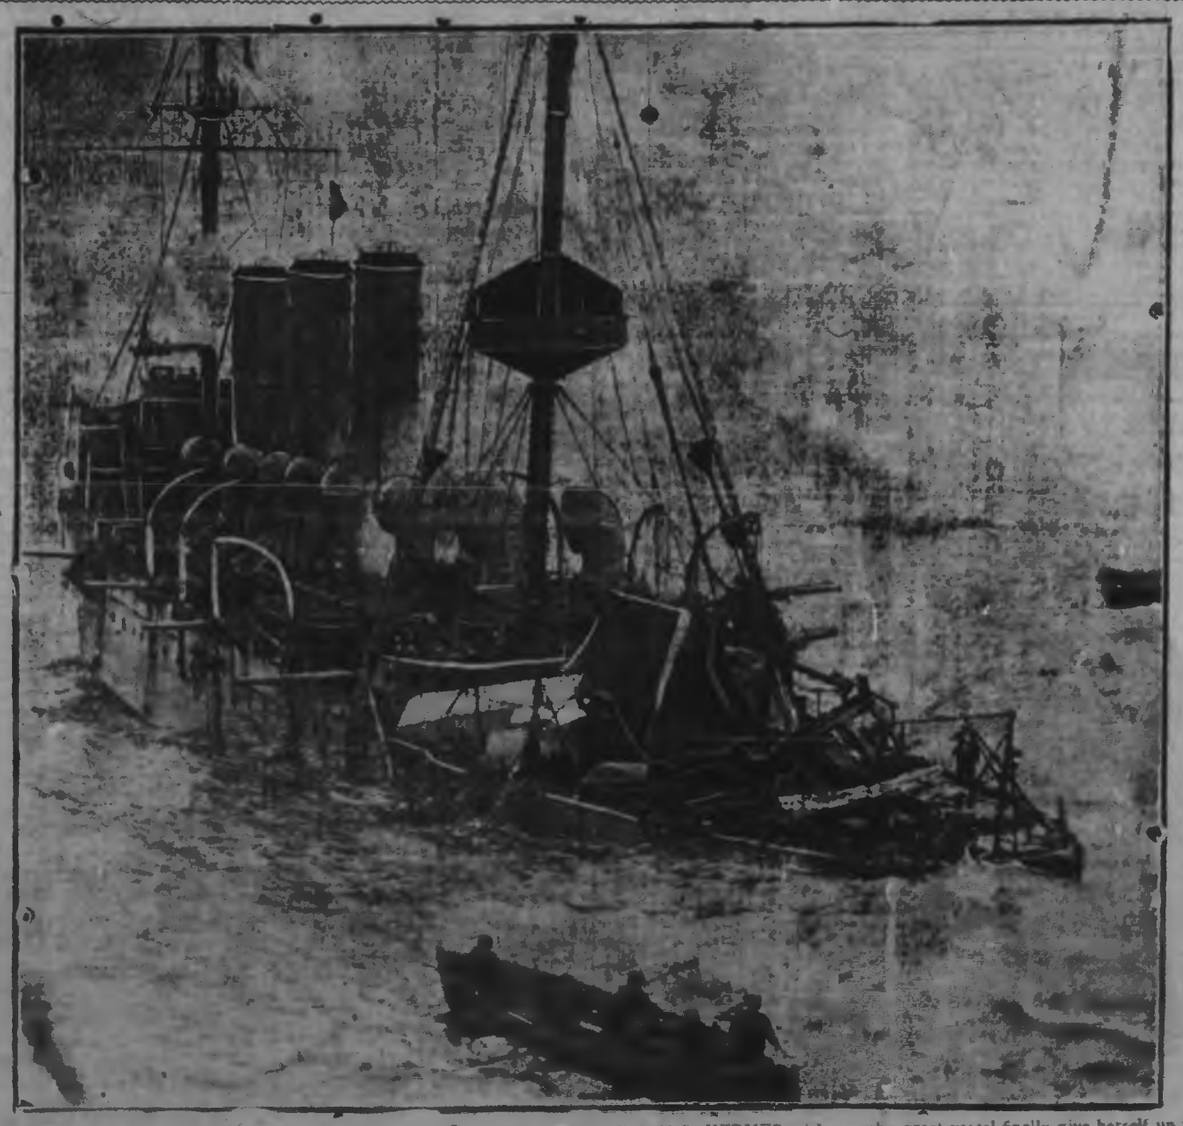
All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Leanox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.



WHAT'S THE BRITISH NAVY DOING? THE LOSS OF THE GALLANT H.M.S. HERMES.—"I saw the great vessel finally give herself up to the deep. It was a weird and moving spectacle, but the all prevailing fact, as she disappeared, was the Majesty of the Sea." This statement from an eye-witness describes the sinking of H.M.S. Hermes, a 14-year-old light cruiser which was submarined early in the war in the English Channel, while protecting British and the world's commerce. The picture has just been released by the censors and comes through our connection with the London Daily Mail picture services. In the photograph can be seen men swimming about in the water, and the nose of a convoy ship on the right, with a life boat in the foreground. On the deck of the Hermes, aft, can be seen an officer coolly directing the work of rescue. Nearly all the officers and crew were saved, but the captain, whose figure can be seen dimly on the bridge, went down with his ship like a gallant British sailor.

Must Win in 1916 or War Is Lost, Is German Fear

If New Year Does Not Bring Teutonic Victory on Land, Great Britain Will Conquer Through Sea Power in 1917, View in Fatherland

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The conditions under which Germany and Austria will enter upon the campaign of 1916 is the subject of a letter from a correspondent in Milan, who gives some illuminating information he has obtained from intelligent observers of the situation.

"I met in Milan a few days ago," he writes, "a gentleman who for thirty years was technical adviser of one of the largest German engineering undertakings which secured for Germany a commercial footing not only in South America but in several of the now belligerent European States. He has recently traveled in Switzerland, where he has had opportunities of obtaining first hand information regarding the internal conditions of Germany and of the attitude of the German people toward the war.

"He is convinced that the Allies have a heavy task ahead of them in the coming year, and attributes this to the encouragement that the German people have obtained through the successes of the army, which have led them to believe that things are going better than they really are and have steeled them up to bear sacrifices against which otherwise they might have revolted.

"His views receive a general confirmation in a lengthy interview published in the Secolo with a Scandinavian who has recently visited Hamburg, Berlin, Munich and other German cities. 'War is being successfully waged by the Germans,' he said, 'on every front. Every German you speak to will tell you he is satisfied in a general way with the progress of events, but most of them have something to grumble or pick a quarrel about. One is dissatisfied with the Chancellor, another with the diplomatists, the socialists, the agrarians, or the speculators. One complains about the lack of action on the western front, another at the halt in the offensive against Russia, or at the folly of the speeches announcing the Asiatic campaign. "Certainly the war is going all right," they say; "but where are we? What is going to be the end?" Germans scan the horizon for light and turn away convinced that the answer must come from beyond.'"

Question of Men Serious

Asked whether he thought German opinion would remain tranquil and confident for another year, the correspondent said that a military reverse (regarded as improbable), a false step, or an unforseen complication might change the entire situation.

"'The question of men,' he says, 'is very grave. Already, if there are not signs of scarcity of troops, prudent economy is being shown in their employment. Hindenburg has fought his latest battle with Landwehr, while Mackensen has spared his infantry in Serbia by using artillery almost exclusively. The problem is causing concern because there are limits to the withdrawal of men from industry and agriculture.

"'Austria does not provide a promising field for the filling up of gaps; the Turks cannot be transferred into Germany if there is to be an Egyptian expedition; the Bulgars are scarcely sufficient to face the situation as it exists in the Balkans. On the other hand, France is the only one of the Allies that has got under arms practically all her reserve of men. Great Britain has three millions ready, while Italy, engaged up to the present on her own frontier alone, has a large reserve to fall back upon.'

"The correspondent was not in Berlin at the time of the food demonstrations, but believes that the news published concerning them is correct. Food was getting scarce. One did not notice it in the restaurants, where one could get anything one wanted, though in reduced portions, at increased prices. To have an idea of the scarcity it was necessary to go into working class quarters, small towns and the country.

Great Britain is Feared.

"August Winning, secretary of the German socialist party, told him that the question of living had become so menacing that its solution was not only a national but a humanitarian duty.

"What is causing anxiety to Germany now is time—that is, England. You can have no idea of the hatred of Germany for England. Hatred and and apprehension. There is proof of it in all the political speeches delivered and in the newspapers articles. After having accused Great Britain of seeking the war, they are now accusing her of wanting to prolong it to the point of exhaustion.

"In the latter accusation they are perhaps more correct than the former. The Germans know the English well; they know their defects and their virtues. They know and fear above all the cold and resolute perseverance of the British. If Britain and her allies succeed in maintaining their resistence beyond 1916 I do not see how Germany can still hope to win. The Germans admit now, which clenched teeth, that the worst blows they have had have been delivered by the English. The blockade has been and is much more efficacious than the Germans would have it believed abroad.

"The Balkan enterprise was undertaken to break the blockade, but even if they reach Asia the Germans will not have the sea power. The war either will be won on land in 1916 by the Germans, or will be won on the seas by the British in 1917. That is what is thought and feared by Germany."

The Best Treatment For Constipation

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better — no griping—action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Among the new materials of the present and coming season we find more light varieties than heavy ones. The new serge is soft and fine, satardine has an almost velvet-like finish and voile and silk cashmere are also liked. With this idea present to our minds we naturally turn to such designs as are suited to materials of this character.

The example selected for our illustration is extremely attractive and of this type. The waist has the fulness laid in two soft plaits at each shoulder in front and the closing placed in the centre. At the top there is a small applied vest, which may be of illusion, of point d'esprit, of chiffon or of soft silk and which may be used or omitted. The neck itself is just a moderate open, with a small turnover collar outlining it. This has an ornamental square shape in the back.

The skirt has four gores. It is made with a plain panel in front and back and with side pleats between them. The panel of front and back passes over the belt, which is placed a trifle lower than normal.

Both dresses are extremely pretty made of charmeuse, or if a more durable fabric be sought, in the new serge or in poplin, which is to be had in very rich and handsome plaids of dark tones.

The dress pattern, No. 7267, is cut in sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 5¾ yards of 44 inch material, with ¾ yard of 27 inch silk and ⅝ yard of 42 inch net.

The pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

M.P.'S WERE BRAVE

Deputation to Trenches Had Amusing But Risky Reception

An amusing description of the visit of some of the British labor leaders to the front is given by Sergeant W. Crosloch, a member of one of the Welsh Battalions, in a letter to a friend in Aberavon. He says: "We had some visitors here belonging to the Munitions Committee or something, all old friends—Tom Richardson, M. P. Hodge, Robinson, Vernon, Hartshorn, and some more. You would have laughed if you could have heard the conversation between our chaps and them, most of it in Welsh. It went on something like this:

"Sentry (to me): 'There are some "civies" coming across, sergeant.'

"Myself: 'Pull them up, and find out who they are.

"Sentry: 'Hi, who are you lot?'

"Staff Officer: 'It's all right, sentry. These gentlemen are from Wales.'

"Sentry: 'What are you doing out here in this hole.'

"Answer: 'We have come out to see how you are getting on.'

"Sentry: 'You must be a lot of fools to risk coming to a hole like this.'

"All the time this was going on the Germans were sending some beauties over and our visitors were continually bobbing up and down, but I must say they showed plenty of pluck, as it takes a bit of nerve to walk about the trenches when the band is playing. On the whole, I think they were very pleased with the reception we gave them. Members of another battalion have named them the 'suicide club.'"

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR, DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY

Try This! Hair Gets Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful at Once

Immediate?—Yes! Certain!—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Dames of Title Cook Grub For Tommy Atkins

LONDON, Jan. 14.—It would be highly interesting to see a complete list of the exalted dames and damsels who, instead of playing bridge, motoring, and skating at Prince's, "as usual, are now in France and working at the various canteens, kitchens, recreation huts, and other institutions for the benefit of Tommy Atkins which have been opened by the Y.M.C.A., which has justified its existence in the present crisis if it never has before.

Only the other day we were told of a well-known society woman with a couple of magnificent homes in Scotland and a whole fleet of motor cars, who was cooking at one of these Y.M.C.A. centres in France and getting up at 6 every morning.

There are no end of others, including Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein (who prefers to be called just "Princess Victoria" now), and who has been one of the chief organisers of the Y.M.C.A. concert parties which go over from time to time to entertain the fighting men.

Earl's Daughter, Cook.

The latest aristocratic worker in this line is Lady Bridget Coke, the youngest daughter of the Earl of Leicester, who has just gone to France to work in a Y.M.C.A. refreshment booth. A pretty, vivacious girl, Lady Bridget has been active in war work for some time, and meanwhile her three brothers are serving their King in the Army and Navy.

Lady Bridget is a soldier's daughter and a member of an exceptionally interesting family. Her mother, whose good looks she inherits, was a daughter of the second Lord Annaly, and has the reputation of being one of the most accomplished skaters in England.

Lady Bridget's father, the third Earl of Leicester, is among the wealthiest of nobles, and previous to his retirement from the service saw a lot of hard fighting. As a member of the Scots Guards, he went through the Egyptian War of 1882, taking part in the action of Mahuta and the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, for which he was awarded the medal with clasp and the Khedive's Star. Three years later he accompanied the Scots Guards in the expedition to the Soudan and took part in the engagements at Hasheen and Temai.

Decorated in Transvaal.

During the Transvaal War Viscount Coke, as he was then, officiated as commander at Orange River, and took part in several fierce engagements, in which he was mentioned in despatches and received the C.M.G. He married Lord Annaly's daughter in 1879, and has three sons and two daughters.

When his venerable and exceedingly rich sire, who was known as the "father" of the House of Lords—died in 1909 the Earl, who is now 67, had been heir to the title for more than three score years. That is an unusual thing, but more uncommon still was the experience of his stepmother, the former Lady Leicester.

When she married the second earl, in 1875, she found herself the stepmother of nine children, nearly all of whom were older than herself. Her own marriage was blessed with six sons and a daughter, so that she was for more than thirty years the presiding mistress of a truly patriarchal household.

Inherited Big Fortune.

The present Lord Leicester inherited an estate that, apart from settled property, was sworn for probate at more than $4,500,000. This calculation, moreover, took no account of the property of which the earl is the life tenant, which includes estates of nearly 50,000 acres.

Quite the most interesting of recently announced engagements is that of John Richard Lowndes French, eldest son of Field-Marshal Sir John French, the renowned late commander of the British Forces on the Western Front.

He is to marry Miss Olivia Mary John, youngest daughter of the late Major-General John, and the adopted child of the Countess of Charlemont, whose noble husband, Viscount Charlemont, went in for munitions making a few months ago, but overdid it and was ordered by his doctor to quit. Miss John is a pretty and clever girl who is a favourite in society.

Lady Cadogan at Front.

A handsome society woman who is vitally interested in all the war services is Lady Theodosia Cadogan, whose husband, the Hon. Alexander Cadogan, is the seventh child of the late peer of that title. She herself is a daughter of the fourth Earl of Gosford, and previous to her marriage in 1912 was Lady Theodosia Acheson.

Her husband is a distinguished member of the Diplomatic Service. Her elder brother, Viscount Acheson, is in the Coldstream Guards, and was recently mentioned in despatches, and her younger brother, the Hon. Patrick Acheson, is a lieutenant in the Navy.

Lady Theodosia in peace times is reckoned one of the best golfers in society. Sargent's portrait of herself and her two sisters under an orange tree was, a few years ago, one of the successes of the summer exhibition at the Royal Academy. The Earl of Gosford, Lady Theodosia's father, is an Irish nobleman, whose years today number 73.

Chicks on Her Crest.

Among his Christian names is the peculiar one of Sparrow, and by a curious coincidence birds also figure largely on his arms, for his crest is a red rooster and a double-headed eagle is spatch-cocked on his shield.

The name of Sparrow was derived from an ancient East Anglican family, the second Earl of Gosford, the grandfather of the present peer, having married in 1805 the only daughter of Robert Sparrow, or Sparowe, of Worlingham Hall, Suffolk.

WONDERFUL BILIOUS REMEDY ACTUALLY PREVENTS ATTACKS

There are two great causes of biliousness,—they are constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken, they not only correct constipated bowels, but act upon the liver as well.

Quite unlike ordinary medicines, which purge and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the conditions which cause biliousness, and thus permanent cures are effected. No person who occasionally uses Dr. Hamilton's Pills will ever suffer from the headache, bad stomach or bilious complaint. Get a 25c box today.

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

(Toilet Talks)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 2 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed.

NORTHCLIFFE'S RIVALS

French Journalism Contains Names of Wonderful and Mysterious Origin

The editors of many of the curious little trench journals, which are being brought out in ever-increasing numbers by the soldiers at the front, have a perfect genius for inventing queer and bizarre titles for their publications.

Some of these, though certainly strange sounding, are at least understandable. The "Pow-Wow," for instance, which is the trench journal of the 20th Battalion Royal Fusiliers, conveys some sort of an intelligible idea to most people But the same cannot be said of the "Lead-Swinger," which, its sub-title informs us, is "The Divvoac Journal of the 1-3 West Riding Field Ambulance."

"Pip-Squeaks" is another puzzling title, until one learns incidentally, on glancing through its inside pages, that "Pip-squeak" is a special kind of small German shell, so called by Tommy from the noise it makes when fired.

The curiously named "Comb and Paper" reports and criticises concerts and other similar entertainments at the front. The "Hangar Herald" presents no difficulties to anyone who knows that "hangar" is the name airmen give to the sheds where their aeroplanes are stored The paper deals, as its name implies, with the doings of the aviators at the front.

The "Gasper" is a paper published, so its editor informs us, "for soldiers at the base," and he goes on to tell us, incidentally, that "the base is a place where troops are kept until they are so fed up that they do not mind getting killed."

Yet another of these curiously named ventures in active service journalism is entitled "Blighty Scrapings," and its sub-title, which is at least self-explanatory, even if somewhat diffuse, is as follows: "The Only Authorised Version of the Doings of the Honorable and Ancient Order of the Cooks of the Artists' Rifles."

ALLIES' ARTILLERY IS POUNDING THE GERMAN BATTLE FRONT IN THE WEST

British Big Guns Shelling the Foe's Trenches With Deadly Accuracy--Death and Destruction Rained Around Lens --British to Make a Complete Blockade of the German Coast---German Losses Total 2,525,768 With 600,000 Killed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Germans endured a terrible week-end from Allies heavy and sustained artillery fire says the Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent. From Hetsas in the north where the Canadian guns are stationed down to Lens, the German lines have been shelled with that deadly accuracy so dreaded by the Kaiser's western army. Death and destruction raised around Lens where important railway junction east of Avon was greatly damaged. The German artillery is unable to reply adequately to the British big guns and this fact is doing much to destroy the morale of the German soldiers.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The British Government is preparing to take drastic steps to force the residents of the United Kingdom to economize and to believe in hands all that is needed they say to make the blockade legal is indifferentiated from the fleet's activities under orders in council is for the Government to declare it and turn the handling of the blockade to the navy.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Scarcely any press despatches from Athens have been passed by the Greek censor in past three days and this fact alone is considered ominous in view of the German reports. German newspapers hint at possible revolution headed by former Premier Venizelos and express doubt as to whether King Constantine will have the support of the Greek army in real crisis.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—British steamer Marere has been sunk by a submarine. The crew were rescued.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—When President Wilson takes the stump for preparedness a formidable array of speakers for peace will also be before the country. The trial of peace advocates will be exactly the same as preparedness men.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Berlin wireless says: "In Prussian Chamber of Deputies yesterday Herr Von Heyde Brandt consevative leader referred incidently to America., as among Germany's worst enemies". Germany he said enjoyed splendid feeling of being innocent of all the horrors of this war.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Britain has the ships to make an actual blockade of the entire German coast effective, if she decides upon such a measure. The Navy Department has furnished the state department convincing evidence on the point.

Naval officials are practically of one opinion. From three Admirals the United Press obtained expressions which can be summed up thus. It would take no more ships and no re-distributation of her ships for Britain to establish the effective blockade of Germany as the termn is understood in international law. United States naval officers agreed that so far as naval law is concerned the British fleet now have the situation completely in hand.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Peace negotiations between Austria and Montenegro have been broken off, according to an unconfirmed wireless report from Rome to-day.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Two small fishing vessels were sunk in the North Sea confirming recent reports that German submarines are again active in British waters the crews were rescued.

The French Premier, with Premier Asquith and all Allied representatives on the war council, went into session at Downing Street snortly after noon to-day.

PEKIN, Jan. 19.—Numerous arrests made to day in plot to blow up Yuan Shi Kai, who recently accepted the Chinese throne, explosives were discovered in the Emperors palace.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Provisions for the addition of fifty thousand men to the British Navy are looked on in some quarters to-day as a preliminary step toward the laying of blockade of the entire German coast. The public has not been permitted to learn how many new ships have been added to the navy since the war began. It was recently stated, however, that fourteen superdreadnoughts as well as scores of smaller craft have been completed and are ready for service. Britains fleet is more powerful than at the outbreak of the war, despite all losses.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—What the attitude of the Government in regard to Pugsley's demand for an investigation into the small contracts will be is not known but is considered possible that the view may be taken that as the purchases were made for the Imperial authorities with British money the Government of Mother Country should be consulted before any action is taken. Liberals on the other hand say that 260 millions having been spent by the commission the honor of Canada is involved and there should be no question about appointment of a commission of inquiry.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Cables to owners of neutral trans-atlantic freight steamers and agents here to-day indicated that the British navy has already tightened the cord around German ports as well as neutral ports through which goods might reach Germany, dozens of vessels from the United States bound for Scandinavian ports are being held in British ports where they were sent by naval authorities to wait stricter examination of cargo and destination. Protests are going to Washington by the wholesale.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—British forces advancing to the relief of besieged garrison at Kutel-Amara have been unable to make further progress because of "atrocious" weather, Secretary for India Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons this afternoon. When last dispatches were received here the Turks had been driven back to within six miles of Kut-el-Amara's outer forts.

The German casualties in the war total 2,525,768 including 600,000 killed under of Secretary for war Tennant announced in Commons.

A Letter of Appreciation

At a combined meeting of the City Council and the Board of Health, Mr. G. H. Duncan, chairman of the Board and Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health were authorized to send Miss Bertha Mowry, late matron of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital, a letter of appreciation for the able manner in which she has performed her duties at the hospital.

Miss Mowry left for Kingston, where she will join a number of nurses of the Army Medical Service Corps, who are going overseas.

WISE YOUNG MEN

Who are thinking seriously about the future for expert help in the varied branches of trade and the professions after the war is over, should bear in mind the excellent curriculum of studies taught by the International Correspondence School of Scranton, Ohio. Get in touch with the local representative here, Mr. Donovan, at his office, 140 Charlotte street, and have him show you samples of the actual work done by students of this school. He will be pleased to advise you how to qualify for a higher salary, in the trade or profession you desire to follow. His office is open day and night. 4d

HOW PAT FELT.

After the battle of Mons an officer congratulated an Irishman on his conspicuous bravery under fire. "Well, Pat," he said, "how did you feel during the engagement?" "Feel, your honour?" answered Pat, "I felt as if every hair on me head was a band of music, and they were all playin' 'Home Sweet Home.'"

To the Families of Peterboro'

The Family is the oldest human institution. It comes up out of Eternity. It is of the very Constitution of Nature. It is divine.

Family! The very word suggests a hearth—a home; pictures patience; with warmth; laughter love. I often feel the wonder and charm of the Scripture which says. "He setteth the Solitary in Families."

The Family was intended of God to be the nursing Mother not merely of Children but of the Graces—the Virtues and the great Moral Forces of life. We get our first lesson in team work in the family; without team work the game is lost; without team work the victory goes to the enemy.

Every man has two names, Jim or Jack or Tom or Bob and the other name Wilson or Asquith or Gray or whatever it be. Too many persons are placing the emphasis on the first name. When the emphasis is placed on the first name the team play is weak. When the emphasis is placed on the last name the team play is strong and the achievement is correspondingly large. I heard the other day of a woman who has three sons and a daughter all working. When they were small, to keep them clothed and fed and warmed the mother took in washing. The children are now grown and working but the mother still has to take in washing. The emphasis is on the first name, the family name means nothing, there is no team play, that family has failed of its divine purpose, it has not been a nursing mother to the graces and virtues and moral forces of life and so the mother of sheer necessity still takes in washing.

Tom Balfour, Canadian, British subject, all that is Tom's heritage but Tom cares not at all for Balfour, Canadian, "British Subject". The Empire is at war. Tom does not care. It makes no difference except that it is a little annoying to have his chums greet him "Hello Tom when are you going to enlist?" Tom's sister cares, she rather prided herself on her brother Tom, she knows that the things worth while are in grave danger, that "Balfour" and the yet greater words "Canadian" and "British" are all being dragged down by Tom. Father and Mother knows and of late Tom's bright criticisms of Kitchener and Grey and Asquith have not met with the old mirthful response, Tom is somewhat mystified at this and wonders what is coming over the family. What is to be done? It is a case for a frank family conference with Tom present. Let Tom be made to see and feel what "The Balfours" expect of one another. Let Tom see and feel what "The Balfours" have trained the. Community to expect of them. Let Tom see and feel that "Canada" has some claim on "The Balfours" and that Canada's need at this hour is great. Let "The Family" do its whole duty by Tom and in nine cases out of ten Tom will do his duty by "The Family" and "The Empire". If the washer woman already referred to had done her whole duty by her children as they grew up she would not be bending her aged frame over a wash tub to-day.

I suggest more family conferences with Tom on what is expected of "The Balfours" and less criticism of Kitchener and Grey and Asquith. Let me bring this letter to a close with this word and I write it with reverance and seriousness that if "The Family" will not do its duty by Tom the Lord will raise up other agents to reach Tom; crude, troublesome agents it may be but nevertheless agents of the Almighty.

JAMES ROLLINS.

93rd MEN WILL ENTER CAMPAIGN FOR MORE RECRUITS

No Drill For the Next Three Days While Officers and Men of the Peterboro' Battalion Will Go After Men For Their Unit---Quartermaster-Sergeant Goodhouse Honoured by the Non-coms of the Battalion---To-day's Military News.

For the next three days there will be no drill for the men of the 93rd Battalion. They start out to-morrow morning on the three days campaign to complete the 93rd. To-morrow the men have a roving commission, but on Friday and Saturday they will work in districts under the direction of their officers and every eligible man will be canvassed between now and Saturday night. So far this week there has been little sign of a great impetus in recruiting. The number of men accepted continues to average five or six a day, twenty-three having been added to the strength since Saturday morning.

A pleasing event took place in the sergeant's mess of the 93rd Battalion at noon to-day when Quartermaster Sergt. Goodhouse, musketry instructor who for the past few weeks has been in charge of the musketry class in connection with the 93rd was presented with a beautiful gold-headed cane. The presentation was made by Battalion Sergt. Major Miller on behalf of the non-coms. of the battalion as a mark of their appreciation of Q. M. S. Goodhouse's services as instructor and of his many estimable personal qualities. He has been very popular with the non-coms and the feeling was evidently reciprocal judging by his speech of thanks in which he said that the 93rd had the best bunch of non-coms he had encountered anywhere and he has been associated with many battalions.

At the recruiting organization meeting in All Saints' Church, last night, a resolution was passed unanimously urging upon employees of labour the desirability of not engaging single men who should enlist in place of the men who have enlisted.

Capt. Rollins and Adjutant McElhiney addressed the men of the 93rd yesterday afternoon in regard to the three days' recruiting campaign and the methods to be employed. The men were especially reminded to be tactful in their address when approaching prospective recruits, but at the same time to be active and persevering in their work.

SAYS THE EMPIRE IS IN DANGER

MR. G. A. GILLESPIE, M.P.P., who heads the Fair Board in the year of its crisis respecting grounds. He succeeds Mr. J. H. Garbutt.

Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien in Address Last Evening Says Catholics Are United With Protestants in the War.

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING

"The Empire is in danger and we must do our utmost to defend it. Canada's greatest asset is her manhood. There is only one thing greater and that is the womanhood. It has been said that the Catholics are not united with the Protestants in this war. That is an absolute falsehood "Thus did the Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien of the Sacred Heart Church address a representative audience that foregathered in the Collegiate Institute for the purpose of completing the organization of a committee to look after district number seven during the three days recruiting campaign that opens to-morrow. Altogether eight meetings were held in different parts of the city. Over sixty people attended the meeting in East City which was held in the old village hall. Some enthusiastic addresses were made after which committees were appointed and arrangements made to take an active part in the campaign. Rev. Father W. J. McColl of church of the Immaculate Conception sent a letter of regret expressing his inability to be present on account of having to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. P. J. McAuley, mother of Rev. V. J. McAuley of the Sacred Heart Church. Rev. Father McColl's letter concluded with the following remarks—"I fully realize the gravity of the danger to the Empire and the absolute necessity of defending and you may therefore be assured of my sympathy and co-operation with you in any reasonable and honorable way to secure the required number of recruits."

Mass Meeting To-night.

The full band of the 93rd battalion will be present at the mass meeting that will be held this evening in the Grand Opera House. Lady Ushers will be provided for the occasion. Mrs. Heustis of Toronto will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Hueatis of Toronto will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Huestis is directing a certain line of work on behalf of the Government. This meeting is open for everyone and not particularly for women as some people seem to think.

FAIR DIRECTORS NOT DOWNHEARTED AT THEIR ANNUAL

Will Hold 1916 Exhibition on Sept. 14, 15 and 16 in Hope of Favourable Turn in Their Fortunes

MR. G. A. GILLESPIE, PRESIDENT

To be or not to be was the vexing problem before the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition at their annual meeting this afternoon. The slender thread from which the Fair had precariously pended in previous years was snapped by the ratepayers when they defeated the by-law to purchase the present grounds for Exhibition purposes. This afternoon the Directors faced a cold, cold world, figuratively and in fact, and, as a Board, experienced something of the feelings of the evicted. Of course there was nothing in prospect to prevent the holding of a Fair this year, as the tenure of the present lease does not expire until then. But after that—far-away fields, or the deluge. In the face of these precarious and discouraging conditions the directors showed no signs of retiring and the general feeling favored the continuance of the Exhibition during 1916 with a Micawber hope that something would turn up. In the meantime it was decided to hold the Exhibition as usual this year.

In his presidential address Mr J. H. Garbutt said that the 1915 fair had been as successful as could have been expected under the existing conditions. The financial surplus was $1,202 as compared with $500 in the previous year.

After paying tribute to the efforts of the directors, Mr. Garbutt remarked that they have the opportunity of holding one more exhibition on the present grounds. Government reports show Peterborough's Fair to be one of the best in the Province, only surpassed by two others of similar character.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., stated that to Mr. Garbutt was due a great deal of the credit for the Exhibition's success. It was regrettable that the citizens had not showed their apprecia-

BY-LAW WILL COME INTO EFFECT

After January 31st all outside closets within the city limits will be cleaned once a month by the contractor engaged by the city and the cost to the householder or tenant will be only 15 cents a month, which will be payable to the Sanitary Inspector or some other properly authorized person. Occupants will be notified by the Inspector of the day on which the contractor will call. The contractor is not expected to empty closets that have not been cleaned previous to last fall. These must be cleaned out before February 1st, and all remaining pits in existence must also be filled up after being cleaned and dry earth boxes or pails installed before that date. This is the only style of outside closet permissible and sufficient dry earth or ashes must be thrown upon the contents to absorb all the fluid part of the deposit.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 19, 1916

ENLIST!

To-morrow the three days' recruiting campaign to bring the 93rd battalion up to full strength, which will require 500 recruits, opens. By energetic propagandism, public and personal, the decks have been cleared for action and now it remains for those eligible for enlistment and those having influence over them to implement in the next three days the interest it is presumed has been aroused. While it may be necessary to specifically urge individuals to take the critical step of actual enlistment, that is a personal matter with them, a matter of conscience, modified by the character of their business and domestic relations. A decision may be reached by the exercise of influences which wives, mothers and other dependents may exercise. It is hoped that in this respect the spirit of loyalty to duty and sacrifice will exert its influence in favour of our rendering personal and domestic claims to the claims of patriotism; the claims of the necessity of providing men in sufficient numbers to decide the victory on our side. It is necessary that prudence be mixed with zeal in the efforts to influence enlistment. Zeal or method of persuasion that tends to antagonize rather than persuade should be avoided. It is to be remembered that enlistment, while the duty of every able-bodied men, is a serious step to take yet it should be remembered that the responsibility rests upon thos who are physically fit. It should be felt that enlistment is a privilege as well as duty and also be remembered, that with the fate of our freedom and of the empire at stake, every loyal citizen is justified in urging every other loyal citizen to take a place in the ranks and help avert the danger that threatens.

UNION BANK'S GOOD REPORT.

The Union Bank of Canada, that old-established institution which, originating in the City of Quebec placed its headquarters a few years ago in Winnipeg in order to be more closely in touch with the growth of the great West, presents a remarkably satisfactory statement for the year ending November 30th, 1915. It is worthy of note that, so sound is the business of this bank and so well selected its assets that it has been able throughout the entire period of stringency and war difficulties to maintain sufficient profits to pay its customary dividends and bonus, to keep up its contribution to Officers' Pension Fund, to make full provision for depreciation of securities and other contingencies and not only to refrain from drawing upon its accumulated balance or its Rest Account, but to add a substantial sum to the balance each year.

The profits this year amounted to $689,688 as compared with $712,440 in 1914, and $750,095, in 1913—a very moderate shrinkage indeed in a year of universally diminished bank earnings. This represents 13.2 per cent on the capital stock of which 9 per cent was distributed in dividends and bonus, 3 per cent. was applied to Contingent Account war tax, amounting to $45,750, and Pension Fund, $10,000, leaving $106,976.75 to be carried forward at credit of Profit and Loss Account.

These are very satisfactory profits, and are a reflection of the strong condition of the Bank. A heavy increase in deposits of nearly ten millions, an increase of assets of nine millions are evidence of this condition, taken in connection with a very great increase of the cash securities and call loan items, and a liquid reserve that constitutes nearly 48 per cent. of the total liabilities to the public. These conditions were not achieved at the expense of the commercial clients of the bank for the items of current loans and discounts, while below the figure of 1914, are considerably in excess of those of 1913.

The report shows not only the healthy and progressive character of the interests and standing of the Union Bank, but a generally healthy condition of Canada's business interests.

The interests of the Union Bank in Peterborough are in the capable charge of Mr. C. H. Pennefather, manager.

NIGHT SCHOOLS.

To many young persons and to some older persons whose opportunities for education have been neglected or interrupted; the Industrial Night School, now being conducted in the old Collegiate Institute building, Murray Street, is of the utmost importance. Young people who have had to leave school to enter some money-earning occupation, can make up for the lost educational opportunities, and many who have had these opportunities, but neglected them can with advantage, attend these classes. The subjects in which the most direct and practical instruction is given, include subjects that are applicable to the chief requirements of domestic, industrial, and commercial life. Even many who have no necessity to pursue stated occupations where the lessons of the night schools will be useful, might attend for personal satisfaction. There are two main reasons for the possession of knowledge: the personal satisfaction derived from its possession, and the use it can be put to in our daily lives.

Apart from the direct benefits derived from attending the industrial night school is the perhaps greater benefit from the impetus they give to self study; and what is, or can be gained by a little, every-day, systematic self-study is simply marvellous. Young persons, and elder persons too, waste many golden hours that might be devoted to mental improvement. Of course the young need amusement and recreation, but that need not interfere with self-study. Nobody wants to go skating every night in the week. The point is to set apart a short time, if only a few minutes every day, to the study of some specific subject. The time thus spent would not be missed from the amusement schedule of the most devoted pleasure seeker; but the solid improvement and enlarged mental outlook would be of the greatest value. Every young man or woman who wishes to succeed in life—who looks the length of the nose beyond the present—is urged to take advantage of the industrial night classes. There is no danger of any one knowing too much.

ECONOMIZING TO WIN.

The shrewdest British statesman with full knowledge of conditions, assert that one of the important factors necessary to winning victory in the war is national and individual economy— habits of saving— avoidance of unnecessary or superfluous expenditure. Our governments lead us in the tremendous work of waging war. They prescribe the number of soldiers we have to enlist and initiate the expenditures we have to make. They are leaders in these things and they should be leaders—set an example of the economy, the saving, the individual as well as the state has to practice if we are to fulfil this important part of the conditions necessary to winning the fight.

In one important respect the present government has not set an example of retrenchment or economy, but the practice of deplorable extravagance. The management of the Post Office Department is to be cited. When the present government came into office in 1911 the Post Office Department had a surplus revenue of over a million dollars—$1,192,729 — that is the revenue exceeded the expenditure on postal maintenance by that amount. In the year 1915 there was voted the sum of $14,956,030 for expenditure on the postal service, and the revenue was only $13,046,664. That is nearly two million dollars—$1,909,366—of a deficit. There is nothing in the business conditions of the country to account for the discrepancy. Business has been good, all the banks report prosperous years, and there has been a one-third increase in postal rates. The cause is directly due to extravagance—to the neglect of the economy which statesmen tell us we must practice to win in this war. Since 1911 the post office revenue, in sympathy with the general commercial prosperity, has increased from nine millions to thirteen millions, an increase of 45 per cent. But in the same period the increase in expenditure, the cost of running the Post Office Department, was nearly 100 per cent—7 millions, odd, in 1911 and 14 millions, odd in 1915. It may be claimed that some of the increase was due to parcels post introduction, but that only came into effect in 1914 and was no doubt offset by the increased revenue derived from a one-third increase in the postal rate. The government cannot certainly point to the administration of the Post Office Department as a model for the people in practising the retrenchment that must be practised if we are to fulfil one of the prime conditions of winning this war.

The Relentless and Deadly Grip of the British Bull Dog

It will be remembered that in December last the German official bulletins announced that the German Navy had been searching the North Sea for the enemy and could not find a trace of a British warship anywhere. The sequel to this has now been published. A British Admiralty official, in an interview in New York states that the German battleship fleet actually did leave Kiel Canal three times in December, and "made sorties." He confirms the fact also that the British warships were no where to be seen, and he gives us the reason. The German ships kept inside Helligoland, and inside the mine fields laid down to protect them!

"Safety First!" is still the motto of the German Navy, boastful boastings of "Der Tag" notwithstanding. But why this careful search for the British Navy along the German coast inside the German mine fields? It savors of the conduct of a fearful old lady, who cannot rest before she has tremblingly looked under the bed for a burglar. Of course, they never expected to find the British fleet there, and they would have been scared to death, or blown sky high, if they had. It was not an excess of caution, however, that was responsible for the little farce. They were simply playing to the gallery—the German gallery—and the subsequent bulletins on the daring adventure were published not for foreign edification, but for home consumption.

We regard this as one of the best possible tributes to the silent but deadly work that the British fleet is doing. So long as the British holds the seas, hollow victories in the Balkans count for little. The German war lords know it, and it is quite evident that the German people at large are beginning to realize it. No German Minister ever makes a speech these days without announcing that the Allies are beaten, that German military power is unshakable, and that on the wicked Allies, who will not acknowledge that they are beaten, rests the responsibility for continuing the war. There is tremendous drum-beating over the German Balkan adventures, and an almost hysterical press campaign all over the world, with the object of forcing the Allies, "for the sake of humanity" (God save us, fancy Germany being concerned for the general welfare of humanity!) to acknowledge that Germany is victorious, and to allow Germany to lay down the peace terms.

While this campaign is on, the German people, unable to see any signs of the victory of which their war lords are boasting, are becoming despondent and restive. Every day brings a fresh reminder of the growing power of the Allies, and of the deadliness of the grip of the British Navy. Every day the necessity increases for imparting more "Dutch courage" to the German nation. It is evident that the people are asking why, if the Allies are whipped, their pressure gets heavier every day. It is evident they are wondering how Germany can claim to be victorious when the British Navy is crushing the life out of her. So, in a grotesque endeavour to prove to the people that the British Navy really amounts to nothing, the Great German warships get up steam, and bravely put forth from the Kiel Canal to search for the British Navy. By this farce the attempt is made to prove to the Germans that the British Navy is so scared of the invincible might of the Germans that it is nowhere to be found. Nowhere! It is an excellent sign. Those German ships were forced out of the Kiel Canal on their mock search by the pressure of public opinion. The incident shows how hard put to it the German war lords are to maintain the illusion of victory while their great campaign for a victorious peace is under way.

"BULLY!" BRITISH COMMENT ON U.S. NAVAL INCREASE

LONDON, Jan. 14. — The British press has published complete accounts of the recommendations of the American secretary of the navy for the adoption of a great building programme. The keenest interest has been aroused in this country, and it is generally considered that in carrying out a policy of "preparedness" the American government is doing the best thing possible.

It is notable that not a thought is given to this addition to the world's maritime fighting strength in relation to a possible bearing on Great Britain's naval requirements.

In keeping up its two power standard, comprising the maintenance of a fleet equal in strength to those of any two others, the British have always left the American navy out of account, and so it is now, so sure is every one on this side of the water that never will America and England become involved in war

America Not Baimed.

There are sighs, however, over the American programme. The advocates of disarmament see that with America, a leader in propaganda for world peace, arming almost to the teeth, their dreams of general disarmament are not likely to be fulfilled. But America is not blamed for the course she has taken by even the most ardent British pacifist. The lesson of unpreparedness has been a bitter one to England. England was not unprepared as to her navy, but she was concerning her army. Had she had a first rate land force the war might never have been.

While there is general approval that America should prepare, there is also criticism as to the details. One of the most pointed of these is from the naval correspondent of the Morning Post.

London Paper's Comment.

The paper says: "The annual report of the secretary of the United States navy has considerable significance for this country. America at present is in the fortunate position of looking on while others buy the experience by which she may profit.

"Although the five year naval programme presented by Mr. Daniels is ostensibly the result of the considerations deduced from the war, it is curious that the shipbuilding programme itself is much what it might have been were there no war in progress.

"There is indeed an increase in the submarine force, but it is not large. The types of vessels projected remain the same; and the numerical proportions of each class to the other are little altered.

"America may or may not be aware of the recent increases in the British navy, concerning which all that is known to the British public is that they are very expensive.

"What does not appear in the secretary's report is any indication of a strategical scheme upon which the requirements of the United States navy are based. In the absence of such a scheme it is impossible to create an effective navy.

Programme Is Indefinite.

"The purpose of a navy is to prevent war by providing a powerful force ready to meet any contingency. If no definite contingency is considered, the appropriate force cannot be provided. To build a strong navy on the general hypothesis that in time of need it will serve any purpose is a comparatively useless proceeding.

"It was upon this general hypothesis that the political heads of the navy in this country acted for some years before the war. The shipbuilding programme of the United States is a singular example of persistence in methods of which the war has already demonstrated the danger. But that is the affair of the United States, not of this country."

The Grocer Paid.

A commercial traveller called upon a grocer at Gateshead the other day and at the same time a poor old woman entered soliciting alms. The grocer, wishing to play a joke on the traveller, told the woman, to "ask the master,' 'at the same time pointing to the commercial. The traveller was thunderstruck for the moment but, regaining his self-possession, at once said, turning to the grocer, who was a very small man: "Boy, give this poor woman sixpence out of the till." The grocer paid.

Janet Knew.

An old tenant on Queen Victoria's Balmoral estate used to be greatly concerned when the Queen went driving on Sunday afternoons. She ever ventured to speak about it. The Queen, who allowed a good many liberties to her tenantry, smiled, and said to the old woman: "But, Janet the New Testament tells us distinctly that the Sabbath was made for man. "Ave," said Janet, severely, "I know it does; and I think none the more of the New Testament for that."

We know an insurance agent who always has a good list of prospects. When he closes one contract, he asks the insurer about any friends that might be interested, and often gets a note or a verbal message of recommendation to some of those friends.

Merchants could use similar methods to advantage, modified to suit their business. First give your customers perfect satisfaction; then get them to recommend you to their friends. If you sell a washer, wringer, stove, piano, a brand of paint, or baking powder, get your customer to write his experience and publish it in your advertisement.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA

THE newspaper in the Peterborough zone of Ontario to be granted Newspaperdom's "Winning Daily" emblem was the EXAMINER. After investigating the local field, the following conclusions were established: First, the EXAMINER has a materially larger circulation than any other Peterborough daily; second, it is the leading evening newspaper of Peterborough and the tributary territory; third, it is supreme in volume of advertising published—and this volume is made up of gilt-edged business from local and foreign advertisers in Canada and the United States. Local advertisers unanimously endorse it for its result-getting efficiency. In further correspondence regarding the Peterborough zone as a business possibility in 1916; the possibility of dealer cooperation, etc.

MR. WILL CROOKS TO DON COURT ROBE, HIS WIFE SAYS SHE WILL MAKE HIM

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Even the most democratic of democrats loves a title. Radical Poplar went wild with delight when it got the news that the King had honoured its member, the Labour leader, Mr. Will Crooks, by raising him to the Privy Councillorship, and made him a Right Honourable. His door bell in Gough Street, Poplar, hardly ceased ringing all day on 1st January. Everybody seemed to want to congratulate him.

"Oh, it will be a three days' wonder," said the new Privy Councillor to a friend. "But there is one thing I am really anxious about. Some of the workers may be under the impression that because the King has given me this honour and calls me his right trusty and well beloved—or whatever the phrase is—I shall have become a party man and shall not be one of the workers any longer. But I'm not. I live with them, and among them, and hope to die in their service.

"But it is really funny. I dreamt that I had won the V.C., and woke up on January 1 to find myself a P.C., so that set me thinking."

And with that Mr. Crooks got reminiscent of his boyhood days.

"I remember when I saw my mother crying that she did not know where the next meal was to come from. Father had lost an arm, and she had him and seven of us youngsters to feed. When I was nine a neighbour who kept a milk shop offered me sixpence a week to deliver milk for him, and I took the job.

"The guardians stopped mother's out relief soon after, and because the sixpence wouldn't keep nine of us and pay the rent we went into the workhouse for a spell. My next job was in a grocer's shop at two shillings a week and my food. Didn't I feel rich! At eleven I went blowing bellows at a Limehouse forge for six shillings ($1.50) a week. At fourteen came mother's great sacrifice, for she apprenticed me to a firm of Limehouse coopers, where I got only two shillings and sixpence (62 cents), and she could ill afford the loss of three shillings and sixpence (88 cents) a week. So I grew into a cooper, experiencing all the vicissitudes of the trade, strikes and lock outs, and even going on tramp in search of work."

A knock came to the door, and while the Privy Councillor went to answer it, Mrs. Crooks, who is assuredly the proudest woman in Poplar, confided a secret. "If they say Will's got to have Court dress," she whispered, "he'll have it, all right. I'll see he gets it. It was the same when he was made Mayor of Poplar. He wasn't going to wear robes, but I made him."

Mr. Crooks came in. He had overheard. "What's that about Court dress? Oh, well, I suppose I can get one down Petticoat Lane."

Of all overworked women probably the housewife is the hardest worked. She has so much to attend to, with very little help. Her work can be lightened if she knows the value of system and she should try and take a short rest in the daytime. A physician who became famous almost around the world, Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the specialist in women's diseases, for many years practiced medicine in a farming district. He there observed the lack of system in the planning of the work.

If it is a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The disorder should be treated steadily and systematically with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For diseases from which women suffer "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful restorative. During the last fifty years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery and distress caused by these diseases.

If you are a sufferer, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form today. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

What He Is Now.

The recruiting sergeant with a shrewd sense of humour has been everywhere. These men have oftentimes needed all their wits. Said one such to a promising recruit: "Why don't ou join the Army? You would adorn the King's uniform. It's a fine profession is the Army, and promotion for all who ask for it! Look at the number of lieutenants! And there's Lord Kitchener, a Field-Marshall, and at the head of the War Office. Why, Lord Kitchener was only your age once, and see what he is now!"

SERBS CRUSHED BY GUN POWER

PARIS, Jan. 18—The Serbian army was not beaten by the Germans; it was compelled to retreat continually because nothing could face the deluge of shells which the enemy had substituted for his soldiers.

Such is the conclusion of M. Henry Barby, who was with the Serbian forces from the beginning to the end of the last tragic campaign, and who writes for the Journal the story of the crushing of Serbia. It is a bitter narrative, and although, as Mr. Barby observes, it is not yet the moment to fasten the responsibility, yet one cannot but be moved and angered as one realises how the heroic little nation waged a magnificent but hopeless and vain struggle.

Husbanding his men, Mackensen obtained all his results with a minimum of troops, but with a formidable mass of artillery and a veritable orgy of munitions. The Serbian general staff estimated that they had to face 250,000 Austro-Germans and 350,000 Bulgars. The Allies having refused to concentrate a Serbian offensive against Bulgaria when the latter's mobilization, coinciding with the assembly of Austro-German forces on the west and north, showed only too clearly what was to happen, the Voivode Putnik elaborated the plans which he deemed the best for defending the frontiers against half a million enemies attacking on all sides.

The Bulgars were held in check, but on the north the Austro-Germans smashed their way through with their cannon. Thanks to the enormous numerical superiority of their field and mountain artillery, and thanks especially to the German heavy artillery, Marshal Mackensen's army forced the Serbs to give ground daily.

The Serbian infantry was numerically little inferior to that of the Austro-Germans—the proportion was 1 to 1.5—and whenever the Serbian infantry had the chance of actually fighting the enemy the encounter invariably terminated to the advantage of the Serbs. Indeed, Mackensen's infantry seems to have been made up of recruits who had been formerly rejected as unfit for military service. Serbian officers and men almost wept with rage as they gazed at the weedy specimens of Teutonic manhood who formed the majority of their prisoners. Mr. Barby says he did not see a single healthy-looking or robust man among the lot.

But where Mackensen could bring into action five batteries of artillery, the Serb generals could with difficulty put one, and the Germans' weakly soldiery marched behind a curtain of fire and steel which nothing could resist, and when it reached the Serb positions, ploughed and shattered by hurricanes of shells, its role consisted simply in occupying the evacuated terrain.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My daughter suffered from irritated eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Pritchard, B.C. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

T. HARRY WEBB, E. B. READ, C. R. HEGAN, Auditors,
of the firm of
WEBB, READ, HEGAN, CALLINGHAM & CO.,
Chartered Accountants.

Winnipeg, 29th December 1915.

In the absence of the President, Mr. John Galt, the chair was taken by Mr. R. T. Riley, Vice-President.

The Vice-President's Address.

In the absence of the President, Mr. John Galt, the Chair was taken by Mr. R. T. Riley, Vice-President.

In moving the adoption of the Report, the Vice-President, Mr. R. T. Riley, spoke as follows:

The statement which we have placed before you to-day discloses a condition of the Bank which should be very gratifying considering that we are in the midst of a war which has caused an unparalleled dislocation of the world's commerce and finances.

The finances of the Dominion have been conducted during the past year with comparatively little help from outside, and although we shall have to make further borrowings for war purposes, there need be no misgivings as to our ability to repay such obligations.

Trade conditions in Canada have distinctly improved. Orders for war materials and supplies have exceeded all expectations, and the decrease of foreign trade is now in our favor and likely to continue so for some time, as there is still a lot of grain to be exported from the crop of 1915.

Our share of the cost of the war has not yet fallen upon us, and it is the paramount duty of every corporation and private individual to exercise the strictest economy, both in public and private life, so that when we are called upon to pay our share we shall not be found unprepared.

Canada has every cause for thankfulness that we have been blessed with a bountiful harvest, beyond the expectations of the most optimistic, and as a result the farming community of the West are today in a better and safer condition than ever before.

With reference to conditions in England, our London Manager reports that the effect of the war on general business in Great Britain has been confusing, and that while there have been no repetitions of the financial upheavals of the previous year, the burden of hostilities has made great inroads into accumulated wealth, and further disorganized the complex industrial and financial life of the nation.

The United States for the time being has become the money market of the world, and it is pleasing to note the satisfactory manner in which the recent Canadian loan of $45,000,000 has been received, as well as various Provincial, Municipal and Railway loans aggregating in the total about $140,000,000. It is the duty of every financial institution to see that all offerings should be thoroughly sound, and of the highest character.

Our policy for the coming year will remain the same. We shall be conservative, at the same time extending to our customers as liberal treatment as conditions and sound banking will warrant.

General Manager's Address.

The year just closed has been one of much anxiety to bankers, and we are pleased to have come through it in such a satisfactory manner.

Reserves—Referring more particularly to the statement which has been presented to you the percentage of Liquid Assets to total Liabilities to the public amount to 47.92 per cent, as compared with 36.27 per cent last year.

Profits—The profits for the year were $659,688.01. This is $52,783.47 less than the previous year, which, under trying and abnormal conditions, and the maintaining of such large idle reserves, must be regarded as satisfactory. They have been sufficient to pay the usual dividend of 8 per cent and a bonus of 1 per cent, making a grant of $10,000 to the Officers' Pension Fund, providing for $45,730.77 War Tax on circulation and set aside $150,000 for contingencies, besides having made adequate provision for all losses.

Circulation—Notes of the Bank in circulation have increased $1,300,000, Deposits—Total deposits of $73,635,000 show a gratifying increase of $9,240,000.

Balances Due to and by Other Banks—Balances due by Banks outside of Canada show an increase of $3,066,000 over 1914.

Gold and Silver Coin and Dominion Government Notes amount to $9,257,000, which is $2,140,000 more than in the previous statement.

Cheques on Other Banks amounted to $2,866,000, being $1,130,000 greater than last year.

Investments—There is little change in the Bank's investments. The increase of $115,000 represents the initial payment on the Bank's subscription to Canada's first War Loan of $100,000,000. The amount allotted to this Bank was $946,400, which has since been fully paid for.

Call and Short Loans—Call and Short Loans in Canada are $4,624,000 higher and are against bonds of a high order.

Current Loans and Discounts—Current Loans and Discounts in Canada have been reduced by $1,925,000.

Total Assets—The total Assets of the Bank have risen to the large amount of $90,663,000, as against $81,561,000 last year, an increase of $9,100,000.

General Remarks—Enforced liquidation has been in progress throughout Canada for the past two years, but the strain has been lighter than was anticipated. This period will be extended until normal conditions are resumed, but the future is faced with feelings of hopefulness and every confidence. The chief factors which have contributed to this lightening of our burdens are thrift, strict economy, the lessening of expenditure on capital account, balance of trade with Great Britain being in Canada's favor and bountiful harvests.

The gratifying results of the past season's crops have enabled farmers to liquidate their obligations very largely, and every encouragement is being offered by Provincial Governments in Western Canada to go more extensively into mixed farming.

Staff—It will be of interest to our Shareholders to know that 318 members of our staff have volunteered for overseas military duty; of these, we regret to announce, nine have been killed in action, and to their sorrowing relatives our sympathy is extended; 21 have been wounded and 286 are still on active service. A Too much praise cannot be extended to the 1,476 remaining members of the staff who are so loyally and cheerfully performing additional duties and working longer hours whilst their fellow clerks are fighting for the Empire.

Mr. E. L. Drewry seconded the motion for the adoption of the report.

The motion was then adopted.

Auditors Messrs T. Harry Webb, C.A., E. B. Read, C.A., and C. R. Hegan, C.A., of the firm of Webb, Read Hegan, Callingham and Company, were reappointed auditors.

The following were elected the Directors for the ensuing year:—Sir William Price, Messrs. John Galt, R. T. Riley, Geo. H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, Wm. Shaw, W. R. Allan, M. Bull, Stephen Haas, Major-General John W. Carson, C.B.; J. S. Hough, K.C.; B. B. Cronyn, Hume Blake, K.C.; R. O. McCulloch.

At a subsequent Meeting of the Board, Sir William Price was elected Honorary President; Mr. John Galt, President; Mr. R. T. Riley and Mr. George H. Thomson, Vice-Presidents.

Russell Kelly, "Kelly of the Foreign Legion," Killed in June in Artois

NEW YORK. — The mystery which has shrouded the fate of Russell Kelly, "Kelly of the Foreign Legion," twenty-two years old, who left here soon after the war began, to join the French Army, is removed in the brief announcement of the French War Office.

"Kelly of the Foreign Legion," whose slangy, bright letters to the New York newspapers revealed so much of the activities of the Legion, died at Givenchy on June 17 with other American youths who cast their fates under the banner of France.

It was just a few days ago that a song, "It Takes an Irish Melody to Make the English March," was published here, dedicated to the boy who is dead "Somewhere in France." It bears his picture as he appeared in the uniform of the Foreign Legion.

With Lawrence Scanlon, a close friend, Kelly, who was the son of Mr. James E. Kelly, of 45 Broadway, left this country more than a year ago and joined the Foreign Legion. He fought at La Targette, at Souches, and in Champagne, and when he was not fighting he put in his spare time writing slangy, boyish letters of the life he was leading and the cause he was fighting for.

He wrote that charging toward the German trench was softer work than Ty Cobb ever did when he was pitching, and he told anecdotes of his companions, men of all ages and degrees, and of all codes and past. Then seven months ago he ceased writing and no word of him could be received. His father wrote to Mr. James W. Gerard, Ambassador to Germany, asking him to seek his son in the prison camps. Word came that he was not there, and the father, who feared his son might have been captured and shot by the Germans, was going to Europe to seek him himself. He said a few days ago that when the war was over he wanted the son of whom he was so proud to lead him over the grim battlefields where he had fought and which he had written so vividly.

Kelly's silence is explained now by the list of casualties, and the father will not make the trip to seek him, or later the trip to hear the story of past glories of great fights.

Scanlon, his friend, is in a hospital, recovering from a shrapnel wound which broke his leg. His mother is waiting for him to come home, for ing slangy, boyish letters of the life he was leading and the cause he was fighting for. there is little likelihood that when he is out of the hospital he will be able to fight again.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 60 Colborne Street, will be answered — Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of economy and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, staining, varnishing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course

E.F.D., Peterborough, Ont.: What will take paint spots off glass that have become extremely hard?

Ans.: The use of a paint remover which can be purchased in any hardware store is best. But a strong solution of sal soda will also do. Whichever you use allow it to stand awhile until it softens the spots, then wash clean. Being careful not to allow any to touch the surrounding woodwork.

Mahogany Stain: If through your "Arts and Crafts" column you will tell me how to darken light mahogany I will be very much obliged? It is a piece of furniture I have just come into possession of and following the advice of a friend I have scraped and sandpapered all the polish off, but it is not as dark as my other furniture. In fact some parts are a light yellow and I would like to have it all alike.

Ans.: Some kinds of mahogany is naturally of a yellow tone. Still I imagine you refer to the popular red mahogany or one of them. First be sure the wood is not birch or maple, as the "light yellow" parts you speak of may only be the real wood in its natural state, shewing up, when you have sandpapered polish and stain well off. If it is either of those woods, which are used extensively to represent the genuine, stain is your only hope, and I would recommend an oil stain, because for an amateur it is easier to handle. You would require a stain near as possible to what was originally used and endeavour to tone up all the light spots first, after which darken your stain if necessary with some Vandyke brown and coat the whole piece over to the desired shade. If on the other hand you have got right down to the wood and it is real mahogany deepen the tone by coating with a little Bichromate of Potash dissolved in water and applied with a soft woolen rag. If one is not enough repeat until the depth of the tone is obtained.

D. B., Peterborough, Ont.: What is Manhattan oil? How is it obtained?

Ans.: I have never heard of such an oil. There is, however, an oil (or was some years ago) on the market. The name of which is similar to Manhattan; it may be the one you refer to. I think the name of it was Menhaden oil. It is one of the many fish oils used as an adulterant and substitute for linseed oil. But like all other substitutes is unsatisfactory. Linseed oil oxidizes fish oils with the assistance of other agencies dry by evaporation, which is not healthy for paint.

Trouble, Trouble, Peterborough: I undertook to put on my own wall paper and in doing so got some paste on the right side, which is the wrong side as you know. Now how can I clean off those horrid paste spots?

Ans.: Paste spots on the face side of wall paper are a baul and nightmare to most paperhangers. Paste is made in so many ways and contain preservatives according to the fancy of the maker. Alum, soda, borax, salt, sugar, molasses, etc., etc., are added to flour paste. Then there are the many prepared pastes on the market both dry and wet, that is impossible for me to know what will remove the spots and not destroy the paper. If it is not already destroyed. Indeed very few papers there are but what would be destroyed if paste got on the face side. If it is a good paper you had better consult a competent paper hanger who may be able to doctor it up a bit.

Alberta Mc., Millbrook, Ont. Will you be kind enough to insert in the "Arts and Crafts" column of your most valuable paper the exact formulas for making pea green, grass green and bronze green, also the names of the other greens.

Ans.: The exact formula is hard to give, as opinions vary with regard to hue or tint, and colour makers vary in strength of colour. But the following will be a guide: Pea green, five parts of white to one of chrome green. Grass green, three parts of chrome yellow to one of Prussian blue. Bronze green, five parts of chrome green, two parts amber and one of black. As to the names of the other greens my answer will be found in John, 21-25.

Constant Reader—Is it advisable to wax a varnished floor or should it only be washed with clear water?

Ans.: I generally advise waxing a varnished floor for many reasons. As a rule people allow their floor to get very bad before varnishing them, and are disappointed if one coat does not make a first class job. Again if footmarks show then the varnish was inferior. One coat of varnish soon wears off a floor. Again the varnish is at fault. They do not seem to realize that there is often a grind of 150 or 200 lbs. on that one coat of varnish. Then the sweeping, polishing, washing, etc., are all wearing a thin film, thinner, whereas by coating with wax occasionally the varnish is protected. These are but a few of a great many reasons why I like wax.

Voice of The People

Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Last night's issue of the "Review" contained a paragraph under the heading of "military news" regarding the sending of parcels to prisoners of war in Germany. The paragraph asserted "that the "Otonabee" Chapter, I.O.D.E., had made arrangements whereby Lieut. Quackenbush of the 93rd will look after the work here." It further stated "that Sergt. Crozier of Lindsay, has been engaged in this work and enlisted the support of the "Otonabee" Chapter of I. O. D. E. and Lieut. Quackenbush is acting for them."

On behalf of the "Otonabee" Chapter, I beg to state we know nothing whatever of the matter, neither officebearers, council, or chapter have been consulted, and though the work of sending parcels to the prisoners is a commendable one, it would have been more courteous of Lieut. Quackenbush to have obtained the permission of the chapter before making use of its name as authorizing him to take charge of this work on their behalf. The local Red Cross Society forwards money every month to Mrs. Rivers Bulkely at the London office for the purpose of sending parcels to the Canadian prisoners of war and these are dispatched weekly, and up to now have always reached the prisoners intact.

Yours faithfully,
Annie Forbes Allan,
Hon. Sec. "Otonabee" Chapter, I.O.D.E.

HOW TO PROLONG LIFE

By adopting a simple diet men like Osnaro have lived to be 100 years of age, but with our complex diets of to-day, the vitality of the aged is taxed to its utmost endurance. A simple diet, therefore, is conducive to a long life, and if the vitality becomes impaired and weakness seems apparent, our local druggists, have in Vinol a reliable, non-secret remedy which contains just the elements needed to restore strength to weak, feeble, old people, and prolong a healthy, happy life.

If sympathy becomes a distorted and morbid it hampers instead of helping the effort towards social settlement. Without sympathy, without fellow-feeling, no permanent good can be accomplished.—Roosevelt.

SERGT. ALF. KEMP KILLED IN ACTION

Former Peterborough Young Man Gave His Life Somewhere in France

The news of the death of Sergt. Alf. Kemp, killed in action in France, will be received with deep regret by the friends of the family in Peterborough, where he resided until about ten years ago, when they moved to Edmonton. His father was employed with Mr. Adam Hall, when the latter conducted a retail store business on George Street. Sergt. Kemp, who also went to South Africa, in the third Canadian contingent, enlisted in Edmonton in November, 1914.

An Edmonton paper refers to him as follows:

Sergt. Kemp had a very wide circle of friends in Edmonton. He had lived here for eleven years, and was active in sporting and political circles. He had been an active member of the Young Liberal Club, was interested in hockey, and was a member of the Highlands Curling Club when he enlisted. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Kemp, live at 7511 112th Avenue. Two brothers are in the Canadian expeditionary forces: Will, in the 51st, and Adam Hall Kemp, the youngest brother, who is now in England with one of the university companies of the Princess Pats. Another brother, Joe, is in the far north with the Hudson Bay Company, while a fourth, Chester Kemp, is a local druggist. One of the sisters was married very recently to Sergt. J. D. Craig, of the 63rd Battalion, while another, Mrs. F. C. Bishop, lives in Winnipeg.

JEWEL DECKED BODY FOUND IN CARTHAGE

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The discovery in an ancient Carthage is announced of several Christian tombs, among them a marble sarcophagus containing the body of a woman, richly adorned with jewels. The jewels included an emerald and ruby necklace, clasps of uncut precious stones, massive gold pins, buckles and rings, and other ornaments of value which were sewn on the clothing of the woman.

Had Done His Duty.

Recently a recruiting canvasser, who had on his list three brothers in one farm-town, could make nothing of any of them. Each referred him to "faither." "Faither" being interpellated, refused to let any of his sons enlist. The canvasser argued with him, and finally asked, "Are you content to do nothing for your country in this war?" "Naethin'—me dae naethin'! Awa', man, an' haud yer blethers. A'm sendin' hauf a dizzen eggs to the hospital ilka week."

TWO GUILTY OF SMUGGLING GEMS

HERMAN J. AND CHAS. DIETZ CHANGE PLEAS IN CONSPIRACY CASE AND ARE SENTENCED.

NEW YORK, January 19—Herman J. Dietz and his son, Charles Dietz, diamond dealers, formerly at No. 87 Nassau street, who are alleged to have smuggled more than $700,000 in gems across the Canadian border, in the United States court withdrew their pleas of not guilty and substituted those of guilty. The case was being heard by Judge Hunt and a jury.

Judge Hunt sentenced Herman J. Dietz, who is 69 years old, and has been in the jewelry business for the last 20 years, to one year and a day in the Federal Prison at Atlanta. Charles Dietz, who is 29, was fined $5,000. Judge Hunt directed that if the fine is not paid by next Monday Charles Dietz be re-arraigned for sentence.

Because of the pleas of guilty Samuel Hershenstein, Assistant United States Attorney, consented to the dropping of the counts in the indictment accusing the father and son with personally carrying the jewels across the border. They pleaded guilty to that part of the indictment alleging a conspiracy to smuggle diamonds.

The smuggling conspiracy has been continued from 1911 to 1914. Mr. Hershenstein discovered the plot in his investigation of the bankruptcy proceedings against Jos. Samuels & Co., braid makers of No. 120 West Twentieth street, and Aranson & Ruttenberg of Montreal, and Herman J. Dietz. The latter asserted his insolvency was due to the loss of diamonds he had pledged with Martin Simons & Co.

MORE TROOPS FOR SWEDEN, IS CRY

HER COMMERCE RIGHTS ATTEMPTS TO USURP CONTROL OF THEM HAD TO BE RESISTED.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The Swedish Parliament was opened yesterday. In the speech from the throne as forwarded by Reuter's correspondent at Stockholm, King Gustave said:

"A formidable struggle of ever-increasing intensity, which will decide the future of nations, is taking place. Our Government earnestly hopes to be able always to maintain the neutrality which it decided to observe from the beginning of the war, but in order to maintain neutrality and the sovereignty of Sweden, increased forces on land and sea must be in readiness.

"Sweden has felt the effects of the war in numerous ways during the past year. Belligerents have neglected, in an ever-increasing degree, to observe international law providing for the protection of neutrals, and for the limitation of deeds of violence."

King Gustave emphasized Sweden's part in upholding international law and the constant difficulties she is meeting in obtaining her economic rights, on account of the attitude of belligerents.

The Government had been compelled more than once, he said, to resist attempts to place the industrial and commercial rights of the country under the usurped control of another power.

On account of these conditions, King Gustave asserted it was necessary to carry on vigorously the task of providing for national defence. He said the Government would ask Parliament to appoint special delegates for the purpose of discussing national questions of a secret nature with the executive branches.

Famine in Sausage Threatening Germany and Butter Is Scarce

BERNE, Jan. 19.—The word of command has evidently been given in Berlin to counteract the effects of the popular discontent caused by high food prices by accusing the German people of a lack of patriotism in bemoaning such trifles when millions of their men are sacrificing their lives at the front. The German newspapers are full of exhortations to be satisfied with dry bread, meatless meals, artificial food concoctions and all sorts of deprivations until the new road from the Balkans can bring necessary relief to the nation.

"When one listens to the conversation of German women," says one of these numerous communiques from Berlin, "it soon becomes evident that they are all talking about butter. It seems that German women have only one desire, and that is to have plenty of butter in their pantries. They do not speak of the war and of the glorious deeds of our armies, but of butter! They have lost husbands, sons, brothers, friends at the front. These losses they bore with philosophic calm, but they cannot bear to live without butter.

"There is too much talk about petty deprivations which ought to count for nothing in this titanic struggle for the security of Germany's future. It must be understood once for all that war causes inconveniences and necessitates sacrifices. The men give their lives; the women can at least refrain from complaining because they are obliged to use lard instead of butter or to eat bread instead of loading it with a savory covering.

"We have enough food for the whole nation, and its distribution will improve as time goes on, but until the war comes to an end there must be certain limitations to luxurious living, and some real deprivations for all of us. Let us bear them heroically as part of the fight for the Fatherland instead of magnifying trifles and revealing resentment because we are obliged to eat dry bread while our brave men are in the trenches."

"There is too much chattering about butter," says another communication circulated among the provincial press. "It is a patriotic duty to contrive to live without the quantities of butter consumed in times of peace. A benevolent Providence has given us a rich harvest of fruit and there is plenty of honey in the country. Those who cannot eat jam or honey with their bread instead of butter must realize that the deprivation is part of their own contribution to the war."

Popular lectures are delivered in the same sense, and the help of ministers of religion of all denominations has been enlisted to teach the same lesson from the pulpit. Leaflets are being distributed in the streets of Berlin and in other centres of population urging the German people to accept with courage and resignation the loss of some of their favorite articles of diet, and to refrain all manifestations of discontent.

But another deprivation is in sight which will try the patience of German housewives and their families far more than the shortage of butter and meat and palatable bread. The municipal authorities at Stettin have taken the first step by announcing that the manufacture of sausages must cease owing to the lack of pork and other meat, and a semi-official communication from Berlin states that the prohibition will have to be extended to all parts of Germany. A famine in sausages will be a severe strain on German powers of endurance.

LET WAR SHIRKERS BE DISFRANCHISED

—Washington, January 19.—Pacifists and poltroons who would refuse to serve their country in time of need, if Theodore Roosevelt had his way, would be disfranchised and then sent to the front to dig kitchen sinks, bury dead horses and perform other such unpleasant tasks. These sentiments were contained in a letter from Mr. Roosevelt received by Mrs. Russell Malcolm MacLennan, president of the Society for the Protection of the Dignity and Honor of the Uniform of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt's ire was aroused over a printed pledge issued by the Anti-Enlistment League of Brooklyn, N.Y., which reads:

"I, being over 18 years of age pledge myself against enlistment as a volunteer for any military or naval service in international war, offensive or defensive, and against giving my approval to such enlistment on the part of others."

In his letter to Mrs. MacLennan, which she made public by reading today at the meeting of the Washington Branch of the Women's Section of the Navy League, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Any man who signs a pledge that he will not enlist as a volunteer in the army or navy in the event of war should be promptly disfranchised, and then should be sent to the front to dig kitchen sinks, bury dead horses and do other jobs which would relieve brave men of the unpleasant but necessary hard work of a campaign. Pacifists and poltroons would thus be made of some small use to their country. At present they are of none.

"All men and women who encourage any one to take such a pledge are engaged in an infamous business, and should be treated accordingly."

DEEP RUSSIAN SNOWS PUT END TO GERMAN DREAMS OF VICTORY

With Severest Part of Winter at Hand, the Kaiser's Armies Not Only Are Checked, But Find Their Advanced Positions Untenable

LONDON, Jan. 15. — Discussing Germany's winter problem, Mr. Waclaw Cherniewski, in an article in the Daily Graphic, says that in the eastern theatre of war the most severe part of the winter is approaching. It sets in about the present time and lasts until the end of January, and everything this year indicates that it will be harder than usual. In such circumstances it is doubtful if any important actions will occur.

"The frosts of winter impose obstacles at every step," he says. "The snows in the Lithuanian fields are waist deep, so that no attacks are possible. The ground is frozen, and no trenches can be dug. Clothing must be thick and heavy, and this hampers movements of the body. Heavy artillery cannot move, as the wheels are buried in snow axle deep. All this renders the campaign impossible and leaves everything at a standstill. The German intention to take advantage of ice on the Dvina and to cross this river while frozen must for the moment fail, and without this movement the German campaign on the eastern front cannot be accomplished.

"The German army might have stayed its advance on the second Russian defensive line, which follows the Niemen and Bug Rivers. However, their success has tempted them to march further, and they were often in hopes of enveloping parts of the Russian army. The third line of defence in Western Russia follows the Dvina and Dneiper Rivers.

ALTERNATIVES FOR GERMANS

"The Germans thus have to face two alternatives—either they have to gain this line or retire to the Niemen. Their present positions are untenable for any length of time, as they require such a number of troops in the trenches that Germany is unable to organise an offensive movement on this or any other front. The Germans, realising this fact, are prepared for any event, and have been fortifying the Niemen River. Notwithstanding these precautions, the German General Staff is afraid of public opinion in Germany, and will make every sacrifice to conquer the Dvina line together with Riga, the most important Russian port in the Baltic.

"However, we can look into the future with confidence. The Russians prove to be very strong on this front. The retirement of General Russky, who has been entrusted with the defence of the Russian capital, shows that everything in the Northern Russian army must be in perfect order.

"Although it is usual to attribute the retirement of generals, even when dismissed, to bad health, this is not applicable in the present case. The Emperor, on relieving him, expressed hopes of seeing him again at his post. It is the second time since the beginning of the war that General Russky has been obliged to retire from active service on account of his health. His first retirement was during the early spring of this year. He is one of the best Russian commanders, and his strenuous work has seriously affected his bodily health. Such a general would certainly not leave his post without being absolutely confident of the future [illegible]

Further south the German line is facing the Pinsk marshes. It is the only time of the year when it is possible to cross these regions. Deep snow is very trying and perilous for marching armies. It is easier, however, to overcome such obstacles than to cross bottomless marshes in which men horses and guns are unavoidably engulfed. Nevertheless, it is doubtful whether Germany will undertake such a titanic task; no wheels will be of any use; the guns would have to be fixed on sledges and pulled by horses and men.

GERMANS FEAR A THAW

"Moreover, there is a hidden danger for the invading army. Supposing the Germans should not be able to reach the Dneiper River before the coming of spring, they might be caught in the marshes as in a trap. Hundreds of thousands of troops would be obliged to face death by being either engulfed in mud or marooned and starved on desolate islands.

"On the southern front, again, things are not very promising, either, for our enemies. It is a long way to Kieff, and without it they cannot be masters of the situation in Southern Russia. Moreover, the exhausted Germans are badly in need of every man they can put in the field. They have to leave the Austrians to their fate, and Austria, which was unable to withstand Russian pressure at the time when Italy had not yet joined us, is in a still worse position now, when the Italians are continually, if slowly, advancing against the Hapsburg monarchy.

"There is news from Russia that the Austrians are purposely creating an impression that the Russians intend to make a new invasion of Galicia. But that is doubtful. The Austrians are actually preparing for the Russian advance, and are evacuating Lemberg, not on account of any Russian intentions, but on account of German plans, which necessitate the accumulation of German forces as well. The Austrians alone will be unable to withstand even the present pressure of the Russians. Moreover, they are in need of reinforcements in the Bukowina, where the Russians are expected to deal a blow to help Roumania. The severe winter enables Russia to complete her organisations and to bestow her attention elsewhere."

HON. A. G. MACKAY'S CONDITION GRAVE

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 19.—A message from the office of Hon. A. G. MacKay, M.P.P., at Edmonton, received by his relatives here, stated that the condition of the late leader of the Opposition in the Ontario legislature, who is ill with a combination of pneumonia and quinsy, is far from satisfactory. Five physicians have been called in for consultation, and the condition of the patient is most critical.

Mr. Hector MacKay and Mrs. Neil MacDonald of Sydenham Township, are brother and sister of Hon. Mr. MacKay.

Sowing and Reaping.

To sow bad habits and reap peace of mind is impossible. To sow earth and reap heaven is impossible. To sow self-indulgence and reap joy is impossible. Good time and harvest are cause and effect. Youth is our sowing-time. We prepare our own sheaves. Manhood and womanhood will work no miracle of change. We must sow good in youth if we would reap the fruits of joy later.

SIGNOR FERRERO BLAMES GERMANY

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Signor Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, who recently returned from a visit to the French front, has given in an interview his ideas on the meaning of the war.

"What is happening now," he says "is more than war. A war is an accident, an adventure. The frightful perturbation of our epoch is a crisis of humanity, a moment in the history of the world as important as the advent of Christianism, the Reformation or the French Revolution. This storm is going to work a change in humanity. But in what manner?

"I have been obsessed by the mystery of present events. What was the genesis of this world crisis? I have sought an explanation of the catastrophe which broke upon us suddenly like a clap of thunder, and it seems to me that the secret of this convulsion of modern society is to be found in the secret of modern society itself.

"For years I have lived in the atmosphere of ancient Rome. Fervently I have studied the soul of that old Roman society. Fresh from my studies I went to America.

"What a change! I came to understand the essential differences between the civilization of Rome and the civilization of New York, between ancient and modern society.

"'Nature is bad, let us not follow nature. Let us create a social ideal a tradition, and respect it.' That represented the basic conviction of ancient societies.

"But the eighteenth century transformed humanity. The idea was born that nature is good and that man must live in intelligence with her—conquer nature and the world by science and constant progress — annihilate the cherished ideals of old.

"The German nation is the perfect expression of the new society. German civilization has but one ideal—'quantative;' conquest by science domination of the world. This perfect expression of a new society has engendered the maddest and most intolerable vanity. Such a result is logical.

"And the Germanic forces, the forces directed by the new vanity, have overflowed and come into conflict with the old Europe, where, mixed with the new tendencies, still subsist the ancient ideals."

POLICEMAN TO WED WIDOW HE AIDED

Henry O'Brien Met Mrs. Anna McRae When Her Automobile Broke Down in Patterson.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—When the automobile of Mrs. Anna McRae, a wealthy young widow of Rutherford N. J., broke down in Main Street Paterson, on Christmas Day, Policeman Henry O'Brien aided her in making repairs, and she said:

"You poor man, to have to stand out here in the cold all day."

"Yes'm, it's pretty tough, and especially for a fellow who always wanted a good home," said O'Brien.

"Well, I have a lovely home and you have been so kind you will be welcome any time you call."

O'Brien jotted down the number according to police regulations, and on his first night off he called, which was not according to police regulations.

Announcements were sent out yesterday that Mrs. McRae is to become the bride of O'Brien on February 21.

Swedish King To Insure Neutrality

Asks For Larger Land and Sea Forces in Order to Be Prepared

LONDON, Jan. 19.—At the opening of the Swedish Parliament, in the speech from the throne, as forwarded by Reuter's correspondent at Stockholm, King Gustave said:

"A formidable struggle of ever increasing intensity, which will decide the future of nations, is taking place. Our government earnestly hopes to be able always to maintain the neutrality which it decided to observe from the beginning of the war, but in order to maintain neutrality and the sovereignty of Sweden increased forces on land and sea must be in readiness.

"Sweden has felt the effects of the war in numerous ways during the past year. Belligerents have neglected in an ever increasing degree to observe international law providing for protection of neutrals and for limitation of deeds of violence."

King Gustave emphasised Sweden's part in upholding international law and the constant difficulties she is meeting in obtaining her economic rights on account of the attitude of belligerents. The government had been compelled more than once, he said, to resist attempts to place the industrial and commercial rights of the country under the usurped control of another Power.

On account of these conditions King Gustave asserted it was necessary to carry on vigorously the task of providing for national defence. He said the government would ask Parliament to appoint special delegates for the purpose of discussing national questions of a secret nature with the executive branches.

DISORDERLY SCENES IN PRUSSIAN DIET

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 19.—The discussion of the budget in the Prussian diet gave rise to disorderly scenes owing to interruptions by Dr. Karl Liebknecht and other Socialists, and to conflicting opinions expressed by members of different parties on the question of the reform of the electoral law. Herr Hirsch, Socialist, in the course of his speech, said:

"We demand the re-establishment of the complete independence of Belgium. If the enemy Governments are not yet ready to listen to demands for peace their attitude is in marked contrast to the feeling prevailing among the different peoples who everywhere are demanding peace. We demand electoral reform on behalf of women, and, above all, secrecy of the ballot."

CALL FOR 20,000 MEN IN QUEBEC DISTRICT

QUEBEC, Jan. 19.—Speaking to the Canadian press, Lieut.-Col. Pagee, commandant of the Fifth Military Division, with headquarters in Quebec, said that Quebec district will have to provide 20,000 volunteers as a pro rata in response to the recent call for more men for Canadian overseas contingents.

"Judging from the way Quebec district answered the previous calls for men," he said, "these 20,000 will soon be recruited.

Col. Pagee stated that no measure of coercion will be resorted to in the draft this force. He paid a high tribute to what the French-Canadians of Quebec have done so far, and also spoke highly of the part the clergy is taking to help recruiting.

FRANK.

"Two middle aged women were talking of the war. "Well," said one, if the worst should come I can keep the wolf from the door by singing." "Mable, you can," said the other matron, very earnestly, "that is if the wolf has a correct ear for music."

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Goneshaw, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," appears on the wrapper.

1,000 More Dentists

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The Minister of War will shortly submit to Chamber of Deputies a bill providing for a large addition in the number of dentists employed with the military forces. Under the bill a body of 1,000 dentists who will rank as non-commissioned officers and wear a special badge, will be created.

Signallers Have Plenty of Work

Rev. D. Farquharson Receives an Interesting Letter From His Son

The following interesting extracts are from letters received from Lance Corporal J. M. Farquharson, with the signallers of the 13th Battalion at the front, by his father, Rev. Dr. Farquharson, assistant pastor of St. Andrew's church:

December 16, 1915.

Life in the front line is not of the most pleasant character just at present. We have had almost continuous rain and the trenches are like canals. Quite a number of cases of trench feet have been reported. Trench feet are caused by standing in water for a long time. The feet swell, become discolored and are extremely painful. High rubber boots are supplied but even with them the feet can't be kept absolutely dry. Fortunately I am not in the first line, so have a few more comforts than the fellows up there. We were flooded out of our happy homes this morning and had to make a hurried getaway to our new headquarters, which as luck would have it are just completed.

By the way, McCartney, one of the original 13th signallers, is in Toronto. He was a lance corporal when he came out with us, and is one of the decentest chaps I ever met. At Ypres he lost his arm so was sent home to Canada. He hails from Scotland though I am not sure from what part. Mac is a good old scot and made some good pics for us in our first men in France. You can tell him that old fellows of the section are still alive and frisky. He doubtless knows that Bobbie Trew got a bullet through the neck but is getting along splendidly.

It is just three years since I left Durham so this will be my third Christmas away from home. There have certainly been some radical changes since then but I do not think that they have hurt me seriously. I had a good week in England; the great trouble is that leave does not come often enough. The work here is congenial and I have lots of room for improvement in my knowledge of Morse.

December 11, 1915.

Merry Christmas, Mother, and many of them. I wrote Father last night, but as [illegible] mailed the letter and am not sure until I get an envelope, I shall continue one to you also. Just as present two are undergoing the wet cure and are gradually being flooded out. Another foot and our present flag-outs will be under the water. It rained all last night, and is still raining. Between here and the front line is a small river which has overflowed its banks and is next thing to impassable. Our operator at relay is sitting on the table to keep out of the water. He has dammed up the entrance to the dug-out or he would be totally under water. Now the fellows live in water over their knees in a puzzle, but the majority of them seem to stick it out pretty well. They ought to postpone the war till decent weather sets in again.

December 16, 1915.

As usual I have neglected to mail the letters I have written as I suppose you will be worrying. Over here we know what is happening and naturally only worry at a few critical moments. As a rule the thought of danger does not enter your head. But in Agincourt, where you imagine we are up against it every minute I presume worry is part of the regular daily routine. However, I am fairly capable of looking after myself and certainly dont take any unnecessary or foolish risks. When a chap first comes out he is apt to be hit as a result of his own curiosity, but after he gets into the game he does not expose himself when he can avoid it. He has too much respect for the German snipers.

The water has gone down considerably so that although the trenches are still muddy they are much more comfortable than last week. It wouldn't be a bad war if it weren't for the winter rain and cold.

This is certainly a great job for smoking, especially from midnight till morning when everyone else is asleep. Sometimes we have a little music to cheer us up in the small hours but usually the only sound on the wires is someone O.K.-ing stations. The music comes from brigade headquarters where they have a gramophone which they play into the phone.

In the day time we are usually rushed off our feet with work. To-day we took and sent a total of 135 messages on the key. Then about one quarter of the time the line is taken up by officers talking to each other. Having the speaking apparatus attached to the instrument is a convenience to the officers, but it is a cause of much cursing from the signallers as the busiest part of the day the line is held up for conversational work.

CANADIAN CIGARETTES CANNOT BE PURCHASED NEAR THE FIRING LINE

Do you know what the lack of cigarettes and tobacco means to our troops in the fighting line?

Let us tell you in a word.

When the lads in khaki have enough to smoke, and this, unfortunately, is only a very rare occurrence, they feel, to use their own expressive phrase, "as fit as fiddles."

They are ready to tackle the Germans in any situation that may arise.

Tobacco gives our fighting men the necessary stimulant in the trenches; it fans their courage to a white heat, because when the Canadian soldiers are smoking they dont' care a darn for any German regiment breathing.

Won't you please do something, no matter how small, to make some brave man happy and bless you for the kind action? As little as one quarter will keep a man going with tobacco and cigarettes for almost a week if you will subscribe to Canada's Tobacco Fund, (organized by the Over-Seas Club.)

Remember, Canadian tobacco and cigarettes cannot be purchased at the front and it is only through the generosity of those at home that our boys can get them. All the tobacco and cigarettes sent to the front through Canada's Tobacco Fund, are Canadian manufactured, of the best quality, something that our men are used to and prefer over anything they could buy in France or Belgium.

Each contribution of 25 cents will supply a package containing 50 good quality Canadian manufactured cigarettes, one-fifth of a pound of good quality Canadian manufactured tobacco, a box of matches, and a reply post card.

Our readers can send their money to Canada's Tobacco Fund through the editor of the Examiner or can deposit it with any post office or bank with the full assurance that they are placing their money out to the very best possible advantage. Be careful to specify that your contribution is for Canada's Tobacco Fund which has been organized by the Over-Seas Club.

CHICAGO FATHER REFUSES BAIL FOR MURDEROUS SONS

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Further investigation into the alleged conspiracy of Irving and Herbert Updike to kill their parents was undertaken by the police, who are co-operating with the Updike family in clearing up the mystery still surrounding the case. Furman D. Updike, a millionaire and retired broker, still refuses to furnish bail for his sons, both of whom are in custody charged with conspiracy to commit a felony.

Although it was said at the time of his arrest that Herbert Updike was held only as a witness, a statement by the boy's father that he considered his sons equally guilty, and the report that Herbert had married a Chicago cabaret entertainer, influenced the police to investigate further.

According to the police Herbert Updike on Jan. 8 married Miss Nellie De Onsonne, at Crown Point, Ind. The authorities say a marriage license is on file at the county clerk's office in Crown Point, showing that the ceremony was performed by a justice of the peace. The young woman and Herbert, however, deny that they are married.

"THE GREEK SLAVE" THE NEXT OFFERING

Peterboro Operatic and Dramatic Society Had Enjoyable Night

The Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society held a combined business and social gathering in Coleman's Parlors last night, when all who recently took part in "San Toy" were present at a thoroughly enjoyable evening's amusement. Singing, cards and dancing were indulged in. A short review and criticism of the work this season was given by the directors, also a partial statement as to the finances. A complete statement will be issued as soon as possible. The Opera House and printing and advertising run well over two hundred dollars. The Opera House account for $171 came in for sharp objection, the members evidently being of the opinion that the fee was too large for a local show. Mr. R. J. Devey read the contract, which called for $90 per night with one free rehearsal, that sum not including orchestra, for which the usual fee is $12. The other $11 was for one extra rehearsal and the painted signs outside the opera house. Mr. Turner was asked for $75 per night, but would not agree as he was paying the extra license fee of $250. The rehearsel room in the I. M. Green Music Store cost $1 per night, and the dress rehearsal was held in St. John's School by the courtesy of Col. Stevenson and Mr. J. J. Howden, wardens, who most kindly gave the free use of the school for this purpose. The 93rd battalion band sold over $80 of tickets. Miss Annie Bickerstath $28.50 and Mrs. R. J. Devey $23. Miss Bickerstath was presented with a handsome box of chocolates. The ticket returns are not yet all to hand.

The next work to be undertaken will be more of the nature of a good opera entitled "A Greek Slave" in work which has never been given in Peterborough and will have the best efforts of all concerned in study and production. The entrance fee will be one dollar. The business part over, dainty refreshments were served, and, on the motion of Mr. W. H. Barry, musical honors and hearty cheers were given for Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey, a most enjoyable evening ending with the National Anthem.

WORTH TRYING.

Mrs. Grimes—"How in the world do you get rid of your stale bread? I have to throw lots of mine away."

Mrs. Smarte—"There's no need for you to do that. Why not do as I do? I just hide it away from the children."

Mrs. Grimes—"Hide it away from the children? What then?"

Mrs. Smarte—"Then the children find it and eat up every morsel of it."

Electric Youngsters Threw Big Scare Into Cap Simpson's Bunch Last Night For the First Forty Minutes, the Score Being Tied at the End of the Second Period

FINAL WAS 8 TO 3

The Electric Juniors returned from Lindsay to-day in a happy mood. No, they didn't beat Lindsay in the return O.H.A. game, last night, but they threw such a scare into Cap. Simpson's bunch that they came back almost as tickled as if they had won the game. The score, 8 to 3 in favour of Lindsay, on the surface, doesn't show any particular reason why the Scugog bunch should have been frightened, but at the end of the first two periods the figures read 3—3, with the Electrics looking if anything to have the better chance of winning out. They had Billy McCord, the Lindsay coach, Major Carew, and other Lindsay magnates so worried at that stage, that in the rest period before the last twenty-minute session, Lindsay put in a protest that Legros' goal stick was wider in the blade than the law allowed. Just about the time the teams should have taken the ice to play the last period Referee Harvey Sproule invaded the Petes' dressing-room and insisted on examining the said stick. After borrowing a pair of calipers he found the war club a fraction of an inch too broad. Billy Breen offered to lend the mate of the stick to the Lindsay goaler, but finally the matter was compromised by the Lindsay Club lending Legros one of their spare sticks. There is just a little doubt as to whether this protest scene was staged on conscientious grounds, or whether it was destined to give the Lindsay team a much-needed rest. At all events there was a twenty-five minute delay, and it certainly helped the Lindsay gang, who were looking pretty groggy at the end of the second period. They came back like a new team in the last session.

It was one grand little game of hockey. The ice was lightning fast, and the pace never slackened for a moment. In the early stages of the first period Lindsay made things interesting, but Legros was unbeatable and held them at bay until the Petes found their bearing in the small rink and settled down to work. With the Petes a man short, through a penalty to Montgomery, Lindsay scored twice in quick succession after sixteen minutes' play, but Peterborough got one back before the end of the period. In the second period the Electrics had the edge and outscoring Lindsay 2 to 1, had the count even when they changed goals for the last period. Then came the "goal stick" episode, and finally after a long delay, the last period. It was anybody's game when they finally got away for the last twenty minutes, and it was a case of which team got the break. It was the Scugog team who scored first and when they followed with another immediately after, the battle was over. The score put all kinds of ginger into the winners, and they were like a new team, while the Petes tired and the last goals did not matter.

The Electrics made many friends by their fast, clean playing, and they have no reason to be ashamed of their showing, which was all the more creditable in view of the fact that Rose and Graham had been through a strenuous intermediate game the night before, while Lowes and Montgomery both climbed out of a sick bed to figure in the game.

Legros, who has been playing defence, was moved back into the nets and the tall boy played a whale of a game.

In the first period, before the Petes got the hang of the smaller ice surface and the round corners, Lindsay gave him a lot of work to do, and he weeded out shot after shot coolly and cleverly. His work was magnificent all through. Frank Montgomery, playing his first game with the Colts made an impressive debut, and his playing in the first two periods, especially, was distinctly high class, his rushing being spectacular. Lowes checked hard and relieved the situation on many occasions. On the forward line the palm must go to Lornie Rose. The Junior Captain was consistently clever all the way and kept tearing down the side in a manner that was a constant menace to the Lindsay defence. "That kid is good enough for any intermediate team," was Referee Sproule's comment after the game. Rose got two of the three goals and was good all the way. Graham, who like Rose, had played against the 93rd Intermediates on the previous night, was also strongly in the limelight by his speed and stick-handling, while Cherrett and Hamilton both did good work.

For Lindsay, as always, Art Carew was the star, especially in the first and last periods. In the second session he looked to be tiring, but the long delay put him right again, and he was a whirlwind in the last period. Read, the Bobcaygeon boy, was a close second, doing some fine rushing, while Mills, at centre, was decidedly dangerous around the nets. Haugh did fine work on the defence, while Mitchell who, like Read, hails from Bobcaygeon, was good in the nets. The teams lined up as follows:

Lindsay		Electric Juniors
	Goal.
Mitchell		Legros
	Defence
Haugh		F. Montgomery
Read		Lowes
	Rover
Welsh		Graham
	Centre
Mills		Cherrett
	Right Wing
Scott		P. Hamilton
	Left Wing
Carew		Rose

Referee—Harvey Sproule, Toronto.

Both teams were on their toes from the start, the Electrics determined that Lindsay would not get the jump on them as they did in the game here. Cherrett had the first shot when he secured the puck from the face-off and drilled one which Mitchell stopped. Haugh drew a penalty for tripping and Hamilton followed him to the side. Lindsay pressed, but Legros picked off everything they heaved at him, and as the minutes drifted by without a score the Petes settled down and began to make things interesting. It was clever, fast hockey all the way with the teams going at full speed. Montgomery drew a penalty for a trip, and while he was off Lindsay scored twice. Read got the first one on a fine rush down the side and a shot that glanced off Legros' stick into the nets. In thirty seconds Lindsay added another, Welsh scoring from a scrimmage. Almost from the face-off the Petes got it back, when Rose broke away in a beautiful rush. He outskated the Lindsay forwards, fooled Haugh by bluffing a shot, and then slid the rubber into the corner of the nets—the best play of the period. The score at the end of twenty minutes was Lindsay 2, Peterborough 1.

The Electrics had lots of "pep" when the second period opened, and out-played Lindsay for the next twenty minutes. Rose tied the score three minutes after the period opened when he shoved one past Mitchell from a scrimmage. Lindsay took the lead again a minute later when Carew fooled Legros with a bullet shot from outside the defence. The Petes kept hammering along and were dangerous frequently. Graham lost a beautiful chance when Rose drew both Lindsay defence men out and then centred neatly; Graham hurried up the play and hit the goal post. Then Rose drew a penalty for a heavy body check, and Montgomery followed for tripping, but the five Petes on the ice held their own until the two were back. Then Lowes drifted up the side and slammed a counter past Mitchell, and the teams were tied up. There was no further score in the period. Just before time was up Lowes and Welsh drew penalties.

After the long delay over the goal stick squabble the teams started out on the last stage. Montgomery nearly scored for the Petes on a lone rush and good shot which Mitchell nailed. Graham was hurt, but returned to the ice a moment or two later. Finally, after three minutes' hard playing, Lindsay broke the tie. Read went up the side and shot dead on. Legros stopped the shot, but Mills was on hand to bat in the rebound. Then Carew got away for one of his spectacular rushes and wound up with a score. Lornie Rose came back with two pretty dashes, but Mitchell nailed his drives on both occasions. After thirteen minutes' playing Mills made it 6 to 3 on a pass from Carew. Scott added another on a side shot, and ten seconds before the bell rang, Carew got the last one. In the last period Lindsay shifted Read up to rover and Scott back to the defence and the move helped their team work. They earned the decision on their form in the last period, but it was a closer battle than the score gives any idea of.

AFTER THE WAR.

After the war there will come a reaction. Men will have seen enough of the rough side of life—for a time. At any rate, they will see the softer side among their womenfolk when they get home. The women have turned their hands to outside work with wonderful success, but it is now their true work; or if it is, men will never think so, and the majority of women will always want to please them.

Peterboro's Tankard Rinks Defeated

While Peterboro's district cup rinks were qualifying to play in Toronto, the two tankard rinks were eliminated by Lindsay yesterday afternoon. Mr. George Giroux was six up in his game with Mr. L. V. O'Connor, but Mr. W. H. Taylor was down 13 in his game with Little's good rink. Peterboro lost by a margin of four.

GUARD THE SUEZ FIRST

By Lovat Fraser
(From the London Daily Mail)

We have now got the truth about Bagdad, and it is not pleasant. We took great and unnecessary risks, and the result has temporarily gone against us. Four successive official statements have now been issued about the rebuff before Bagdad. If these statements have only disclosed the facts very gradually the reasons are obvious.

We must make up our minds that we shall not get to Bagdad just yet. We must also grasp the undoubted fact that the Turks are evidently in greater strength now in Mesopotamia than was commonly supposed.

I shall not discuss the wisdom of the advance to Bagdad, about which, while dutifully trying only to say such things as were encouraging, I have for the outset held very strong views. All that will be said here is that since the war began very great demands have been made upon the army of India, which is by no means inexhaustible. It has been called upon to furnish troops to fight in Mesopotamia, in the Aden hinterland, in East Africa, in Egypt, in Gallipoli, in France, and in China, to say nothing of providing garrisons in the Persian gulf and repelling tribal outbreaks on its own northern frontier.

Nor is it necessary at this juncture to worry too much about Persia, except in regard to one factor. That factor is represented by a place called Hamaden. If you look at a map you will find that Hamaden is roughly midway between Teheran and Bagdad. News travels quickly in these wild countries.

Now at Hamaden, as the telegrams tell us, there has gathered a considerable collection of freebooters of various nationalities. Thither have flocked the German and Austrian agents who have been infesting Persia, the warlike Consuls, the stray Turks, the corrupt members of the Persian parliament with itching palms, the prisoners of war from Siberia who have made adventurous escapes, and all the bribed tribal desperadoes of Persia, who have been lured by cases of rifles and bags of gold. At the head of this motley crew is, apparently, Prince Henry XXXI. of Reuss, the German minister to Persia.

I happened to know the gentleman slightly. You would not mistake him for Von Hindenburg, and I doubt whether, whichever way he proposes to move, he can do very much mischief. If you take your map again and look northward towards the frosty Caucasus, you will see marked the City of Tiflis. At Tiflis sits the Grand Duke Nicholas, the very good friend of this country and a commander with a very good army. Russia has many interests in northern Persia. Russian forces are known to be in Persia now. That is why I am not very distressed about Prince Henry of Reuss and his gang of outlaws. At the same time, Hamadan will doubtless remain for some time to come a place worth watching.

At present, however, most people are watching the Balkans and the Aegean though if there is any one, official or unofficial, who really knows what is going on in these areas I have yet to meet him. This much I know, that the situation is far more complex and difficult than it seems, although even on the surface it looks complex enough. Very grave and weighty decisions are now being taken. We can only hope, in all sincerity that the decisions will be right. Since the war began we have never been confronted with such a series of problems in which it is possible to argue with the most passionate conviction from two opposing points of view.

Can the despised journalist say anything useful at such a juncture? I venture to think he can. But there are certain things he should not say. He should not attempt to discuss whether the allies should remain at Saloniki. Above all, he should neither advocate nor oppose fresh schemes of desperate adventure in the Balkans. He can discuss, and criticise, if he so desires, the decisions on these difficult problems when they have been reached and tested. At this stage he should leave these questions alone.

The journalist can, however, state certain factors which throw light on the situation. The first of these is that Greece will not draw the sword in the cause of the allies, although it is really her own cause also. Then there is the question of Roumania—

But perhaps I had better say nothing at all about Roumania. The theory of certain ministers is that the lightest whisper in the wicked Daily Mail reverberates like thunder throughout the east. If I were to say anything about Roumania, straightaway it would be borne on the wings of the wind across Hungary. It would whirl through the deserted woods of the pretty capital of Sinaia, it would cause an instant stir among the groups sitting at little round tables at Capsa's in Bucharest, it would produce scurryings to and fro in the royal palace, it would be flung across the muddy waters of the Danube to Rutschuk it would penetrate to the remotest recesses of the Balkans.

But is there no clue to the tangle of the near east? Is there no one thing we ought to do first? Is there no clear principle of action which should be settled first, and being settled, all other decisions follow, in due dependence upon that one primary consideration? Often, in a plexus of difficulties, if we can establish one dominating principle which must at all hazards be fulfilled, the rest of the problems fall into the right perspective, and each can be settled in turn after observance of the one overwhelming need. Is there no such clew to the solution of all the near east anxieties?

I think there is, and it is this: Guard Egypt first.

I have urged again and again in these columns that, for a naval power commanding the sea, the key of the east in Cairo, and the keyhole is the Suez canal. Egypt and the canal are for us, and therefore for all our allies, far more important than the Balkans, or the Dardanelles, or Constantinople, or Bagdad. I have scoffed at the people who have talked so much and so anxiously about our prestige in the east of the character and foundations of which they seem to know nothing whatsoever.

Let em tell them that for us, at this juncture, our prestige throughout the east, to its most distant islands, will stand or fall, not be failure or success at the Dardanelles, not by adventures in the Balkans, not by a mine or thrust at Bagdad or in Syria, but more than anything else by our ability to hold the Suez canal.

The Suez canal is our jugular vein. We must hold it or we are undone. Fail to hold it and to make it impregnable against attack and you will have trouble in India to-morrow, dismay throughout Australasia, and the instant collapse of our prestige in the far east. Had the war so shaped itself at the outset that we decided not to use the Mediterranean route, the position would have been different. But, having held the canal with ease for sixteen months, we must run no risk of peril there now.

Here then, I venture to suggest, is a guiding principle upon which all our decisions regarding the near east should turn. It does not necessarily mean a modification of our policy at Saloniki, or on the Tigris, or anywhere else. These are matters on which I do not propose to offer any opinion. I am well aware of the submarine question and all that it implies. I only lay down this one consideration, which I believe to be the key to all our other problems. Guard Egypt first, and let all other problems be dependent upon the guarding of Egypt.

The two great decisive events in this war so far have been the battle of the Marne and the battle of Nancy. The trench warfare has served its purpose, but it will not be eternal. We have to prepare for greater battles yet, not at the ends of the earth, but at our very doors.

I believe this war will be decided in France. The more the Germans lure ourselves and the French away from France, the better they serve their own purpose. We shall only crush Prussian militarism on Prussian soil. Let us guard our world routes, continue to press at the enemy's vitals, and leave our prestige to take care of itself.

HOME RUN BAKER HARDEST HIT BY BASEBALL PEACE

Those moaning sounds that have filled the air recently are not the distant rumblings of an active volcano—they merely are cries of anguish that escape Home Run Frank Baker whenever he thinks of the might-have-been.

Just a few brief months ago Frankie was approached by Federal agents, who spoke to him thusly:

"Come and join us. We will give you $10,000 as a cash bonus, and we'll give you an ironclad three-year contract calling for $8,000 a year."

"Honestly, will you?" queried Frankie.

"Just to show you that we mean business," spoke up James A. Gilmore, "I hand you herewith ten $1,000 bills, and I place before you a contract stating that we will pay you $8,000 per year and guarantee the payment."

Passes Up Big Offer.

And Gilmore did that very thing. Baker fondled the yellowbacks in a loving way. He hummed and he hawed. He started to say, "All right, I'll sign," several ties, but always his tongue seemed to refuse to form the words.

Finally he sputtered:

"It's a swell offer, gents, but I can't take it. I'm still under contract with Connie Mack, and some day I may want to get back with him. Furthermore, you can offer me a job for only three years. After that I may be out in the world."

"But," interposed Gilmore, "we offer you $24,000 for those three years. That's as much as you'd earn in organized baseball in six years."

But Baker threw down the Federal offer; he said he would like to take the matter up again next spring—meaning the spring of 1916.

Take What He Gets Now.

And now the Feds are dead. If Baker wants to go back into organized baseball he will have to go back at any sort of salary the club owners decide to pay him. That probably will be in the neighborhood of $3,500 a year. O, yes, Baker is worth more than that—but ball players, in the future, aren't going to get all they are worth. And you must remember, too, that Baker is in bad with his owners.

Can you blame the home run king for the moans that escape him when he recollects what he did—passed up an offer of $24,000 for three years?

Very Depressing.

A man who attended an evening service in a certain church in Greenock, Scotland, one Sunday says he had three faults to find with the congregation, though none with the preacher. First, they have their church badly lighted; second, they cannot sit in the House of God without indulging in a hum of conversation; and third, all through the preacher's address they showed a lack of self-restraint by a constant barking cough. It was all very depressing to a stranger.

COMPULSORY SERVICE AND BRAINS.

Swift promotion from the ranks is involved in the idea of universal military service. If it is the duty of the citizen to be a soldier, it is his duty to place not only his body but his brains at the service of the nation. Hence it is also the duty of statesmen to enlist in the service of the State not only the bodies of the citizens but their brains.

No class in the community has a monopoly of military genius. An army needs railway experts, scientific experts, experts in food and clothing, experts in hygiene. It needs fighting experts. Who knows what military genius may be possessed by the captain of a victorious lacrosse team or a victorious hockey team?

We are told that in this war the aristocrats have shown courage. No one need doubt it. All classes, all races, all nations have shown courage. But the real test of the aristocrat is his willingness to fight under the best leader, no matter from what class he may spring.

If Great Britain intends to adopt universal service, it must be not only a service of bodies but a service of brains. The highest positions in the British armies must be open to mechanics, peasants, clerks, labourers. All social distinctions must be ruthlessly broken down. Everything must be forgotten except the desire to enlist the highest military genius in the service of ourselves and our Allies.—Toronto Star.

CHRISTIANITY AND KULTUR.

"As the Almighty allowed His Son to be crucified to redeem mankind, so Germany is destined to crucify humanity to secure its salvation. It is because we are so pure that we were chosen by the Almighty to be His instruments to stay the sinful nations. It is the duty of German soldiers to strike without mercy. Half measures would be wicked."

Thus speaks Pastor Philippi, of Berlin, according to an excerpt from one of his sermons as translated for the London Methodist Times. On the same authority we learn from Dr. Seeburg, professor of theology in the University of Berlin, that

"Germany in killing her enemies and invading their territories is simply performing a work of charity. Germany loves the other nations, and is only punishing them for their own good."

Why seek elsewhere for evidence that Germany began this war or for the reasons impelling its act, when it is all here in "kultur's" interpretation of the cardinal tenet of Christianity—Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men!—New York Herald.

HATES GERMANS SO GIVES TO BELGIANS

Little Listowell, Ont., Tot Sends Money to Feed One Belgian Child For a Month

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—Among the donations that have come into the hands of the Belgian Relief Committee, at the offices at 59 St. Peter street, is one for $2.00 from a baby girl in Listowel, Ont., "who just hates Germans."

Perhaps everyone may not approve of the sentiment which prompted the gift, but this little tot's money will provide the food that will keep the breath of life for one month in some other little one, who perhaps also hates Germans for an even better reason. Life for a month. Few Canadians can realise what that means. The Belgians—three millions of them—are living from hand to mouth. They have no money with which to buy food, there is no food to buy if there were money, no food except that provided through the generosity of their allies.

Wheat in the one great need and Canada can supply it. If every little tot in Canada hated Germans $2.50 worth, many a shipload of the much needed wheat would go to feed the hungry Belgian kiddies.

No Spring Show.

It was decided not to hold a Spring Stallion Show in 1916, due to the apathy and disinterestedness of owners in this district during the past two years.

Field Field Crop Competition.

On Mr. R. Denne's suggestion it was decided to hold a standing field crop competition again this year.

A letter from Lt.-Col. Johnston acknowledged the receipt of $50, the Exhibition's donation to the 93rd Battalion Band.

Mr. V. Eastwood urged a cheerful view of the grounds problem. This year was an inopportune time to propose the by-law and the expected happened. With a restoration of normal times the city could be depended upon to generously support the Exhibition.

"But our lease runs out this year," observed Mr. Turner.

Mr. Eastwood replied that there was no reason to feel hopelessly down hearted.

Mr. Denne agreed with Mr. Eastwood and proposed that the Directors get together, and possibly buy the present grounds, themselves.

Officers Elected.

After a four years' presidency Mr. Garbutt retired and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., was elected to take the reins. Mr. Gillespie said that Mr. Garbutt had been one of the Board's most efficient chairmen and untiring workers; as his successor he would look confidently to some solution of the grounds problem and would strive toward that end.

The following officers were elected:

Hon.-Pres.—J. H. Garbutt.

President—G. A. Gillespie.

1st Vice President—C. E. Moore.

2nd Vice President—J. J. Turner Sr.

Sec.-Treas.—F. J. A. Hall.

Directors — Wm. Roberts, A. B. Mann, T. O. Gibbs, J. A. Storey, T. Cruickshanks, R. M. Glover, S. Milburn, E. L. Duffus, J. O. Ball, J. Baptie, W. J. Cox, F. Wise, T. H. Hooper, C. F. Kitney, T. Brown, G. W. Green, R. J. Shaw, R. Denne.

Dates of Fair.

The dates for the 1916 year were decided for September 11, 13 and 14. The directors will, themselves, engage the judges this year, instead of accepting those sent out by the Department.

W. Roberts and W. J. Cox were appointed delegates to the Ontario Association of Fairs next month.

Mr. Wm. Collins and Mr. Ed. M. Elliott were re-appointed auditors.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Turner, that the Secretary write the Street Railway Co. for a grant to cover the lighting bill, this year—$55. Formerly it was looked after by the Peterborough Light and Power Co., but this year the Hydro Commission forwarded a light bill of $55.

Mr. Denne and Mr. Eastwood moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Garbutt for his service of 25 years on the Board. Both speakers spoke in glowing words of the work done by Mr. Garbutt.

Farm Credit.

Mr. Eastwood incidentally remarked that Canadian banks are now considering the question of providing low rates of credit to farmers for the purpose of increasing production and above all, of placing agriculture on as sound a basis as possible for the future upbuilding of the country.

Everything in the dear old village seemed the same to Jones after his absence of four years. The old church, the village pump, the ducks on the green, the old men smoking while their wives gossiped—it was so restful after the rush and bustle of the city. Suddenly he missed something. "Where's Hodge's windmill?" he asked in surprise. "I can only see one mill, and there used to be two," the native gazed thoughtfully round, as if to verify the statement. Then he said slowly: "They pulled one down. There weren't enough wind for two of 'em!"

HOW THE IRISH HELPED THE GORDONS.

In an interview on the subject of Irish gallantry at the front, Mr. J. O'D. Derrick, the United Irish League organizer for Scotland, gave some particulars of an action in which the Gordon Highlanders were saved by the Irish:

Might I recall that on December 26, 1914, the Germans made an attack on the British trenches occupied by the Gordon Highlanders, who in numbers were overwhelmed. Of the battalion only 170 were alive. Just then the Gordons heard the strains of "God Save Ireland." It was the Connaught Rangers. Private McGregor of the Gordons, telling the story, wrote:

"Well, I have seen some reckless Irishmen in my time but nothing to match the recklessness and daring of these gallant Rangers.

"The Germans now would probably outnumber about 2,000, against 600 Connaughts, and at that period, 70 of us, but had they 50,000 Germans, I don't believe in my soul they would have stood before the Irish. They were simply irresistible, and all the time kept singing, 'God Save Ireland.' One huge, red-haired son of Erin, having broken his rifle, got possession of a German officer's sword, and everything that came in the way of this giant went down. I thought of Wallace. Four hundred and seventy Huns were killed and wounded, and we took 70 prisoners. Had it not been for the Irish I would not be writing this, and when it comes to a hand-to-hand job there is nothing in the whole British army to approach them. God save Ireland, and Irishmen!" This is a tribute from a member of the Gordons.

NURSE FINDS HER BROTHER DYING ON HOSPITAL SHIP.

LONDON, January 14.—One of the lesser tragedies of the war enacted on a British ship plying between Malta and the Dardanelles, became known here.

Edith Alway, a nurse of the Canadian Red Cross, doing duty on the hospital ship learned that an Australian private of the same name, was aboard. She searched the ship and finally found him. He was dying of pneumonia, but he recognized his sister five minutes before he died.

Private Alway left Canada for Australia six years ago.

TO CURE ECZEMA

It is necessary that the remedy used shall not only have natural healing power, but shall also contain germicidal properties. Everyone knows that where there is disease, there are germs, and it is the persistence of these germs that prevents an eczema patch from healing. Zam-Buk is such a strong germicide that germs cannot live where it is applied.

The germs having been destroyed, the healing, soothing, herbal essences in Zam-Buk soon have their effect. Gradually, new, healthy tissue replaces the old, and diseased, and eczema is ended.

If you suffer from eczema, ulcers, abscess, poisoned wound, ringworm, pimples, boils or any other disease of the skin, don't delay, but secure a box of Zam-Buk at once, and prove for yourself its power.

Calls On Britain To Follow Lincoln in Blockade

London Chronicle Advises Following Civil War Precedents Closely---Admits Baltic Presents Difficult Problem

LONDON, Jan. 20.—"On the general question of the British blockade of Germany," says the Chronicle, "two points must not be forgotten, one of right, the other of expediency. On the question of right one must remember that international law exists. As to expediency, it is not to our interest to make enemies of Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway or the United States. From most of them we draw substantial, from some almost indispensable, help. The skill shown by the Foreign Office in safeguarding their interests and sensibilities reflects much credit on that department.

"As regards the United States the problem is this. The United States does not suffer the hardship of being itself inside the blockading cordon, but it has great trading interests and traditional concern with this branch of international law. We have throughout justified our action under the order in council by referring to the American development of the doctrine of continuous voyage in the civil war. In regard to contraband, the American cases justify us to the hilt. In regard to the blockade, they are less conclusive, but one may say they support it in principle.

"It was perhaps a mistake that our government in drafting the order in council did not model its terms on earlier precedents. America did not suffer by this in substance, but American attachment to legal form was unsatisfied and affronted, and the question is whether we could not remedy this by altering the form of the order in council.

"A desirable thing, if possible, would be to substitute a proclamation as close as possible to the text of Mr. Lincoln's blockade proclamation in 1861. The only obvious difficulty is that the Baltic. We are bound to blockade Germany's Baltic ports, but we cannot, except by submarine, blockade them in the Baltic itself. It is a feature of the old style Lincoln blockade that it bars all comers impartially, and it is only in the Baltic itself that we can bar all comers from the Scandinavian countries. The point has already been taken against us by Mr. Wilson, and except through the activities of our submarines we have provided no direct answer."

The Westminster Gazette, which frequently voices the views of the government, admits that more stringent measures should be taken to restrict overseas trade with Germany, but adds:

"It is idle to suppose we can get all we want for the allied cause from neutral countries without making concessions in return."

The Gazette contends that any blockade policy must be framed and presented to neutral governments jointly by Russia, France, Great Britain and Italy. It suggests that the answer to the American note should go not from Great Britain alone but from the Allies in concert, and that it should contain a full statement of the objects for which the Allies are contending in the war and of their case against the Central Powers.

The Evening Standard says a technical blockade of Germany would not solve the difficulty. In its opinion the solution should be reached by an extension of the list of absolute contraband so as to include every commodity necessary to enable Germany to continue the war. It says that in such circumstances the British navy could effectively "ration" all of Germany.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—It is officially denied that Montenegro has yielded to Austria.

LONDON, Jan. 20. — Sweden is greatly annoyed over Great Britain's seizure of provisions on the Swedish-American liners.

LONDON, Jan. 20.— An order has been issued by the commander of the German forces in Russia to confiscate everything they come across.

BOMBARD BULGARIAN BASE

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Hundreds of Bulgarian soldiers were killed, and a very large number wounded in a bombardment of Petritsi by a squadron of twenty-five French aeroplanes, according to despatches received in Athens and forwarded by the correspondent there of the Evening Standard. Great material damage was also caused by the bombardment, the advices state.

The provisioning of the Bulgarian forces on the Greco-Serbian frontier is being conducted with the greatest difficulty owing to the condition of the roads, due to bad weather, the correspondent adds. Aviators report he says, that the Bulgarian Army at Gheygeli is being provisioned from the Veles district, the supplies being carried on the shoulders of large bodies of peasants whose services have been commandeered for the purpose.

The Petritsi mentioned by the correspondent is probably Petrich, fifty-three miles northeast of Salonica.

Japan To Build Three Capital Ships

TOKIO, Jan. 18.—One superdreadnought, two cruisers, one destroyer, three submarines, and two special service ships constitute the programme of naval building for Japan for the coming year. Admiral Kato, Minister for Marine, explained the naval expansion project before the Budget committee of the Diet yesterday in response to an interpellation. The battleship will be about the same type as the Fuso and Yamashiro, which was recently launched and will carry twelve fourteen-inch guns and sixteen six-inch guns. The two cruisers will have a speed of 28 knots. They will probably be in the nature of light scout ships. Their armament has not yet been decided. The submarines will have a displacement of 70 tons each, a speed of 18 knots on the surface and 10 knots in the water, and will carry one gun.

Admiral Kato expressed the opinion that the war in Europe would not necessitate any considerable alteration in the naval armament of the great powers. He fully recognized he said, the effectiveness of aircraft and submarines as weapons of offense as demonstrated in the present war, but he believed that these facts hardly affected the position of the battleship as an engine of war. The Minister said that equipment was now being provided on ships against air attacks. He was confident that the dreadnoughts remained the basic unit of great navies.

The Admiral further said that in deciding the armaments for new battleships the naval authorities preferred the twelve fourteen-inch gun principle to the eight fifteen-inch of the British and German navies, because they deemed the former more advantageous than the latter from the viewpoint of naval tactics. Furthermore, the authorities believed that there would occur no change in the shape and size of warships and naval guns in the near future. The Minister's remarks brought out the fact that Japan's eventual programme included the establishment of a first line fleet of eight battleships, of eight great battle cruisers.

Admiral Kato was asked particularly by K. Kobayashi, a member of the committee, as to the comparative strength of the Japanese navy and those of Great Britain, Germany and the United States. The member also wanted to know whether the naval authorities were confident of victory in case of war—for instance, in case of war with the United States. He asked what plan the navy had in case the United States attacked Japan with her naval strength twice that of the Japanese navy. To this Admiral Kato replied that figures do not always decide the issue of a battle. He is quoted as having added: "If the American navy invades Japan we have only to encounter it with the best tactics and art of warfare, to the last vessel and last man, meanwhile relying on the dignity of the august Emperor and the strong support of a sixty-millions nation. This is the decision of our navy in such an eventuality."

Cleanness of body was ever esteemed to proceed from a due reverence to God, to society and to ourselves.—Bacon.

SWISS OFFICERS ARE ACCUSED OF TREASON

GENEVA, Jan. 19.—Colonel Maurice de Wattenwyl and Colonel Karl Egli, both of the Swiss General Staff, have been charged with high treason.

It is understood that the two colonels are charged with having communicated to Germany information regarding the French positions along the French-Swiss frontier. According to other accounts, it is alleged that they gave every night to the Austro-German military attache the reports received at Swiss headquarters concerning the situation, the movements, and the disposition of Swiss troops along the frontiers.

GOVERNMENT MAY REQUISITION ALL BRITISH MARINE

LONDON, January 19.—The requisitioning of steamers for Government account is keenly discussed in the newspapers. It is stated that many brokers are of the opinion that the Government intends gradually to requisition the whole of the British mercantile marine, but the Times asserts there is no ground for this belief.

The Times, however, suggests a comprehensive scheme to put this into effect. The scheme provides that the Government shall commandeer all ships, paying the owners as hire a certain percentage of their original cost. Profits above this rate of hire would go partly to the owners and party to establish a fund which, after the war, would be loaned to owners without interest for the purposes of new ship construction.

Neutral shipping under the plan would be permitted to trade with Great Britain and her colonies only on the same terms as British ships. If neutral countries are unwilling to consent to this arrangement, "they cannot expect the same treatment as British ships after the war," says the Times.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

If we are in too great a hurry to end the war, and kiss and be friends, and have a piece "jolly," and glasses all round, we only delay the fruition of our hopes by many months. Hurry is always the parent of delay.—Spectator.

Doubts Army Will Stand By the King

BERLIN, Jan. 20. — Orders have been issued to the effect that telegraph messages from Athens to Germany, Austria, Bulgaria or Turkey must be written in plain language.

"Persons in a position to judge do not agree as to the dependability of the Greek Army," says the Cologne Gazette. "Apparently the King controls a considerable portion of the higher officers, and in view of his popularity among the people it will not be an easy matter to compel him to step out.

"The King has told the Ministers of the central Powers that they were to remain with him."

Death of Mr. Nelson Beavis in Asphodel

On Sunday Last—Was a Faithful Member of Hastings Methodist Church

The death occurred at his late residence, lot 8, con. 4, Asphodel, on Sunday, Jan. 16th, of Mr. Nelson Beavis, aged 63 years(2 months and 14 days.

The late Mr. Beavis has not been in the best of health for the past year or two, having been afflicted with stomach trouble. About two weeks before his death his trouble became acute and he gradually became weaker, despite the fact that everything that loving hands and medical aid could do. But it was not until two or three days before his death that hope of his recovery was abandoned. Many of his closest friends visited him during his last hours and witnessed a Christian fortitude that should inspire them to more holy living.

Deceased was a son of the late Mr and Mrs. Adam Beavis. He was married in the year 1882 on the 26th of January to Emma Laing, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Laing of North Monaghan. Mr. Beavis leaves to mourn the loss of a loving and kind husband and father, his wife and two children, Gordon and Miss Mae both at home. The brothers and sisters surviving him are Mrs. M. I. Christie and Miss Ellen Beavis of Peterborough and Mrs. E. J. Laing of Norwood, Mr. Wm. Beavis of B.C. Mr. Bert Beavis of Campbellford, Mr. Henry Beavis of Lakefield, Rev. N. B. Beavis of Lusaland, Sask. The late Mr. Beavis was a lifelong and consistent member of the Methodist church and for several years a member of the official board of the Hastings Methodist church. Nowhere, except in his own home, will he be more missed than in the church of his choice as it was seldom indeed that his place there was vacant.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon to the Hastings (Trent Valley) cemetery under the direction of the Canadian Order of Foresters, of which he has been a member for several years.

The number of floral tributes received testified in some degree to the esteem in which he was held, among those with whom he was most intimately associated.

Dark Parts of Grain Make Blood Non-Acid.

The dark parts of the grains contain valuable saline matters which every human system requires to keep the blood non-acid. Highly refined cereals do not contain these dark parts of the grains, but a whole grain food such as Roman Meal does.

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a dark-coloured cereal because the dark parts of the grains are not removed. It is rich in saline matters, highly nutritious, and a perfect health food. It prevents indigestion, and relieves constipation or your money back.

IX.—RED, THE MEDIATOR

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

ALOYSIUS WALSH, the saxe they call "Red," was playing the mouth organ. He exhaled the melody and inhaled the accompaniment, while Patsy Barry sat beside him on the bench and kicked the wooden partition beneath, tempo marcato.

Outside the cold was intense, and the constantly opening door so lowered the temperature of the room that the music fairly steamed from Aloysius' lips in little jets of vapor. Patsy's nose peeped, cherrylike, from the shade of his enormous cap, and his whole attitude was one of absorbed interest in the performance. He admired good music; not so the manager at Forty-fifth street, who stuck his head through an opening in the partition.

"Quit dat noise, youse two," he growled, "or I'll kick do bot'n yes out er dis."

They quit incontinently, for the manager was of a decisive habit with messenger boys. He had just risen from a tender conversation with "B. G." in the main office, who clicked him a vivid description of herself as tall and blond, and he sighed as he pictured her languid eye and moist red lip. If he but knew it, "B. G." was stout and forty, with a three days' growth of beard and more redolent of whisky than the manager at Forty-fifth street himself.

It was scant half past 8, and the theaters were in. A light snow fell, and a bleak wind swept Broadway clear of all traffic save the cars and one or two belated playgoers. The manager lighted a fresh stogie and prepared for a quiet evening.

Aloysius and Patsy were "doping" the horses at New Orleans with the aid of a tattered pink newspaper. They were keen sportsmen, at least in desire, and discussed in low tones a marked reversal of form shown in the fifth race that afternoon.

"Dat ain't narten," said Aloysius. "Louis D'Or was played down to even money yesterday, and she ain't finished yet."

Patsy waggled his head gravely.

"Yer can't pick 'em dese days," he said. "Dey git yer bote ways, comin' and goin'."

A bell tapped insistently, and the manager drew a ticket from one of the many drawers behind the counter. He handed it to Aloysius without even glancing at it.

"Here, you!" he said. "Chase yourself."

Aloysius buttoned up his coat and carefully drew on his torn mittens.

"Where to?" said Patsy.

"Hotel Altrincham," Aloysius replied and ministered to a cold in his head with his left hand mitten.

"Leave me have de mout' organ while ye're gone?" said Patsy as Aloysius made for the door.

"Aw, what fer?" Aloysius rejoined derisively.

"All right, yer mix," said the disgruntled Patsy.

The manager again inserted his head through the partition.

"Shake it up there, Four-ninety-two!" he said.

Aloysius opened the door and passed out with a blast of insulting discords on the harmonica.

"Holy cripes!" he muttered to himself as the wind struck him. "Ain't it cold?"

And he broke into a trot, with his head bent to the swirling snow.

II.

A few minutes later he entered the revolving door of the Altrincham and saluted the clerk with the monosyllable "Call."

"Front," said the clerk, "take this kid up to 89."

After a lively scuffle with the bellboy in the elevator Aloysius alighted at the eighth floor and knocked on the door numbered 89.

A tall young man answered his summons.

"Come in," he said to Aloysius. "Cold, isn't it?"

Aloysius sniffed by way of answer and sat down on the edge of the bed. He made careful survey of the room while the tall young man wrote steadily at a desk in the corner. On the dressing table were two panel photographs, and scattered about the walls were four more, all of the same person. Aloysius stared at them with the eye of a connoisseur, for messenger boys in the vicinity of Forty-fifth street are by association and environment excellent judges of feminine beauty.

The tall young man rose from his desk and went to the telephone.

"Send me a cup of hot coffee," he said to the clerk, and he returned to his writing. Soon there came a knock at the door, and a waiter appeared bearing a silver pot of coffee on a linen covered tray. He deposited it, with sugar, cream and a cup and saucer, on the dressing table.

"Drink this," said the tall young man. "You'll feel better when you get out."

Aloysius expressed his enjoyment in long gurgling inhalations until there was no more coffee left. Evidently the tall young man found letter writing a difficult task, for he began four epistles, only to tear them up. At the fifth attempt he concluded a short note and handed it to Aloysius.

"Take this letter to the Benson," he said, "and wait for an answer. If the lady says there isn't any come back and let me know. Here's 10 cents for car fare and a quarter for yourself."

Aloysius pocketed the quarter.

"Tanks, Jack," he said. "Yer all right."

The tall young man sighed heavily. He had large melancholy eyes and features so delicately molded as to appear rather weak. Altogether he was good to look upon, and the dinner coat which he wore by no means detracted from his appearance.

"Hustle, now," he said, "and if you come back in less than half an hour there's more coffee downstairs."

Aloysius grinned and hurried for the elevator. On his way down he discovered that the envelope, none too securely sealed, had broken open, and in the street car he drew the letter from its covering and perused it with a frown. It ran:

Dearest—Tell me you didn't mean what you said this afternoon. The boy will wait for an answer. HUBERT.

"Dat's a hot one!" Aloysius muttered, replacing it in the envelope. The car jogged along over the joints in the rails, and Aloysius, seated for warmth over a grating of the electric heater, took his harmonica from his tunic and passed it furtively across his mouth.

The only other occupants of the car were the conductor, who stood inside the door, and an old gentleman curled up in the corner behind the financial page of a conservative evening paper. At the first strains the old gentleman glanced menacingly over the celluloid rims of his glasses, and the conductor darted up the aisle of the car.

"Hey!" he yelled. "Yer wanter cut dat out. See?"

Aloysius rose slowly.

"Who for?" he inquired, and as the conductor grabbed for him he dodged and jumped nimbly from the rear platform. Standing on the sidewalk, he carefully inserted his two index fingers in either corner of his mouth and sent a shrill defiance after the retreating car. Three times and with great solemnity he repeated the performance and then turned and entered the portals of the Benson.

"Dis is for Miss Ethel Wetmore," he said to the clerk, "an' dere's an answer."

The clerk handed the note to a bellboy, who returned a moment later.

"She wants to see the messenger," he said.

III.

Aloysius was ushered into a room on the third floor in which a lady was sitting, a lady of such compelling charm that Aloysius removed his hat and gasped.

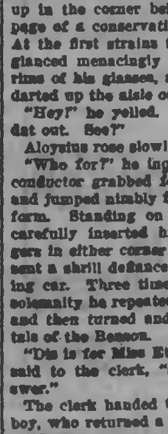
"Are you the boy that Mr. Holworthy sent?" she asked.

"A tall guy wid a dress suit?" Aloysius queried.

The lady nodded.

"Yes'm," he said.

Slowly she removed from the third finger of her left hand a solitaire diamond ring that sparkled brilliantly in the subdued lighting of the room. But Aloysius had no eyes for the gem. He gazed open mouthed at two round drops that rolled gently down the lady's cheeks.



She Removed a Solitaire Diamond.

"Now," he commenced huskily—"now, lady—don't yer, now."

He recognized in her the original of the six photographs in the room at the Altrincham, though the beauty of her features was many times enhanced by the magnificent coloring of her oval face and the gilded wealth of her hair.

She wrapped the ring in Holworthy's note and handed it to Aloysius.

"Take this to Mr. Holworthy," she said, "and let me know what he says."

She fumbled in her pocketbook and produced a quarter.

"Take this," she continued. "Hurry back."

"Tanks, lady," said Aloysius, placing the package in the lining of his hat. He stood in the door hesitatingly.

"Well, why don't you go?" said Miss Wetmore.

"Now, lady," Aloysius stammered, "don't yer go ter beelin' no more." He blushed at his own temerity and ran wildly down the stairs.

The tall young man was pacing nervously up and down his room as Aloysius entered.

"Well?" he blurted out.

"She gimme dis fer hand fer yer," said Aloysius, taking the ring from the lining of his cap.

Holworthy seized it with shaking fingers, and his face turned a ghastly white. Aloysius stood waiting in the door.

"That's all," Holworthy said. "You may go."

Still Aloysius lingered.

"What are you waiting for?" Holworthy croaked.

"She told me ter come back," Aloysius replied, "and let her know what you said."

Holworthy swallowed in an effort to control his tones and made a gesture of dismissal.

"Go!" he managed to whisper and, sinking down on the bed, covered his face with his hands, while his shoulders heaved with great choking sobs.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

KINGS IN "SPILLS"

When Monarchs' Mounts Have Stumbled—King George One of Many

Curiously enough, considering the care that is always taken in the selection of their mounts, monarchs frequently come to grief when riding.

Napoleon's favorite charger, Marengo, whose skeleton is preserved in the museum of the Royal United Service Institution, threw his master on two occasions; once so heavily, that the Emperor remained unconscious for nearly an hour.

King George's ancestor, William the Third, met his death from a fall from horse, as most schoolboys are aware. The animal, a one-eyed steed named Sorrel, stumbled over a mole hill with fatal results to its rider. Afterwards the Jacobites, who, of course, hated King William, used to toast "Master One-Eye (that being the horse) and the Little Gentleman in Velvet (that being the mole)."

William I., too, though not unseated, came by his death through his horse stumbling over some hot ashes at the siege of Mantes. He was carried to Rouen suffering from severe internal injuries, and died there a few days later.

King George II. had a narrow escape from death at the battle of Dettingen, through his horse falling with him, and partly upon him. With great pluck, however, he jumped up, and, assuring his troops that he was not hurt, continued to lead them on foot. It was afterwards found that, although no bones were broken, the King was bruised practically all over his body.

FARM AND GARDEN FILLERS

Laying hens must have their morning dust bath if they are to lay the maximum number of eggs through the winter. It is a necessary luxury for them.

Cockerels that crow in the early hours of the morning are a nuisance to neighbors living round about. To prevent them crowing get some old sitting-boxes, and when all the birds have gone to roost get hold of the offenders and gently place them in the boxes. They will not start crowing until they are liberated. The boxes should be only large enough for the birds to lie down in.

Valuable work in the control of orchard insect pests may be accomplished during the fall, winter and early spring. Certain destructive insects are held in check only by spraying during the dormant period of trees, when stronger washes may be used than when the trees are in foliage. Many insects of the orchard spend the winter on the trees in the egg, larval or pupal stage, and their destruction in the course of pruning, or other orchard work, is practicable, and is of much importance in keeping them reduced, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

When you have the headache cure someone's heartache.

The man who gives too much time to the faces of women has not enough time to study the faces of men.

A woman should remember that in marriage the course of nature brings nature down to its own level.

Imagination is the mind's eye. The face is the mind's mirror.

A woman can never make a man believe she is a man, but she can make him think she is not a woman.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Modern Fairy Tale

The Fairies Always Bring Things Out Right

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

It was midwinter.

The snow lay nine feet deep on the ground.

There was an old woman who lived in the midst of a vast forest. She was wretchedly poor.

We find this poor old woman crouched over a dying fire and listening to the moans of the winter gale and saying to herself:

"May heaven help me this day!"

Finally she rose up and hobbled forth to hunt for a stick of fuel.

A banker with a big loan out at 17 per cent would have wept to see that hobble.

After incredible hardships and sufferings the old woman found herself possessed of a single stick. It was about large enough to brain a grasshopper with, but she was plowing her way back with it when a harsh voice called to her.

"Thiefess, drop that wood!"

"Sir, I am no thiefess," replied the old woman as she drew herself up with dignity. "I have been out searching the fields for a little wood to keep me from freezing and have found only a twig."

"You are a liar! I have caught you with the goods on!"

"If I had a son, sir"—

"You have two of them, and they are in jail for beg stealing!"

"I am freezing, and I picked up this little twig to save my life."

"You have got a cord and a half there! Drop it!"

"But I shall perish."

"Perish and be hanged to you!"

"You shall not drive me to my death."

It is not too late in the day to say that the name of the man was Fitzhue Carlton and that he was young and wealthy. He belonged to five clubs and owned seven autos. He was also more or less engaged to four different girls. He had given to the heathen and to the hookworm cure and was rated as a young man of great charity, and yet here he was refusing a poor old woman a fagot dug from the snow! She could not realize it and stood gazing at him with the fagot hugged to her breast, when he said:

"Oh, you won't, eh! We'll see about that!"

And he whistled for his seven bulldogs, and when they came he pointed to her and shouted, "Stubby!" and the seven piled on to her in the greatest harmony and abandon. Her cries rent the air, but he whistled "Yankee Doodle" and turned and walked away.

It was a shocking thing to do.

Even the crowd cried out against it.

The dogs did not quite finish the old woman. There was a small piece of her left, and it crawled to her igloo and moaned and wept and cried out:

"Must I perish here? Is there no humanity left in the world?"

"There is! grandma, dead loads of it!" exclaimed a cheerful voice, and the frozen and dog bitten woman raised her head to behold a fairy standing in the door. It was Pinky Pink, whose specialty is hunting out aged females and working sunrise parties on them.

Just behind Miss Pink was a waiter from a first class restaurant, and on a server he had a meal consisting of frogs' legs, oysters fried, porterhouse steak, hash brown potatoes, Maryland chicken and various other things warranted not to produce colic.

"What is it?" faintly asked the victim of man's inhumanity.

"You are to fill up, grandma, and then come with me."

The effect of the meal, with a small bottle after it, was to make the diner sleepy, and she gave way to it. Two hours later she awoke to find that she was no longer grandma—no longer a decaying, starving old woman. On the contrary, about forty years' worth of gray hair and wrinkles had been peeled off, and her figure was that of a sylph. No one ever saw a sylph, but we all know what a boss figure one has. She had on a skin tight skirt, and as she walked, or tried to walk, she had a gait between that of a camel and a turkey trot. Her second hair was done up in the latest style, she had on satin slippers, and she had a beautiful pucker to her mouth.

"Where am I?" she asked after looking around.

"In my palace," replied Miss Pink.

And now about Fitzhue Carlton. The fairy didn't have so much business on her hands that she couldn't attend to his case. She began by taking the creases out of his trousers and humiliating his pride.

Then she worked it to have him find that he was a year behind the fashion in neckties and collars.

Then she had him bounced out of his clubs.

Mr. Carlton also lost his seven autos.

Also the four girls to whom he was almost engaged.

Then, having nothing in particular to live for, he returned to the forest wherein he had first met the old woman. It was remorse that took him there. It was remorse that suggested that he take an old clothesline along.

To a limb of a tree hanging right over the hut where grandma had starved and frozen he attached that rope.

Then to the rope he attached his neck.

After many days they found him swinging there.

And the gale it moaned. And the snow it blew. And an owl sat on a dead limb and fluttered its tail and cried:

"To-whit-to-who-o-o-o!"

Had Palpitation
OF THE HEART
ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS
Why They're Sold

Winnipeg, May 19th, 1912.

"In the autumn of 1911, I suffered with a continual pain in the back. As a druggist, I tried various remedies without any apparent results. Having sold GIN PILLS for a number of years, I thought there must be good in them, otherwise the sales would not increase so fast. I gave them a fair trial and the results I find to be good."

TO MOTHERS

You say you love your son too well
To bid him go to fight—
To face the German shot and shell
Where Wrong is throttling Right?

Think you those mothers who have sent
Their sons to face the foe,
Felt not their souls with anguish rent
E'en while they bade them "Go!"?

O Blind to Duty's finger-post,
And Deaf to Duty's call,
Let Fear bestir you, lest the host
Barbarian on us fall.

Here in our peaceful, sheltered Land,
Shattering homes, and—Worse!—
Too late, ah, then, to make a stand;
Huns heed nor prayer nor curse!

"Be British!" Heed your Country's call,
Act not the Alien's part!
God keep your Boy, whate'er befall;
And His Peace keep your heart!

German Guns Useful

The reason why so comparatively small a number of German guns are on exhibition in England is that so many have been captured and they are in such good condition that it has been found worth while making special ammunition for them and putting them into service against their original owners.

JAPAN'S EMPEROR

With elaborate ceremonies dating back thousands of years, Yoshihito, Emperor of Japan, was formally installed on his throne.

Japan is proud of her Emperor, because he is a zealous soldier and a true son of the people, while no man in Japan is more proud of his country than Yoshihito, who rules its destinies.

Yoshihito's youth reminds one of that of the King of Italy, for he had to triumph over a delicate constitution. Outdoor life and systematic exercise, however, built up his physique. He indulged in walking, mountain climbing, and riding, and displayed an early passion for soldiering by studying the military literature and military methods of other countries.

He prefers to dress in European costume, photography being one of his favorite hobbies. He is also an accomplished poet. His wife, Empress Sadako, is a woman of remarkable culture and accomplishment. The Emperor married in 1900, and has three children, all boys.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

A Kansas City Lady Darkened Her Gray Hair and Stimulated Its Growth by a Simple Home Process.

She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known resident of Kansas City, Mo., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger.

FEARLESS MEN WHO HAVE WON THE V.C.

The Airman Who Risks His Life Time He Goes up Worthy of Greatest Praise Possible

From returns issued it is estimated that during the first year of the war British and French airmen between them made 30,000 reconnaissances, involving 54,000 hours of actual flight, and representing a distance equal of 135 times round the world—say, 3,375,000 miles.

Considering the distance flown, and the conditions, casualties have been surprisingly few; and many of the fatal ones have been due, directly or indirectly, to the eagerness of the men to engage the enemy when confronted with seemingly overwhelming odds.

This trait has been recognized even by their opponents. It is related that some young German airmen in training during the early days of the war casually inquired of their instructor how they would know a British machine if they met it. "Oh, you'll know it right enough," was the reply. "It will attack you."

Defeated Three German Aeros

Just so! That is what the British airmen go aloft for. Their proceedings seem to savor of recklessness sometimes; but in aerial warfare recklessness may succeed where caution would spell disaster. Thus, when Captain I. G. Hawker was suddenly surprised — while reconnoitring on July 26, 1915—by three enemy aeroplanes swooping down on him out of the thick mist, he did not seek safety in flight, but turned and attacked them.

All three were armed with machine guns, and by all the rules of aerial warfare they ought to have made short work of their solitary opponent. Instead, it was the other way about. Both the pilot and the observer in the foremost German aeroplane were shot dead, and the machine, falling to the ground, was completely destroyed. The second was driven to earth in a seriously damaged condition.

V.C. Heroes

The third saved itself by flight. Captain Hawker had previously won his D.S.O. in the air. For this exploit he received the V.C.

Another aerial Victoria Cross was won under remarkable circumstances by Captain J. A. Liddell, who flew his machine back to the British lines from near Bruges after it had been partially wrecked by shell fire, and he himself had been mortally wounded. On examining the aeroplane it was found that the control wheel and throttle control were smashed, and that one of the under-carriage struts was broken. Captain Liddell had his right thigh smashed by a shrapnel bullet, and lived only just long enough to have his dearly-won Cross pinned on his breast.

How Sub-Flight-Lieutenant R. A. J. Warneford, of the Naval Air Service, won both the Victoria Cross and the Cross of the Legion of Honor, by destroying in single combat a Zeppelin and its crew in the early morning of June 7th, 1915, will be within the memories of most people. Lieutenant Warneford escaped uninjured on this occasion; only, however, to be accidentally killed while flying in the aerodrome at Versailles a few days later.

CANADA SENT CORPS FOR INDIAN MUTINY

Famous Royal Canadians, Now Leinsters, Were Raised in Canada—Would Send Ten Regiments

The present is not the first of second war in which Canada has offered the Empire her all. When the Indian mutiny broke out, Canada offered, and the British Government accepted, the services of forces raised in Canada for general army service. Accordingly, the 100th Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry was formed. Recruiting was actively carried on in the chief centres of Ontario and Quebec, and three drafts were sent to Shorncliffe Camp, where Canadian contingents were sent. There the regiment was formed and remained several months. The Regiment reached England considerably over strength. Lieut.-Colonel Baron de Rottenburg, a British ex-army officer, who was doing service as Adjutant-General of the Militia of Lower Canada, was appointed to the command of the new regiment. One of the majors was a retired Lieut. Dunn, V.C., of Toronto, who had won his commission and the Victoria Cross for gallant conduct in the famous charge of the Light Brigade. Other officers were from various parts of Upper and Lower Canada, and several of them were of French-Canadian birth.

A Fine Prophesy

On January 20, 1859, they were presented with colors by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness, addressing the regiment from the saddle, said: "It is most gratifying to me that, by the Queen's gracious permission, my first public act since I have had the honor of holding a commission in the British army should be the presentation of colors to a regiment which is the spontaneous offering of the loyal and spirited Canadian people, and with which, by their desire, my name has been specially associated. . . . I celebrate an act which proclaims and strengthens the unity of the various parts of this vast Empire, under the sway of our common Sovereign." In reply, Colonel de Rottenburg said, "At the call of our Sovereign, Canada would send ten such regiments as this one in defence of her Empire should an emergency ever arise to require their services." Prophetic words, these!

In the Crimea

The close of the rebellion did away with the immediate cause for raising the regiment, but it became merged into the regular British army and served in Gibraltar, Malta, Canada, India and Ireland. It came to Montreal the time of the Trent affair, and was quartered there for some time. It afterwards became the First Battalion of the Prince of Wales Leinster Regiment. While many volunteers offered for Canada at the time of the Crimean War, and a Foreign Legion was recruited and sent from Halifax, N.S., the story of the 100th Regiment is that of the first native colonial force organized to take their place in the army of Great Britain away from home.—Montreal Herald.

WILSON

President Wilson has been described as "a cold, calculating machine," a description which he confessed he felt bound to contradict some months ago, when giving an address at the Washington Press Club. "On the contrary," he said, "my constant embarrassment is to restrain my emotions. You may not believe it, but I sometimes feel like fire does a volcano. If I seem circumspect it is because I am so diligently trying not to make any colossal blunders. If you calculate the number of blunders a fellow can make in twenty-four hours if he is not careful and does not listen more than he talks, you will see something of my feeling." Mr. Wilson is a man who regulates his work and his pleasures with clock-like precision. Every minute of the day is carefully mapped out. The Secretary will tell you that one could almost set his watch by Mr. Wilson's incomings and outgoings. His day's work starts at eight and rarely finishes before midnight.

Serbian Superstitions

The Serbians are among the most superstitious people in the world and have especially peculiar ideas about animals. They have a practice of forecasting the future by means of the shoulder bone of a roasted sheep or a pig. The flat part of the bone is read to predict peace or war. If it is clear and white, it means peace; if rather dark, it means war.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

Plain colored waists are much worn in the lovely plaids and stripes which are the present mode. For this kind of material it is best to use a pattern which is plain, as in this way the pattern and quality of the goods become more noticeable.

Illustrating one of these waists we offer the design herewith pictured. It is absolutely plain, with the closing in coat style in the centre of the front and with the open neck finished with a wide Quaker collar. The sleeves are full and loose and are gathered into a fancy cuff at the wrist.

Not only for fancy material is this waist suitable, but also for others of good quality where the lines of the garment are of more consequence than its adornment. Velvet is so popular this season that it at once suggests itself for a plain waist and with a double collar, one of satin and one of organdie, or handsome, fine lace, the plainer the design the better.

Dressmaking women will find in this style for office wear. It is easily made and easily laundered. It is appropriate for many linens, plain trotting goods or taffeta, gingham, voile and the like.

The waist pattern, No. 7360, is cut in sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material, with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods as illustrated.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

EAT WITHOUT FEAR OF INDIGESTION OR SOUR ACID STOMACH

Instant Relief! "Pape's Diapepsin" Ends Your Stomach Trouble Forever

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's unnecessary.

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at Tongue! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

"Morphics" Take a Jump—Novel Situation in Eggs—Clover Seed Weakening—Wheat Steadily Advancing—A Study of the Seed Situation—Comparison in Prices

MARKET FEATURES.

Potatoes have climbed to $1.75.

Eggs are showing signs of weakening, especially on the outside.

Fowl, very few coming in.

Hogs have advanced 10 cents a hundred.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter, per lb.	30 to 32c
Butter, creamery	35c
Eggs, new laid, doz.	38 to 40c
Cheese, lb.	22c.
Cream, qt.	35c
Turkeys, lb.	25c
Geese	18 to 20c
Ducks	18 to 20c
Chickens	18c

Locally the butter market is holding steady. Reports from the outside indicate that butter is being made in much larger quantity than last year, owing, no doubt, to the better crop conditions last season. The same conditions exist in the United States, and as Eastern speculators looked for large orders from Europe they bought freely, with the result that the "carry over" stocks in storage are the largest on record. This, coupled with increased production at present may have a tendency to loosen matters up a little.

The egg business throughout the country is now dependent on the weather, and will continue to fluctuate more or less until spring. Toronto prices have dropped to 35 cents a dozen. Montreal reports that no Canadian eggs are being exported, but that American eggs are arriving in bond to be recandled and exported again. The latest quotation on export eggs was 30 cents a dozen, f.o.b., Montreal.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush	$1.00
Oats	35c
Barley	60c.
Peas	$2.00
Buckwheat	70c
Rye	75c.
Shorts, ton	$28.00
Bran, ton	$25.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.65
Baled hay, ton	$20.00 to $23.00
Loose hay	$19.00 to $20.00

Cereal wheat is going up in Toronto, and is selling at $1.08 to $1.10 per bushel. Winnipeg No. 1. Northern, $1.15 1-4 and Ontario wheat at $1.04 to $1.06 per bushel. Oats, 42 to 43 cents; barley, 58 to 60 cents; rye, 60 to 65 cents; buckwheat, 60 cents, and peas $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel.

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

Red Clover seed is easier on the "other side." Alsike has dropped $2 per bushel in Toronto. Quotations there are as follows: Red Clover, $8 to $12; alsike $6 to $8, and timothy $1 to $3.50.

Regarding Ontario seed the Dominion Seed Commissioner states that the situation in this Province is one of the most precarious on record. He referred particularly to grass and clover seeds. In a normal year half the red clover grown in Ontario is exported.

This year the home supply will not exceed half the home demand, and that which has been produced is of poor quality. Importations are being made from the Western States, but prices will be high, nevertheless.

Very little Alfalfa was grown in the Province last year, and notwithstanding the fact that alsike is about up to standard, the scarcity of red clover and alfalfa will mean high prices in alsike as well.

Fruits and Vegetables.

Apples, per bag	$1.00
Apples, per bbl.	$3.00 to $4.50
Potatoes, per bag	$1.75
Onions, white pickling, qt.	15c.
White beans, lb.	10c
Carrots, pack	15c
Turnips, bag	40c
Parsnips	15c
Beets	15c.
Celery, head	10c.
Cabbage, head	5c.
Cabbage, doz.	40c
Onions pack	25c
Oranges, doz.	25c to 40c

Potatoes in Peterborough acted in sympathy with Toronto prices and went up to $1.75 a bag.

The extremely cold weather in the West put a stop to further shipments from that point. We may look for a tumble in the spring when the pressure is relieved.

"Those who know," say that next year's potato crop will be a failure if it is a wet season. It will be a hard matter to secure seed not affected with potato fungus, so prevalent in 1915 owing to the wet season. If we have a comparatively dry summer the potato rot will be a negligible quantity.

Meats and Hogs.

Bacon, per lb.	28c. to 30c.
Ham	30c.
Cooked hams	35c.
Pork	14c. to 16c.
Spare ribs	10c.

The War Will Be a Draw Is The Conclusion of The Grecian King

Constantine Sends a Protest to the United States on What He Calls "The Unheard-of Lightheartedness of the Recent Actions of the Allies Towards Greece"---High French Authorities Answer the Greek Authorities--Montenegrins Have Resumed Hostilities.

BRITISH RELIEF FORCE NEARING KUT-EL-MARA

LONDON, Jan. 20.—King Constantine of Greece has prepared and sent through news agencies a long protest to the United States, re-citing what he terms "the unheard of high-handedness of the recent actions of the Allies toward Greece." He declares his opinion that the war will end in a draw, that neither the Germanic nor the British Allies will win, and that in the meantime Greece is being used badly by both sides. High French authorities have taken issue with the Greek King on some of his statements, and the following is a summary of the principal charges brought by Constantine with the Allies:

Charge—That if "military necessity" excuses the Allied occupation of Salonica and other places, it also excuses the German occupation of Belgium.

Answer—Belgium was invaded in time of peace without excuse. Greek territory is temporarily occupied to succor one of these countries—Serbia—which Greece failed to aid, though obligated by treaty to assist her with 150,000 men. Moreover, the Allies went to Salonica at the request of the Greek Government.

Charge—That the neutrality of Corfu and other Greek islands was guaranteed by the Allies, and that it was violated.

Answer—The islands were occupied with the tacit consent of Greece, who received not only a promise of compensation, but "even other promises not unconnected with the Greek foreign policy."

Charge—That Greece warned the Allies that the Gallipoli campaign would be a failure.

Answer—On the contrary, Greece wanted to take part in it, but her demands were too excessive.

Charge—That Greece cannot demobilize because of the Allied occupation.

Answer—The Allies are actually, at Constantine's request, advancing money to Greece to pay for keeping her forces mobilized.

In conclusion, the Greek King says the war will be a draw. When one so manifestly pro-German admits that Germany cannot win, it is a good augur for her complete defeat.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—General Aylmer's forces, marching to the relief of the British surrounded at Kut-El-Amara, advanced to within seven miles of Kut-El-Amara last night without coming in contact with the enemy, it was officially announced in the House of Commons this afternoon.

ROME, Jan. 20.—The Montenegrins have resumed hostilities against the Austrians, said an official statement here to-day.

ROME, Jan. 20.—The Montenegrin Minister to-day officially informed the Italian Foreign Office that King Nicholas and the Montenegrin Government has refused all the Austrian peace terms.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—From the beginning of the war until November 30 last, a total of 1,037 British seamen were lost on merchant vessels by being torpedoed by submarines or blown up by mines.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—General Sir John Nixon, who retired from the command of the British Mesopotamia forces because of ill-health, is on his way home, Chamberlain announced.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 20.—With Erzerum, the principal city of Turkish Armenia, as his objective, Grand Duke Nicholas is pressing his Caucasus offensive energetically. Advices received here to-day said that the Slavs have penetrated to within two days' march of Erzerum, and expect to open a bombardment within another week.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 20.—Leaking and in distress, the British steamer Pollentie, early to-day sent out calls for aid, about 70 miles off Cape Race. The liner Giussepe Verdi is steaming toward the British boat.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—A British submarine has gone aground on the Dutch coast. The crew was rescued.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Unmarried men between the ages of 19 and 23, inclusive, being Groups 2, 3 and 4 of Lord Derby's plan, were formally called to the colours to-day, bringing one hundred thousand new men immediately into the service.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—The Liberals held a caucus this morning, which lasted from 11 until about 1 o'clock.

Such questions as the attitude of the party in connection with the estimates, and the question of the extension of the life of Parliament, was considered, and it is understood that the matter was left in the hands of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. A number of committees were decided upon. The caucus, it is stated, was unanimous that in so far as Canada's participation in the war is concerned, the opposition is at one with the Government, but that the right of criticising the methods and modes of implementing the will of the people should not be abdicated.

CAPT. W. H. MUNRO
Manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway, whose promotion from lieutenant to captain in the C. A. S. C. has been announced.

LOCAL OFFICER IS PROMOTED FOR GOOD SERVICE

Capt. W. H. Munro, Manager of Peterborough Radial Railway Company, Takes a Step Upward in the C. A. S. C.

WORK IS APPRECIATED

Among the promotions in the Canadian Army Service Corps announced recently is that of Lieut. W. H. Munro, manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway, to be captain. Capt. Munro is in the mechanical transport branch of the Army Service Corps and went to England last July, where he has been stationed at Shorncliffe. Shortly after his arrival he was detailed for some special work in connection with the departure of the second Canadian division for France and on completion of this he received the following letter from the commanding officer, which is evidence of the satisfactory work which led to his promotion:

West Sandling, Sept. 20, 1915.

My Dear Munro,—I cannot allow you to leave here without expressing my appreciation of your work and the steadfast application to it which you have exhibited throughout the very trying period we have passed through.

My personal obligation to you for your support is great and you may also feel that you have in no small way contributed to the success of our efforts, together with all concerned in completing three days ahead of the hoped for date, a very difficult task.

Yours faithfully,

J. W. Harkom, Lt.-Col.

SKATING TO-NIGHT AT BROCK ST.

Band as Usual and Good Ice

The interest in skating this year is very considerable of former years, it is not in the least abating. This is the case not only in Peterborough, but all over the province. It is recognised that skating is a pleasant and healthy exercise that old and young may enjoy. The Brock street rink has been furnishing a band every skating night. To-night there is a band as usual, with the ice in grand shape.

Big Campaign Is Now Under Way

Men of the 93rd Battalion Started This Morning on Their Canvass For Comrades to Complete the Battalion ---Morning's Efforts Resulted in a Dozen Recruits Bigger Things Expected This Afternoon--To-day's Military News.

The officers and men the 93rd Battalion entered upon the three day recruiting campaign this morning with zest and enthusiasm and khaki clad figures were to be seen in all parts of the city, interviewing eligible men and striving to impress upon them the need of enlisting. Weather conditions were far from favourable, but in spite of the snow storm the [illegible] boys remained on the job and kept working, and the results were seen before dinner, when over a dozen recruits visited the armouries, the biggest morning in a long period. The men in khaki, however, look upon that as only a beginning and expect better results this afternoon as a result of their morning's work. They are taking the keenest possible interest in the campaign and at noon when one private of the 93rd arrived at the armouries with three new recruits in tow, he was greeted with a round of cheers. There is no delay in the work now. The men are attested as soon as they are examined, while the quartermasters' department is ready to outfit them at once.

Both bands of the battalion were out this morning, the brass band playing at the recruiting rooms on Simcoe street, while the bugle band visited a number of the factories and made things interesting.

One thing was noticeable, however, and that was that the noon hour, when the largest number of "prospects" were on the street, the men of the 93rd were at dinner. It might produce better results if for the next two days the dinner hour was arranged so as to permit the whole force of soldiers to be on hand.

The 93rd men are being given a free hand to-day and they are allowed to go where they will in the city. To-morrow and Saturday they will be on a systematic basis under the direction of their officers.

The latest recruits to the ranks of the 93rd include the following:

Leonard Black, Havelock.
N. J. Draper, Havelock.
T. B. McNicholl, Havelock.
Robert Anderson, Hiawatha.
Geo. H. T. Moore, Keene.
W. H. Winson, Mt. Julian.
T. F. Guerin, 120 Sophia street.
Robert B. Hubel, 287 Louis street.
Thos. A. Cooper, Warsaw.
Joseph E. Gallagher, Warsaw.
R. Mority, corner Gordon and Lock streets.
David Munro, 190 Perry street.
Frank Wormald, Charlotte street.
Jas. Scalon, Montreal House.

Of this list eight were born on this side of the Atlantic, four in England and one each in Scotland and Ireland.

Sergt. Frank Traynor of the 93rd, who is down at Havelock training the recruits there, is still writing verse. Here is a parody which appears in this week's Havelock Standard:

To tune of 'Good Old Summer Time.'

In the good old summer time,
In the good old summer time—
The 93rd will be in Berlin
Having a jolly good time.
They'll get the Kaiser by the neck,
And that will suit all just fine.
We'll have the Germans on the run
In the good old summer time.

The Havelock Standard has the following:

If the young men of Havelock and Belmont were all like little Cecil Toms of Belmont, we would soon have our 55 men. This little fellow begged so hard to be taken on that he got his father's consent to go, but unfortunately he could not reach the required measurements. Good luck to you, lad, for your spirit.

An unusual incident occurred after church parade on Sunday morning. As the Havelock detachment was marching down the street, Mr. James Draper fell in line and asked Sergeant Traynor if he could take him on. This young man is a popular C.P.R. fireman and wants a few more of his mates to enlist as he has. He says it is every young man's place to join the colors and march down the street like a man.

Mr. R. G. Sturgeon received a trench card to-day from Private Peter G. Wallace, stating that he was well. "Pete" was wounded some time ago and is apparently back at the front. He enlisted from Bowmanville, where he was manager of Mr. Sturgeon's branch store.

The Speakers' Patriotic League will hold an important meeting to-night, at 8 o'clock, in the Recruiting Rooms, on Simcoe Street.

A STIRRING APPEAL TO THE WOMANHOOD

Mrs. A. M. Huestis, President of the Women's Emergency Corps of No. 2 Military Division, Answers the Question—"Why Is It Our War?"

A BIG EFFORT

Fifteen hundred people went away from the recruiting meeting that was held in the Grand Opera House last evening with a new conception of their duty towards the Empire in this hour of crisis. Mrs. A. M. Huestis, President of the Woman's Emergency Corps of No. 2 Military Division, was the speaker. The latter made a direct appeal to the womanhood of the community during the course of an eloquent and vigorous speech. The striking personal charm of the speaker, combined with a graceful simplicity of manner created a deep impression as she eloquently and rapidly argued her leading points, concluding with an earnest appeal for the hearty and consistent co-operation of the women.

It was originally intended that Mrs. Huestis should address the annual meeting of the Local Council of Women, but the latter organization decided that the best interests of the country would be served by having Mrs. Huestis address a recruiting meeting.

The ladies on the platform besides the speaker of the evening were Mrs. F. C. Neal and Mrs. John Allan. Mrs. F. C. Neal, in the course of a brief address defined the policy upon which the present recruiting campaign is based. She was followed by Mrs. John Allan, who said that the duty of the women in the present campaign was not to coherce, but rather indicate by the wearing of a badge, which side they were on in this campaign. Mrs. Allan then introduced Mrs. Huestis.

The latter was heartily cheered as she rose to speak.

A German Lieutenant.

"I want recruits and I do not want to go away disappointed," said Mrs. Huestis, in her opening remarks. The speaker related an incident that occurred in April, 1914, nearly four months before the war cloud appeared on the horizon. Mrs. Huestis, together with one other Canadian lady, were on their way to attend the quintenant also dropped the remark that was held in Rome. While in the Mediterranean the two ladies met a German Lieutenant who, during the course of a conversation, remarked that he had been recalled for active service. He had left an important business in New York in answer to the call and this several months before the war commenced. The Lieutenant also dropped the remark that the Germans would be in London by Christmas. The ladies replied: "Canada and Great Britain stands between you and London." Arriving at Gibraltar, the ladies expressed a desire to visit one of the fortresses, when who should bob up but the German Lieutenant. He expressed a desire to join a party of two. This he did and incidentally secured a number of photographs of the exterior portion of the fortress. The ladies became suspicious and further activities on the part of the Lieutenant were checked by the ladies cancelling their visit to the interior of the fortress.

The Kaiser's Brother.

A distinguished man subsequently joined the party who was identified

Well-Deserved Promotion is Announced in Orders To-day—Capt. K. G. Lech is Promoted to Junior Major

CAPT. MUNRO, ADJUTANT

To-day's orders contain the announcement of a number of promotions in the establishment of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., that will be received with pleasure not only by all ranks of the battalion, but by the citizens of Peterborough generally. Major R. P. Watt of the 57th Regiment, who was Captain of A Company of the 93rd upon its organization, and whose promotion to the rank of Major was announced some time ago, has been promoted to second in command of the 93rd, while Capt. K. G. Lech, commanding officer of B Company of the 93rd, and formerly of the 57th Regiment, is promoted to the rank of Major, and will be Junior major of the Peterborough Battalion. Capt. J. E. R. Munro, of the 57th Regiment, and second in command of A Company, 93rd, has been appointed adjutant. All three promotions are well merited, and their many friends will congratulate the three officers on the upward step they have taken.

Their promotion paves the way for more promotions in the battalion as it takes away three of the four captains in A and B companies. Capt. Gordon Hall, second in command of B Company at present, will, it is altogether probable, move up to the command of that company, while Capts. Widdifield and Marling, whose promotions have just been made, will likely be assigned to A Company.

A CIVIC CALAMITY.

Brantford is to be pitied. One journal complains that the city has not drawn the share of shell orders which such a great manufacturing centre should have attracted; and, worse, the City Council is the victim of party politics. Now, as city councils go, they are bad enough in the abstract, have a maximum of inefficiency, apart altogether from considerations of politics. When to this generally prevalent condition is added the curse of party politics, bedevilling the situation, the condition is pitiable. When the average city council applies its modest abilities honestly and sincerely and undividedly to the work of city administration; when the civic services are dealth with on their merits, we do not always have results that call for kindling bonfires. But when the modest abilities are muddled and marred by considerations of party, we have necessarily unfortunate results. In Brantford the city council has a party majority of two; it doesn't matter, on principle, which party has the predominance. In this case, because a Conservative majority has monopolised the committees, and given the chief places to men of the ruling party, independent of considerations of personal fitness, there is no lessening of the evil. The evil would have been the same if a Liberal majority had happened to prevail and had practiced the same unfortunate policy. Brantford is to be pitied; and also to be blamed. In this year of war, when, in the broad way, we have a party truce; when we see Grit and Tory working shoulder to shoulder, forgetful of party, to promote the cause of Empire, it is unfortunate that in a city council, where there is always,—war time or not,—no place for party politics, there should be imported and applied the petty and pettifogging spirit of party politics. In parliamentary matters party is not only justifiable but desirable. If we had not the keen vigilance, the watchful criticism that come from party divisions we should have parliamentary degeneration infinitely greater that that which now sometimes obtains under party government. But in domestic politics, in civic matters the introduction of party politics, whatever the brand is an unmixed evil. Under the most favourable conditions, with the least clogging of the machinery of civic government, by party politics, or any other evil influence, we find it difficult to secure what we can call efficient administration. City government is what might be called a "one-man job"; that is, the whole council should be as one man in aim and endeavour; should work as one man for the city's good, undistracted by party or other considerations.

THE EXHIBITION SITUATION.

The officials and directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are to be congratulated upon their plucky spirit. In spite of the discouraging rebuff administered by the ratepayers at the late municipal elections, they are, if sorely disappointed, not discouraged. They propose having another exhibition on the grounds they now occupy for, according to present indications, the last year.

They are to be congratulated upon taking this stand and showing an undismayed spirit. The city itself is to be congratulated upon escaping the disgrace of the sudden collpase of an exhibition, which is, in a large seure, the measure of the public spirit and enterprise of the city, which is its natural centre. Not the exhibition directors, but the city of Peterborough, will be disgraced if the exhibition should collapse. Outsiders would speak, not of the want of enterprise of the directors, nor in disparagement of the splendid exhibition capabilities of the district, but they would comment upon the lack of public spirit and failure of enterprise of a city of the size and importance of Peterborough.

These considerations force the conclusion that Peterborough, for the credit of its good name, for the sake of its business and commercial interests, for the sake of its standing in the sisterhood of minor cities, cannot afford to let the exhibition lapse. It is incumbent upon our merchants and business men; it is incumbent upon those ratepayers, who have an interest in the good name and welfare of the city to provide a substitute for the proposal which they so cheerfully and effectively voted down a little over a fortnight ago. The directors of the Exhibition selected what they felt were the best available grounds in the city or vicinity for exhibition and conjointly park purposes. The ratepayers denounced their selection. The directors don't know of a better place, and it seems to be incumbent upon those who rejected the present exhibition grounds to point out a substitute site, within reasonable access of the city.

One thing is plain. Peterborough cannot afford, either in the material or moral sense to let her annual exhibition go by the board. This would be impossible if the mass of our merchants and business men (the most vitally concerned interests of all) had the same undauntable spirit as the directors of the Exhibition. They have decided to have another exhibition—to die, if they must die, in harness, die fighting. They have an uphill job before them; and it is incumbent upon those of the city who have a deeper material ad moral interest, to get behind them and help them "make the grade."

In the meantime something may happen or be caused to happen, that will afford a solution of the situation. In the dauntless and hopeful spirit of Mr. Micawber, we may hope that "something will turn up."

THE SITUATION IN GREECE.

Most of the news about the situation in Greece is in the form of rumours from Berlin and Amsterdam. Great Britain has apparently shut the censorship down tight on all other sources ever since the visit of Lord Kitchener to King Constantine. The Allies are now acting instead of talking not only in regard to Greece, but to the whole Balkan situation. There are many signs that the policy of temporizing has been abandoned, and that there will be no more dilly-dallying with neutrals there. If all the Allied activities that are reported are true, the Allies know exactly what they want to do, and are going to do it, no matter how much it may hurt neutral susceptibilities. That is the way.—Montreal Herald.

CANADA'S SWELLING TRADE.

The trade of Canada for the twelve months ending October last, as revealed in the summary just issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce, is in a remarkably robust condition. The total trade reached the high water mark of $1,147,446,551, which is at least $20,000,000 higher than the trade of either of the three previous years. An analysis of the figures gives an even better showing for the exports reach $669,320,560, as compared with $479,126,831, the highest amount in any of the three previous years, while the imports dropped from $680,126,-591 in 1913 to $478,115,961 last year. This is an excellent showing, and possibly it will be eclipsed by the trade of the present year, on which we have made a flying start. Next year this time the return for "twelve months ended October" will include the returns from the greatest harvest in the history of the country, as well as the returns from the enormous quantities of munitions being manufactured here.—Moutreal Herald.

FAIR WORDS.

Listening to the three great speeches in the Canadian House of Commons, yesterday, one could not but be impressed with the absurdity of the continued existence of the conventional party division. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, leader of the one, and Sir Robert Borden, leader of the other, both with the utmost sincerity, feeling, and eloquence spoke from a common text.

Sir Wilfrid put it this way:

"Canada must take her part in the sacrifice entailed by the determination to make the victory a complete one. This is our interest—the interest of every Briton—in the war. Our action is based upon the primary condition that we must be free or we must lose our freedom. Upon that our choice is made."

In Sir Robert's selection of words we find it thus:

"We can win this war if we are willing to make the necessary sacrifices.

"Are we fighting this war to win or lose? There can be only one answer to that. We cannot win without sacrifices. Thank God, we yet have time for effort and preparation."

Dr. Michael Clark, whose diction and consistent spirit of fairness, whose sympathy with the common people and with the statesmen sincerely wrestling with their problems, have made him the outstanding spokesman of the prairies, cemented the utterances of the two leaders. Sir Wilfrid and Sir Robert. French and English, spoke as Canadian native born. Dr. Clark as an adopted son; they came from the east, and the west, and French Quebec with the same battle cry. The geography would have been complete had Sir George Foster, in his own inimitable style, answered for Ontario.

On the one great outstanding question before which all others sink into significance, the House is united. What remains to divide? Selfishness, plus suspicion. Selfishness has kept in existence the spoils system that has been the curse of partisanship in peace times and that is a veritable menace in war times; suspicion is the remnant of the battle between the ins and the outs, a battle that cannot be tolerated so long as the common enemy hammers at the gates.

The fair words of government leader and opposition leader throb with a one-ness of purpose; they ought to inspire to an unity that goes far deeper than fair words, that should wipe out both the result of selfishness and the cause of suspicion.—Ottawa Free Press.

FINANCIAL ASSET
VALUE OF CANADIAN NATIONAL PARKS

In taking stock of our national resources in Canada there is one potential source of wealth that is often overlooked, and that is the value of scenery. The value of forests, minerals, water powers and agricultural products is easily recognised, but because the revenue which scenery brings to a country is an indirect one its importance is often forgotten and seldom estimated at its actual value. From countries such as Switzerland and Italy, which are pre-eminently scenic countries, it is possible to see what the possession of striking natural beauty means by virtue of its power to attract tourist traffic.

The tourists attracted by Switzerland's mountains are one of her most profitable industries. It is estimated that in 1913, the year before the outbreak of the great war, they brought her a tourist traffic which was worth the enormous sum of $250,000,000. These figures are startling but they are borne out by those from other countries. The value of tourist traffic to France in the same year was placed at $600,000,000; that of Italy at over $100,000,000. The palm groves and orange blossoms of Florida are known to be worth more to her than all the products of her soil, while the pine woods of Maine, in addition to their value as timber, bring a revenue of $40,000,000 per year from the tourists they attract. The yearly tide of travel from the United States to Europe before the war was estimated at from three to four hundred million dollars, while the harvest reaped from visitors by the three great tourist cities, London, Paris and Berlin, was placed at over $500,000,000 each in one year.

These are enormous sums but the estimate with regard to Canada is equally striking. W. T. Rolson, organizer of the Canadian Travel Association, formerly the general advertising agent of the Canadian Pacific Ry., recently made a careful estimate of the value of the tourist travel which came to Canada in 1913. His figures show a total of $50,000,000, giving this source of revenue fourth place among our natural resources.

The total number of visitors at the two chief resorts in the Rockies—Banff and Lake Louise—during the past five years, was 321,823. Almost half of these were foreigners. It is estimated that the foreign tourist spends about $100 in transportation, and in addition spends large sums in hotels, liveries, souvenirs, etc. But, taking $100 as an average expenditure, which is declared by those who know to be a very low one, the amount of money left in Canada during this period by these visitors, alone amounts to over fifteen million dollars.

There is no doubt that the Canadian mountains are as capable of attracting a large tourist traffic as any other scenic district in the world. Famous travellers and mountain climbers unite in agreeing that there is no mountainous region, not even excluding the Alps, which offers so many attractions to nature-lovers as do the Canadian Rockies. Dr. Langstaff, the celebrated Alpinist, wrting in the London "Field," after his visit to Canada, said:

"In the Canadian Rockies and Selkirks there is a country waiting for recognition which I believe is destined to become the playground of the world. In no other region on the globe do peak and cliff, lake, cataract and stream, form such a perfect combination as is to be found, not in one but in hundreds of places, in these glorious ranges. The fascination of the Canadian mountains is such that merely to travel through them and camp amongst them is sufficient reward for anyone who is not blind."

Canada, Queen of the Broad Spaces, as she has been picturesquely called, has been setting aside large areas of her most beautiful and wonderful natural scenery which, fortunately, were still part of the national domain, as Dominion Parks. There are now about 8,000 square miles or over five million acres set aside in these great reservations "for the benefit, advantage and enjoyment of the people of Canada," as the Act creating them says, for all time. All the natural beauty which they contain is forever safe from spoilation at the hands of private or selfish interests. Although this area is about half the total area of Switzerland it is none too generous for what the needs will undoubtedly be in years to come.

In order that these areas might receive the attention which they appear to deserve, the Dominion Government about four years ago created a special branch to take charge of the Dominion Parks. This branch has control of all matters within the parks. In addition to the building and the maintenance of roads and other matters concerned with development, it has charge of the forest and game protection and the entire administration of all townsites. In Banff, the principal townsite, with a population of about 1,500, the government owns all the land, which is leased for a nominal rental for business and residential purposes. It also supplies and maintains all the services demanded by an up-to-date town—water and sewer systems, telephone, street, sprinkling, garbage collection, fire protection, etc. The town itself is being laid out and developed in accordance with the advice of eminent town planners, and there seems no reason to doubt that in future years it will become one of the most beautiful mountain resorts in the world. Among its attractions are the hot sulphur springs, well known for their curative powers, which rank with the famous springs at the United States government reservation in Arkansas. Last year the government opened at the lower springs what is undoubtedly one of the finest public baths on this continent. It is built on the lower side of Sulphur Mountain, commanding a picturesque view of the Bow Valley and the surrounding peaks, its native limestone and red tiles blending harmoniously with the landscape. The chief feature is a large open swimming pool, 150 feet long by 35 feet wide, supplied by the hot sulphur water which issues through a cave from the side of the mountain. There is in addition, an older bathing establishment higher up on another side of the mountain. It is possible, even in zero weather, with steam forming around the edges of the pool, to enjoy a warm bath of about ninety degrees.

This park is also being rapidly opened up to the motorist. The new automobile road from Calgary to Vancouver passes through the park touching Banff and two or three of the smaller townsites. The Dominion Government is building the sections that lie within the parks and has already completed the grading of the road which extends from the eastern limits of the Rocky Mountains Park to the summit of the mountains. The average grade is 4 per cent., with a maximum of 6.5 per cent., and the road passes through the heart of some of the finest scenery in the parks. A branch section which will be appreciated by motorists is also being constructed from Castle to the famous Lake Louise. Three miles of this road which will total eighteen in all, were built this summer by the alien prisoners who were quartered in the park, and it is intended to prosecute the completion of the remaining fifteen as rapidly as possible next season.

In Yoho Park, also, preparations are being made for the introduction of the motor. This year the road from Field up to the wonderful Yoho Valley to Takakkaw Falls and the Yoho Glacier, was improved and widened and will probably be accessible by automobile for its entire distance by the fall of 1916. A motor loop road is also under construction from Field to Ottertail Valley, returning by way of the Kicking Horse Canyon and the Natural Bridge. When these roads are finally completed traffic to the parks will no doubt be increased by large numbers of motorists who will want to take advantage of the opportunity of spending a holiday in their favorite way among scenery of unparalleled grandeur.

This active policy of develpoment with regard to the Dominion Parks, indicates that the government believes they are a sound business investment, and in this view they are in line with the policy regarding parks adopted in New Zealand and the United States. But their greatest value after all cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents. They have great potentialities of wealth, but they are worth more for their potentialities of pleasure and vitality. They are great playgrounds set aside forever so that the time may never come in Canada, as it has already come in England and Scotland and is fast coming in the Eastern United States, when a great majority of the forest scenic areas will be in great preserves owned by the wealthy, into which the people are not allowed to come.

The Canadian parks are in reality the people's estates, providing facilities for the best kind of recreation, that which is found by getting close to nature in the great out-of-doors. As such they are reservoirs of pleasure, happiness and vitality whose value it is impossible to estimate.—The Canadian Engineer.

Bagdad, City of Imperial Dreams, Is Typical of Crumbling, Biblical East

An ancient though hardly a beautiful city, yet possessing an indefinable charm of its own. Entering it from the east, after having spent years in the other easts, I felt that I was coming into the real East for the first time, the dry, parched and crumbling, unluxuriant Biblical East, the East of Sir Richard Burton and Nebuchadnezzar, the original and essential East that is printed on the mind of childhood through the Bible and the Book of Hours.

One sees date palms, domed Arab tombs, and veiled women going to the well with pitchers, in other Oriental cities scattered far and wide; but one has to come back to the Arab to evoke the familiar scene, the Pedouin walk, the desert gaze, the peculiar hang of the turban and poise of the head.

Narrow, Winding Streets.

Baghdad, or Ba-agh-daad, as the Arabs style it—the two "a's" are rolled and the "h" is sounded—is a city devoid of any grandeur. The narrow tortuous alleys are impassable to carriages. The saddle-bags of the camels rub against the walls of yellowish brick and jam uncomfortably at the corners. Many of the streets are too narrow for beasts of burden other than the mangy, ragged little mules and asses which descend in a continual stream with their empty water-skins to the Tigris bank. Following them through the maze one need never lose the way. The parish dogs which one meets everywhere, are the scavengers; each has his own quarter, and if he passes his neighbour's landmark, he is attacked and driven out. Lean and starved looking as some of them are, the reek that goes up from the garbage of the city proclaims that their work is ill done.

Fretted Jezebel Windows.

The bazaars are often roofed, and the houses, except in the upper stories, present a blank wall to the street Here the high-gabled windows on either side almost meet, and one catches a glimpse of an arm and sometimes a face of a surprising paleness, which is hurriedly or reluctantly veiled according to the degree of modesty that impels the action. These fretted Jezebel windows are in keeping with the haunted romance of the city. It is the architecture of the illustrations in Lane's "Arabian Nights." One feels that a black slave may appear behind the curtain with a naked scimitar, or an afrit (evil spirit) peep out of a neighbour's window.

I saw one girl, fair as a Circassian, violently seized by the shoulder from behind and drawn back into the room by a jealous hand, and hoped that it would not be her fate to be sewn up in a skin and cast into the Tigris.

There was no hotel in those days—sixteen years ago—in the European sense of the word. Only a shanty kept by an Armenian. Turkish cooking and accommodation and no bath. One is supposed to go to the hamman (Turkish bath), but I commandeered a monster cooking vessel, a kind of Arabian Nights cauldron, and sent it sailing down the Tigris when I left, lest any other European should come along.

Cosmopolitan Crowd.

My companions in the hotel were a Greek, a Jew, a Turk, an Armenian, a Levantine, a Bombay Eurasian, and an Italian-Abyssinian half-caste, who told me that he had had French lessons from General Gordon in Khartum. He dealt in liquorice, and I remember a seller of roots coming into the city, an Arab, a dweller in black horsehair tents driven to Baghdad by hunger, as distrustful of walls as of a cage, and afraid to enter the door of a house with his wares. He struggled and spat when the Abyssinian, who wanted to buy his stock, dragged him over the threshold.

The Mouth of Hell.

My bedroom window opened into a verandah overlooking the river, and the Bridge of Boats. Here every morning I was reminded of the antiquity of the city as I watched the gufas (coracles), described by Herodotus "round like a buckler and freighted with casks of palm wine." He tells how they floated down the stream from Armenia each with a live ass on board and how when they arrived at Babylon the vessels were taken to pieces and the ribs of willow, date palm, and pomegranite sold with the merchandise, and the covering of skin carried back on the asses to the merchant's own country.

Afterwards I saw the bitumen walls of Hitt on the Euphrates, where the pitch is exuded with which the gufas are plastered over to-day as in old time. They are still belching forth the clouds of dense smoke which made the ancients believe them the mouth of hell.

No doubt the Turks, who will have commandeered all the craft of the Tigris, have a fleet of these cauldron-like boats freighted with supplies, and munitions of war spinning down stream from above Nineveh, each with "the two navigators standing upright," who will be lashing the stream furiously to reach Baghdad against the day when our first armored motor cars invade the palm-groves of the city.

I remember evenings spent in the house of an Armenian, K—Effendi—it is not safe to give his name—when with shutters barred and doors closely guarded, a servant would stand by the glowing brazier and sing national songs.

On a Dromedary.

The Turk is not loved by subject races. The Jews and Armenians in the city, if they escaped with their lives, would no doubt welcome the sound of the British guns. Yet in all social relations the traveler will find the well-bred German of the old school what the German eminently is not—a gentleman. Like the Bedou, he has a code. There are things which are done and things which are not done, and expediency does not juggle with the rules.

The most picturesque figures in the city are the Arabs; the Bedou, with his keen eyes cast from long habit on the horizon; the grave sheikh with his staff, his long grey beard and steadfast gaze, and turban bound with the black agal.

The Bedouin distrust the Turks, and their antipathy is seasoned with contempt. Outside the city they were free as the wind. There was no armed control beyond a gunshot from the walls. The sheikhs of the tribes were subsidized to let the camel post go through to Damascus, and the Turkish Government had no hold on them unless one of their number came into the bazaars of Baghdad for supplies. I made the journey across the desert with an old haji, who guided himself by the stars. Twelve days on a fast dromedary, riding eighteen hours at a stretch with two short halts for meals, and the beast had only one drink between) the Euphrates and Damascus. I was held up and robbed a day and a half from Hitt, and owed it to the haji that I got through alive.

"Writing on the Wall."

When we entered Damascus we found the old city turning in its sleep after an imperial visit. We saw painted on all the facades of the houses what I should have recognized, if I had been wise, as "the writing on the wall," the mark of the beast, the beginning of all this coil, the finger pointing to Baghdad. Horizontal stripes of red, black and white the brand of the Hohenzollerns. William, the friend of Abdul, had visited the oldest city in the world. The Sultan was—literally perhaps, figuratively certainly — to be clasped in a tight and, as after events may prove, a suffocating embrace. Not a sacred dwelling was spared, not even the house of Ananias or the house where St. Paul was let down in the basket; and the little mountain train that takes one on to Lebanon and the sea wore on every carriage the same livery. And, last profanity of all, even at Baalbec on the temples of Jupiter and the Sun was inscribed the legend "Imperator Germanorum visit-avit."

Eminent Scientists

are against alcohol. They have discovered that alcohol is a life-destroyer.

"Alcohol causes chronic diseases of the heart, liver, stomach and kidneys, increases the death rate from pneumonia and lessens natural immunity from infectious diseases."—Weekly Bulletin, New York City, Dept. of Health, June 19th, 1915.

Moderate Drinkers

Life insurance men declare that MODERATE drinkers shorten life on an average from 10 to 13 years by their occasional alcoholic drink.

The attitude of life insurance to alcohol is especially significant because there is no phase of business so scientifically accurate.—Outlook, June 30th, 1915.

English Doctors say to the troops :—

Alcohol slows the power to see signals. Alcohol confuses prompt judgment. Alcohol spoils accurate shooting.

Become total abstainers.

The above is taken from a poster issued by English physicians.

The Red Cross

nurse says to you :—

"Alcohol, by lowering resistance, nine times out of ten, makes it just so much harder for the patient to recover."

"Careful, therefore, how you use it as a medicine."

The New War Against Alcohol

THE new non-partisan movement for a DRY Ontario—the New War against alcohol—is under the direction of a body of able, powerful and determined men. Financiers, business men, lawyers, physicians, politicians of both parties, leading men in various walks of life, have joined hands to work for the common good.

Moderate Drinkers

are urged to co-operate in this new movement. There are thousands of men who use liquor moderately, and who must realize that in times like these they should sacrifice something for the common good. When patriots are giving their lives for the Empire surely moderate drinkers will be glad to help save the money now spent in alcohol. If moderate drinkers will think seriously they must realize that Ontario cannot afford the colossal expenditure of upwards of $30,000,000 yearly for alcoholic beverages. Common sense and sound business demand that this appalling waste of money for alcohol should be saved for the Empire's and Ontario's more vital needs.

Lloyd George has stated that the "silver bullet" has been instrumental in winning other wars for Great Britain, and that the last 100,000,000 pounds sterling might prove the deciding factor in this war.

Lloyd George also said that the Empire was fighting Germany, Austria and drink, and so far as he could see the greatest of these three deadly foes was drink.

Lloyd George is one of the Empire's foremost leaders. He speaks with authority. His placing of "drink" as the foe should be sufficient to enlist every patriotic moderate drinker with the forces that the Committee of One Hundred is mobilizing to secure prohibition in Ontario.

Petitions to the Provincial Government for prohibition in Ontario will be circulated in the near future. They will ask that the Government bring down a Bill for the Prohibition of the traffic in Intoxicating Liquors for beverage purposes, up to the limits of powers of the Legislature, such Bill to become law—(a) When enacted by the Legislature, or in the alternative, (b) upon submission to the electors and upon receiving the approval of a majority of the electors voting thereon.

Every voter will be given the opportunity to sign. Failure to sign means that you line up on the side of alcohol — the Empire's most deadly foe. In the present crisis what man's conscience will permit him to do that?

CANADA'S NEW VISION

Even war has its compensations, as Canada proves.

Our neighbours have been jerked out of their comatose state. The cushions of ease have been moved from the armchair of their politics. Their "Let us alone" policy has been superseded by active, intelligent appreciation of duty and progress.

Canada has seen a new vision, or rather she has cleared her vision to the real meaning and possibilities of the commonwealth of Canada.

Hitherto Canada has been the synonym of individualism. Progress was a matter of personal effort. Almost every one of the thousands of immigrants going to Canada had at the back of his mind the idea of becoming rich and prosperous.

And hence a self-seeking individualism became the rule, and it worked out as individualism, which hides the mercenary and ultimate behind the personal and immediate, generally does.

Canada became wrapped up in herself. She mirrored the self-satisfaction and self-contentment of the people by becoming civically lazy and indifferent and politically paralytic.

"We're all right—don't bother us; things that happen will happen anyway, so what's the use?" Canadians practically handed over their thinking apparatus to deputies, and the political thought which should comprehend safeguard, and assist the interests of the community and restrict its evils, was perfunctorily performed in many instances.

Perhaps, however, Canadians have no monopoly of that trait. The same curious phenomenon of resigning ourselves to the policy of drift, yielding where vital issues are concerned, has even been observed in this country.

One underlying principle, however, which has saved Canada from developing that deadly disease, national selfishness, was the feeling that she was still a part of a great political unity and her population were part of a family.

Canadians have ever cherished that sense of kinship, and with the outbreak of the war came the additional feeling of duty and obligation to help bear the burden of the Empire.

Hence we see that the individualistic tendencies have given place to those of communism and co-operation. The Canadians have come to realize, as never before, the nature of a commonwealth and the great part they play in it.

The superficial idealism which the Canadian has hitherto lulled his conscience and senses with has been dispelled by a finer kind which holds that progress is often a matter of stern duty and sacrifice, and not a phase of fatalism.

Canada has taken up the load. She is sending her sons to suffer and die on the battlefields of Europe and Asia Minor. She is raising money for loans and war funds. She has glimpsed a vision—the vision of true commonweal, and by her action has not only saved herself from malnutrition and decay, but is preserving and perpetuating a society wider than Canada, yet one within which she can fulfil and her population were part of a all her hopes, ambitions, and service. —Buffalo News.

Can You Lace Your Corset Correctly?

Many a corset is ruined during the first day of its active service because it is not laced correctly. Few women take the trouble to install triple mirrors, which are required to correctly lace the old style garment, the result is that the lacing is made once, a knot tied and the garment put on without any regard to lacing.

With a Gossard you can see just how to adjust your corset. The lacing in front---in sight where you can quickly lace the corset. You can do without a mirror if you like.

as Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the Kaiser. The ladies wondered why he was there. He was dressed in civilian clothes and appeared to be interested in the scenery.

"When Germany says Great Britain forced her to unsheathe the sword just think of that German Lieutenant, who was called out for active service nearly four months before the war broke out," said Mrs. Huestis. It was all arranged. The Kaiser was just looking for a little peg to hang his hat on, and the assassination of the Archduke of Austria was the little peg that the Kaiser ultimately chose to hang his hat on.

Need of the Moment.

The need of the moment is recruits. We have a big task before us when we are told to produce five hundred thousand men. Canada will not fail. We do not know how we are going to do it, but it we must. We were told in Europe that we Canadians were waiting for the United States to annex us and the Germans believed it, and thought that under such circumstances Canada would not join Great Britain. Ireland was suffering from internal difficulties and the Germans supplied Ireland with guns that were subsequently used against the Teutons. Britain and Australia were also suffering from various difficulties among which might be mentioned the suffragette movement.

"Why Is It Our War?"

Answering this question, Mrs. Huestis said: "If we don't fight it out on the fields of Europe we will have to fight it out in Canada, so we might just as well fight it out over there. Germany desires expansion and where in all the world could they look for a better country than Canada? We cannot wonder at those people envying us for the golden land which must be preserved for Canadians.

The Germans criticised us for helping Belgium. If we did not help Belgium the German Army would now be on the coast of France, menacing England, so when we helped Belgium we were helping ourselves.

Ontario's Response.

Quoting Col. Wright, the speaker produced a number of figures showing the total number of recruits enlisted in Ontario since the commencement of the war. The figures are official, and are made up to December 31st, 1915. They are as follows:

No. 1 Military District—15,866.
No. 2 Military District—44,442.
No. 3 Military District, of which Peterborough forms a part, 21,412, making a grand total for the three districts of 81,756. The total for the whole of Canada is 207,268.

The number of men at present in training in each of the three districts is as follows:

No. 1 District—6,220.
Number 2 District—20,743.
No. 3 District—7,419.
Total—34,383.

"A Darned Fool."

Canada has sent one out of every thirty of the total population. That is too small, said Mrs. Huestis. We are told that the women are holding back the men. I am afraid that is the case. I know of one woman who called a man a 'darned fool' when he showed an inclination to enlist. Now we have got to reach that woman and get her to think in an Empire state of mind, or we will have the war over here. At a meeting held recently in Berlin, Ontario, the Colonel of the Battalion came into the meeting and begged of the women to help him, as he could go no further. They were keeping back the men.

A Big Effort.

It is going to be a big effort to get the required number of men, but we must do it. It is a big "must," spelled with a capital "M". The idea is to get all the women together in the various communities and enlist the support of the president of every women's organization you ever heard tell of. Some women pride themselves upon the fact that they have stayed at home where the men told them they ought to be. That is all right in times of peace, but you have got to look farther than your back fence in war times. It is hard for the mothers to give their boys up, but how will your boy feel when the boys come home and ask him what he did. We are placing the work on a firm foundation. The test will be, how many recruits can we get. The fact that I have had to come here and show you those figures shows we have not touched the kernel. The kernel is way down in the heart of our womanhood.

Done Good Work.

The women have done good work. They have sent over three million dollars' worth of supplies for the Red Cross. That represents actual money exclusive of the labour. Besides this they have furnished one hundred and twenty motor ambulances, in which to whisk the boys to the hospital so as to conserve their lives. That is all right but it is only secondary to sending our boys. The only way to defend ourselves is to secure recruits. It is a great deal to ask you to do, but how much better it is to know you have done right and done your duty," said Mrs. Huestis, in conclusion.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Huestis by Capt. J. Rollins of the 93rd Battalion. Several hundred cards were signed and turned in at the close of the meeting, signifying the signatory's willingness to assist in the work of securing recruits for the 93rd Battalion.

The band of the 93rd Battalion rendered a number of patriotic airs. Other contributors to the musical programme were Miss Kathleen Moore and Mr. Frank Whitehouse, while Master Percy Luther gave a couple of excellent recitations.

Its Coming, the Big Event of the Year, when there are bargains in every line of goods.

SOME HAVE FLITTED ACROSS THE BORDER

Gone to the United States to Evade the the Call for Recruits

While many Peterborough boys have donned khaki, and others are preparing to respond to the call towards which the realization of their duty impells them, there are some who have sought the ignoble escape of running from their friends, crossing the border to the land whose first citizen expressed the sentiment "too proud to fight." Mr. C. F. Leonard, of the American Consular Agency in Peterborough, declined to discuss the question this morning when asked if he had been visited by men desiring to enter the United States. But indirectly it has been learned that there has been a number, the exactness of which could not be estimated, who have thus ignored the reverberating appeal from their own country. It is understood that the number is not large, although it was sufficient to arouse comment among those who had learned of this form of evasion. With the gradual filling up of the 93rd those who have flitted will be forgotten.

It is not erudition that makes the intelligent man but a sort of virtue that delights in beautiful and vigorous thinking, just as moral virtue delights in vigorous and beautiful conduct.—Hamerton.

LETTERS FROM THE BOYS AT THE FRONT

Acknowledging Christmas Gifts Sent By Mrs. Veitch, Downie St.

Mrs. R. Veitch, 573 Downie Street, has received the following letters from Sgt. S. Thomas of the 21st Battalion, and Gunner Jas. McCormack, of the 4th Battery, 1st Artillery Brigade.

Sergt. Thomas writes as follows:

"Somewhere," Jan. 1, '16.

Mrs. R. Veitch.

Dear Madam,—Just a few lines in acknowledgment of your Christmas gifts. I wish to thank you on behalf of the Peterborough lads for your kind thoughts and remembrances of Peterborough's fighting men. It is pleasant to know that the folks at home do not forget their boys who are assisting in this death struggle, for that which is right. At the Yuletide, thoughts of home are with the men, more than any other time of the year. News from home is what every man looks eagerly for. We have received many comforts from the good citizens of Peterborough and I assure you the men appreciate them all. Your gifts, Mrs. Veitch, took well among the boys, and every Peterborough man in the 21st Battalion received one of the boxes, and if I missed any one, I either didn't know him or else he was a casualty, away from his unit. As Company Quarter Master Sergeant, on behalf of the men, I convey their very best thanks.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, with a victorious New Year, I remain

Yours sincerely,
S. THOMAS.

From Gunner McCormick.

Dear Mrs. Veitch,—I am writing these few lines to you, expressing my thanks to you for your kindly thought in sending that parcel to me. I gave the contents around among my comrades. Since I received my parcel we have had some more parcels from you and I and the rest of the boys send their best thanks and appreciate your kindness and thought for the boys, who are doing their "bit" in the mud.

Hope you and yours had a merry Christmas and will have a prosperous New Year.

JAS. McCORMICK.

Branch Will Be Formed

Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission Will Be Represented in Peterboro'

The city council has received a request from Mr. W. D. McPherson, K. C., M.P.P., chairman of the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission, asking that a meeting be called and a branch formed here.

There is need for such an organization. Already there are in Peterborough returned soldiers who should be assisted. As time goes on more will return and the work for such an organization will grow, and the time to begin and prepare is while the demand is small.

A meeting to deal with this matter will be held in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, on the evening of Thursday, January 27, 1916, at eight o'clock.

Mr. McPherson will be present and address the meeting.

WOMEN'S SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE FOR ENLISTMENT CAUSE

The Women's Auxiliary of the Speakers' Patriotic League has unanimously passed the following ringing resolution:

Resolved; In view of the fact that employers of labour may experience some difficulty in securing sufficient hands to fill vacancies caused by employees enlisting to serve the Empire, the Women's Auxiliary and the Speakers' Patriotic League, realizing that the existence of the British Empire is actually at stake, hereby pledge themselves to aid in securing such help as may be required, and women, whose circumstances do not necessitate their working, will if occasion arises assume such work or tasks as will enable employers to encourage enlisting to the utmost of their power.

I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

The man's condition is serious, as is also that of the woman, both suffering from the effect of the exposure they endured after sustaining their wounds.

Macdonnell Family of Toronto Has Given Its Share of Fighters

Two Wallis Brothers and Stuart Hayes Among the Number --Descendants of Old Canadian Fighting Stock

The following sketch of a fighting Toronto family touches Peterborough, in the persons of Lieutenants Harold and Hugh Wallis, and the late Stuart Hayes. It is from the Toronto Star:

Particular local interest attaches to the appointment of Brigadier-General Archibald Cameron Macdonnell, C.M.B., D.S.O., of the Strathcona Horse, who was honored in the recent list. He is a Toronto man, grandson of the late Col. the Hon. Alex. Macdonnell of this city, whose nephew Col. John Macdonnell, fought and fell with Brock at Queenstown Heights. His only sister, Mrs. J. McCall Wallis, resides here at 99 Charles street east and her two only sons, Lieut. Jame Harold Wallis and Hugh Macdonnel Wallis, are serving under their uncle the brigadier-general, in France.

Five Members of Fighting Family.—(a) Col. A. H. Macdonell, (b) Brig. Gen. Macdonell, (c) Lt. I. C. Macdonell. (d) Lt. J. H. Wallis, (e) Lt. J. A. E. MacDonell. Brig. Genera Archibald Cameron Macdonell, C. M.G., D.S.O., of the Strathcona Horse, was honoured in the recent lists, and a grandson of the la'e Col., the Hon. Alex. Macdonell whose nephew fell with Brock at Queenston Heights. Lt. J. H. Wallis is the only son of his sister who lives in Toronto, and he enlisted a a private in the 79th Highlander in Winnipeg. Lt. I. C. Macdonnell is the Brigadier-General's only son Lt. J. A. E. MacDonell is a cousin of the Brig. General's.

The family might fittingly be called the "fighting Macs." It is of U.E.L. stock, and has been engaged more or less in things military for many generations. At the present time there are nearly a dozen of its members serving with the colors.

Brigadier-General Macdonnell is a graduate of the R.M.C., Kingston. He became a lieutenant in the Canadian Mounted Infantry in 1886, was promoted adjutant and quartermaster in the same year, and later was exchanged to the R.N.W. Mounted Police. He served in the South African campaign in 1899-1902 with the 2nd Bn. Canadian Mounted Rifles, starting as captain and being made Lt.-Col. in 1901. He was wounded at Orange river, and was mentioned in despatches for his gallantry in action. In 1907 he became attached to Strathcona's Horse, which he has led as O.C. in the present war. In his new rank as brigadier-general he will have brigaged under him the P.P.C.L.I., the Royal Canadian Regiment, the 42nd Highlanders, and the 29th Edmonton Regiment.

His nephews, Lieuts. James Harold and Hugh Macdonnell Wallis, enlisted at Winnipeg as privates in the 16th Bn., 79th Canadian Highlanders, and known as the "Canadian Scottish." After the battle of Ypres they were promoted lance corporals, and after the battle of Festubert were recommended for commissions. At Ypres the brothers, who are very devoted to each other, became separated in a fierce charge and spent nearly a day after the battle searching for each other on the field. At Festubert, James Harold Wallis received a shrapnel wound in the head from the effects of which he has not yet quite recovered. After that battle, Hugh Macdonnell Wallis was transferred to the 13th Bn., Royal Highlanders of Canada. He is now aide-de-camp to Brigadier-General Macdonnell.

Brigadier-General Macdonnell's only son, Lieut. Ian Cameron Macdonnell, formerly lieutenant in the Strathcona Horse, is now a lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps.

Another distinguished member of the family at the front is Col. Archibald Hayes Macdonnell, D.S.O., Royal Regiment Canadian Infantry. He is first cousin to Brigadier-General Macdonnell and brother to Claude Macdonnell and Miss Marie Macdonnell of 421 Dundas street, Toronto. He served through the South African war, where he won his D.S.O. Afterwards he was seconded to an Imperial regiment and served for three years in Southern Nigeria.

A nephew of Col. Macdonnell, Private Stuart Finbar Hayes, eldest son of Judge Hayes of Guelph, is unofficially reported as a prisoner of war in Germany. At the outbreak of the was he enlisted in the 2nd Bn., 57th Peterborough Rangers.

Another nephew, Lieut. Philip Barry German, R. N., is at present in the Naval Intelligence Department at Ottawa.

Connected with the 95th Bn., C.E.F., still in Toronto, is Lieut. J. A. E. McDonnell, only son of the late S. S. McDonnell of Toronto, and cousin of Brigadier-General and Colonel Macdonnell.

CATHOLIC CLERGY ARE IN SYMPATHY WITH CAMPAIGN

Rev. Father O'Brien Urges Eligible Men to Enlist—This is No Time For Selfishness — A Favoured Land.

A GLORIOUS HISTORY

"The most highly honoured and the best loved men in the Empire today are the men wearing the khaki," said Rev. Father O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, in addressing one of the series of recruiting meetings at the Collegiate Institute hall. "If we do our duty now, Canada and the Empire will be more glorious than ever after the war and we will be a more glorious people. Canada will be a brighter jewel in the British crown, and Canadians will have a more glorious page in the world's history."

In his opening remarks, Rev. Father O'Brien said the Bishop of his clergy were in complete sympathy with the recruiting campaign and wished it all success. He considered it a privilege and an honour to be asked to speak for such a cause. All the free institutions with which we, as part of the British Empire enjoyed, had been fostered by Britain. But there was a danger of losing them. Citizens of Peterborough had heard some time ago from the lips of Sir George E. Foster, who stated plainly on the public platform that there was a great danger, and in the face of this danger we had a duty to perform—the duty of making sacrifices to protect the homes of Canada. And it was man's highest and noblest duty to guard these homes.

A Favoured Land.

This was particularly true as we considered the land we lived in. Canada was a happy land, a land favoured by Nature and Providence, a land sheltered by Nature from the calamities that visit other countries. Then, too, there was the beauty of our country. We had here the mountains of Switzerland, the lakes of Killarney, the hills and vales of Scotland. There were the prairies with unlimited supplies and resources, and above all this Canada had a noble manhood, vigorous, strong, brave and virtuous. Yet there was something in which we were prouder. There was something even nobler, higher and grander, and that was the womanhood of Canada. There was the mother who gave him who was nearest and dearest to her heart, and while the tears were streaming down her cheek and while the parting scene seemed to tear the heart from her bosom, says to the boys, go to the front, fight for your homes and country. I, your mother, with your sisters, will pray God to give victory to your arms and bring you home again, a hero, to your home and country.

While it might be considered out of place to refer to any religious distinction between Protestant and Catholic on a public platform and on such an occasion, the speaker said he wished to state, not in a spirit of division but in a spirit of unity, that the Catholic bishops and the priests of Canada are shoulder to shoulder with all others and take second place to none in the patriotic work in which Canada was now engaged.

A Big Brother.

Canada, he said, was no longer in infancy. Canada is the big brother in a happy family of Dominions that make up the British Empire and that big brother will defend his mother, his sister and his home. And isn't it worth while? It is, and more than that, it is necessary. We have a powerful enemy. If she wins, what of us? And she will win unless we, like the Allies in Europe, make a supreme effort. We can beat Germany, but we won't beat Germany unless we make a supreme effort and bring forth all our energies in the task before us. That is what the Allies are doing. Rev. Father O'Brien's answer to the man who said there are enough men, I am not needed, was, "The King says you are needed, and the country calls you now."

No Time for Selfishness.

The spirit of selfishness should have no place in the manhood of Canada. This was the hour of testing, and the spirit of self-sacrifice should be supreme. It was through the spirit of self-sacrifice that the men in khaki had brought the highest glory to Canada and the Empire and the men who are now donning the uniform will also bring glory to the Empire and their country. The most highly honoured and the best loved men in the Empire to-day are the men who are wearing the khaki. If we do our duty now, our Canada and our Empire will be more glorious than ever after the war, and we will be a more glorious people. Canada will be a brighter jewel in the British crown and Canada will have a more glorious page in the world's history.

GIVE CHAMPION $5,000 IF HE CAN HIT LEVINSKY

Battling Levinsky is willing to give Jess Willard or Frank Moran $5,00 if they can hit him once in ten rounds, according to Dan Morgan, his manager. This is what Dan'l has to say today:

"Battling Levinsky, the world's famous heavyweight, is all ready to show Frank Moran a few points in boxing. It is a pity to watch Moran in action, for he knows absolutely nothing about the game of hit, stop and get away. Frank is about as graceful in the ring as an elephant, for all he does is to let go a slow, wild right hand swing, for general results. If the boxing game had to rely on men like Moran and Willard, it would soon come to an end, for all they do, is make a home run once or twice a year. Battling Levinsky, who is a high-class boxer and fighter, goes right on making a hit once and sometimes twice a week. At the end of the yar he stands above a dozen Morans and Willards for hard work and services given to the public. Willard beat Johnson, who was all in, while Moran whipped Coffey, who has a glass jaw, but Battling Levinsky whips all the heavyweights from top to bottom, and when he is finished he starts doing it right over again Levinsky is willing to give either Willard or Moran $5,000 if they can hit him once in ten rounds. This is no bluff. Battling Levinsky is all ready to give up the money, if he can get either one of the two Circus Boys into the ring."

Tax on War Profits Planned By France

TO END TRANSPORT CRISIS

Government Bill Proposes 100,000,000 Franc Fund to Enlarge Merchant Marine

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The French Government will endeavour to meet the interest on the new national loan of 15,130,000,000 francs out of the taxes on war profits. The Minister of Finance, Alexander Ribot, introduced a bill with that object in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, providing for a progressive tax ranging from 5 per cent. on 10,000 francs to 50 per cent. on 500,000 francs and upwards. To meet the transportation crisis resulting from the shortage of maritime shipping facilities the Government has decided to ask Parliament also to authorize an advance by the Treasury of 100,000,000 francs ($20,000,000) to ship owners so that they may increase their fleets by purchase of allied or neutral vessels.

M. Ribot explains the object of the war profit tax bill in a memorandum stating that the tax will be chiefly paid by licensed societies or private firms, by those exploiting mines and by those who have by good fortune or accident made exceptional gains, or have helped, by their meditation, to obtain contracts.

The tax will be founded on declarations made by those whom it is proposed to tax, and these declarations will be verified by a committee in which the taxpayers can have confidence. From this committee there will be an appeal to a higher board.

In introducing the bill, M. Ribot said that the new national loan amounted to 16,130,000,000 francs, of which 1,000,000,000 came from abroad. Of the remainder, 6,000,000,000 were fresh money, the rest of the amount being derived from the conversion of treasury bonds, previous short-term loans, and converted rentes.

The Government's bill to meet the transportation crisis will be presented to the Chamber of Deputies to-morrow. The preamble says that after examining various plans to facilitate the provisioning of the country, lessen the drain on national wealth occasioned by high freight rates, and assure future development of the merchant marine, the Government has decided that the best method is to encourage private initiative by assisting owners to purchase allied or neutral steamers. The bill therefore authorizes the Treasury to make advances to ship owners, on the approval of the Ministry of Marine, up to 100,000,000 francs for the acquisition of steamships. These funds will be loaned at the rate of interest charged by the Bank of France for advance on securities.

Such loans will be made from the date of promulgation of the bill until one year after the end of the war. The maximum proportion of the purchase price of vessels to be advanced is fixed at 10 per cent. for companies already owning 20,000 tons of shipping or more and 80 per cent. for those owning less than this amount, or for new enterprises. Repayment is to be made in the case of companies of the first-class in three equal annual sums, in the case of the second class in four installments, and by fishing companies in eight payments. In each case the first installment will be payable one year after the time of purchase.

The steamships will be examined by Government experts before they are bought. They must be in good navigable condition and guaranteed free from all mortgage or lien at the time of sale.

The returns on the French loan for the national defence have now all been checked, and classified, and the total amount subscribed, says the Petit Journal, exceeds 15,000,000,000 fs. which is somewhat larger than the sum previously reported.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Tenders for eight new steamers of the large capacity intermediate type for the Cunard Steamship Company are to be submitted the present week, according to Liverpool newspapers.

Dollar Day, Thursday, February 3rd.

BERLIN, ONT. BOYS JUMP TO DETROIT IN THE PINCH

Capt. Kreitzer, speaking of the large number of Berlin boys who have left the country told of a conversation with a local man who spent the week-end in Detroit.

"Saturday night," said he, "I was in the Caddillac Theatre in Detroit. Looking around I was surprised to see a familiar face. Beside him was another, and as I looked along the row I counted no less than fourteen Berlin boys who had left Canada. These fellows left to avoid being called "yellow" to their faces, but they're being called "yellow" ever so much stronger for their actions."

If the 118th Battalion is to be filled in North Waterloo, every man and woman is urged to "do their bit." If you can't go yourself, send some one.—Berlin Telegraph.

HARRY M. FIELD, NOTED MUSICIAN FREED FROM GERMAN PRISON CAMP

LONDON, Jan. 19. — Harry Marshall Field, professor of music in Toronto for many years, and more recently a resident of Dresden, has returned to London after being released from Ruhleben prisoners' camp. He is in good health, although liberated as being unfit for military service owing to a defect in one foot. He confirms the stories of poor food supplied, and the wretched housing conditions suffered by the prisoners, and refutes the statement recently made by Dr. Ella Scarlet-Synge, of Vancouver, who after crossing Germany and visiting several concentration camps declared that the stories were untrue or exaggerated. Some amelioration has taken place, says Mr. Field, since a system of self-government was inaugurated in the camps, but the food is still so meagre that the men are largely dependent upon parcels sent by friends. Mr. Field maintained himself in good health owing to special permission gven him to buy meals and take regular dumb-bell exercise. A number of prisoners, although British subjects, were unable to speak English, and were pro-German in their sympathies. Friction between the two groups led to a challenge to declare their respective sides, and some declared themselves pro-German in the hope that they would derive some advantage, but the soldier guards expressed scorn for these and admiration for the men who had remained loyal to the British flag. Among the Canadians still at Ruhleben are Messrs. Ernest McMillan, son of a Toronto clergyman; Ketchum, of Port Hope; Bell, of Halifax, and Millington of Ontario. Mr. Field, who had an extensive clientele in Dresden, with musical engagements in Berlin before the war started, is well known in Toronto, where his mother and other relatives live.

A BIG WEEK IN S. A. CIRCLES

Number of Officers From Headquarters Will Visit the City

This week end in Salvation Army circles bids fair to eclipse anything that the Army has ever attempted, and the distinguished visitors will be many. They will include Commissioner Richard, in charge of Canada East, Colonel Gaskin, Chief Secretary of the S. A. for Canada East; Lieut.-Col. Bond, Editor of the War Cry; Brigadier Bettendge, Young People's Secretary for Canada East; Brigadier Green, Trade Secretary for Canada East; Major Atwell, Manager of the Printing Department at Headquarters in Toronto; Staff Capt. Florence Easton, of the Field Department, at Headquarters; Mrs. Ensign Watkin, on of the Field Department at Headquarters; Captain and Mrs. Spooner, who are the Boy Scout Leaders for Canada East; Brigadier and Mrs. Morehem of Montreal, the Divisional Commander.

Major and Mrs. Walton, Chancellor for the Montreal Division; Lieut.-Col. Hargarves of Toronto Headquarters; Captain Richards of Montreal Headquarters, and Captain Bier of Toronto Headquarters.

Besides these there will be delegates of young people from Tweed, Lindsay, Campbellford, Fenelon Falls and Belleville.

Captain and Mrs. Rustin of Belleville are bringing in about twenty-five.

There will be a great welcome demonstration on Saturday night at the Temple, and all these visitors and the public are cordially invited to meet them and welcome them.

Sunday will be spent entirely with the young people, about three hundred in number, in the Canadian Order of Foresters' hall. The Saturday night meeting will be the only opportunity of the Seniors meeting the visitors.

The Young People's Workers will meet at the Temple to-night to complete arrangements.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Treating Wounds By New Methods

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Dr. Pierre Roux, director of the Pasteur Institute, announced to the Academy of Sciences Tuesday night that a remarkable advance in serum-theraky had been made as the result of a discovery by Dr. Bassuet. By his method it was possible to cleanse automatically, Dr. Roux said, wounds which hitherto had resisted treatment.

Dr. Bassuet employs the polyvalent serum discovered last year by Drs. Leclainche and Vallee. Dr. Roux said 490 wounded men who had been in hospitals from six to fourteen months were treated according to Dr. Bassuet's method. As a result the infection seemed to revive in the wounds. Abscesses formed and burst spontaneously, eliminating bits of bone, splinters, bullets, pieces of clothing and even drains and silver threads left in the incisions by mistake. After this had happened, Dr. Roux said, the wounds healed quickly in most cases, and men who had been dying helpless for months were discharged cured.

The merchants are racing to lead in Dollar Day value giving. Buyers get both the bargains and the free $150. in cash.

200,000,000 GALLONS

Stock of Vodka Held by Russian Government.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—What can be done with 200,000,000 gallons of vodka now held in stock by the Russian government as a consequence of the prohibition sale of spirits, was the subject of an interesting debate at a recent session of the duma, according to Petrograd papers received in London. Some members favored destroying the stocks, some wanted industrial uses found for the vodka, and all agreed that the stocks must not remain in existence as a temptation to a reactionary finance minister to reopen the sale after the war. The present finance minister, Bark, concluding the debate, made this momentous declaration: "I deem it necessary to declare categorically that all suspicious ascribing to the government any intention of resuming the state sale of liquors is unfounded. I declare categorically that the government will encourage temperance after the war also, and that the return to the old state of affairs is impossible. Proof of this intention is the fact that the government is now engaged in drawing up a bill on the lines suggested by the forty-five members of the duma for the maintenance of temperance for all time. For this reason, I am entirely in favor of destroying the existing stocks of vodka."

Sweetness of temper is not an acquired but a natural excellence; and therefore to recommend it to those that have it not may be deemed rather an insult than an advice.—Dr Johnson.

Aunt—"Johnnie, why is it that you never remember to say 'Thank you?'" Johnnie (eyeing wistfully a box of chocolates on his aunt's knee)—"I expect it is because I don't get things given to me often enough to practise."

Sister—"Come, Willie, and take your powder like a little man. You never hear me make any complaint about a trifle like that." Willie—"Neither would I if I could dash it on my face like you do. It's swallowing the stuff that I don't like."

"I was rather surprised to see your husband walking out in the middle of the sermon yesterday," said the minister to a lady member in his congregation. "Yes," said the lady. "I was surprised, too, but then you see he is troubled with insomnia, and walks in his sleep."

The Sons of England And Their Members Who Are At The Front

The following is taken from the Sons of England Record: In a recent issue of the Toronto Star there appeared an attack upon the S.O.E.B.S. so unfair and untrue that it calls for a reply from the Record. It was a gross misrepresentation of the facts in connection with the policy of the Supreme Executive in dealing with the beneficiary members who have gone to the front. A more outrageous perversion of the facts could not have been made by the bitterest enemy of the S.O.E.. If the writer were simply searching for a sensation one would have thought that he would have made his investigation in some other direction than with a view to injure a society which is doing so much for the preservation of the Empire at the present time.

It was even charged in the Star that the S.O.E. regarded enlistment for overseas service as immoral. A superficial, and apparently hostile, reading of the constitution led the Star to say that among the Sons of England, recruiting for service was placed upon the grounds of immorality. It is quite unnecessary to do more than state this fact to convince the members of the Society that the attack which the Star made upon it was unwarranted and malicious.

If there is any society in Canada that deserves praise for what its members have done in this war it is the Sons of England. More than ten per cent. of the total membership are now in the King's uniform. They have shown themselves to be men who are willing to risk their lives to maintain the integrity of the British Empire. Their fellow members in the lodges rejoice in the patriotism that they have displayed, and the Supreme Executive, as the elected representatives of the whole Society, have a deeper sense of pride in the conduct of the Sons of England than any other group of men.

The Executive officers are charged with grave responsibilities to maintain the solvency of the institution, and at the same time to afford the full limit of protection to the dependents of every beneficiary member. It is in that spirit of earnest resolves for the welfare of the society that the Supreme Executive has determined to go the full limit of the financial resources of the society in protecting the interests of the enlisted members.

The fact that the Society has no legal liability for the payment of beneficiary claims by men who have undertaken extra hazardous occupations will not weigh with the Supreme Executive, for they have decided to meet in full all claims or ordinary members who enlist.

In doing this the society is assuming a heavier liability than any other similar organization in Canada. The Sons of England Benefit Society has more men in the front in proportion to its membership than any other fraternal or national society. That is something for the S.O.E. to boast of, and it is the result of the inculcation of those principles of patriotism and loyalty which form so important a part of the ceremonies at every lodge meeting. Englishmen have gone from the remotest corners of this Dominion, voluntarily, to do their bit to preserve the nation. No set of men appreciates this more fully than those who have been selected for the chief executive positions in the Society.

It will be remembered that at Windsor a resolution was passed instructing the Supreme Executive to insure the lives of all the members who enlisted. When that action was taken the war had just begun. The prospect was for a short campaign. But as the struggle developed and the certainty of a prolonged conflict was impressed upon the country it became impossible for the Supreme Executive to carry out that instruction. The straight-line Insurance Companies in many cases refused to take such risks at any price; the companies absolutely declined to issue a blanket policy covering a stated number of men.

Faced with these conditions it became clear that the wisest course for the stability of the Society would be to levy a special assessment of $1.00 upon every member to meet this extraordinary liability. This fund will be used specially for the relief of the widows and orphans of the men who may be killed.

The responsibilities of the Supreme Executive are to 82,000 members, who cannot go to the front, as well as to something over 3,000 who have gone. Those who remain at home are the elder members, who have made their contributions to maintaining the efficiency of the Society for many years. It would be unfair and unjust in every way to overlook the claims which they have upon the Order. The Supreme Executive has endeavoured to take a comprehensive view of the whole situation. They are more deeply interested in the well being of every insured member than all the daily papers in Canada put together.

When has the Supreme Executive of our Society neglected the interests of its members? When has it shown any disregard for the responsibilities imposed upon it by the members? On the contrary, is it not a fact that from the day the Society was established until now it has been served by Executive Officers whose devotion to the welfare of the members has been one of the most outstanding features of the history of the Society? For any paper to insinuate that men of this type are not regardful of the patriotism and sacrifices which their own friends are making at the front is an abominable libel.

On this question of insuring enlisted members, a statement has been given by Wm. J. Vale, Superintendent of Fraternal Societies for the Ontario Government. He recommends exactly the course which the Supreme Executive has followed, namely the raising of a special fund to protect the soldier members. With regard to the article which appeared in the Star, Mr. Vale said, "The Sons of England are in no different position from all the other fraternal societies. They pay sick benefits and funeral expenses of their members at the front. They can't carry the war risk at ordinary rates. The loss is too heavy. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which insured the Toronto soldiers, has lost $230,444 to date. Insurance Companies are charging $5.00 and upwards extra per thousand for war risks if the insured enlists for the war.

"Fraternal societies had only just been placed upon an actuarial basis when this war came along," continued Mr. Vale. "They paid death claims to soldiers at first, most of them, and the Sons of England passed a resolution to that effect at the annual meeting at Windsor. But they couldn't keep it up. Insurance Companies can't do it — without a premium in proportion to the risk. There is no fair criticism to be raised against the Sons of England or other societies for not doing so. With all the good will and patriotism in the world, they simply can't do it. A big battle might wipe a society out."

This is the opinion of the Government expert on fraternal insurance. It is an official approval of the course the Supreme Executive has followed. It would be impossible to have stronger or more valuable commendation of the good judgment and business ability displayed by the Supreme Executive of the Society than that which is contained in the opinion of Mr. Vale.

We trust that the members of the S.O.E.B.S. will not be stampeded by irresponsible and malicious gossip. They know the men whom they have elected as their Supreme Executive officers. They have had confidence in them in the past, and there will be no reason for them to lose that confidence in the future.

The Supreme Executive officers have also decided protect the members who hold Insurance Certificates and who enlisted for military duty, prior to this date, provided their payments will have to be made upon all beneficiary members. While it is hoped that every able member will do his best in fighting for his country, we trust every member who may not be called upon for active service will do his best, and assist the Supreme Executive in raising the necessary funds for the protection of those whose lives may be sacrificed in this great cause.

DEATH OF MR. CHARLES JAMES

Well Known Citizen Passed Away this Morning--- Funeral on Saturday

There passed away early this morning one of Peterborough's well-known citizens in the persons of Mr. Charles James, at his late residence, 503 Sherbrooke street, after an illness extending over some weeks. The late Mr. James was in his seventy-seventh year, and was born in Oxfordshire, England. He came to Canada forty-three years ago and settled in Peterborough. He was a blacksmith by trade, but for the past twenty-five years engaged successfully in the pop business. He was prominently connected with a number of organizations, who have lost, in the death of Mr. James, an enthusiastic and big-hearted comrade. He was a member of the Eagle Lake Hunt Club, the Peterborough Gun Club, the Canadian Order of Foresters, and the Sons of England. For twenty five years he played in the 57th Band. He was a member of Trinity Church, and in politics, he was a Conservative.

He was married before coming to Canada, and his wife and two daughters, Mrs. A. H. Webb, and Mrs. W. L. Evans, of this city, are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place on Saturday at two o'clock from the family residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

NATIONALIST BLACK SHEEP

Now, why should sober-minded Conservatives make such a howl about Col. Lavergne's treasonable vaporings, especially when they approved without protest the Borden Government's rewards of office to other Nationalists as anti-British and as treasonable in their talk as he? Indeed, it may happen with him as it has happened with the others: the measure of his treason may prove to be the measure of his fitness for Cabinet appointment, or for the Speaker's chair, or for a seat on the Bench.

The plain fact is that up to the present time, Lavergne, with all his wild words, has not been quite so offensive in his anti-British talk as were the half-dozen Nationalists who have been set in the seats of the mighty. Indeed he has this superior merit in that he has been consistent in his treason, while some of the others changed their coats, but not their political character, and so while Nationalists in their hearts, rejoice in the loaves and fishes of ultra-loyal Conservative office. Lavergne of late years has not been slack in his devotion to Nationalism as it is in Quebec, but in tireless zeal and in extravagant talk he was equalled if not outdone by Nantel and Blondin and Pelletier and Patenaude and Sevigny. He is still at his old job—their old job. They, every man with his tongue in his cheek, have been made 'Hon.'' in name by the very government to which these sober-minded Orange-Nationalists in Ontario give their implicit allegiance. Is it not, therefore, condemnation of themselves when these straight-going Conservatives condemn the utterances from Lavergne which their party leaders in the Government condoned and honoured in Lavergne's associates?

Of course the pap-fed organs of Cabinet Ministers are not free agents. They must dance when their masters play. Their attitude to this whole miserable Nationalism movement depends wholly on what used Cabinet Ministers like Messrs. Cochrane and Robers and Reid, and near Ministers, like Sir Herbert Ames, think they can make the Nationalists serve. Usually it is deemed politically prudent to denounce the Nationalists in Ontario, but in Quebec the government gives them offices of high honour and high salaries.

Years ago Bourassa and Lavergne called themselves Liberals, but when they betrayed Liberalism and revealed the horns and hoofs of narrow anti-British-Nationalism they were given short shrift, and never once did Sir Wilfred Laurier allow them to play fast and loose with Canada's fundamental political principles. Not one of these treason-talkers is allowed either to pretend to be a Liberal or to carry the honour badge of a Liberal office. Had Premier Borden repudiated the alliances made with Bourassa and the Nationalists by Hon. Frank Cochrane, Sir Herbert Ames, and others among his lieutenants, the impudence now flaunting itself in Quebec would have been castigated out of the way long ago. The humiliation of today is the natural out-growth of the Conservative-Nationalist alliance of 1911. That noisome brood of cross-breed chickens are not yet all home to roost.—The Globe.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

LINDSAY COMMENT ON TUESDAY'S JUNIOR GAME

Following are some of the comments of the Lindsay press on Tuesday night's hockey game:

The Lindsay Warder says: After playing a brilliant game against the Midgets in the first period, and beating them in the second period, the Peterborough Colts faded away before the fierce and aggressive Lindsay speed artists in the final period and lost a creditable game by 8 goals to 3.

The youngsters from the east (for they are all eligible for junior hockey for several years to come) sprung a surprise on the majority of fans, and demonstrated that they are much faster on hard ice. The game was a brilliant one, and one of the best junior attractions seen here in years. In the first period the visitors held the speedy Midgets down to a score of 2 to 1, in the second period they played the Midgets off their feet and tied the score. It was Peterborough's period and no mistake. In the crucial, or final period, however, the homesters showed their mettle.

The following is also taken from the Standard: The playing of F. Montgomery, a spare man, surprised even the management of the Peterborough seven. This lanky youngster on the defence shot his bolt in the second period, when he uncorked barrels of speed and fed the puck like a veteran to the forward line. In this period he was the best man on the ice. Graham, the little fellow at rover, was full of "Pep" and considering that he played the night previously, for the Peterborough intermediates he showed considerable pluck. Cherrett at centre was tricky and bored in considerable. Hamilton and Rose held down the wing positions well, and Lowes was a good man on the defence. Legros, in goal, was the "whole cheese," and in the first period particularly was peppered with shots, which he frustrated with the ease of a Bricker or a Lesueur.

The Lindsay Post says: The visitors jumped into the game with a determination to win and the team dished up a very fine brand of hockey. The work of the midget, Graham, was gilt-edged and greatly pleased the fans.

Of this period the Post says: The visitors pressed hard in this stage with nice hockey by their wings, centre and rover. The locals, however, went wild over the speedy battle with its brilliant dashes of hockey. Peterborough was coming strong and notched two goals, which caused the local fans to sit back and gasp, while the few supporters who accompanied the Petes, produced the Quaker Oats smile. This period ended 3—3.

McGRAW COUNTS UPON HERBERT TO BE STAR

NEW YORK, Jan. 18. — Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants has sufficiently recovered from the grip to turn his attention to baseball, and realises that the biggest job of his career faces him this spring. In another month he will be ready to go to the training camp at Marlin, Texas, to take up the big task of making a winning team of the tail-end Giants of last season.

Bad fielding and indifferent pitching were the causes of the Giants' downfall last year. The other teams in the National League won almost as many games from the Giants on errors as they did with base hits. There will be more than forty players in the camp at Marlin, early in March.

The pitchers will report first, and of the recruits McGraw is depending on Fred Herbert and the Cuban, Emilio Palmero, to break in as regulars.

Kremer, the Vancouver pitcher, is also looked upon as a likely candidate. In Babe Benton and Pol Perritt the Giants have two pitchers who should show much improvement over last season's form. Tesreau, Stroud, Mathewson, Ritter, Schupp, and Schauer are the other boxmen on whom McGraw will depend. Stever Royce, the Hamilton no-hit collegian, has decided to stick to the study of law and will not be with the Giants this season.

The successful experiment of playing Fred Merkle in the outfield part of last season has sent McGraw and his scouts on the trail of another first baseman, as it is planned to have Merkle play the outfield all the time.

One of the first basemen the Giants have in view is big Ed. Konetchy, who jumped the Pirates to join the Pittsburg Federal League Club. During his last season with St. Louis and the Pirates Konetchy's game fell off considerably, but with the Federal League last season his playing improved and he had a fine season. Two years ago, Manager McGraw offered $15,000 to St. Louis for Konetchy, but the offer was declined. Negotiations are now under way to obtain Konetchy as well as other Federal Leaguers, and he may wear a Giant uniform next season. Rodiquez a Cuban first baseman, and Kelly, a recruit, are also candidates for first base.

Merwin Jacobson is another stranger the Giants' scouts have unearthed. He is an outfielder who played with the Brockton Club of the Colonial League last season. Eddie Harrison, the infielder, has been recalled from Dallas, and Howark Baker is a new infielder drafted from Little Rock. He will be tried at third base. Carrol, the Fordham infielder, who was with Toronto, Babbington of Brown, and Ben Dyer, the third base man, are among the youngsters who will be tried out at Marlin before the season opens.

Ahearn Lasted Less Than Round

St. Paul, Jan. 19.— With a short overhand chop to the jaw, Mike Gibbons of St. Paul knocked out Young Ahearn of England after one minute and thirty seconds of fighting in the first round of their scheduled ten-round contest for the middleweight championship of America at the Auditorium last night.

The knockout came like a thunderbolt. The men had been boxing swiftly but easily, and the knockout wallop was the first hard blow either landed. It was a high right hook that started shoulder high and hardly travelled 12 inches. It caught Ahearn flush on the top of the jaw, and he dropped flat on his back. At the count of three he made a convulsive effort to rise, but stiffened back on the floor, and was completely out at the tenth second. Gibbons and the referee assisted him to the corner, and he was still glassy-eyed and dazed for minutes after the count, while the ring was filled with cheering fans.

They started at a fast pace at the bell, Gibbons shifting in and out and feinting. Both men were lightning fast and after a quick clinch Gibbons landed a light left to the body and a light left to the head. Mike landed a left swing to the ear, and Ahearn put a straight right to the jaw. They went into another clinch and broke, without either attempting to fight at close quarters. Ahearn jabbed a light left to the jaw, and they both missed hard lefts. Both men were working fast. Gibbons was in and out like a phantom and at times seemed to have Ahearn baffled. Ahearn landed another lightning left without much sting. Gibbons landed a left on Ahearn's jaw, worked rights and lefts to his body at close quarters, and then whipped a right to the jaw. None of the blows carried much sting. They broke and sparred about the ring to a neutral corner, when Gibbons suddenly feinted with his left and leaned in with his terrific short right that ended Ahearn's championship aspirations.

$150.00 will be given away in cash by the merchants on Dollar Day. Read about it in the big add.

PETERBOROUGH OPEN BONSPIEL

From Feb. 15th to 17th Will Doubtless Be a Signal For Another Rousing Gathering of the Curling Clans in This District

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday —February 15, 16, and 17—have been selected as the dates of Peterborough's big open bonspiel, for which it is expected there will be a big attendance of visiting rinks. The success of last year's 'spiel practically assures the locals that they will have all the regular clubs in this district represented, with a strong probability that some others will be here. The bonspiel has the same committee as a year ago and their experience is a guarantee that the details will be carefully looked after.

W. D. Campbell's rink is just now leading his group in the scheduled games, with five straight wins. As a skip he has been making an unusually good showing and was to a considerable measure responsible for the defeat of Lindsay in the District Cup games. His regular vice, Mr. Alex. Archibald, was with him in the latter games. In the scheduled games W. M. Laing's rink is going well at the present stage and there are several others nosing along well up. Of course it is early yet to be scanning the score board.

GREEN SOAP AS FOOD

Germany has been buying enormous quantities of green soap in Norway and Sweden, so much so that the Scandinavian newspapers are commenting upon it and asking the question: "Are the Germans eating green soap?"

"It its not reasonable to suppose that the Germans need all this soap for washing purposes. We have heard that there is a famine in fats in Germany, and who knows but that some clever inventor has devised an ingenious method of extracting fat from soap! Perhaps that is the reason that the Norwegian government has issued an order prohibiting further export of soap to Germany."

TO THE MOTHERS OF CANADA

(BY A MOTHER)

Is that laddie of yours wearing khaki?
Has he answered to his dutie's call?
Or is he just one of the slackers,
A being dispised by all?
Just a coward.

Now just answer this question dear mother,
Just is it his fault or your own,
That he has not joined his companions,
Or is it the seed you have sown
Makes him a coward?

Do you tell him you'll die broken-hearted
If he leaves you his duty to do,
Then shame on you as a mother,
He's too good for a mother like you;
You're a coward.

Does he wish to fight for his country,
Has he asked for your leave to go
To fight by the side of the other boys
Who are doing their duty yob know?
They are not cowards.

Are you doing your duty by holding him back
Whilst others are fighting for you?
The mothers of those who are fighting
Love their sons as much as you do,
But they are not cowards.

Can you sit at home in comfort and ease
And gaze on your son by your side,
Your love is just making a coward of him
Instead of real manly pride,
Just a coward.

Can he be brave, yet shirk dutie's call
Or manly if idle he stands,
Whilst mothers, wives, sweethearts and children
Die by ruthless and murderous hands.

Can he have pride in his manhood
To let others fight in his place,
Some day he will see what a coward he was,
And with honour will say to your face—
You made me a coward.

Now mother, just stop and think for awhile,
aErth's but a preparatory place
To fit your dear boy for his heavenly home
For Heaven you knew is his base.

What matter if he should die early,
If in honour he goes to his grave,
Of your boy you'll be proud to be mother
If his life for his country he gave.

You will know he is waiting for mother,
With his arm's outstretched with love
For the mother who taught him his duty
And pointed the way up above.

His call may come just as early
If you keep your dear boy by your side,
And you may die broken hearted,
For his death may bring shame to your pride.

In honour you may remember your boy
Who with dishonour has gone to his grave,
Every murderer was some mother's darling
Whose love failed her darling to save.

The criminal's mother loved her boy once,
But may have neglected to show
Her boy the hard path of life's duty,
To neglect which makes cowards you know.

It's your duty to teach your's his duty,
To you and his country as well.
For he's not doing his duty to mother
If protecting her is left to his pall.

She can't expect brave boys from mothers
Who are cowards themselves through and through,
So be brave yourselves, dear mothers
And your sons will be brave just like you.
Then think of the pride, dear mother
When the war is over and won,
To feel that the honours of victory
Are shared by you and your son.

EXAMINER DOLLAR DAY

IN ITS ORIGINAL FORM, WILL BE HELD ON

THURSDAY, FEB'Y 3rd, 1916

And judging by the enthusiasm of the Merchants, promises to far surpass all previous events of the kind in the City. The Stores have all had a good season's business, and propose to show their appreciation of the patronage they receive from the home district by giving the BIGGEST DOLLAR VALUES they have ever attempted, with the triple object of giving their customers in some of the bargains that will be offered something for practically nothing, clearing out odd lines and balances of winter goods and making Dollar Day a memorable one and the biggest event of the year in the district. In addition to the splendid Dollar Values, the merchants are giving away

$150.00 IN CASH PRIZES

This money will be given away in this way:—With every dollar purchase on that day, an estimating blank will be given to the purchaser. You will fill in your name and address, and a number representing your estimate on the following question.

ESTIMATE THE NUMBER OF THESE BLANKS THAT WILL BE FILLED IN AND DROPPED INTO THE BALLOT BOX AT "THE EXAMINER OFFICE" BY 10:15 P.M. ON DOLLAR DAY

The nearest correct estimate will be awarded the First Prize of $25; the Second $20; the Third $15, and so on

Next 30 nearest CORRECT ESTIMATE 30 Prizes, each $1.00

For your guidance in estimating, we might say that The Examiner is printing and distributing to the Merchants, for use on Dollar Day, 36,000 blanks, and it is only necessary to estimate what number each purchaser thinks will be used on the great day. Should any store run short of blanks, The Examiner will print more, so that the number printed might reach as high as 50,000. The number of estimates put in the first 8 Day Campaign was in the neighbourhood of 16,000. With this information, an estimate can be made before coming to town. Of course as many estimates can be made as the purchaser has blanks, and they will get one with every Dollar purchase they make.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 8—EYE TESTING APPLIANCES

TO MANY people the mention of the word "instrument" in connection with eye-testing, suggests some sort of an operation. The natural dread of anything of this nature often deters people from coming to the eye specialist for an eye test. This feeling is entirely wrong, however, as the oculists' instruments are used to test the eye-sight, not the eye itself. They are so nicely adjusted that with them the specialist is able to measure your strength of vision exactly, and it is only necessary to to look at a given point, to answer the purpose of the eye specialist. In cases where a weakness requires a direct examination, one special instrument enables the specialist to see the eye, brightly illuminated, but, here also it involves nothing more than looking into the instrument. The value of an optical parlor so fully equipped and modern as that of Mr. Fowler, is inestimable to his patrons.

A British destroyer rescued part of the submarine's crew. The remainder was taken off by a Dutch warship and taken to Holland.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The announcement of the Government's policy toward the proposal that a blockade be established about the entire German coast probably will be made next week. Answering a query in the House of Commons this afternoon, Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary, declared that the whole situation with regard to American trade statistics and the Foreign Office policy will be discussed in Parliament next week.

This was taken to mean that the Ministry will lay is programme before the Commons.

The Foreign Secretary gave no intimation as to how far Great Britain is prepared to go to prevent shipments from reaching Germany. He did complain, however, that London newspaper articles, purporting to show that the present "blockade" is a farce and does not stop shipments to Germany are "grossly unfair."

It was accepted in some quarters as an indication that if the Government decided upon a blockade policy, important concessions will be made to neutrals to avoid arousing feelings of hostility, particularly in the United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Diplomatic battle lines were drawn to-day to England and America, over the proposed actual blockade of Germany by the Allies. Notes for diplomatic negotiations were being framed by both the State Department and the British Foreign Office. The Baltic Sea is the key to the whole British blockade plan. High State and Navy Department officials declared to-day England's success lies in her ability to control a six-mile stretch between Denmark and Germany, which is heavily mined, although the British submarines continue to enter the Baltic under these mines. Positive information is held by the Navy Department from its agents abroad that at least twenty ore and merchandise ships from Swedish and Danish ports to Germany have been sunk in the Baltic in the last six months. Crews of these ships were landed at Swedish ports. How many more ships were sunk close to Germany's coast and their crews landed in Germany is problematical.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Allies have reached a definite agreement as to their future military and diplomatic policy in the Balkans, it was stated to-day, following the departure of the French Premier and military officials who attended the Allied War Council here yesterday.

Any situation that may arise within the near future will be dealt with firmly. The world may be assured of that, was the statement emanating from a well-informed source. It is understood that the developments in Greece formed a principal topic of discussion. Before Premier Briand left for Paris to-day it was hinted that both British and French Governments may authorize the issuance of statements dealing with yesterday's conference to-night or to-morrow.

Berlin reported to-day that the German people are now convinced that the Allies plan either to unseat King Constantine and place Venizelos at the head of the Greek Republic, or to force Greece into the war by cutting off all shipments and threatening her with starvation. Sofia correspondents warn the Berlin newspapers that the situation is most critical.

BRITISH LOSE TWO AND GERMANS FIVE MACHINES IN AIR BATTLES DURING A RAID

Sixteen of Allies' Aeroplanes Attack Enemy Supply Depot at Le Sars--Emperor William With Bulgarian King Reviews Troops.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—British aviators had nineteen battles in the air on Monday while sixteen machines were engaged in a raid on a German supply depot in the neighbourhood of Albert. Five German and two British craft were lost in the encounters. The War Office Wednesday night in issuing the day's report from the field headquarters said:

"On Monday sixteen of our aeroplanes attacked an enemy supply depot at Le Sars, northeast of Albert, causing considerable damage. During the day there were nineteen air encounters, in which five of the enemy machines were driven down and two of our aeroplanes were lost."

The French aerial corps also has been actively engaged. Wednesday night's official communique said:

"In the night of January 18-19 two German aeroplanes having dropped four bombs on Nancy, one of our squadrons immediately took the air and bombarded the railway stations at Metz and Arnaville. Twenty-two shells were dropped on the buildings, which suffered some damage.

"A hostile aeroplane was brought down near Frelinghein by our fire."

EMPEROR MEETS WITH KING.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Emperor William and King Ferdinand of Bulgaria met on Tuesday in Nish, where a military pageant had been organized for them. They were accompanied by large suites. The Kaiser presented a marshal's baton to the Bulgar sovereign and the Kaiser was made honourary colonel of a Bulgarian infantry regiment. The monarchs greeted each other cordially and reviewed the procession of troops—Bulgarian, Macedonian and German—from the citadel.

"Among the Kaiser's retinue were General von Falkenhayn, Chief of the General Staff; Field Marshal von Mackensen, Adjutant Generals von Plessen, von Chelius and von Lyncker, and Admiral von Mueller. King Ferdinand was accompanied by Princes Boris and Cyril; the Premier, Mr. Radoslavoff, and others.

LINCOLN WALKS STREETS WHILE U. S. HUNTS HIM

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The New York American this morning prints the following:

"Every arm of the Federal secret service and the police force was used yesterday in the search of Ignatius T. T. Lincoln. He is the self-confessed German secret service agent who escaped from Deputy United States Marshal Johnson in Brooklyn on Saturday. He had in his possession a portfolio of papers invaluable to the Government in its spy plot investigations. The escape was denounced yesterday by Federal Judge Chatfield as the result of inexcusable negligence. The Deputy Marshal who permitted it was suspended.

The British authorities, eager to extradite Lincoln on a charge of forgery, are not only puzzled but enraged.

Meanwhile Lincoln calmly walked the streets. He conversed with traffic policemen, and even lounged around the corridors of the Federal building.

U. S. Not First Victim.

Finally he came into The New York American office with the following article:

"I have read with much interest the fragmentary reports of my escape in this morning's New York American. The United States Government may find consolation in the fact that they are not the first Government whom I have outwitted and from whose careful, with all routine, vigilance I have easily escaped.

"The full story of the why and how of my escape cannot as yet be told—this I will tell in a future article which I promise shall reach you as soon as certain events have taken place.

"At the outset I should like to say that I am sincerely sorry for the precarious position in which United States Deputy Marshal Johnson finds himself. It would be unjust to punish him. Not all the forces of the United States secret service could have prevented the carrying out of my carefully laid scheme."

Much Obliged.

Wealthy man, just rescued from drowning: "Well, mister, I'm much obliged to ye for hauling me out of the water, and here's half-a-crown for ye—all the change I've got about me now." Rescuer: "Oh, no; keep your money. I wouldn't think of robbing you!" Wealthy Man: "Not at all, not at all! 'Twould have been lost anyhow if ye hadn't rescued me!"

Prof. H. M. Field.—Interned in Germany since the war started, he has just been granted permission to return to England. He left Canada twenty-five years ago. He was interned in Dresden, Germany.

Forts At Bulgarian Town of Porto Lagos Are Silenced

By an Anglo-French Squadron —Bulgarian Gun Emplacements Destroyed

ATHENS, Jan. 21.—After two days' bombardment, an Anglo-French squadron silenced the forces at the Bulgarian town of Porto Lagos and landed troops on Bulgarian soil. The Allied land forces destroyed Bulgarian gun emplacements and after a brief reconnaisance withdrew.

The landing was made on Wednesday with only slight casualties. Anglo-French troops moved northward toward the Bulgarian railway, a few miles north of the Bay of Porto Lagos, but encountering a superior Bulgarian force, withdrew to ships.

HOW AIRSHIPS HAVE BEEN MADE INVISIBLE?

Among the multitude of requirements of the European conflict one of the greatest has been that of invisibility to the foe. Everything must be made to be kept out of sight as far as possible. This has been the rule on land, on the water, and in the air. On the land the soldiers were hidden fro mthair foes by the multitude of trenches or natural formations of the country. The guns, field pieces, and all large ordinance were housed in large underground chambers, or concealed by shrubbery cut and skillfully arranged. In the Dardanelles even the horses were hid by being placed in large deep trenches.

The scene painters were organized in France to create suitable backgrounds where other methods could not be used. Some very funny incidents resulted from the illusions to which they resorted. In one case, it was desired to shift a considerable body of French troops from one point of the line to another along a road in full view of the enemy. The scene painters painted an exact copy of this stretch of road and it was stealthily erected at the roadside nearest the German lines. It completely hid the real road. As the Germans watched it from a distance, it was apparently a peaceful stretch of country road. But, all the time, a large body of French troops was marching freely along behind the scene to strike the Germans at an unexpected point. Watering carts were stationed at intervals to wet down the dust raised by the troops, so that the Germans would not see the rising dust clouds and suspect the ruse.

Somewhat the same tactics have been resorted to in the case of war ships and other sea craft. Until this war, the fighting craft of all countries, in war, were usually painted simply a dull gray which rendered them invisible at sea, it was thought, at the shortest distance. In the present war, the scene painter has painted sea graves, in effect, on the hulls of most of them. At a very short distance they seem to merge right into the sea and are completely invisible.

But, how could you make an aeroplane, right over head, invisible? That was the big problem. In the first place, the body was painted a very light, bluish white that mostly resembled the very light haze noticeable about all objects seen at a distance. Then the wings were treated with a substance which rendered them almost transaprent. And now a material is used which is, itself, substantially transparent. The net result is, that the latest aeroplane, at only a comparatively low altitude, are practically invisible. This is one of the hardest blows to the anti-air craft guns of Germany, since the transparent wing material is a device of the allies.

It seems hardly a week passes without some wonderful invention for the war. Fortunately most of them are equally valuable for peace. So we wonder, continually, what the next may be.

Say Censor Hides Germany's Plight

Blockade is Effective and Things Not Well With Fatherland

AMSTERDAM, via London, Jan. 21 —The debate at the closing session of the German Reichstag to-day was notable for the extreme outspoken criticism of the censorship, especially as it is applied to the socialist newspapers, as well as to general news concerning the war situation.

According to the report of the Cologne Gazette, a socialist member, Herr Wilhelm Dittman, bitterly complained that this censorship was political and not military, and charged that the Prussian government was making careful preparations that the elections should turn in their favour.

"We must," said Herr Dittman, "destroy this pernicious mania which only regards voices claiming conquest as the expression of the will of the people. The people are against a will which cries for conquest."

Herr Fischbeck, progressive, and Dr. Stresemann, national liberal, also strongly denounced the censorship, and demanded the relaxation of the continuous state of siege. They scathingly criticised a government policy of allowing the people to hear only opinions favorable to Germany.

"We can bear the fresh breath of criticism," said Dr. Stresemann. "That things are not going well with us and that England's blockade is effective are known abroad so exactly that it is needless to hide anything. The government ought to send broadcast the news, not in highly-coloured phrases that everything is going well but that much is going ill, and that therefore it is our duty to assume every burden created by the situation."

Aloysius turned and tiptoed from the room. A quarter of an hour later he was again conducted to Miss Wetmore's apartments in the Benson. She raised a tearful face toward him.

"Well," she said, "what did he say?"

Aloysius shook his head.

"Nartin, lady."

She folded her hands in her lap and gazed into vacancy.

"What did he do?" she continued, and her lips trembled piteously.

"Now, lady," said Aloysius, "don't yer go ter takin' on about it de way he did. Up de level, lady, he beefed stumpin' awful."

Miss Wetmore rocked to and fro in impotent misery, and Aloysius, forgetting that he was a messenger boy, laid a comforting arm on her shoulder. Gently she took his hand in hers and pressed a dollar bill into it. Aloysius turned red and choked.

"Tanks, lady," he murmured; "but I couldn't take it."

He left the money on the table and backed out of the room.

The manager at Forty-fifth street was just finishing his stogie when Aloysius came back.

"Well," he grunted, "what've you been loading?"

Aloysius was in no mood for correction.

"Say," he piped, "me mudder's sick, an' I'm goin' home! See?"

"You are, hey?" the manager replied. "You stay right here till 7 o'clock."

For answer Aloysius flung down his oilcloth covered book and walked out of the office, banging the door behind him. Without hesitation, he made straight for the Alttuscham.

"Say," he said to the clerk, "I've got an answer for Mr. Holworthy in 80."

The clerk looked at the pigeonholes behind him.

"Gone out," he replied.

"Where did he go?" Aloysius persisted.

"You might try the Criterion Club," said the clerk.

By this time the light snow had grown into a driving blizzard, and Aloysius shivered as he faced the stinging particles. He turned into Fifth avenue, his head bent to the storm, just as a hansom dashed around the corner. The driver gave a mighty pull on his reins and swore horribly as Aloysius disappeared beneath the wheels. Young Holworthy jumped from the cab and carried Aloysius in his arms to the sidewalk.

"By George!" he exclaimed. "It's the messenger boy!"

When the ambulance arrived the surgeon shook his head dolefully.

"Must get him to the operating table immediately," he called to Holworthy from the back of the wagon as it clanged rapidly away.

Aloysius awoke four hours later with the fumes of the ether lingering in his nostrils. He turned his head painfully toward the white capped nurse at his side.

"Am I goin' to croak?" he whispered.

The nurse patted his pillow cheerfully.

"You're all right!" she said.

"Say," he muttered again, "kin I send for me friends?"

The nurse nodded, and placed a limp hand on the bell. One bent her head while he whispered two names and addresses.

It seemed like an age, but in reality it was barely half an hour before they arrived. Holworthy was the first to come. He leaned over Aloysius and pressed his hand in silent sympathy. Aloysius smiled gratefully.

"Say, Jack," he murmured, "have yer got dat ring?"

Holworthy took it from his pocket and laid it on the bed. Then Miss Wetmore entered. She stood on the opposite side of the bed and a faint flush mounted to Aloysius' cheeks as he saw her.

He closed his hand over the ring.

"Put it on, lady," he muttered.

With drooping eyes she placed the ring on the third finger of her left hand. Aloysius turned to Holworthy.

"Git over on de udder side," he whispered, and in a moment the two lovers were clasped in each other's arms.

Aloysius beamed and half rose in his bed.

"Kiss her, Jack!" he gasped, and fell back on his pillow.

X. THE GINHOULIAC HEIRLOOM.

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

It must be confessed that even as office boys go Bonfortunato Tagliatela was by no means of engaging personality. He was short for his fourteen years, and a tousled mop of hair hung low over his eyes, with which he squinted horribly.

So ill favored was the boy that he moved easy going John Oakley to protestations of disgust.

"By George!" he said to Freddy Furnival. "That office boy of yours is a freak. May I ask what on earth induced you to hire him?"

"You may," Freddy replied. "The sole consideration was that he's a member of the Benvenuto Cellini circle of the Tuseo Settlement on Mott street, at which your sister Mary is a worker."

"Quite so," Oakley commented. "But where's the connection?"

"Spoken like a brother!" said Freddy. "I suppose you don't know Mary is awfully down on me and calls me one of the idle rich."

"I do know it," Oakley replied. "Last night at dinner she said you were only playing at practicing law."

"Precisely," said Furnival, "and Taylor shall be the means of disillusioning her. He is under strict injunction to inform her, first, what a large and lucrative practice I'm acquiring, and, second, how by precept and example I'm making a man out of him."

He felt in his pockets for some cigarettes and found none there.

"Taylor!" he called. And when Tagliatela appeared in response he threw the lad a quarter. "Get some cigarettes," he said, "the kind we're both partial to."

"You don't mean to say you fed him cigarettes?" said Oakley when the boy had gone.

"Not if" Furnival answered. "He helps himself to 'em, together with what small change I may have, out of the pocket of my office coat, when I'm not here. Last week he developed a new trick. I found my library dwindling volume by volume. He sells 'em at a book shop on Ann street. I followed him there last Thursday, and arranged to have him paid a quarter [illegible] and thirty cents for digests. Very decent fellow, the proprietor. He turns 'em back to me at a nickel profit—and there you are."

"By Jove! What won't a fellow do when he's in love?" Oakley ejaculated.

"You're quite right," said Freddy, "but there are compensations. I've invited myself over to the Benvenuto Cellini circle tonight, as Taylor's guest, and Mary will be there. Here he is now," he broke off suddenly. "Greetings, Taylor!"

The stunted youth entered, and, grinning sheepishly, deposited a package of cigarettes on the desk, from which Freddy took it.

"Cigarettes used to come ten in a box," he said, as he opened the package, "but—he, as I thought, there are only nine here! The trusts again, Oakley—you can't beat 'em!"

The Tuseo settlement on Mott street accomplished two results, neither of which was important from the standpoint of sociology. Imprimis, it provided Hector Ginhoulíac, its founder and head worker, with a living, and, secondly, it catered to a laudable and charming taste for "social service" in various wealthy young spinsters. One of these Hector had married for his own.

"What others have done I can do," he declared to himself and laid siege to the heart of Mary Oakley.

To that serious person there could be no comparison between Ginhoulíac, the Milanese of French extraction, and Freddy Furnival, only heir at law of Furnival's dry soap and magic cleaner. Freddy's perennial flippancy served but to irritate Mary, who was nothing if not earnest of purpose, while the suave and polished Ginhoulíac appealed strongly to her sense of dignity.

True, Ginhoulíac had no money and even made melancholy jest of his poverty to Mary.

"But you are rich in your life work," she would say.

Ginhoulíac would answer with a resigned smile, indicated, no doubt, by the aptness of Mary's observation. He would, indeed, be rich if his plans matured as he hoped. Moreover, he sincerely admired Mary. Her face was lovely rather than beautiful.

In most men her glance might well provoke a sneer or two of their own unworthy [illegible] but in Ginhoulíac it aroused only self congratulation. The proposition seemed delightfully easy, save for one obstacle—namely, the cost of a suitable engagement ring—and this difficulty to a person of Hector's ingenuity might be readily overcome.

When Freddy entered the settlement house on the Tuesday in question, in Mary's company, Ginhoulíac felt no restraint. He greeted Miss Oakley effusively and acknowledged the introduction to Freddy with an obeisance that blended grace and dignity in just the right proportion.

"Assuredly," thought Freddy, "this is something to be tested."

"How d'ye do?" he said aloud. "Cold, isn't it?"

Ginhoulíac agreed that it was "cauld" and asked if Miss Oakley was to have the pleasure of demonstrating the settlement work to Mr. Furnival.

"Not exactly," Mary replied. "I met him by chance on the way over from the subway. He's here as a guest of one of the clubs."

"The Benvenuto Cellini circle," Freddy broke in.

"Ah, so!" said Ginhoulíac. "You pronounce the Italian good."

"At the invitation of my friend Bonfortunato Tagliatela," said Freddy, musicking all the liquid syllables with practiced ease.

"Too baddis!" Ginhoulíac murmured. "Too baddis!"

"He isn't sick, is he?" Mary asked sympathetically.

"Notta seek," said Ginhoulíac. "A-oh, sotta seek. I should to be seek. He take from my desk six of my cigars, and I find him smoking them in my office."

"I'm sorry to hear it," Freddy commented.

"It is no matter," Ginhoulíac replied, with a smile and a shrug. "I keek him down to the street corner. He sotta come back, I promise you!"

"Then Mr. Furnival is deprived of his host," said Mary.

"Notta so, sotta so!" Ginhoulíac broke in hurriedly. "Mine shall be the pleasure to act as host." He turned to Furnival. "And to show you how it is we uplift the poor foreign boy," he said, with a fine sweep of his soft white hand

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Margaret Grasman, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Dunbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kiesling, 941 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

said a well educated man the other day when he was asked this question:—"Why, when you have a cold, a cough or bronchitis (troubles, you will note, of throat and chest) do you persist in pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into your stomach, which is perfectly sound?"

Ever think of it? The stomach and the lungs are not connected, otherwise food swallowed would choke you. Lung and throat troubles were never yet cured by dosing the stomach. To cure coughs, colds and bronchitis, you must breathe the cure. Peps provide the rational treatment for these ailments. Peps are tablets made up of pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. BRIDGENORTH NEWS

BRIDGENORTH, Jan. 19.—Nearly every family is down with the grip in the village and some of the older people are very sick with it.

Mr. Robert Tedford has sold his farm and is moving into the village having bought Mr. Thomas Edmondson's residence.

Mr. Thomas Edmondson has bought the home that belonged to the Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, and is moving into it about the middle of February.

The Indians from the Indian Village gave a concert in the O.O.F. Hall last week. It was quite a success although the band was not out in its full strength on account of some being laid up with the grip.

It is expected some of the 93rd Regiment will be in the village to-morrow, drumming up recruits. There are two or three that have a notion of joining.

Jim O'Leary and Barney McManus expect to be through grain threshing by the end of the week. They have been at it for five months.

The Rev. Mr. Gall and the Rev. Mr. McKee are holding revival meetings at present jointly in the Baptist and Methodist churches.

The Jopling Bros. have bought out the Gordon-Davies Company business in the city and are attending to it, but they do their killing in the village here.

We have checked the cash and verified the securities of the Bank at the Chief Office at December 31st, 1915, as well as at another time during the year, and found they agreed with the entries in the books in every case and therein. We have also during the year checked the cash and verified the securities at the various other branches.

We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required and we are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

This Will Remove Hair or Fuzzy Growths

(Toilet Tips)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone

MIRACULOUS CURES

Many Heroes Returning Deaf and Dumb Are Again Restored to Health

The case of the blind Canadian private whose sight was restored miraculously through the shock of being thrown into the sea from the torpedoed liner Hesperian is but one of many startling cases of marvellous recoveries which have occurred during the war. A few months ago an entertainer was giving a performance before wounded soldiers in a Bristol hospital, when Corporal Stevens, of the 2nd King's Royal Rifles, who had been rendered deaf and dumb in Flanders, suddenly burst into loud laughter, and to the amazement of doctors and nurses showed that he had miraculously recovered his speech and hearing.

In another case a man who had been rendered deaf and dumb through the bursting of a shell at Mons suddenly recovered speech through the pain brought about by placing his hand on a hot water pipe in the corridor of the Queen Alexandra Military Hospital at Millbank. In the same hospital Lance-Corporal Fowkes, of the 18th Hussars, who was rendered blind at Mons, and whose case was regarded as hopeless by the surgeons, received special X-ray treatment with the result that he regained his sight. Recently, Corporal Leonard, who was bereft of hearing and speech, went to a moving picture show at Liverpool. As the film revealed the antics of the well known comedian Billie Ritchie, the risible faculties of the soldier were touched. He felt a burning in his throat and a painful drumming in his ears, which seemed about to burst. Then to his agreeable surprise, he heard a shout and found that it was his own voice.

GNASHERS OUT AGAIN

Prisoner's "Hymn of Hate" Rebuked By German Socialists' Paper

The publication in the "Deutsche Tageszeitung" of another hymn of hate has called forth from the Socialist "Vorwarts" a strong protest and also a tribute to English humanity. The poem written by Herr von Knies, was entitled "Prisoners in England."

An imaginary prisoner in the course of an harangue is made to say: "Here we are lying like beggars in the frost by the open door. We cannot fight for Germany; we can only starve for her. We greet with joy the arrival of our airships with their palace destroying bombs. Every bomb shows you, English, how we hate you, and if they were to hit us ourselves we should not complain. It would be the end of our sufferings, and better than English justice. We only feel like dogs the stripes laid upon us by our adversaries."

Look Before You Leap!

The story is going the rounds of the London Stock Exchange as follows: That member, special constables, patrolling the sides of a big building, agreed that they were to meet at one of the corners at the end of their respective "beats." One arrived in a very damaged condition.

"Hallos! have you met a burglar?" anxiously inquired one.

"No," ruefully replied the other. "You know that pretty girl we were flirting with, who told us that her sweetheart had gone to the Dardanelles? Well, he hasn't."

War Changes Dress Habit

A striking sign of the changes in deeply-rooted social habits in London brought about by the war is furnished by the rapidly lessening amount of evening dress now worn by men in West End theatres. The appearance of a morning coat in the stalls of a fashionable house sixteen months ago would have been regarded as unpardonable; but so far from its being seriously heeded now, the practice is becoming so common as to excite no remark.

WON BACK HIS GUN

Canadian Gunner Describes a Remarkable Piece of Luck

A remarkable story of the recapture of a Canadian machine gun in a German aeroplane by the very man who originally took the gun to France is told by Ernest Marshall, now serving with the Canadian contingent, in a letter to his father. He writes: "A German plane came over our trenches this morning, and a couple of our anti-aircraft pom-pom guns began to bombard it. Then one of our battle planes went up, and they had a scrap about 2,000 feet up in the air. Our plane brought the German plane down, and our boys all cheered like madmen. It did not seem much damaged, except the propeller, which hit the parapet. The pilot was killed, but was still strapped to his seat. The observer was slightly wounded in the head, grazed by a bullet.

A small party went out and brought in the observer, a smart looking chap, about 19. But they had to beat a hasty retreat, as the Germans started to shell hell out of it.' However, when they let up a bit, Corporal Swan crawled out of the trench on his stomach and started to collect 'souvenirs. Now for the funny part of it. He started examining the gun and found to his astonishment stamped on it No. 1,467 R.M.R. No. 1. It was the same gun he brought over to France last February, and the Germans captured it at Ypres on April 26.

"We have had two days' continuous rain, and the trenches are in a wretched condition, and we are plastered from head to foot with mud. The dug-out I had last time in the front line was swarming with mice. They used to run all over me at night, and I couldn't kill the beggars as they were so tame. Some of them would eat cheese out of my hand. The worst of it, though, the little blighters ate nearly all my rations."

Belgian Child's Faith

The deaconess of a Liverpool home for incurables tells a delightful story showing the trust and affection which the British soldier has inspired in the hearts of the people of Belgium. A neighbor had adopted two Belgian children, a boy and a girl. The little girl cried all through the first night and all the next day; she could neither eat nor sleep, and utterly refused to be comforted. Late in the evening the family doctor called, clad in khaki. Scarcely had he entered the room when she ran to him with outstretched arms, crying, "Bittish! Bittish!" She nestled in the doctor's arms, almost immediately fell asleep, and slept the clock round.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Colour and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is musty and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw it through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hairs disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, although no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

Fry's Chocolate Powder

makes every Chocolate Cake a triumph. Everybody enjoys its purity and its rich, healthful flavor. Even inexperienced house-wives get perfect results—it's so easy to make. Mix one-quarter cup of FRY'S CHOCOLATE POWDER, with two cups of powdered sugar, adding two tablespoonfuls of cream or of boiling water. That's all.

Of course, remember, "nothing will do but FRY'S."

CARE OF THE HAIR

DAILY ATTENTION NECESSARY TO HEALTHFUL HAIR AND SCALP.

(From The New Haven Register.)

Although it may not be possible or indeed desirable for every woman to have tresses of Godiva-like abundance, it is within the power of almost everybody to have a fine head of hair, or to possess what looks like one, whether her locks are long or short, thick or thin, dry or oil, dark, fair, or just mid-brown. The whole secret lies in the state of the health and the daily care of the hair.

If the hair is in an impoverished condition, abnormally greasy or abnormally dry, showing a tendency to become brittle and break off short; if it loses its color and bulk, then it is no good in beginning any hair treatment without first attending to the general state of the health.

One should take sufficient exercise and rest and correct any indiscretions in diet. Where an anaemic condition exists a tonic often does wonders, so will a course of cod liver oil, while raw eggs and unboiled milk are articles of diet which directly beautify the hair.

As to the general care of the hair it should be washed as often as it requires cleaning. Once a week is not too often for a very oily type of hair, and about once in three weeks is a good average for ordinary hair.

If it is washed at home liquid soap is the best thing to use. The hair should be thoroughly wetted with warm water, then a handful of the liquid rubbed in. If it does not lather at once use a little more water and a little more liquid until the whole head is in a perfect foam; rinse out the lather very thoroughly; take the worst of the moisture off with hot towels, and dry by brushing and fanning. Do not on any account seek to dry it by the fire.

The daily care of the hair is most important. It should be well brushed every night, the scalp being first of all treated with a rather hard brush to stimulate the circulation, and the long hair afterward brushed with long sweeping strokes, two brushes with rather long, stiff bristles being used. This is to keep the hair clean and give it a natural gloss.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Sage Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear; no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

FRIENDLESS UNITED STATES

(From the New York Sun.)

It behoves the people of the United States to realise that there is no nation in the world actually well disposed toward us at present. Belgium and Serbia may be grateful to us for our charitable assistance, but the dominant powers of Europe and the Orient look upon us with jealousy, distrust, and half-concealed antagonism. The soft, gentle phrases of diplomacy are words used by nations to conceal their thoughts. Off dark times are ahead of us, if fate ordains that the United States must defend herself, as the board of strategy seems to intimate, from powers combined in the future to our undoing, it seems at this moment as if we should be obliged to fight alone and unaided. How the most extreme pacifist can fail to perceive the necessity for immediate and complete preparedness upon the part of the United States passes comprehension. Let him consider the fact that this is to-day the richest country in the world and, from a military standpoint, one of the weakest, and that we cannot rely for assistance at a crisis upon any one of our so-called historic friends among the nations. Then he will perceive, perhaps, through a sudden flash of commonsense, that in preaching national disarmament he is a pernicious visionary, imperilling the existence of the one country on earth that claims his allegiance.

No, No.

"I hear you're going to marry Archie Blueblood, Diana. Is it true?" asked one young society woman of another. "Marry him! I should think not! What on earth could I do with the man? He can't ride, he can't play tennis, golf, nor, for that matter, can he even drive a motor car!" "Oh," said the friend, "but he can swim beautifully, you know!" "Swim, indeed! Now, I ask you, would you like a husband you had to keep an aquarium?"

NO GERMAN CHESTNUTS OUT OF THE FIRE

If Bernstorff & Co. could embroil the United States with the Allies at this time it would surely be worth a few vague concessions on a "scrap of paper" in reference to the Lusitania case, which still drags along more than nine months after the murder of American men, women, and children. We cannot afford to purchase Germany's concessions, regarding which there is now a growing indifference, since concessions made not as the result of right but of dickering would be shameful. This would be doubly true if the price we paid for such concessions should be the alienation of the sympathies of the Allies for the American people.

The Allies' blockade, which is now to be tightened, is strangling the life out of German militarism, and that is why Bernstorff & Co. are trying once more to drag us into a wrangle with the Allies. This country cannot afford to pull German chestnuts out of the fire by asking the Allies to raise or relax a blockade which is based on the precedents which we established in the Civil War and followed up in the Spanish War.—New York Herald.

KAISER'S LINEAGE ONE OF HOPELESS INSANITY

From the First King of Prussia to the Last is One Mass of Idiocy—Wilhelm II. in Strait-jacket

Many British people when discussing the various brutalities that have been committed by order of Wilhelm II., the German Emperor, say, "Oh, he's as mad as a hatter"; and there the matter drops without anybody really going into facts as to why he is mad or from what source he inherits his madness. To begin with he is directly descended from Frederick I., first King of Prussia, who was hopelessly deformed and who died in 1713. His son, Frederick Wilhelm I., was a helpless imbecile, while his grandson Frederick Wilhelm II. was a man whose chief recreation was to be seen in the company of women of the underworld. The latter's son, Frederick Wilhelm III., was so hopelessly insane that in 1858, he was taken off the throne and a regent appointed to reign in his stead.

A Line of Idiots

Frederick Wilhelm I.'s nice married the King of Bavaria and had two sons —Ludwig II., King of Bavaria, who died a raving idiot in 1886, and Otto, the present King of Bavaria, whose symptoms are precisely the same as his brother's. When Frederick Wilhelm died in 1861, his brother Wilhelm, became King of Prussia, and in 1871 after the Franco-Prussian war was declared Emperor of Germany. His son, the diseased but kindly Frederick III., died the same year he came to the throne, in 1888 and was succeeded by his son the present Emperor. The following description of the Emperor is from Mr. Arnold White, who on many occasions has interviewed him:—

He is of short stature, about 5 feet 5 inches in height. He wears a restless, nervous, somewhat fierce countenance, and constantly glares at perfectly harmless individuals as if they were suspected anarchists. He suffers from infantile paralysis in his left arm, and has a constant discharge from his ear which savors of meningitis.

In a Strait-jacket

The Emperor in 1892 was the victim of several epileptic fits, and a story is told of how on one occasion he was put in a strait-jacket. It was on the royal yacht Hohenzollern that he commanded the captain to go below, saying that he would take charge. When the captain told him it was a dangerous trip owing to the rough sea, the Kaiser said, "God will inspire me." But on the second officer refusing to leave his post as watchman, the Kaiser attempted to choke him and throw him overboard. In the struggle the Emperor slipped, and howled with pain. After a while he started to foam at the mouth and so a strait-jacket was put on him, and he was taken below. In his private life his vanity is akin to madness. His mind is unable to bear any kind of criticism. His latest orders sanctioning murder and rape are too well known to be debated on.

This is the man who says God will lead him on to victory.

THE "SUB" DETECTOR

Novel Method of Locating Hun Underwater Craft

There is an ingenious method of detecting the approach of German submarines round the coasts of Great Britain and France.

Though the submarine, when submerged, cannot be seen, yet by means of this invention its approach can be heard.

The submarine detector consists of a number of special waterproof microphones, or sound magnifiers. These microphones are arranged in a semi-circle, facing seawards. Each microphone is placed so as to receive sounds from a particular direction.

So when a submarine approaches from a certain point it is heard much more distinctly over one particular microphone than over the others, and this tells the listener from what quarter he can expect the "U" boat.

The differences in the strength of the sounds made by each of these microphones, which are attached by wires to a kind of telephone switchboard, enables those on shore not only to tell the directions in which to look for the submarine, but also the direction in which it is actually travelling, how far it is away, and roughly its speed.

These microphones, by a secret method, detect only the noises made by submarines, ignoring those made by warships or other steam vessels passing by.

The reason they can do this is that a submarine, when travelling below the water, sends out a special kind of sound wave that is not produced by any boat travelling on the surface. It is through the warning given by these waves that so many "U" boats have been destroyed.

THE SEARCH FOR DEAD SOLDIERS' WORST TASK

Thrilling Description of the Terrible Task is Given by an English Trooper—Sudden Death is Easier

A trooper from one of the West of England regiments in a vivid narrative described the search for the dead over the big battlefield in the Pas de Calais.

"A few minutes' sharp trotting," he says, "and then we formed up with the rest of the brigade on a mud patch, and pegged down for the night.

"By ten the next morning we were in such a mess that the brigadier moved us into billets. A few days later we were to furnish night men per troop to clear up the battleground of the recent advance. A journey of several hours by motor bus took us to a small town which had been badly battered, and here we left the buses and proceeded on foot.

"After a walk of about three miles we came to half a dozen dead horses and broken limbers. We were instructed to collect all bodies, searching our own fellows for identity discs and pay books, and the Germans for papers.

Only Germans Found

"At first we found only German bodies, and but few of these. The first corpse I found was that of a bearded and spectacled German, who might have been a schoolmaster, the sort of man I should have accepted as a friend had I met him at home before the war, whereas, I reflected, had I met him a day or two before I should have shot or bayoneted him, if not cheerfully, at least dutifully. As we went on, the bodies became more numerous, both Germans and British. Most of the wounds were small and clean, but some of them would not bear a second glance, much less a description. Most of the Huns still wore their respirators, and some of our men had smoke helmets over their heads. After a while we came to a place where our men had evidently been caught by a Maxim; they were lying very close together just as they had dropped, some of them still had their rifles firmly gripped in their hands.

A Gruesome Job

"The next night was practically the same as the first. Almost as soon as we started we found more than twenty German bodies in a section of what had been their first line. They were lying so close together that it was impossible to put a foot down between them. They had nearly all died of bayonet wounds. After burying them we worked our way along the same road as the night before with scarcely a sound except an occasion cry of 'Here's one,' or a growl of 'Keep that light down, you'll get us shelled.'"

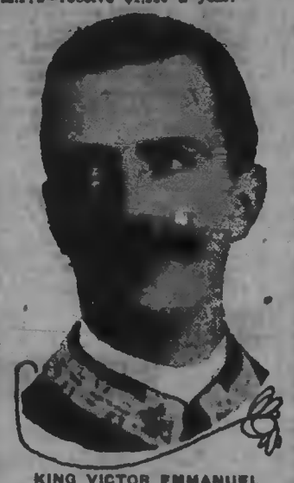
ITALY

Salt is a Government monopoly in Italy.

In Italy education is free and compulsory.

The area of Italy comprises 76,811,000 acres.

Italy's deputies—equal to British M.P.'s—receive $1,230 a year.



KING VICTOR EMMANUEL

The annual allowance for the civil list of the King of Italy is about $2,000,000.

By a law which came into operation in 1912, life assurance in Italy became a State monopoly.

In Italy legal charity, in the sense of a right in the poor to be supported by the parish, does not exist.

The money, weights, and measures of Italy are the same as those of France, the names only being altered to the Italian form.

TOMMY'S GOOD JOKE

Humor of a Cock Fight Behind the Trenches

An excellent story was told by Col. F. S. Meighen at a dinner. He was talking of life behind trenches in France, where the lines regarding sports are a little easier than in Canada, and cockfighting is one of the pet diversions of the Tommies, whenever they can secure fighting birds. He was illustrating the principle that the first thing a soldier does when under fire is to dig himself in.

"On one occasion," said Col. Meighen, "there was a very lively main going on at the billets, and a lot of the men were enjoying the fun. One of the birds, however, was getting a pretty severe beating, when it backed away and started burying its head in the sawdust.

"'Look at the bloomin' critter,' cried a disgusted Tommy, who was a loser on the bird. 'Darned, if it ain't diggin' itself in!'"

ELECTRIC PANTS

Pants warmed by electricity is the latest invention. It is described by its originators, an Innsbruck professor who is at present serving in the army, Max Beck by name, and the well known Vienna professor of medicine, Von Schrötter.

Besides the comfort this garment would be to men in the trenches in winter, it is pointed out that electrical pants and, likewise, an electrical arm-warmer, might be profitably used in airships and aeroplanes. It appears from the description given that extremely supple but stiff electrical warming wires are woven in with the stuff, which is itself made specially with a view to insulation. The pants are put on like any other, and fed by cables at a distance of a hundred yards and more.

The wearer can himself connect and disconnect the heat conductor. The expense is 2 cents an hour. The cost of manufacture is estimated at from $16 to $21.

BETTER THAN EVER

The One Big Outstanding Day of the Year in Peterboro. The day you can buy more for a $1.00 than you can on any other day in the year.

EXAMINER DOLLAR DAY

IN ITS ORIGINAL FORM, WILL BE HELD ON

THURSDAY, FEB'Y 3rd, 1916

And judging by the enthusiasm of the Merchants, promises to far surpass all previous events of the kind in the City. The Stores have all had a good season's business, and propose to show their appreciation of the patronage they receive from the home district by giving the BIGGEST DOLLAR VALUES they have ever attempted, with the triple object of giving their customers in some of the bargains that will be offered something for practically nothing, clearing out odd lines and balances of winter goods and making Dollar Day a memorable one and the biggest event of the year in the district. In addition to the splendid Dollar Values, the merchants are giving away

$150.00 IN CASH PRIZES

This money will be given away in this way:—With every dollar purchase on that day, an estimating blank will be given to the purchaser. You will fill in your name and address, and a number representing your estimate on the following question.

ESTIMATE THE NUMBER OF THESE BLANKS THAT WILL BE FILLED IN AND DROPPED INTO THE BALLOT BOX AT "THE EXAMINER OFFICE" BY 10:15 P.M. ON DOLLAR DAY

The nearest correct estimate will be awarded the First Prize of $25; the Second $20; the Third $15, and so on

50 CASH PRIZES

Nearest correct estimate, 1st Prize - $25.00
Next nearest correct estimate, 2nd Prize $20.00
Next nearest correct estimate, 3rd Prize $15.00
Next nearest correct estimate, 4th Prize $10.00
Next nearest correct estimate, 5th Prize $5.00

Next nearest correct estimate, 9th Prize $5.00
Next nearest correct estimate, 10th Prize $.500
Next 10 nearest CORRECT ESTIMATE 10 Prizes, each $2.00
Next 30 nearest CORRECT ESTIMATE 30 Prizes, each $1.00

For your guidance in estimating, we might say that The Examiner is printing and distributing to the Merchants, for use on Dollar Day, 36,000 blanks, and it is only necessary to estimate what number each purchaser thinks will be used on the great day. Should any store run short of blanks, The Examiner will print more, so that the number printed might reach as high as 50,000. The number of estimates put in the first 8 Day Campaign was in the neighbourhood of 16,000. With this information, an estimate can be made before coming to town. Of course as many estimates can be made as the purchaser has blanks, and they will get one with every Dollar purchase they make.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

NOTHING LIKE CHEEK

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

When I began business at eighteen years of age I entered the counting room of Stoughton Bros. on a salary of $4 a week. I had assurance enough for ten men of my age, and it is assurance that tells. I have often wondered why this is so largely the case and have come to the conclusion that it is based on the principle of war that the assailant has the advantage of force over inertia. It is a principle of mechanics that a body started through space in which there is no resisting medium will go on at the same rate forever. A body that is not started will not move, and when struck will be knocked into "pi."

I had no reverence for my superiors, but treated them with eminent respect except when they undertook to browbeat me, when I jumped on them with both feet. This I kept up as long as I was paid little or nothing for my services; when I felt it essential to retain my position I didn't take so many chances.

There was a banker in the street by the name of Ogden. He did an enormous business and was very rich. To us clerks he was like the mogul of Tartary to a washee-washee Chinaman. Not that he put on any airs, but because his position was so lofty. I used to hear stories about how he got his start and learned that he went into the cotton market one day $50,000 in debt and in a few months was $300,000 to the good. At the time I entered business he was worth millions.

Belonging to an excellent family and not being troubled with backwardness, I was a butterfly of fashion. My capital was one dress suit, which, notwithstanding my youth, was too small for me, but for 50 cents I got a tailor to enlarge it. At functions I used to meet men who were the heads of large business concerns, as well as of families. Some of them I occasionally went to during business hours on business, with my hat in my hand. But, meeting them socially, I considered that while we were on a different basis it behooved me to keep up an outward show of deference.

Time passed, and my salary, though slightly enlarged, was far too small for my requirements. The elbows of my dress coat were getting ragged, and it was impossible for any tailor to hide their nakedness. I did fairly good work myself in that respect with ink. Some of my fellow clerks got small raises by being obsequious to those above them, but I kept on in the even tenor of my way—that is, being ordinarily respectful and standing up for my rights. It didn't occur to me that it would pay me to toady to a man for the purpose of getting an additional two or three dollars a week.

One spring we had a heavy snow-storm, followed by a freeze and then a deluge of rain. There's no worse meteorological combination for transportation than this, and the city was well nigh impassable. There were large pools of water everywhere, and the device for getting over them were not the work of educated engineers. There was nearly a block near the house where I was employed that was so flooded that the whole distance was only passable by means of a string of boards. Just before bank closing I was directed to make a deposit and started on this narrow plank walk. I had just entered upon a lagoon of considerable length when I saw the sovereign of the street, Mr. Ogden, about as far advanced on the other side of it. It was my part as an understrapper to make way for the great man.

But my dislike for making way for those above me deterred me. I would have been willing to do so for an equal and would have been pleased to do so for an inferior, but to get out of a wealthy man's path by going back or stepping into two feet of water did not please me. Mr. Ogden was thinking of some great business problem, I suppose, for he didn't look up till we met very near the middle of the street. On seeing me he stopped. One of us must give way. Which should it be?

General Grant said that when he was marching to meet his first enemy during the civil war he felt the responsibility until he remembered that quite likely the other general felt as uncomfortable as he. That decided him, and he pushed on. It occurred to me that Mr. Ogden was as much loath to have me give way to him as I was to do so. Moreover, I knew that he was a natural gambler. Taking a quarter from my pocket, I said:

"Heads or tails for the right of way."

"Heads," he replied, with a twinkle in his eye.

I knew how to flip a coin and have it come down as I wanted it, so I threw the quarter with my thumb and called, "Heads!" and stepped off into the water. I had saved my face—that is, I had given way, but had not surrendered my rights.

That action made me a millionaire. I met Mr. Ogden some time after that at a social function, and he asked me where I was employed. I told him, and he told me if I should leave my position to let him know. A few weeks later I left Stoughton Bros. voluntarily and called on Mr. Ogden. He took me into his service and promoted me so fast that I grew dizzy. He is now retired, and I am the manager of his business. I believe that Mr. Ogden when I flipped for the right of way saw in the act indication of a quality he wanted in his business.

A Remarkable Island.

White Island, which lies in the Bay of Plenty, off the coast of New Zealand, derives its name from the clouds of white steam in which it appears to be continually enveloped. Its area is only 600 acres and its height about 300 feet above sea level. The water of the island is of a pale green hue, and anything dipped into it becomes of a red brick color. The fumes of sulphur are always plainly perceptible. Covering an area of fifty acres of one of the lakes on the island is an immense caldron hissing and snorting and sending forth volumes of poisonous steam, while all chances of egress appear to be denied by the steep, silent and gloomy cliffs.

Last Gold Mine.

Among the famous lost mines of the western world and one which is again being sought is the Tisingall of Costa Rica. It is said to have yielded great quantities of gold in the time of the Spanish domination. After quelling the Indian uprisings, however, the Spaniards failed to relocate the mine. It is thought that it was hidden in the bed of one of the larger streams. Many attempts have been made to find it, but so far without avail.

WHY SUFFER WITH BACKACHE, KIDNEYS OR RHEUMATISM NOW?

Letter Tells of Long-looked-for Prescription.

Dear Readers—If I can do any good in the world for others, I wish to do it, and I feel that it is my duty to write about the wonderful results I received from the use of "Anuric." I was suffering from kidney and bladder troubles, scalding urine, backache and rheumatism, and feet and ankles swelled so that at times I could not walk without assistance. Had taken several different kinds of kidney remedies but all failed. I sent for a box of Dr. Pierce's newest discovery, "Anuric," which I received by mail in tablet form. I soon got better and am convinced that this popular new medicine is good. I wish to recommend it to my neighbors and everybody suffering from such troubles.
Mrs. M. J. SARGENT.

Moral: You've all undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his well-known medicines. Well, this prescription is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney complaints and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing Tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the stores, or send 10 cents for large trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic and reconstructor for any one, besides being the best blood-maker known.

ALL FRENCH THEATRES BAN GERMAN MUSIC

Plea to Banish It For "All Times"—Proof That Beethoven Though Born in Germany Was Anti-German

German music has been banished from all French concert and theatre programs. A number of French musical, patriotic and other societies passed resolutions urging the government to prohibit the producing of German operas by law "for all times." There is opposition to this campaign of hatred, however. Several musicians and literary men of note have expressed the opinion that the French music lovers should not be deprived of the work of the great German composers. Even the "Revue Bleue," which otherwise is very violent in its denunciation of everything German, comes to the conclusion that German music is not exactly a danger to France and demands that at least Beethoven should be taken from the blacklist. In its argument this paper says:

"Beethoven No "Boche"

"Beethoven was born in Germany, lived there and died in Vienna, but he was not a German. His ancestors were Flemish and he must be classed as a Belgian. In 1793 he wrote: "Do as much good as you can, love liberty more than anything else and never become a traitor to truth." Such sentiments could not have been expressed by a 'Boche.' The composer had the idealism of a Frenchman and his works are therefore worthy to be heard by French ears. If he were alive to-day he would never have signed the manifesto of the German intellectuals, like Siegfried Wagner, Prof. Humperdinck and other pigmies." At a recent concert in Paris one of the sonatas of the great master appeared on the program but the police would not permit it to be played, as hostile demonstrations were feared.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

AUSTRIAN GENERAL'S IDEA DIDN'T WORK

Showing His Soldiers How to Capture a Cossack an Austrian General Gets Taken Himself

As most people are aware, the very name Cossack inspires a salutary terror in every Teuton breast. The shrieks with which the Austrians invariably hailed the appearance of the Czar's terrible pikemen, alarmed even the Cossacks themselves.

From an Austrian point of view, such nervousness had many obvious disadvantages, and one of the generals operating in Galicia decided he would attempt to explode the fiction of Cossack invincibility. To this end, he issued most positive orders that, at all costs, a Cossack was to be taken prisoner and brought to him uninjured. The task he thus set his men was not an easy one, but, somehow or other, it was duly accomplished. A genuine, live Cossack was, one day, produced in his presence.

The Example Shown

The general, who was on horseback at the time, told his men to give their prisoner freedom of action, and then, without dismounting, watched him appease his hunger and thirst.

"You see," the general said, in effect, to his soldiers, "a Cossack eats and drinks just as you or I do. There is nothing superhuman about him." Next, the prisoner was ordered to walk about and talk. The general was determined his troops should have a thorough object lesson and judge with their own eyes that a Cossack was really a man like themselves. Finally, to complete the demonstration a sword was put into the prisoner's hands, and he was told to show his audience how he used it.

The Cossack appeared to enter thoroughly into the spirit of the thing, and gave quite an interesting display. Everybody was highly entertained. Meanwhile, the swordsman had rapidly evolved a scheme of his own. After a time, he manœuvred in such a manner as to get behind the general and suddenly leaped upon the horse, seized the general round the waist, gripped the horse's flanks firmly between his knees and, in a flash, was off like the wind, with the general seated in front of him.

The General Bluffed

The general was too stupefied to utter a sound. As for the soldiers, their first momentary impression was this this was part of the performance. By the time they had recovered their presence of mind, it was too late to do anything; the Cossack had hold of the reins, and there was no stopping him. To use their rifles was obviously out of the question, as they would have risked killing their own general. The groups of men encountered might have checked the animal's course, but none of them had seen the beginning of the affair, and they were unable to make head or tail of the strangely assorted couple. They simply stood aside and gave the flying horse free passage. The Cossack did not draw rein until he had safely deposited his prisoner in the Russian lines. There the Austrian general had plenty of leisure to curse the day when the idea he had been so proud of had entered his head.

SAVED BY A COWARD

How a Brutal Teuton Paid For His Beastliness With His Life

It was during a lull in the fierce fighting at Neuve Chapelle that an officer asked for volunteers to bring in some wounded who were lying in front of the trench. Three offered to go, and they set out on their adventurous journey, reaching the wounded quite safely.

The first man got to was a German. On learning that he could speak English, one man told him that he was going to take him to the trench. He seemed pleased enough, remarking: "No fight no more now!" He got him to the trench, and laid him on the ground, and, as he was stooping to climb over the parapet, he kicked him in the mouth, cutting his lip and loosening several teeth. He left him while he went down the trench to bathe his mouth.

Meanwhile, his comrades had brought in their men, and were returning to bring in some more, when a German "coal box" burst near by, killing them all, including the wounded German. When the Samaritan returned and saw what had happened he realized that the German's cowardly act had saved his life.

WE ARE BOUND TO WIN SO BE OPTIMISTIC

Essay of the War Written by One of the Few Men Who Knows What He is Talking About

A striking article from the gifted pen of Mr. Horatio Bottomley, editor of John Bull entitled, "Why I Am Still an Optimist," has caused much sensation in London. The extracts from the article in question appear below.

Despite monotonous reports of "nothing doing" in the West, I am as optimistic as ever. I know what I know—and I smile. I am not the only one in that respect. As Lord Kitchener left the palace at Athens he too was smiling, a fact that was instantly pounced on by reporters and flashed through to England and France, and let us hope also Berlin. In the West the force of the German campaign is spent, and in the East Germany has shot "her bolt." In Great Britain there are at least three armies at work. There is the army of soldiers in the making, the army of munition workers, and the army of commerce. Never was this "will to victory" stronger than to-day. Beside it the German "will to power" is a puny conceit. It is in the heart of Germany that this war will be lost. It is in the heart of Great Britain acting in conjunction with her allies that it will at length have been won.

And When They Return

When the boys get back, worn and torn by war but flushed with the pride of victory, we will drink their healths in bumpers of the best, and then again, good luck to us all, prosperity to our allies, health and happiness to all honest men—and confusion to the kill-joys and a plague on their sneaking schemes. Already the dark night of peril is far spent. Across the eastern hills break the first faint streaks of the coming dawn. Victory is coming, and the peace which follows triumph, and in that day, the land shall ring with the glad laughter of men, and the weeping women shall smile through their tears, for Heaven's greatest miracle shall have been wrought afresh. The crown of thorns will have become a diadem of glory. Britain's greatest glory will have dawned. Too much of an optimist am I?

Why We Will Win

Don't believe it. Germany is wrecked. And I repeat that she is on the verge of starvation and economic ruin. When Christmas came they remembered the first Christmas. They have lost two million men since then and enlisted—Russian Poland. And they will remember the Kaiser's naval boy—"To Paris by Christmas (1914)—"Take Calais or die." And they will remember that a year ago the Kaiser was to march into Petrograd; and on Christmas Day, 1914, he was to dine at Buckingham Palace. They will remember that, after Calais had been captured, Dover was to be bombarded. They will remember there was to be a submarine blockade of England's ports. And they will remember other things. And remembering they will rise in anger. And they will cry aloud for vengeance—on the Kaiser. Yes, I am still an optimist.

The end draws near.

Keep the home fires burning till the boys came home.

Big Guns Waste Cotton

It takes 400 pounds of cotton to make the powder for one shot from the Queen Elizabeth's guns, or from one of the German 17-inch guns. The same quantity of cotton would provide ammunition for 400 shots from a field gun, or 80,000 rounds from a rifle.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.
Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as if is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How Soldiers Keep Strong

Preparedness against sickness is the big, important thing to fighting soldiers. A sick soldier cannot work with vigor any more than you can work with energy when you are weak, tired, almost sick.

The government of one of our allies is giving each soldier a vial of cod liver oil every day because far-reaching experiments show how wonderfully it increases the calories of human energy and gives them strength to prevent winter sickness. Is this not convincing proof that you need it at this season to enliven your blood to prevent sickness?

Cod liver oil is scarce and high-priced this season and many inferior grades may be offered. But remember that which guarantees pure cod liver oil—free from harmful drugs.

SCOTT'S EMULSION IS MADE IN CANADA.

If you are subject to colds, throat or lung troubles; if you are easily tired, run-down or have thin blood, you should take Scott's Emulsion at once. If your children are backward in growth, frail or anæmic, nothing will do them so much good as Scott's Emulsion, and for girls and women in home or business it is nature's great strength-builder.

Scott's is not a "secret" medicine. It is a rich blood-food and a pure tonic; it contains nothing harmful and is pleasant to take. It is prescribed by physicians and liberally used in hospitals and private schools.

One bottle may prevent a sickness.
At any drug store—Start it to-day.

Imitations are sometimes offered but this Trade-Mark has stood for supreme quality for the past forty years.

ALWAYS INSIST ON SCOTT'S.

ALLIED TROOPS LAND

LONDON, Jan. 20. — A despatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that French and British troops have been landed at Corinth, Greece, forty-eight miles west of Athens.

The message says that, according to information received at Amsterdam from Sofia, the Allied troops which landed at Phaleron re-embarked after a short inspection of the city.

"Among the wild rumours as to the intentions of the Allies," the message continues, "is the statement that they intend to advance to Athens, whence King Constatine, his court and the government will retire in conformity with the King's desire to maintain armed neutrality.

"In Sofia despatches, the question is asked what Mr. Venizelos will do in that event: whether he will proclaim a republic and whether the army will side with him. These reports are said to have occasioned undisguised alarm at the Bulgarian capital."

To keep sandwich cakes from rising in the centre, spread the mixture away from the centre of the tin towards the sides. When baked it will be quite even and very light.

"SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE."

The clouds had gathered darkly, and war had filled the land.
The cruel foe had scattered grim death on every hand;
But Britain answered nobly and gathered all her sons,
Prepared to face in freedom's cause the might of ruthless Huns.
The strife was forced upon her, but she still could stand the test,
For every nation that she ruled had sworn to do their best;
The Empire was united to stem the foe's advance,
And deeds that will live forever, were done "Somewhere in France."

"Somewhere in France" her sons are fighting,
"Somewhere in France," but not in vain,
"Somewhere in France" a wrong they're righting,
Some will return and some ne'er again.
"Somewhere in France" her sons are falling,
Honour is their's and not disgrace,
"Somewhere in France" they still are calling,
Calling for others to take their place.

A lass was thinking sadly of a lad who went away,
To fight for freedom gladly in a country o'er the spray;
She knows she loves him deadly, yet she told him he must go,
For his country needed ev'ry man to help to beat the foe.
Each day she waits for news of him, with longing and with dread,
She wonders if he's living still, or if her boy is dead,
Until one day a letter came and as it met her glance,
She saw it came from her sweetheart, who was "Somewhere in France."

"Somewhere in France" her boy is dying,
"Somewhere in France" so far away,
"Somewhere in France" on death's bed lying,
Life may be gone before next day.
"Somewhere in France" his life is speeding,
Death o'er his brow her lines doth trace,
"Somewhere in France" they'll soon be needing
Somebody else to take his place.

The war is long and deadly, thousands have fought and died,
And men, more men, are needed to help to turn the tide;
Many have gone before you, but there's many that still remain,
Who have not answered to the call, so your country calls again.
Give up your selfish pleasures and go and do your share
To help your noble comrades, who are fighting over there;
Away with all your doubts and fears, just go and take your chance
Amongst the boys already gone, who are "Somewhere in France."

"Somewhere in France" more men are needed,
"Somewhere in France" they call again,
Don't let those heroes die unheeded,
Don't let them call on you in vain.
"Somewhere in France" for you they're yearning,
Answer the call, or meet disgrace,
What will you say when they're returning?.
How will you meet them face to face?

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SLEEVES.

By Anabel Worthington.

The new sleeves show so many novelties that one may easily make an old dress look new merely by changing the neck and the sleeves. Sheer materials are seen in even the heaviest cloth dresses and are used entirely with everything which can claim to be silk or of the same family.

Some of the new sleeves show caps of one material, while the balance of the sleeve is of another. This happens most frequently when the dress is of heavy goods and the sleeve of something sheer; other varieties show only one fabric and this may be anything from the sheerest of chiffon, Georgette crepe and net, through a long list of fabrics to silk, satin, velvet and cloth.

In the group herewith shown, for instance, the sleeve No. 1, is suitable for cloth, velvet or silk with cuff of one or other of these materials or of some embroidered novelty. No. 5 is also suitable for a semi-substantial material such as crepe de Chine, taffetas or messaline. Nos. 2, 3 and 4 are better suited to the more sheer fabrics, chiffon, net, lace and the like.

The sleeves pattern, No. 7,379, is cut in three sizes small, medium and large. To make in the medium size will require:—No. 1, ⅝ yard of 36 inch light material and ⅜ yard of 36 inch dark material; No. 2, ⅝ yard of 36 inch dark material; No. 3, ⅝ yard of 44 inch material with 1¼ yards of velvet ribbon; No. 3, ⅝ yard of 36 inch silk and ½ yard of 40 inch chiffon; No. 4, ⅝ yard of 44 inch light material, ⅛ yard of 36 inch dark; No. 5, ⅛ yard of 36 inch light material and ⅛ yard of 36 inch dark. This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.
Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

FRENCH STRONG ON VERDUN FRONT

Think the Germans Will Find It Equally Hard to Advance or Retreat

VERDUN, Jan. 18 (Via Paris).—Metz is visible through field telescopes from this great French stronghold, and its outworks can be reached by the heaviest French guns. The defensive barrier between the two places, after a four days' examination of the lines in the Argonne, the Woevre, and the Vorges, shows a strength unsuspected by the average civilian.

It is along this front that Crown Prince Frederick William's forces are being held back, and positions, already seemingly impregnable, are being strengthened every day. The French are sure of their ground and are confident that, should the Crown Prince decide upon another effort to pierce the French lines, it will end as others have ended. The General at the head of the army in the Argonne and Woevre is most confident.

The heavy rains notwithstanding, the work of organizing the defences by the territorials goes on with the tasks of improving the approaches, removing mud from the roads, and making easier the routes for the supply trains.

Movement of French Troops.

Travellers from Paris begin to see military activity at Chalons-sur-Marne. Regular trains, the coaches filled with troops, are being moved continuously to various parts of the Front, shouts and bursts of song showing that there is no lack of gaiety among the departing soldiers.

Continuing eastward, past the historic battlefield of Valmy, one of the early results of the present war is to be noted in the ruins of Clermont-en-Argonne, where to-day the children of the few remaining residents play at war games within the sound of the cannon at Vauquois.

At Notre Dame de l'Epine, the Church of Notre Dame, built in the fourteenth century and in many respects similar to the Cathedral of Rheims, stands out prominently from the ruins. Unlike the Rheims Cathedral it is undamaged.

The Verdun forts are most important strategically. Observers on constant guard have a view of the plain of the Woevre, and of little villages dotting the territory that separates them from the enemy positions.

Entering a tunnel lighted by candles, one reaches the place where the guns are manipulated. A storeroom adjoining is filled with melinite shells, giving some idea of the damage which could be inflicted. Namur and Liege have demonstrated what reliance can be placed on fortified defences against the heaviest modern guns.

Barbed wire trenches here, as elsewhere, play a prominent part. This region is well furnished with these protective devices. There has been comparatively little firing from the large guns of the forts, but their moral effect has been considerable. The commander of the fort is the Paris representative of a Cincinatti firm.

Bulgarian and Turkish Flags Flying

As one proceeds almost due south from Verdun there is direct contact with the German line, as the frequent firing indicates. The Germans are in possession of St. Mihiel, and on Hill 277, where they are entrenched, they have hoisted the German, Austrian, Bulgarian and Turkish flags, which can be seen fluttering in the wind.

"Bad taste," was the comment of a Captain attached to headquarters when his attention was called to this:

Although the Germans hold St. Mihiel, the French believe that by their control of the strongly fortified natural positions in this neighbourhood they have the upper hand. The first line trenches in this district are very close, but the positions in the rear of their second and third line trenches which are on high ground and dominate those of their adversaries. An advance by the Germans would seem to be impossible against the natural obstacles and the defences which have been improved unceasingly for six months. A retreat by the Germans is considered as difficult as a forward movement, for, it is pointed out, should they attempt to retreat they would risk the fire of the French forces which surround them.

Entrance to one of the positions is through a forest in the Woevre by means of a flat car about thirty feet in length, drawn over very narrow-gauge tracks by four horses, on two of which there are soldier outriders. Men, munitions, and supplies are all carried on this line, which is about a mile long. "Village Negre," reads a sign stuck on a tree, the place being so named in honour of the black troops.

A good view of the German lines is to be had from the position in question, which is frequently bombarded. Only a day or two ago nearly 200 shells were hurled at it. Preparation for all kinds of attack at this point are most complete. Tubs of chemicals, spraying machines, and masks for the soldiers are placed conveniently in case of an attack by asphyxiating gases.

Miss Annoy French Soldiers.

The French losses in this forward position have been infrequent—only a very few killed in five months. The men are most comfortable, except that they are annoyed by mice. They take this good-naturedly. Cheerfulness, despite their hard lot, is evident always.

Near La Lisiere, as the comfortable officers' quarters are called, is a small wooden chapel where services conducted by a Captain preacher are held on Sunday, often under the fire of the German guns.

From St. Die, one of the largest cities in the Vosges, a winding mountain road, part of which is exposed to German shell fire, leads to the base of a crest 1,500 feet high. Here is to be seen one of the best examples of modern mountain defences. The ascent is made by a narrow mule path carefully constructed by Territorial troops. A short distance up the slope are trenches protected by a network of barbed wire. These are old positions, as an advance has been made here since November.

On the summit is an elaborate defensive system of well constructed trenches of first, second, and third lines. Blockhouses equipped with machine guns are so arranged that should the Germans on the adjoining heights attempt to attack they would be caught by the fire from these guns. The advanced sentinels here are aided by dogs.

NEW GERMAN BATTLEPLANE CAUSES SOME CONCERN

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The London Daily Mail says: "The British are being out-engineered by the deadly German Fokker battleplane. The French authorities believes that the latest type of Fokker is fitted with a 260 horse-power Mercedes engine. Its immense engine power gives it extraordinary speed and climbing capacity. The matter is one of the greatest importance, not only at the front but here, for the Fokkers will doubtless come over to drop bombs.

A British correspondent at the front says: "It is thought to be capable of 180 miles an hour, and is equipped with a device whereby it is enabled to shoot directly in front."

And the Kingdom of Heaven is of the child-like, of those who are easy to please, who love and who give pleasure.—R. L. Stevenson.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

This blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own case. 50 cents a box, 5 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

$4 Saved Two Fingers

The fingers were those of Mr. J. W. Bessard, of 539 Craig St. E., Montreal. He says, —"A falling beam badly crushed my hand. Two fingers were so severely crushed that the doctors said they would have to be amputated. Naturally I didn't want this, so decided to try Zam-Buk first. I applied Zam-Buk daily, and by the time I had used $4 worth, the injury was completely healed. My fingers were saved!"

Just another illustration of the healing power of Zam-Buk. Accidents will happen. It may be your turn next. Better get a box and keep it handy. Accidents are less frequent than skin diseases, and remember this—

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, skin diseases, and piles, as for cuts, burns, bruises.

All druggists and stores 50c. box, or 3 for $1.25. Refuse substitutes.

Women Replacing Men

In Germany and Austria the women are taking the places of the men in positions never before filled by women. This is due primarily to the vicissitudes of the war, as every available man has been called to the front.

Throughout Austria there now are numerous women barbers and in some villages there are women blacksmiths. In machine shops, ammunition factories, and other branches of mechanical trades more and more women are being employed. In many cities women clean the streets, and one German paper recently published an advertisement asking for young women apprentices to enter a cobbler's shop.

As these women are all excellent workers and work at considerably less wages than received by men, the question is being discussed as to what effect this will have when the war is over. There are some thinkers who fear that the men will have difficulty in obtaining situations at the old wages, while others declare that the revival of trade and industry will be so widespread as to make work for everybody and at better wages than ever before.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes, and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.

THE ALLIES WILL WIN EVENTUALLY IF NOT SOON SAYS GEN. JOFFRE

Essential Thing For the Civilians to Do Their Part in Holding Firm Says French Commander-in-chief---Britain Making Drastic Change in Munitions Act ---Bridges Around Saloniki Have Been Destroyed.

ALLIES' WAR COUNCIL IS EXTENDED

PARIS, Jan. 21.—General Joffre says that the essential thing now is for the civilians to do their part in holding firm.

"If only the civilians will hold firm, that is the essential thing," said the French Commander-in-Chief to a deputation from the National Railroadmen's Union. "If Frenchmen keep steady we shall have a victory not immediately, or even soon, but eventually."

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The most imperative need for more ammunition has forced the Government to propose drastic amendment to the Munitions Act, Premier Asquith informed the House of Commons this afternoon. To increase the number of persons engaged in making shells, the Government proposes to replace the skilled union workers, engaged on minor tasks, by men and women classed as "semi-unskilled," transferring the skilled union men to more important work. This measure the Prime Minister announced will be introduced following an agreement with Labour party members.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A London cable to the New York Times says: "Arrangements are being made for an extension of the Allies' War Council, according to a statement made by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons yesterday. From unofficial but authoritative sources, it is learned that considerable progress has been made in the direction of securing unity of policy and control.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A Times cable from Berlin says: "Reports have reached Berlin that demands made by the Allies in their ultimatum to the King of Greece that passports be handed the representatives of the Central Powers have been refused. The last remaining bridges about Saloniki have been destroyed.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Dutch schooner Rangerman was blown up by a mine off the Danish coast with a loss of all on board.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Jan. 21.—Germany's final reply in the Lusitania matter is now being prepared at the Foreign Office. Officials expressed confidence to-day that it will settle all submarine differences with the United States. The contents remain a secret. It is understood, however, that Germany declares her willingness to pay an indemnity for the loss of American lives, and renews her expressions of regret, but again reminds the American Government that neutrals who took passage on the Lusitania were fully warned of their danger through a notice published in the newspapers by the German Embassy at Washington. There is also a declaration guaranteeing future safety of neutrals aboard belligerent passenger ships, and promising that these vessels shall not be torpedoed without fair warning.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The British steamer Sutherland, 3,500 tons, was torpedoed and sank in the Mediterranean Monday. The crew was landed at Malta, one sailor having died of exposure in a lifeboat.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 21.—Kaiser Wilhelm dropped a broad hint that the Turko-German campaign against Egypt is soon to begin, in his address at Nish yesterday. "We have been challenged by our enemies who envied German and Austria their peaceful, flourishing prosperity," said the Kaiser. "We have had a hard fight, which will soon spread to other fields."

TURKS FLEE FROM RUSSIANS.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 21.—Russian troops operating in Persia have occupied Sultanabad, a city of 5,000, sixty miles southeast of Hamadan, according to Teheran despatches to-day. The Turks are fleeing toward Burujird, to the southwest.

SNOBBISH OFFICERS TO GET IT.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—General Logie, commanding Toronto Military Division, to-day declared war on snobs. He ordered an investigation into the action of two young officers who registered at the Walker House, and who afterwards left the hotel when they learned that a private was registered there. Early this morning he telephoned to the Walker House and secured the names of the officers who were on the hotel register. Interest in this incident is widespread, as it is the first of its kind to occur in Canada. The conduct of the two officers in question finds no sympathetic chord at the military camp here.

BRITAIN'S FINANCIAL STRENGTH RECOVERS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Britain has put a damper on America's hopes of maintaining its leadership in world finance. International bankers admitted to-day that they were confronted with a steady rise in the rate of sterling exchange, which recently touched the highest point since 1903. Wall Street financiers believe the Bank of England has "put one over" on the United States. The stiffening of sterling rate is the surest sign that England is pulling back to her dominating position in the world finance. Sterling was quoted to-day at $4.76¾, after having dropped as low as $4.50.

HOUSEHOLDERS IGNORE BY-LAW

Still Persist in Placing Garbage on the Street Line Despite By-law to the Contrary

There are a number of people in the city who so far have stubbornly refused to comply with the new regulations respecting the handling of garbage. The new by-law distinctly states that the garbage must be placed three feet inside of the house line, and not on the street line. Sanitary Inspector Spence intends to see that this by-law is enforced if it becomes necessary to institute police court proceedings.

Girl Met Death When Home Burned

ENDERBY, B.C., Jan. 24.—Death in the flames which consumed the residence of her father, Rev. J. A. Dow, was the fate of Helen Dow, a 15-year-old girl. Both her parents and brother, Douglas, aged 15, are in the hospital, having received terrible burns.

The large frame house, which was owned by Rev. H. F. Flewelling, was completely destroyed. The fire was discovered at 2 o'clock this morning when the occupants of the house had retired. Its origin is unknown

ONE DEAD AND THOUSANDS ARE WITHOUT HOMES

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—One dead, thousands homeless, and property damage estimated at more than a million dollars was the toll to-day of floods in Northern Illinois. The Illinois, Fox, Vermillion, Calumet and Chicago rivers, swelled thrice their nomal size at many points. It spread out over thousand of acres of farm lands when ice gorges blocked the dams.

PROHIBITION TO BE PROPOSED IN OTTAWA HOUSE

Mr. Stevens Conservative Member For Vancouver To Introduce a Resolution Calling For The Stopping of Manufacture or Sale

WILL BE DISCUSSED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—H. P. Stevens, the Conservative member for Vancouver, proposes to give Parliament an opportunity to discuss the question of Dominion-wide prohibition during the present session. He proposes a resolution as follows:

"That at this time when the Empire is at war the conservation of wealth and the resources of the Dominion, and the promotion of the efficiency of a nation would be materially aided by the prohibition of manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes and, in the opinion of this House, legislation for this purpose should be enacted forthwith."

The resolution proposed by the Dominion Alliance mentions three years as the period after the war that prohibition should remain in force, but in other respects its effect would be the same as the proposal made by the member for Vancouver.

THIRTEEN YEAR OLD BOY SHOT BY HIS YOUNGER BROTHER

Terrible Accidental Fatality Occured in Township--- Didn't Know Shot Gun Was Loaded

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 21.—A terrible fatality occurred near Allan's Mills, Seymour township, this week, when Carman Hubbel, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Hubbel, was accidentally shot and killed by his brother, Charlie, who is eleven years of age.

The boys were alone in the house, and Charlie was amusing himself by examing a shot gun which was loaded. In some manner the trigger was touched and the gun unfortunately was pointed directly at the older brother. The result was horrible, the entire charge striking the head of the unfortunate lad, practically blowing it off.

41 MEN ANSWERED THE CALL OF EMPIRE ONLY 20 ACCEPTED

First Day's Campaign Added a Score to the Strength of the Battalion and Paved the Way For Further Recruiting ---Many of Those Rejected Had Tried Before---Soldiers Working Hard---To-day's Military News.

Number of Applicants 41
Number Who Passed 20

These were the net results of the first day campaign for the 93rd Battalion as far as tangible results are concerned, but it is certain that the energetic efforts put forth yesterday and continued to-day will yield a crop of recruits in the next few days. A good many young men were placed in a position to think seriously of the needs of the Empire and the result will be seen in the days to come. While there may be some disappointments on the part of some, Lt.-Col. Johnston is very well satisfied with the result of the first day. He realises from his experience is recruiting that the average man takes a little time to make up his mind, and the commanding officer of the 93rd is confident that the effects of the campaign will be far reaching if the response may not be as immediate as some of the workers have expected.

Fifty per cent. of the recruits who presented themselves yesterday were rejected as medically unfit. This may seem a large percentage and may be regarded as a reflection on the physique of Peterborough's young men, but it is explained by the fact that many of those who were rejected were men who have tried frequently before and who visited the armouries in the hope that the relaxed regulations would let them through. For the men who failed to pass the doctor, a white badge with the inscription, "Not Accepted," was available and a number of these could be seen on the street to-day.

Yesterday the officers and men of the 93rd were on a free lance mission and there was no opportunity of talking to men of military age and fitness. Skating rinks, pool rooms and other places of amusement were visited and at one of the pool rooms Capt. Ackerman of the 2nd Battalion and Sergt. Payne of the 93rd Battalion, both home from the front, delivered addresses. The battalion held a march out at 8 o'clock and then were dismissed in front of the recruiting station to take up the campaign again.

To-day the men are canvassing from house to house in districts, under the command of their officers, and the city will be thoroughly covered.

This afternoon a meeting was held on the market square, addressed by Capt. Ackerman of the 2nd Battalion.

To-morrow morning there will be another mass meeting on the market square.

The members of the Official Board of the George street Methodist church are entertaining the officers of the 93rd Battalion and a section of soldiers in the church Sunday school hall at 6.30 o'clock. The returned soldiers will also be guests. The banquet will be served by the ladies of the church.

France, Jan. 4th, 1915.

Many thanks for your kind note of Dec. ult., which I received some time ago, but have neglected answering it until the package arrived. I am pleased to say that it came yesterday and that I have distributed the twenty odd parcels amongst the Peterborough boys, and I also take great pleasure in thanking you upon their behalf. The men appreciated these little remembrances very much and although they do not have much spare time in which to write letters, no doubt you will get many letters from the men themselves, thanking you for your kindness and thoughtfulness.

Voice of the people

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—This morning four men, three parsons and a layman were discussing recruiting. The layman said that "they" ought to get a certain Toronto minister here for the big Sunday meeting. One of the clergy asked "Why a minister? Why not a layman?"

"Because," replied the layman, "it's young fellows hanging around your churches who won't enlist. The so-called "blackguards" have all enlisted long ago everywhere.

Major-Gen. Hughes Coming To-morrow

He will be met at the station by the 93rd Battalion, who will furnish a guard of honour, and he will be escorted to the Empress Hotel for luncheon. During the meal the band of the 93rd will render several selections.

In the afternoon there will be a parade to the armouries and at two o'clock the big meeting will be held. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and other speakers will take part in the meeting.

Many people from outside will be here for the meeting.

A MASS MEETING IN THE ARMOURIES ON SUNDAY NIGHT

Speakers Patriotic League Determined to Push the Recruiting Campaign With All Possible Zest and Vigour

TO-MORROW'S MEETINGS

The meeting of the Speakers' Patriotic League last night was characterized by considerable strength and enthusiasm, and important business was transacted. After a full discussion on the work of the day the obstacles encountered and the means to be taken to surmount them, an unanimous determination was manifested to press the campaign through with increased vigour and determination. If the full result aimed at should not be achieved, the League can hardly be blamed.

It was decided to hold a rousing meeting in the market square and possibly at other points in the city to-morrow, Saturday morning, and a second great public demonstration on Sunday night at 8.30 in the armouries, when the strongest possible speakers will be brought forward. The campaign will be extended over Monday in order to reap the fruits of Sir Sam Hughes' address and the mass meeting on Sunday night.

THE CANADIAN KITCHENER LEAGUE

Report of the Work For the Past Three Months—Comforts For the Boys in the Trenches

Since the Canadian Kitchener League commenced their second year in October, 1915, the work of sending comforts to our Peterborough boys in the trenches, has been very successfully carried on.

In the three months, October, November and December, the receipts from entertainments, etc., were $278.56; the expenditures—that is, the bales sent overseas, including contents and charges, amounted to $198.87, leaving a balance at the end of the year of $79.69. Of the amount spent, $784.30 went for yarn, which was knitted into socks, scarfs, helmets, etc., by the ladies.

Since the League was organized, in the Fall of 1914, a bale has been sent forward every month, and it is their desire to send them still oftener, if possible.

The League wish to express their thanks for the following donations received during the last week:

Messrs. A. W. Crossman Co., $5.00.
Mrs. Dr. Morrison, $2.00.
Miss C. McBride, $1.00, for knitting.
Ladies of Bridgenorth—18 pairs of socks.
Mrs. Jas. Fowler of the North Monaghan and Fairmount Institute, 10 pairs of socks.

TO PARENTS ONLY

Do your children complain of their eyes or head? Are they slow at school? It is not the child's fault. Bring or send them to Dr. Lacey, 410 George Street, he specialises in children's eyes. See him and see better.

Hanged Children and Then Took Her Own Life

Examiner Special:

LYONS, N.Y., Jan. 21.—Crazed by illness, Mrs. Edwin Payne, 31, hanged her two children, Elizabeth aged 5, and Charles aged 2, late Thursday, then took her own life by hanging from a clothesline on the same hook in the living room of their home. She was dead only a short time when found by her husband and father. They were considered a happy and prominent family.

BETTER THAN EVER

Patrons of the Royal agree that the musical comedy by the Africander Co., at this theatre is even better, since the entire change of programme, than the act they put on during the first part of the week. The dances are all new, as are the songs. Among the songs is one entitled "BRITAIN," a patriotic recruiting message. Entire change of pictures including two new WAR films.

A BROKEN REED.

Senator Choquette, who as the Toronto Star would say, administered a shockette to the grave and reverend seigniors of the mortuary parliamentary chamber, by his little Canadian utterance in regard to Canadian participation in the war, leaves himself open not only to general condemnation, but to criticism of his arguments. In minimising the danger to Canada by German aggression, he said that the United States would not permit Canada to be invaded by Germany. Apart from the humiliating idea of having our battles for liberty fought by proxy, there does not seem, in case of German aggression, to be any warrant for expecting the United States to fight for a neighbouring country when it shows little disposition to fight for itself. If Uncle Sam meekly permits the Germans to knock him down and walk all over him, we can't expect that he will make any frantic endeavours to shield Canada from German insults, not to speak of actual aggression. Canada values Uncle Sam's friendship, but is not disposed to invoke his good offices, so long as we are able, with the help of Great Britain, to defend ourselves and our rights and privileges, which we shall do in spite of all the Choquettes and other Nationalists in existence. We shan't put our trust in a broken reed.

AN EXCELLENT REPORT.

In this issue appears the eighty-fourth annual report of the Bank of Nova Scotia, which will well repay careful reading. The outstanding feature of this report which in the circumstances prevailing to-day, should cause considerable satisfaction not only to shareholders and depositors of the institution, but to the public, generally; for it is a matter of vital importance to the country that the banks should emerge from the present trying conditions in a satisfactory manner. The steady growth of The Bank of Nova Scotia is evidenced by the increase in total assets from $95,733,970 to $104,944,467 during the year, while net profits for the year ending December 31st, 1915 were $1,289,687, as compared with $1,198,116 for the previous year. Cash alone, exclusive of the deposits in the Central Gold Reserves, amounted to 20 per cent. of the liabilities to the public, while immediately available assets have reached a total of $59,-980,461—an exceedingly strong position. On the whole the report is a most satisfactory one, and furnishes another striking evidence of the progressive character and solidity of the sterling Canadian bank.

Mr. G. H. Logie is manager of the local branch, which has contributed its share of the satisfactory result of the year's operations.

ARE WE BETTER?

No one would be found who would not at once say that we Canadians are better than the Germans, in the matter of ideals of freedom, conceptions of humanity and altruistic regard for our fellow men.

But in some things the Germans can, as the phrase goes, "give us pointers." The Bishop of Winchester in an address to the British nation, said it was not wise to dwell too much upon the vices of the enemy—"hatred, insolence, cruelty, fraud and its idolatry of force." He says it would be better to have more regard for the virtue of the Germans—"the thoroughness which leaves nothing to chance, the concentration, the habit of obedience and the quick and spontaneous acceptance of sacrifice and privations right through the community."

Here is a lesson for Canadians. The scores of young men eligible for enlisting and who don't enlist, would very properly resent an imputation that they were not better than the Germans, in all the ideals that contribute to the qualities of high citizenship and high character.

But so long as he holds back, so long as he withholds his personal help for the Empire in its time of need, he cannot logically deny that he is inferior to the Germans, one of whose chief characteristics is the prompt acceptance of sacrifice and response to the call of duty.

Of course in one sense enlistment involves sacrifice—it involves sacrifice of a life of ease and comfort and of civic and social conditions which have been bought by the sacrifice and efforts of others, and which are at this moment being preserved by the sacrifice and service of Canadian soldiers in the fighting line.

Enlistment involves sacrifice of the unmanly acceptance of defensive service from his fellow citizens, friends and chums—under no greater obligation to fight for the slacker than the slacker has to fight for himself.

But it is not all sacrifice. Any young man with red blood in his veins, who has the spirit of adventure at all developed, should enlist for the experience, if he is open to the influence of no higher motive.

The man who enlists, of course, runs some risk; so does the man who stays at home. We have no guarantee of our life for an hour, and of the thousands who enlist and join the fighting ranks, the great majority return in safety—and in honour—to their homes.

In this war, now nearly three years old, the Germans have had engaged in battle between four and five million men—in the thick of the fiercest fighting known in the world's history. Yet up to the present only 600,000 Germans have been actually killed.

Since the war began and since Canadian soldiers entered the fighting ranks, more young men of enlisting age have been quietly laid away in our home cemeteries than have been killed in battle in Europe.

All this is, however, apart from the higher view of duty Canadians should have. We in this country are individually in danger. If Germany wins, which every German physically fit is helping her to do, we should lose our personal and national freedom, our homes will be sacrificed and we should come under the domination of the hateful rule of German tyranny and force.

If all Canadians should enter the ranks to fight for their homes, as unanimously as the Germans are fighting to rob us of our liberty and homes, we should see a marvellous rush for the ranks; and the story of enlistment would be speedily told.

Isn't it time that the Canadian young man, physically fit for fighting should do some thinking? If he does this he will feel a little ashamed and uncomfortable over the fact that while he is living at ease at home, enjoying the benefit of liberty and peace, he is doing this at the expense of his friend or chum who has enlisted and is fighting for the stay-at homes, the women and children, the old and infirm, the young and indifferent, the careless, if not cowardly—for failure to enlist is not so much due to cowardice, as to lack of thought, lack of consideration, lack of sense of duty and obligation.

CATHOLICS AND VOLUNTEERING.

We were very much pleased to learn that in Nova Scotia, where Catholics compose but 28 per cent. of the population, they furnish 46 per cent. of our sister Province's volunteer army.

If Quebec doe snot do her duty then so much the worse for Quebec. Five years hence, ten years hence, yes, in a generation yet to come, Quebec will, with reason, denounce the short-sighted and unpatriotic policy of those who deprived her of the privilege of taking her just share of the burdens and glories of the war for the liberties of France and England. Indications are not wanting that those who form public opinion in the neighbouring Province are now actively engaged in a campaign which will remove this reproach from Quebec.

So far as we can learn the Catholics of Ontario are doing pretty well; but they might do better. To take their full part will be to render service to Church and country. In the happy days after victory shall have crowned the supreme effort of a united Empire let us hope that our children and children's children may boast that their fathers in the day of trial and testing were not found wanting.—Catholic Record.

"Fight or Face Ridicule," German Fleet is Warned

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The conflict between the German press and the censorship has been growing acute, and it was by a union of forces on the part of the newspapers that recent success in overcoming objection to the discussion of certain topics of news was obtained.

The Berliner Tageblatt, whose circulation is the largest of any single newspaper in Germany, has taken a leading part in the struggle for permission to print the news and editorial comment on it. It was only, however, when newspapers of a more or less semi-official character, like the Frankfurter Zeitung, joined it in insistence upon public discussion of events that it was able to speak out boldly without the penalties that are involved in supression.

Its chief campaign has been to induce the government to be frank with the public regarding the progress of the war and the ability of the country's adversaries to continue it. Thus on the subject of the German fleet it has warned the country that if the fleet continues to stay in the Kiel Canal it will not only cover itself with ridicule but will invite its own destruction. It says:—

"Let us not harbor any illusions on the state of false security. The British fleet continues to be a formidable menace. Its crews, thanks to the duration of the war and to the manoeuvres and firing exercises which it continues without interruption, have maintained themselves in excellent form for attack or for defence. It is quite probable that the crews would not demand anything better than to engage their enemies in combat. The British fleet is ready and its power is imposing.

"For us the vital question is to know if this fleet will seek to attain its object, that is, to take the offensive or if it will leave to time the task of doing its work. The future alone can lift the veil which masks its designs.

"If Britain's naval power is not exaggerated overwhelmingly, our own 'sea dogs' cannot afford to amuse themselves much longer by merely showing their teeth. To remain longer in the seclusion of the Kiel Canal is to be ridiculous to-day and to-morrow to invite defeat and humiliation."

In connection with the army also this newspaper and others have given many warnings to the country, with a view to preparing the populace for the final rendering of accounts. It says with regard to the British army:—

"The result of the new British organization will be seen in the increase of reserves and in the constitution of new tactical and strategic units. The question of the quality of these forces should not be misunderstood.

"England may want to make wine out of water, while we, like France, are under the necessity of putting water in our wine. Our needs are rapidly increasing, but of course, they have a groundwork of military preparation which is centuries old and which often have been covered with the blood of warriors. England has not his groundwork; that is to say, she has created it only since the beginning of the war. But British energy has succeeded in building up an army greater and more efficient (grosser and tuechtiger) than our German military authorities had foreseen, as they had judged only from previous British history."

The Frankfurter Zeitung, which has joined in the campaign for outspokenness, draws to the attention of the German nation the fact that its foreign commerce at present is ruined, and it warns the nation it cannot for a long time expect that there will be a return to normal conditions, and it adds significantly, "We are reduced to the necessity of hoping that the measures of an economic kind taken by the government will have happy results."

Have Her Own Way.

"When Henry and I are married I'm to have my own way in everything." "Guess you won't." "Indeed I will! That's the bargain. Don't you remember I told you he proposed to me in a rowboat and asked me if I'd float through life with him just that way?" "Yes, but what's that got to do with it?" "Well, he was rowing, but I was steering."

THE GERMAN POINT OF VIEW AS TO ORIGIN OF THIS WAR

British subjects who view askance the "Hun" ought to remember that in Germany there is no name more honoured than that of Chamberlain. It is an odd thing that in the British Empire the word "Chamberlain" stands for Imperialism, while it stands in Germany for kultur. An Englishman born is the chief exponent of the ideals that Germany is fighting for. His views as expressed in the Tagkische Zeitung are interesting:

"To-day there is not a German to be found, though one search the world through, who is not aware where lies the starting point of the terrible war, where it was hatched, resolved upon, prepared by years of subterranean work, and finally forged to such a white heat that its outbreak was rendered absolutely unavoidable.

Blame it on England.

"That starting point was in England. From England the war went forth, in England only can it end. England's King and England's Government and later on England's press for years past pursued the one solo object—the destruction of the German Empire. So enamored are they of that object that to attain it they sacrifice prejudices and antipathies and their old and cherished political principles; for its sake they arouse animosities, destroy the peaceable efforts of foreign statesmen and develop to an art what is truly satanic—the wosk of distortion, calumny and falsehood.

A Blow at England.

"Before the war French statesmen had more than once striven to establish permanently good relations with Germany. More than once Russia too showed her inclination in that direction, but ever and again did England intervene as the murderer of every thought of peace. Men representative of every section of the German population are now shedding their blood in battle, suffering and want are stalking through the land. And yet that devil's spawn in yonder island is to be spared? These evil natured, accursed creatures, the stony hearted creators of all this immeasurable woe, the murderers of fathers of families, and of widows' sons, are not to have a hair of their monkey heads touched?"

The Hymn of Hate.

The Socialist paper, Vorwaerts, however, hands out a different opinion. It knows England, and says:

"In England Lissauer's 'Hymn of Hate' had achieved more fame than it deserves. It has been received as an adequate expression of the German popular mind, nor has the ejaculation, 'God punish England!' been left unnoticed by the Britons; on the contrary, it has supplied the comic journals with endless material. Thus it has come about that in England they stand in open mouthed incomprehension before a German 'national hatred,' the result being that, so far from exerting any impression that could have a favourable reaction on ourselves the English only feel flattered by these wild outbursts. They are the more to be pitied, inasmuch as it is very evident that in England they are better able than ourselves to conceive a good idea about the real aspects of the war."

German Fables.

The Hamburg Fremdenblatt has the following to say:

"How these dear, good English do love one another! How sweetly tempered is their justice with mercy! How gracious and benign are their rulers toward the aged and the weak! What a contrast to the harshness, the barbarity of the Huanish Germans! Do ye not agree with us, ye unbelievers? Then list and we shall convince you.

"A young English woman who at a social gathering expressed the opinion that Count Zeppelin was a gentleman was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

"An old gentleman who thought that it was possible that the German Crown Prince had only stolen teaspoons and no timepieces—especially in view of the fact that gentlemen of his standing as a rule were not fond of carrying bulky parcels — received a sentence of imprisonment for seven years.

"A certain Jimmy Fletcher, of London East, was sentenced to death because he had remarked that the Germans were really not much worse than the Russians. As, however, it was proved that he had spoken under the influence of drink, he was finally allowed to choose between the scaffold and immediate enlistment in Kitchener's army."

The Controlled Press.

After looking over German papers the conclusion to be arrived at is that the truth is not in them: and crediting the papers with the desire to tell the truth the inference is that the German Government objected. The German populace is lied to with the idea of spurring them to greater efforts. In fact, the papers of Germany are as absolutely controlled by the Government as the German armies are. Occasionally something slips out, whether by accident or design, that shows the true condition of affairs. It is bad—and our business is to make it worse.—Mail and Empire.

FIGHT HAS BEEN RESUMED IN MONTENEGRO

Denial That Formal Negotiations For Peace Were Entered Upon

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Reports from several sources now indicates that the announcement of Montenegro's surrender made from Vienna on Tuesday were premature. To the official denial issued from Paris Wednesday have been added the statement of the Montenegrin Consul-General here, and word from Rome that Montenegro has officially notified the Italian Government of the resumption of fighting with Austria.

The following despatch was received from Rome:

"Fighting between Austria and Montenegro has been resumed. Montenegro notified Italy officially of this fact yesterday."

Montenegro's decision has been communicated to the Italian Foreign office from the Montenegrin Premier. The note is to the effect that King Nicholas and the Montenegrin Government have rejected all terms offered by Austria and that fighting already has been resumed along the whole front. "King Nicholas remains with his army to organize the defenses of the country."

This is supported by a cable from San Giovanni di Medua, Albania, which states that the Montenegrin Government has been established at Scutari, and by the official French statement.

The French statement says that the Montenegrin army never capitulated and that formal negotiations for peace were never entered upon. King Nicholas, it says, is at Podgoritza with his troops. Sir John Roper Bartington, Consul-General for Montenegro, in London, also received official confirmation of the fact that King Nicholas and his sons will remain with their troops and will fight to the last. Queen Milena and two of her daughters, he is informed, have reached Italy on their way to France.

Conditions Too Drastic.

A Scutari despatch received by the Paris Temps through Geneva says that the rupture in the negotiations between Austria and Montenegro was due to the impossibility of accepting the conditions that Austria exacted. It adds that King Nicholas, his royal family and the diplomats accredited to him have embarked from Can Giovanni di Medua for Italy.

The Temps infers that the rupture was due to the humiliating terms on which the troops were required to lay down their arms. These included the literal surrender of weapons in groups by all men able to bear arms, even the very aged. The women, although they had taken part in the actual fighting, were not disturbed, as many had already returned to their homes from the front to earn a living for their soldiers.

MY DOG.

Whenever I start to go to school
Rags tags behind me, and 'tis cruel
The way I have to shake my head
And tell him "Now go home to bed!"

As I look back he's sitting there
With such a sad and doleful air.
His ears are down—his tail is, too—
How can I leave a friend so true?

When I return from school, why, he
Is happy as a dog can be!
He's standing up—his eyes, so bright,
Just twinkle as I came in sight.

It's hard for Rags, 'cause, don't you see,
He don't love no one else but me.
He only wags his tail to some—
He wags his whole self when I come.

HAUGHTON TELLS OF MANAGING BRAVES

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—Percy Haughton has given his first interview as a baseball magnate. Never while he coached at Harvard did he talk for publication, but he says he does not intend to use Harvard methods with the Braves, and that he was silent at Harvard through no fault of his.

Haughton let it be known that Geo. Stallings will have absolute charge of the playing end of the club. The President intends to repeat James E. Gaffney's edict against rowdyism in a speech to the players and make a few trips with the club, but other than that Stallings will be boss

Haughton said:

"Of course, there has been a lot of fun and joking about how the Harvard coaching system would work out in league ball. That was to be expected. There will be no college methods used, however, in the handling of the Braves. We who own the club realize that we have tackled a very big business proposition. I believe that I am the only Harvard man among the new owners.

"While, to be sure, we will more than appreciate and try to retain all Harvard friendships, we will likewise think fully as much of and cater to the other baseball fans of Boston. The men who have enough money to go through Harvard and enjoy more or less prosperity afterward are great friends for any business. But they should not and will not in our business have what one commentator styled the upper hand.

"Naturally, while I was handling college sport at Harvard there were times when perhaps I had to be rather silent on certain subjects which might have been of public interest, but it was through no fault of mine. I realize now that in a way I am being tried all the time by the Boston public, and consequently will have it in mind always. I might have offered an alibi at Harvard, but preferred to fight it out myself.

"Stallings is a genius, a sort of a baseball wonder. I know very well that George can tell a real ball player by instinct. He has the knack of handling men, and getting them also, that makes a great leader. You can put is as strongly as you like that Stallings will have absolute charge of the baseball end of the Braves. To be candid, the fact that Stallings was signed as manager for a couple of years influenced me as much as anything else in deciding to buy the club.

"What George says will go all the time. I believe that when a man has a job he should be allowed to work along his own lines. Then, if he fails, it is time to break in and help. It is up to Stallings to give Boston a good National League ball team, and I believe in my heart that he will keep right on going it as long as he cares to remain in baseball.

"I have admired Stallings from the first moment I knew him. This was last Spring, when the task of coaching the Harvard baseball team suddenly fell on my shoulders. Though I had played the game and liked it, I was a bit vague on the coaching part of it. Consequently I looked for help. I went to see Stallings at his hotel. He was genuinely glad to see me. That first night we talked for more than five hours, even though the Braves' manager was sick at the time and worried because his team was not going any too well. As I was leaving he insisted that I come around the next evening. I did, and very often after that. He was always wonderfully interesting. Baseball genius stuck out all over him. He taught me more about the game in a week than I could have learned from anybody else in a lifetime.

"I met Mr. Gaffney and we became very good friends. I heard one day that he declared he would sell the Braves if he was offered enough for them. I consulted the men who are associated with me and later we began to talk prices.

"There is no room for roughneck tactics in baseball and I will not tolerate them on my club. I will probably go South with the team next month. I have been put in here to take charge of the club and watch out for all its business and I'm not going to overlook anything if I can help it."

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Let your sore, swollen, aching feet spread out in a bath of "Tiz."

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses, and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store — don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

Odors from fish and strong vegetables will be entirely removed from cooking utensils if they are washed with soap and warm water, wiped dry, then washed with strong vinegar and rinsed.

Told Germans When War Will End and Then Left Country

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—"Yes, oh, yes," said the man who had just returned from Germany, "I told them Kaiser-kultured ones when the war would end, and they landed on me. You see, I went over there from New York on a business matter that let me get by, and in Berlin I dropped out of diplomatic and distinguished circles and drifted around among the midde classes and common herd to find out at first hand what the proletariat thought of the killing business.

"I could jabber German well enough, so I didn't have to risk anything by using English, and the question always handed out was when would the war end. I kept hearing it until I got tired, and in one cafe where about a dozen or more gathered around me, I blew out and told them when it would end.

"Says I, right from the shoulder, and meaning every word I said: 'It will end when you mutts over here wake up to the fact that this is the twentieth century and the people are the state and not a lot of autocrats who drive you around like cattle. It will end when you learn that you are being killed off by the thousands every day in order for the autocrats to live and snap the whip over what's left of you. It will end when you break away from the old-fashioned notion that the state makes you, instead of you making the state. It will end when you tumble to the fact that Germany isn't the whole world and never can be. It will end when you have the backbone to butt into militarism and tell Bill and——'

"What more information of a valuable nature I would have handed out I don't know, because I was hot and getting hotter, but just at that moment a hand was laid on my shoulder and I disappeared from view. I didn't ask any questions, but I knew I was in the power of the autocrats and it wasn't the proper environment for free speech. They put me away in a safe place, and after about a week of inspection and investigation I was told that Germany was not the country for me, and the quicker I got out of it maybe it would be the better for me. In the circumstances I got, but, say, if I could deliver cart-tail speeches through that kultured land, by gravy, I'd start the war on its way to the end before three months!"

EVEN BURMESE ARE ANXIOUS TO HELP MOTHER COUNTRY

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The British War Office will not take advantage of its latest offer of aid from one of its overseas possessions. This offer come from the heart of Burma, where British officers administer law for the natives.

Coming out of his bungalow one morning recently, an officer found the ancient burman chief of a village 80 miles away squatted on his heels and ready to talk. After the customary diplomatic greetings the chief stated his mission as follows:

Their Gratitude.

"My villagers wish to make some return for the favours bestowed upon us by the British government. The government has lessened the taxes, killed the leopards, given us good water and a policeman. Now have come to tell you that we have eight guns, ancient and true; four pounds of excellent gunpowder in a bottle, and a bag of bullets; these being no more or less than the honourable British government has permitted us to hold.

"Master, we have heard a rumour that the British government is in great trouble, with its enemies. Therefore our villagers have empowered me to say that the eight guns, powder and bullets are at the disposal of the British government."

As to "army" the chief offered two of the best village trackers to handle the "artillery and ammunitions." He went away satisfied that the honourable British government should hear of the generous offer and he should know all in due time.

The War Office is understood already to have replied that, if the situation becomes worse it may accept the generous offer.

Good manners are a part of good morals; and it is as much your duty as your interest to practice both.

Girls, don't marry to keep from being an old maid, or just to make a change and get away from home. Maiden ladies have a mission to fulfil as well as wives and mothers.

NO "FRILLS"

Just a Statement About Food.

Sometimes a good, healthy commercial traveler suffers from poorly selected food and is lucky if he learns that Grape-Nuts food will put him right.

A traveling man writes: "About a year ago my stomach got in a bad way. I had a headache most of the time and suffered misery. For several months I ran down until I lost about 70 pounds in weight and finally had to give up a good position and go home. Any food that I might use seemed to nauseate me.

"My wife, hardly knowing what to do, one day brought home a package of Grape-Nuts food and coaxed me to try it. I told her it was no use but finally to humor her I tried a little, and they just struck my taste. It was the first food that I had eaten in nearly a year that did not cause any suffering.

"Well, to make a long story short, I began to improve and stuck to Grape-Nuts. I went up from 135 pounds in December to 194 pounds the following October.

"My brain is clear, blood all right and appetite too much for any man's pocket-book. In fact, I am thoroughly made over and owe it all to Grape-Nuts. I talk so much about what Grape-Nuts will do that some of the men on the road have nicknamed me 'Grape-Nuts,' but I stand to-day a healthy, rosy-cheeked man—a pretty good example of what the right kind of food will do.

"You can publish this if you want to. It is a true statement without any frills."

EXAMINER DOLLAR DAY

At Peterborough THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3rd

IN THE WAKE OF THE GERMAN ARMY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You publish in a letter in to-day's Times a statement from the Prefet of Meurthe-et-Moselle. Will you permit me to say that in five months of Red Cross work with the Belgian and French armies I witnessed German atrocities, and that what I witnessed appears in the Bryce report? I saw Germans at Melle on Sept. 7 burn twenty-six peasants' houses with peasants in them. Later I saw eleven civilians—men, women and a child, who had been used as a cover by German troops and bayoneted in the process. One was a woman of perhaps 80 years of age. One was a girl child of 12. She died from the bayonet wounds in her back. I saw the devastated City of Termonde, with those houses spared in which lived friends and spies of the Germans, the fact being indicated by German writing in chalk on the door. It was a house-to-house burning of 1,100 houses. I have seen the German spy system at work in Belgium, that slow honeycombing of a nation in days of peace by secret agents accepting hospitality and betraying it.

The indictment against the German military system, is correctly drawn. It covers clever acts of treachery through years of peace and then, when the time to strike has come the blow given to women and children with a widespread and unique savagery. The evidence is all in, carefully marshaled. There only remains the remedy, which is that failure, not success, must be the reward for long-continued falseness and for the mutilation and murder of women and children.

ARTHUR H. GLEASON.

It costs a lot to live these days—more than it did before. But when you stop to think of it, it's worth a whole lot more.

Shopper—"It seems to me these eggs are rather small." Merchant—"Perhaps they are, ma'am, a trifle—owing to the war."

THE newspaper in the Peterborough zone of Ontario to be granted Newspaperdom's "Winning Daily" emblem, was the EXAMINER. After investigating the local field, the following conclusions were established. First, the EXAMINER has a materially larger circulation than any other Peterborough daily issued, it is the leading evening newspaper of Peterborough and the tributary territory; third, it is engrossing volume of advertising published—and this volume is made up of gilt-edged business from local and foreign advertisers in Canada and the United States. Local advertisers unanimously endorse it for its result-getting efficiency. It invites correspondence regarding the Peterborough zone as a business possibility in 1916; the possibility of dealer cooperation, etc.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Suffering of Troops At Dardanelles Is Vividly Described

Interesting Letter Received in Peterborough From a Lieutenant of Royal Army Medical Corps, Tells of the Evacuation of Anzac and Suvla Bay—Clever Ruse Adopted by the Australians

The following most interesting letter has been received by Rev. Dr. Farquarson, assistant Pastor of St. Andrew's Church, from Lieut. E. M. Coutts of the Royal Army Medical Corps:

No. 15, Stationary Hospital,
Mudros Med. Expeditionary Force,
Dec. 21st, 1915.

Things have been happening quickly recently. Souvla and Anzac are both evacuated, happily without casualty. The procedure was carried out well and quickly. The Turks, apparently, were not aware of the movement. Some of the Australian lads adopted a ruse to continue the deception. They had tin cans containing some dry earth attached to the triggers of rifles left behind in the trenches, and other cans of water with small holes suspended to drip into the cans of earth so that hours afterwards the rifles would fire. Quantities of stores and large numbers of tents were left behind. Fortunately, we had calm nights and moonshine to carry out the movements. Great numbers of the soldiers have come across here, Australians among them. The latter are splendid looking men, tall, well made, handsome fellows. They have made an undying reputation for fighting qualities in the Peninsula. Helles will be under hotter fire now. The Turks have more and better ammunition now and are using it. The Helles beach is more exposed to the vision and direct fire of the Turks than is Souvla and Anzac. Even the hospital, the other day, got several shells inside her, wounding some of the patients. This was a reply to a similar act of our guns on a Turkish hospital—accidental of course. The Turks have played the game well in this campaign. Our officers speak highly of their conduct.

The evacuation was preceded, three weeks ago by an appalling catastrophe to our men—a wash-out at Souvla, by a heavy storm, simply flooding the trenches and spreading over the level area two feet deep in some places. The rain began about 5.30 p.m. and in an hour's time some of the trenches near the base of the hills were full. In a few hours more rain yielded to hail, and a fierce, cold gale ensued. They had no shelter, no change of clothing. Their garments dried upon them in the biting cold. All night, all next day, and next night, they clung to their positions. Numbers were drowned by the flood; others succumbed in the night to the cold. Many hobbled back to the base with the aid of rifles, others crawling on their hands and knees, succumbed on the way. Weary looking men were brought by hundreds into our hospital; its capacity never so strained before. I had about forty of them under my care in the typhoid wards, emptied for the occasion. Poor fellows! The wine of life had gone out of them. The most serious ones lay on their beds, dead to the world, suffering from profound shock. One died in twenty-four hours, a second lay in the balance for some days, and gradually came back out of death's shadow. Frost bite is the diagnosis. It is frost bite so far as they feet are concerned, but far more; their entire bodies are involved. In every one of my cases there was more or less Anaesthesia of the feet, involving in most, only the balls of the toes, but in others, the entire feet. In about ten of them blisters were raised on the feet as by a burn. In a few the toes were dark and part of the feet and legs were swollen and red in patches. As the days passed the sufferings increased. Pains shot up the legs from the feet. Their backs and joints ached. Some had high temperature at the beginning, gradually falling to normal, to rise again in a septic curor when the feet were gongrenous. They have been with me now three weeks and what is the result? The sufferings of most of them are less acute, the swelling has left their limbs, sensation is returning gradually; parts of the feet are actually sensitive. Patches of skin on the feet lie loose and folded. The blisters have been followed by ulcerated patches. The toes of both feet of one patient separted so far that I snipped them off with the scissors. One poor fellow lost both feet, utterly dead and gangrenous up to the ankle joints. He is 19 years old, the son of a miner. Such is the story of war. Human life is cheap; death is familiar; injury and disease, incidental; 18,000 men were evacuated from the Peninsula in the twelve days succeeding the blizzard—the toll of a heavy battle.

My description is no exaggeration—a simple recital of fact. I believe, however, that the frost bites, in my wards, were worse than the average.

Since that blizzard we have had the most charming weather, not even a duet storm, not a degree of frost. Sunshine has been glorious and Lemnos, beautiful. I took a stroll with one of our padres up to the hills at the nearest point. The views all around were very beautiful. Several villages among the hills opened to our view—no vegetation, but delightful colouring of tints of brown. From the same vantage point we commanded the prospect hundreds of feet below us of different hospitals and units, all tented out upon the plain, the Greek village of Mudros enveloped in their midst—a city of tents; the harbor beyond, with its fleet of many varied craft, and the hills again high in the distance. A Frenchman was painting the picture—worthy of a great painter. How I would like to hang a real painting on the walls of my library, full of personal and historical memories. But the war hangs on the back-ground like a spectre.

We are likely to be moved out of here next month. Whither? No one knows. Masses of troops are being hurried down into Egypt. Trouble is brewing there. Four hundred Australians are said to have been ambushed there and wiped out by S—, the tribe of Kippling's Fuzzi-Wuzzies. Everything is uncertain here, partly because of the obscurity, and partly, I imagine, because our men in control have not eyes.

TO WAGE WAR AGAINST VERBAL MONSTROSITIES

An organization that is to wage war upon such verbal monstrosities as "ain't" has been born in Kansas, and no doubt will spread over the land. Iowa needs it. Keokuk should have one. The Dubuque Telegraph-Herald has the following on this subject:

Kansas, which produced Sockless Simpson, Carrie Nation and William Allen White to lead the nation into truer channels of life, has now evolved a society which will fight for the purity of the English language, as its long whiskered citizens once fought for the purity of the home of the Prohibition ticket. Kansas has given birth to the Anti-ain't association, a society whose object is admirably set forth in its alliterative title, and promises to dazzle the world with Kansas culture, as manifested by opposition to America's greatest grammatical error, an error which custom and long usage have almost justified into correctness.

There are perhaps not 100 men and women in Iowa who have not at some time been guilty of using "ain't" when they should have said "isn't" or "aren't." The number of Americans who daily use "ain't" with reckless disregard to the shattering of conventions and good English would probably fall not much short of 100,000,000, while those whose respect for language leads them to forbear such an abhorrent practice will be found chiefly in those seats of learning which have become famous for their rectitude of conversation through good fortune in being the birthplace of master poets and essayists.

It is no easier to say "ain't" than to say "isn't" or "aren't" or the other correct forms for which "ain't" is so frequently substituted. Good diction, like good manners, is a matter of custom and of practice, and one who lets himself comfortably relax from either soon finds himself slackly committing errors at the most embarrassing moments.

"Ain't" is a solecism of childhood, easily acquired, but like all childish mannerisms and tricks of speech, exceedingly difficult to be rid of when maturity bids correctness. To permit the child to say "ain't" is to do irremediable harm, for, in direct proportion, the adult will find difficulty in eradicating the error, if, indeed, it is ever possible to do so.

For the Anti-ain't association to confine its endeavours to eliminating "ain't" from the vocabulary of the grownups will be a useless discharge of energy. The pernicious seed of childhood has grown to the pestilent dandelion of maturity which it is impossible to uproot.

MUST LOOK TO EUROPE FOR SCIENTIFIC CULTIVATION OF THE SOIL, SAYS ASSEMBLYMAN DOBSON

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—That there is no excuse for abandoned farms in this or in other states is the opinion of Assemblyman Frank Dobson, who represents the Fourth Monroe District. Assemblyman Dobson says that this country must look to Europe for scientific cultivation of the soil, and that this is the fundamental problem which is beginning to make itself felt as the population of this country, and especially the Eastern states, increases.

While there are probably few farms which are really abandoned in this state, it is realised that there are many in other states and that in the West there is much land which does not produce as much as it ought to.

There is much in the line of educational work which can be done in this respect, said Mr. Dobson to-day. "Much has been done in Europe. Careful study of the soil and tests bring wonderful results. This work is being done, of course, and the state is on the right road but there is much more that can be done.

"Agriculturists in this state perhaps do not take advantage of all the information they are able to obtain with regard to soil. In all probability they pay far too little attention to the scientific side of agriculture. In Europe where every available piece of land has to be cultivated, it has been necessary to find ways and means of making the soil productive year after year. With our broad expanses of land in the West, it is possible to cultivate land for such a time as it produces freely and then turn to new land. This will not always be possible in this country."

Mr. Dobson said that land which is practically abandoned in this state within a comparatively short distance of the New York City markets, could be made productive if the problem were treated in a scientific manner. Tests which would bring out the need of the soil and the placing in it of the properties needed by the plants, he declared, would result in fertilizing large tracts which are not now producing anything. He added that for this work money was necessary, but that it would be well expended.

ANGLO-FRENCH FLEET SEARCHING THE INLETS

LONDON, Jan. 20. — A despatch from Athens to-day says:

"An Anglo-French fleet has been searching the inlets of the Greek islands with the object of discovering the bases of German and Austrian submarines.

"The Turks have removed 400 guns from the Gallipoli Peninsula to Xanthi, to the eastward of the allied lines at Salonika (Xanthi, otherwise known as Eskije, is seventy-six miles west-northwest of Dedeagatch, Bulgaria.)

"One hundred and twenty thousand Austrians and Germans are being massed at Gievgeliv."

LITTLE LEFT BEHIND FOR TURKISH TROOPS

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Uunder-Secretary for War, stated in the House of Commons that he thought a quarter or an eighth of the two million pounds sterling attributed in the Turkish reports as the value of the booty left when the British evacuated Gallipoli Peninsula would cover everything left behind.

Mr. Tennant stated that in the evacuation the primary object of course was to bring the troops away safe and sound. It already had been stated that a considerable amount of stores was abandoned after they had been destroyed, he said. No doubt more might have been saved by the sacrifice of life, but the Commons and public opinion, he added, would endorse the action of those responsible for conducting the evacuation in such a way as to save the personnel.

The bulk of the stores left behind had been destroyed, he declared.

"FAGGED-OUT" WOMEN

Will Find a Helpful Suggestion In This Letter.

Overworked, run down "fagged out" women who feel as though they could hardly drag about should profit by Mrs. Carter's experience. She says:—"I am the mother of six children and I got so weak and run-down that I couldn't eat anything and it seemed almost impossible for me to get around and do my work. I tried different doctors' remedies without benefit. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and received so much benefit from the first bottle that I continued to take it, and it has built up my strength and made me strong and well. I consider Vinol the best medicine I have ever taken, and advise all weak, run-down women to try it." Mrs. Bessie Carter, State Road, N. C.

If all the tired, overworked, run-down women in Peterborough could only realize how our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol, supplies the vital elements necessary to build up blood and strength, we wouldn't be able to supply the demand.

NORWOOD BRANCH BEEN FORMED

Temperance Workers Are Addressed by Mr. Rich. Lees of Peterborough

The Norwood Register says: A meeting was held in Norwood on Thursday evening last to organize a local branch of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred—a recently inaugurated movement which is sweeping the province and which has for its object provincial prohibition. Inspector Richard Lees, M.A., of Peterborough, was present, and addressed the meeting, setting forth the plans of the campaign. Mr. James Andrews was chosen as chairman, and Mr. R. G. Lawlor, B.A., secretary. The meeting adjourned until the next evening, when canvassers were appointed for the different divisions of the village to present the petitions to the citizens for signature. A meeting to complete the arrangements was held last evening (Wednesday). Similar organizations have been formed in the surrounding municipalities. A whirlwind campaign is to be instituted at once to secure the signatures of the people. The petitions will ask that the Legislature pass a prohibitory law, or failing to do this that a referendum be taken, and in the event of it being carried that the measure become law without any further action on the part of the Legislature.

If you like fudge, and want a new treat in this delicious and easily made confection, just try the following recipe:

Mix 2 cups granulated sugar, two tablespoons FRY'S Chocolate Powder and a piece of butter size of a walnut. Stir in one cup of milk and boil very slowly from 20 minutes to a half hour—until it forms a ball when dropped into cold water. A few nuts make a pleasant addition. Remove from fire, beat until stiff, pour into pan, and when cool cut into squares.

Caring For The Prisoners of War

Local Branch of the Red Cross Receives Letter From the Prisoner's Department

The following letter has been received by the Peterborough Red Cross Society from the Prisoners of War Department of the Canadian Red Cross:

Canadian Red Cross Society,
Commissioners Office,
14-16 Cockspur Street,
London, S.W.

Miss L. J. Davidson,
Sec. Peterborough Red Cross Society,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Miss Davidson,—Many thanks for your kind letter and the interest expressed in it by the members of the Peterborough Red Cross Society for the Canadian prisoners of war.

I am sending you a list of men who would, I am sure, be most grateful for anything that could be done for them, and shall be glad to hear from you as to whether any of these men, and if so, which have been adopted by the Peterborough Red Cross Society. If so may I suggest that the money be forwarded to us here with the names and addresses of the adopters, so that the parcels which we would forward in their names might be acknowledged direct to them.

I think and hope there are no Canadian prisoners who are not receiving at least a fortnightly parcel of food, and this branch of the Canadian Red Cross make it their business to see that this is the case, but still you can readily understand how grateful we are for any help, and the method of adopters forwarding the money to us seems the simplest way of doing things. Yours truly,

E. Rivers Bucklev.

Highest Priced Colt of New York Sale Drops Dead on Track

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Sunlight, the highest-priced yearling of the Clarence H. Mackay sale held at Durland's Academy, December 28, dropped dead at the Lexington race track. A postmortem examination revealed that the colt had died of valvular heart trouble.

Sunlight was a chestnut son of Sundridge—Spectrum, and, after the liveliest bidding of the sale, he was finally sold for $6,000 to Kenneth Alexander.

This colt was a half brother to Spectatress, who was a winner in this country in 1908, and a winner in France of the Prix Moneberoult at Paris. He was also a half brother to Commodore Anson, a useful horse in this country.

New Medical Discovery Will Help Wounded

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Dr. Pierre Roux, director of the Pasteur Institute, announced to the Academy of Sciences that a remarkable advance in serum-therapy had been made as the result of a discovery by Dr. Bassuet. By his method it was possible to cleanse automatically. Dr. Roux said, wounds which had hitherto resisted treatment. Dr. Bassuet employs the polyvalent serum discovered last year by Doctors Leclainche and Vallee. Dr. Roux said 200 wounded men who had been in hospitals from six to fourteen months were treated according to Dr. Bassuet's method. As as result the infection seemed to revive in the wounds. Abscesses formed and burst spontaneously, eliminating bits of bone, splinters, bullets, pieces of clothing and even drains and silver threads left in the incisions by mistake. After this had happened, Dr. Roux said, the wounds healed quickly in most cases, and men who had been lying helpless for months were discharged cured.

La Grippe and School Attendance

La Grippe and seasonal minor ailments are cutting deeply into the attendance at the public schools. Mr. Inspector Mowat says that in the eight years of his incumbency he has never seen anything like the interruption of school attendance by illness. He says the percentage of absentees from this cause varies from 10 per cent to 60 per cent. In one room to-day the attendance was reduced 70 per cent. He thinks the general absenteeism due to illness in all the schools would amount to 33 per cent. Last year, in the same month, the general lessening of school attendance, due to illness, was about 13 per cent. It seems the smaller children are more subject to grippe and colds than the elder pupils. One teacher says that he notices that such little epidemics begin with the pupils of the lower grades and gradually go up.

MANY CHANGES MADE AMONG C. P. R. OFFICIALS

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 20.—A railway with such interests and so many ramifications as the C.P.R. requires in the more responsible positions officials who have held posts at different points in the system, and therefore there is a constant flux and change of agents and general agents With the organization of the Canadiana Pacific Ocean services, particularly in the Orient, there has been an unusually large number of changes in the passenger dept., all with the object of strengthening the system and educating the officers to every phase of business which they have to handle A new passenger agency has been established at Buffalo, with L. R. Hart, formerly of the New York office, as general agent. G. M. Jackson goes from the railway at San Francisco to the ocean services at Yokohama, where his title is general agent, passenger department. A. J. Blaisdell goes from St. Louis to Shanghai. A. C. Shaw has left Winnipeg to take up new duties in the passenger traffic department at Montreal. G. A. Walton, formerly of Chicago, has taken Mr. Shaw's place as general passenger agent at Winnipeg. T. J. Wall, formerly general agent passenger department at Minneapolis, is transferred to Chicago and is succeeded at Minneapolis by R. S. Elsworthy, formerly of Chicago. M. G. Murphy, district passenger agent at Toronto, changes places on February 1st with W. B. Howard, district passenger agent at St. John. All these changes mean a host of other changes, which enable men who might otherwise be confined to the experience of one office to have the opportunity of other work which gives them a wider knowledge of traffic conditions over the whole system.

MEMORIAL AT SALISBURY TO THE CANADIANS

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A memorial to Canadian soldiers who completed their training on Salisbury Plain was unveiled yesterday at Salisbury in the Council chamber by Lady Campbell, wife of General Sir Pitcairn Campbell. General Campbell referred appreciatively to the great services performed for the Empire by the overseas troops, and General Steele, in offering the thanks of the Canadians to the citizens of Salisbury for the memorial, spoke, he said, of a son of a British officer, who fought against Napoleon. Canada, he said, had always been ready to stand by the Empire and was going to do so to the last gasp. It would be the fault of politicians and not of soldiers if the Kaiser was not crushed, if Krupp's factory was not flattened, if every fort in Germany was not levelled, if the Kiel Canal was not made a waterway to all nations, and if we did not get back Helgoland.

My Husband Made a Big Mistake

"If he happens to get a roast for dinner which is not as tender as it might be, he doesn't forget to comment on it. I am always anxious to please him, and last Saturday I bought a nice roast at Alex. Gordon's Meat Market. It cooked splendidly and although it was cheaper than I had been in the habit of paying it was simply the most delicious roast I had cooked for months. At dinner on Sunday, Harry helped himself to a second serving, and said 'I guess you paid a pretty stiff price for this roast. This is something like a meal.' He had to smile when I told him all about it. Naturally I am now a regular customer at Gordon's Meat Market. Try him. His phone number is 34"

TRY CANADIAN SOLDIER ON CHARGE OF MURDER

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Pte. Samuel Sobilkvitch, of the 41st Montreal Regiment, was committed for trial at Acton Police Court on a charge of wilful murder of Henri Jolicoeur, a French-Canadian in the same regiment. The only fresh witness called was Sergt. Lewis, R.F.A., who said he saw the accused man in an excited condition passing through the smoke-room of the hotel into a saloon bar with a large Canadian clasp knife in his hand. Police Sergeant Clarke said that when accused saw Captain Morin he shouted in English: "I don't want any Frenchmen to give me some bullets and I will kill a lot of them." He reserved his defence.

NO SERIOUS ILLNESS AT THE ARMOURIES

Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—As there appears to be an impression abroad in the city that serious illness exists at the armouries we beg leave to state that we have had several hundred cases of la grippe, all of which are now better. We have also had about one dozen cases of measles. There is absolutely no serious illness exits at the armouries

TO-DAY--ST. AGNES

St. Agnes the Patron Saint of Girls and Young Women is Commemorated This Day---Some of the History of this Youthful Martyr, and Some of the Superstitions Connected With Her Eve.

Written for The Examiner by Frank Russell

Agnes is a name which is by no means a common one; although found in many languages; yet there have been several saints, one of them a martyr, bearing that time-honored name; so that any girl who has had Agnes selected as her guardian angel, need have no fear as to the courage and upright living of her, after whom one has been named.

First and foremost amongst those bearing the title of Saint Agnes comes a saint and martyr. Of all the virgin martyrs none was held in higher honour by the early Christian Church since the fourth century, than St. Agnes of Rome. The earliest authorities give to-day—January 21—as the date of the festival, and up to the present moment the Latin Church keeps her memory sacred. She is also a black-letter saint in the Anglican calendar.

Since the close of the fourth century the Fathers of the Church and the Christian poets have sung her praises, and extolled her virginity and heroic conduct under torture.

It is clear, however, from the Diversity of the Earliest Accounts that there was—any way at the end of the fourth century—no strictly accurate and reliable narrative, in writing, concerning the details of her [illegible]

Yet there is one point in which there is mutual agreement, and that is as to her age for

She Was Only About Thirteen Years of Age.

St. Ambrose gives her age as twelve, while St. Augustine makes her to be a year older. Tradition—Pope Damasus is the authority—speaks of her as hastening to her martyrdom from the lap of her mother or nurse; so there can be but little doubt that she was quite young.

Pope Damasus, in a metrical panegyric, tells how that immediately after the issue of the Imperial edict against the Christians, Agnes at once voluntarily declared herself to be a Christian, for which confession of her faith she was haled before the judge of such causes for trial and, of course, condemnation.

Her Sentence.

She was at first condemned to live a life of shame and the letter of the law was carried into execution. But, says St. Ambrose, when a young man turned a lustful eye upon her, "he fell to the ground stricken with blindness, and lay as one dead." Thus she suffered in reality a double martyrdom, one of modesty, and the other of religion. After it was found that she was miraculously saved from dishonour,

She Was Burnt;

Yet she is said to have given but few thoughts to the frightful torments she had to endure, being concerned only in veiling, by means of her long flowing hair—which reached almost to her feet—her chaste body, which had been exposed to the gaze of the heathen crowd assembled.

Another account goes beyond this, and avers that she came out of the flames unscathed, but obtained her crown of martyrdom, by having her head cut off by the executioner's sword.

Another Tradition

has it that when led out to die, St. Agnes was tied to a stake and faggots were heaped around her. But these would not burn. Whereupon the officer in charge of the troops drew his sword and struck off her head. This is practically the same legend as that last quoted. There are other legends, but they do not materially differ; the concrete facts remain.

It does not appear quite clear which of these acounts should be accepted as the strictly correct one. Yet there is sufficient similarity between them to show that she was both put to stake and beheaded.

Her Place of Burial,

The body of the Virgin Martyr was placed in a separate sepulchre on the Via Momentana, in Rome, on which highway Philocatus says the act of martyrdom took place. Around the tomb there was erected a catacomb which bore her name. The original slab of the tomb containing her remains may now be seen in the museum at Naples. It bears the inscription, "Agnes! sanctissima."

During the reign of Constantine, owing to the efforts of his daughter Constantina (in English Constance), a basilica was erected over the grave. Pope Honorius nearly three centuries later—her death is supposed to have been about 324—entirely remodelled this edifice and since then it has remained unaltered. In the apse is a mosaic showing a martyr in the midst of flames, with a sword at her feet. A beautiful relic of this saint is found on a marble slab which dates from the fourth century, and which was originally a part of the Altar of her Church.

In Art

St. Agnes since the middle ages, has been represented with a lamb, a symbol of her virginal innocence. She is usually clothed in white with a palm of martyrdom in her hand. On her feast in Rome, two lambs are solemnly blessed, and from the wool of their fleeces are made the palluims sent by the Pope to the Archbishops.

There are

Other Saints Bearing the Same Name, of much later date, who were not martrs. For instance there are St. Agnes of Assisi, who died in 1253; St. Agnes of Bohemia, known also as St. Agnes of Prague, who died about 1281; St. Agnes of Montepulciano, whose death occurred in 1317, all of whom lived splendid lives and died highly honoured. But St. Agnes of Rome, of whose memory I have been treating, and who is commemorated to-day, is the Saint Agnes par-excellence.

St. Agnes is

The Patron Saint of Young Girls,

who in rural districts formerly indulged in all sorts of quaint country magic on the eve of her feast day, with a view of discovering their future husbands. The lasses would take a row of pins, and pulling them out of the paper, one after the other, stick them in their sleeves saying or singing some hymn or prayer which was supposed to ensure that their dreams would that night present the one in question.

Superstitious Practices.

Another superstition was to go to a different part of the country from where a girl ordinarily resided; then she would take her right-leg stocking and fasten her garter round it—suspenders or hose supporters were not in vogue in those days—at the same time repeating this doggerel:

"I knit this knot, this knot I knit,
To know the thing I know not yet,
That I may see
The man that shall my husband be;
Not in his best or worst array,
But what he weareth every day;
That I, to-morrow, may him ken,
From among all other men."

Lying down on her back that night with her hands under her head, the anxious one would believe that her future "boy" would appear in a dream and give her a kiss. It was said to add to the charm if the girl went supperless to bed!

Another Dream Charm

For St. Agnes' Eve was to take a sprig of, rosemary and another of thyme, sprinkle them three times with water and place one in each shoe and stand a shoe and sprig on each side of the bed, repeating—

'St. Agnes that's to lovers kind,
Come ease the trouble of my mind.'

Keats, the famous poet, has immortalized these superstitions in his poem—"The Eve of St. Agnes."

Meaning of the Name.

Agnes is a Greek name, signifying pure, sacred chaste; Aggie being its diminutive. In English, French, Dutch, German, Danish and Latin, it is Agnes; in Spanish and Portugese, Ines, or Ines; in Italian, Agnese.

General Smith-Dorrien's March Into the Unknown.— This striking photo vividly illustrates some of the difficulties of the campaign in German East Africa, where General Smith-Dorrien, formerly head of a British army corps in France, has gone to subjugate Germany's last colony, which is a country of nearly four hundred thousand square miles. There are few railways and much of the marching is through jungle, where it is only possible to go single file. Not only enemy snipers, but prowling lions, leopards and hyenas are common.

ROUMANIA HAS LITTLE CHOICE

Rumania has sold to the Central powers 50,000 carloads of cereals, mostly wheat, Indian corn and navy beans. The sale, unlike some others which preceded it, has been made at a reasonable market price, and no special inducements were offered, nor will it be necessary this time to engage in the wholesale bribing of Rumanian government and railroad officials to get the purchases out of the country.

Rumania was obliged to sell to the Central powers because she cannot sell to anybody else. The closing of the Dardanelles has locked the gate to other markets, and Russia, the only other Entente power with whom Rumania now has physical contact, is not in the market for Rumanian cereals. So long as Serbia was still a fact and a neighbor, Rumania was able to ship some of her foodstuffs to Saloniki, from where they could be reached by Entente and neutral consumers. Now this route is closed.

With the conquest of Serbia the Central powers have gained a great economic advantage. Rumania must sell to them, if she does not want to have her crops rot on her hands, and what is considered just as important here, must sell on terms more favorable to Germany and Austria-Hungary than she has in the past.

But in addition to selling to the two empires, Rumania is also exporting much food to Bulgaria, and even to Turkey in Europe. Though there is a large supply of wheat, barley and other grains in Anatolia and Syria, Constantinople has not been able to reach these easily, owing to limited railroad transport facilities. Rumanian flour being more accessible right now than Anatolian unmilled grain, the city administration of Constantinople has just concluded a contract for a large quantity of flour which Rumania is to supply, the first deliveries being equal to about 2,000 carloads. Much of this has already been rushed south via the new eastern Bulgarian through route.

In addition to having no market for Rumanian grain and other foodstuffs, Russia has enough mineral oil of her own, so Rumania will be obliged to sell this necessity to the Central power group of belligerents. Negotiations for a more advantageous sale basis are said to be in progress.

Rumania's attitude in these matters too, has a diplomatic background. Her government intends to remain neutral so long as possible, and it is declared she will join the Central power in case pressure from Entente quarters obliges her to take action. Well-informed circles here explain the situation in this manner. The recent mining of the Rumanian Danube stretches seems to support this view. The mining of these waters would embarrass no other than Russian shipping.

Meanwhile the Bucharest press has begun to speak in plain terms of Serbia's fate and the difficulty of Greece's position. There is still a large Austro-Hungarian force on the Rumanian frontier, and papers like the Bucharest "Moldava" never weary in pointing out that a hostile move by Rumania towards Austra-Hungary or Bulgaria would make the country a "third Belgium."

Wanted It Then.

Young Barnes had married contrary to his father's wishes. Meeting his parents soon afterwards, the father said angrily: "Well, young man, I have made my will and cut you off with a shilling." "I am very sorry, father," said the youth contritely, and then added: "But you don't happen to have the—er—shilling on you, I suppose?"

MODERN CONVENIENCES IN THE HOUSE

Mrs. Anthony McNeil, Peterboro Co., Ont.

THERE are probably many women on the farm who, like myself, are still without any immediate prospect of attaining to the more important modern conveniences in the house, such as a water system and who may not even be able to lay claim to the possession of such a simple thing as an up-to-date washing machine. It is such women as these who need more than the others, to take advantage of every labor and time saving device they can obtain for the accomplishment of the lesser details of their household work. I would like to draw attention to one or two such small conveniences that I have tried and found helpful.

The first is the bread mixer. To those who have to bake bread frequently, this is the greatest comfort. The long and tedious job of mixing the flour with the batter by hand is thereby entirely avoided. The bread mixer costs around two dollars and a half I believe, and is made in two sizes. It is very much the shape of an ordinary pail. The batter is made in the mixer and when ready for the flour to be added, it is clamped to the table by means of a clamp provided with the machine. The flour is added and three minutes' steady turning of the handle will mix the whole thoroughly and all without soiling a finger. Every busy housewife with a large, hungry family should try this bread machine and see if it is not worth while.

My second little convenience is a double saucepan for porridge. On nearly every farm in the land I suppose, porridge is eaten for breakfast. I believe a large majority, however, still keep to the single saucepan for cooking it. The beauty of the double sausepan is that it can be put on over night, or indeed at any time of the day, pushed to the back of the stove if the fire is hot, lest the water all boil away, and in the morning one can be sure of having perfectly cooked porridge. When it comes to washing the breakfast dishes, the advantage of the steamed porridge will be seen in the much greater ease with which the pot will allow itself to be cleaned.

My third and last, can scarcely be dubbed a convenience, inasmuch as it is merely a little device of my own for converting a painful necessity into what may be easily a "thing of beauty," if not actually "a joy forever." I refer to the darning of table linen. Darns, however neatly executed, do not tend to enhance either the beauty or value of the object darned—as a general rule. But listen to my little plan.

When a hole or worn place appears in a tablecloth, I just draw in pencil all round the place to be darned, a design harmonizing as far as possible with the pattern already on the cloth, say a leaf or flower and then proceed to darn the whole design. The final effect is that of a piece of embroidery work, rather than the usual unsightly darn. Lace curtains could be treated in the same way. This scheme needs to be tried to be appreciated and I advise any woman who would like to turn a tiresome necessity into an artistic effort, to make a trial of it.

GULF OF BOTHNIA FROZEN

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 21.— The Daily Mail's Christiania correspondent reports that the Gulf of Bothnia is filled with immense masses of ice which completely block navigation in many places, notwithstanding the efforts of the ice-breakers. The narrowest part of the gulf is frozen from coast to coast, something which has not occurred since the middle of the eighteenth century.

Voice of The People

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me, through your valuable paper, to refer to a letter in Thursday's Review by "One Who is Interested?"

Let me say, first of all, that I am at a loss to understand in what he is interested, unless it is my private business. He certainly cannot be interested in the great business engaging our country at the present time, viz., that of encouraging the enlistment of every available man, otherwise he would have refrained from giving publicity to anything which might cast reflection upon the spirit of our recruiting meetings.

If he is interested merely in myself I have no objection to giving him one or two bits of minor information. First, that I was confined to the house all day Tuesday with an attack of la grippe; and, second, that on Wednesday afternoon I ventured as far as Nicholls Hospital to see three members of my congregation who were in a still more unfortunate condition than myself.

It may also be of interest to him to learn that a clergyman has many calls which force him to consider secondary, even such an important matter as his health. While la grippe prevented me from acting as Chairman at Tuesday night's recruiting meeting, it did not prevent me from fulfilling duties of an essentially different nature on Wednesday afternoon.

Yours faithfully,
R. B. Crobb.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:—Hats off to the members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Speakers' Patriotic League who have signified (by resolution) their readiness to don the smock and overall in lieu of khaki and assist those who have large contracts for making of munitions of war. Why not use available men who by reason of having passed too many milestones on the path of time or for minor infirmities, are unable to pass the doctor for enlistment? These same men who make application for work are turned down and young men, such as are able to enlist, given the preference. At least this is the experience of the writer.

CITIZEN.

The Woman.

"Here's a most wonderful thing. I've just been reading of a man who reached the age of forty without learning how to read or write. He met a woman, and for her sake he made a scholar of himself in two years." The Man: "That's nothing. I know a man who was a profound scholar at forty. Then he met a woman, and for her sake he made a fool of himself in two days."

GRAND TRUNK BOYS DEFEAT THE C.P.R.

Sensational Game of Hockey at the Brock Street Rink Last Night

A sensational game, which some of the spectators described as the game of the season, came off at the Brock Street Rink, last night, when the Grand Trunk Invincibles showed the Canadian Pacific Rovers and a large crowd of "rail birds" how real hockey should be played. In less than two minutes the Grand Trunk had scored their first goal, and it was plainly to be seen that they were there to put it all over their rivals.

The C.P.R. tried hard, very hard, indeed, but what team could stand up against such a combination as the Grand Trunk were last night?—such star players as Cook, Lipsett, Phillips, Mein, etc., being at the top of their form, to quote the words of one spectator, the G.T.R. boys were everywhere, and the C.P.R. were simply nowhere.

The final score was: Grand Trunk, 11 goals; Canadian Pacific Railway, 5 goals.

The teams lined up as follows:

Canadian Pacific Railway—Goal, Evans; right defence, Thompson; left defence, Crerar; left wing, Cohan, right wing, Kemp; centre, Wolf.

For the Canadian Pacific Railway, Thompson and Wolf were the pick.

Billy Brooks made a satisfactory referee.

Hamper Gifts of Bread

GENEVA, Jan. 16.—By official order, Germany has stopped the shipment of bread to prisoners of war in Germany, unless each package of bread is addressed to an individual prisoner. This order has caused consternation to those in charge of the bread supply to prisoners, as they say it is practically impossible to send individual packages except in a few, and that the great bulk of prisoners will have their bread supply cut off. They declare, too, that back of this order is a sinister move to strike such terror among the Allies on the starving condition of their prisoners, that they will be willing to listen to peace.

The International Red Cross has its headquarters here, Max Dolfus, an Alsatian of strong French sentiment, is head of the bureau for prisoners of war. He looks after the needs of the 200,000 Frenchman who are prisoners of war in Germany.

"Bread is the very element of a Frenchman's existence," said he. "You can cut off anything else, and he can stand it, but he must have bread. In one party of 400 prisoners which I convoyed, 250 had developed tuberculosis from being in a famished condition from a lack of bread—they were literally emaciated skeletons stricken with fatal disease. And this was typical of the result of short bread rations.

"The German ration to prisoners," Mr. Dolfus went on, "is one small loaf, about four inches in diameter, in the morning. This is intended for the day, but the famished men eat it at once, and that ends their bread supply for the day, only a soup being given at noon. That is the reason we have been pouring in this bread supply, largely in bulk, but to individuals so far as they could be traced. It has proved a life saver to thousands. And yet by this order of the 27th, this bread supply in bulk is cut off.

"This can mean only another great tragedy," said Mr. Dolfus, "and I am convinced there must be a purpose behind such a move—a purpose to force the Allies to consider terms of peace, rather than see their own people dying of starvation. And we expect, also, that if the bulk supply is cut off, this will soon be followed by cutting off the individual packages, on the ground that it is too great an undertaking to distribute these individual daily supplies. And so we are faced with the present stoppage of the bulk supply and the probable stoppage of the remaining individual supply.

"I am seeking to meet this condition, by organizing a complete service of individual packages, but it will be a work requiring much help from private sources—in which I hope America will help as it did in Belgium—and will be supported by the allied Governments as far as possible."

INCENSED AT NEUFELD

LONDON, Jan. 18. — The British press is stirred over the report from German sources that Karl Neufeld, the German trader and traveler, well known in the Near East, has been trying to influence the Mohammedan tribes in Persia and Arabia against the Allies. Neufeld was rescued from prison by Lord Kitchener and the British troops at Omdurman in September, 1898. For ten years he had lain in Mahdist jail, subjected to horrible tortures, according to his own account. In his book describing his adventures, Neufeld tells how, on being thrown into prison, three sets of iron shackles were attached to his feet and rings and chains fastened about his neck. He was often flogged, and on one occasion he received 500 lashes. From these horrors he was saved by the British, and returned to freedom.

During his imprisonment Neufeld gained a fluent knowledge of Arabic and an intimacy with Mohammedan life and customs known to few whites. He made pilgrimages in native guise both to Medina and Mecca. It was at Medina that his identity was suspected and he was made to take an oath that he was a Mussulman and to undergo a searching examination on the Koran by Mohammedan doctors, from which he emerged successfully.

At this time, it is declared, Neufeld did a service to his country that brought its reward in this war. He spread the belief among the ignorant Mohammedan populace that there were many Mohammedans in Germany. In fact, the current belief in Islam that the Kaiser is the Grand Caliph of the European Mohammedans and went to war to free them from Christian oppression is attributed to Neufeld's busy propaganda.

There is a story that Neufeld recently went to Germany not only as the bearer of valuable political and military information for the German Government, but also of a bottle of miracle-working water from the sacred Zem-Zem well at Mecca, given to him by the faithful as a cure for General von Hindenburg's gout. According to the traveler Burton, Zem-Zem water is bitter to the taste and causes boils; but the faithful say that it not only restores health but brightens the vision, physically and spiritually, and facilitate the pronunciation of Arabic.

All that is known about Neufeld's activities comes from the German papers, and for that reason they are accepted as true by the British press, which accuses Neufeld of ingratitude toward his rescuers.

PROTECT THE TREES

LOOK out for rabbit work on the young fruit trees. Either get the rabbit or protect the trees.

Hardwood cuttings of willow, dogwood, etc., may be made now and carried over winter in sand or sawdust.

Notice the branch tips of golden willow, dogwood and soft maple on bright, warm days. They are worth planting for the air of cheerfulness they give.

Now is a good time for the farmers' club to discuss the matter of fixing-up around the home, the school house, or the cemetery. Make plans that can be carried out next spring.

Don't expect the house plants to flower as well during the cold, dark months of early winter as when we have more sunshine. Most plants require sunshine for their best growth.

Root grafts of apples may be made now if they can be stored in sand or sawdust till time to plant next spring.

It is worth while to grow some evergreens about the place to get the beautiful effect of the snow on their branches after a snow storm.

Go over cabbage and root crops stored in the cellar and throw out decayed material. This will prevent further decay and help keep the cellar clean.

Get busy on that plan for fixing up the school yard. Does it need a hedge or a few trees and shrubs for comfort and appearance? Talk matters over with the teacher and the older children. Pleasant surroundings at home or school pay.

When the deep snow comes, the birds appreciate feed placed where they can get it easily. Suet tied to trees or grain placed on boards or on pans off the ground will be visited by many friends that you perhaps did not know were here.

Send for seed and plant catalogs. Get a few evenings' enjoyment from a study of their pages. Make up a list of the things you will use next spring and get the order off. Purchase only the true and tried sorts unless you can afford to experiment. Many of the seeds can be purchased from a seed dealer near home. Don't trust the grocery store ready-made packages. They may be good, but there are better seeds.

British With Gloves Off, Now Are Prepared To Fight With Bare Knuckles

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Mr. Sydney Brooks, English publicist, arrived here yesterday aboard the Tuscania of the Anchor line, for a stay of three months. Mr. Brooks represents Lord Northcliffe's newspapers, and his purpose is the resumption of the work he began last November, and which was interrupted by his return home for Christmas. He says that while here he hopes by letters and cables to the Northcliffe newspapers, especially the London Daily Mail, to do something to enlighten Englishmen on "the eternal mystery" of American policy and feeling toward the war.

When coming up the bay Mr. Brooks had much to say regarding the increased determination of the British to fight on at whatever cost or sacrifice till victory is assured.

"The temper of the nation," he said, "is now admirable. All talk about England not realizing the war is absolutely out of date. The people will respond to whatever call is made upon them. I noticed in this respect a great difference between the England of October and the England of January. Lord Derby's recruiting campaign has done an immense amount to bring home the full meaning of the war to every British home and mind.

"That national stubbornness which carried the country victoriously through the Napoleonic wars and which has never yet failed her in any European conflict is now thoroughly aroused. The people have accepted compulsion; they will accept anything to beat Germany. The reverses and disappointments and governmental blunders of the last fifteen months have but fined down their resolution to the single point of letting nothing for one moment stand in the way of carrying on the war with the utmost possible vigor.

British Now Determined.

"England is bearing her titanic burden without apparent effort. Outwardly she is as calm as ever. But her heart has turned to a mass of implacable granite and her spirit is not so much fixed as inexorably riveted on defeating Germany. There is not even the shadow of a 'stop the war' party, nor will there be so long as a single German remains under arms.

"What is true of the nation as a whole is not, of course, true of every class and section in it. There are still some politicians who seem more intent on the party game than on winning the war. There are still some trade union secretaries who are doing more to hamper than to help Mr. Lloyd George in his magnificent work of turning the country into an arsenal whose output of war material will first equal and then far surpass Germany's. And there is still in some walks of life, but especially among the working men, far too much extravagance.

"England has always been the most spendthrift nation in Europe and the least skilled in the art of making one shilling do the work of two. She is so still. Even the war has not yet taught the necessity of economy. But it very soon will. These are blemishes on her record, but none the less it remains the fact that this is the greatest hour in England's history. I wish more Americans could visit her just now. Elizabethan England, the England of Marlborough, the England that warred down Napoleon—they are one and all out-distanced by the England of to-day.

"I find on arriving here several more or less specific rumours that England is about to increase the severity of her blockade. I should not be in the least surprised if that were true. On this question the instincts of the country and its common sense have long been in advance of the official policy. Downing street hitherto has used sea power with an excessive tenderness for the right of neutrals. The result is that Germany has been permitted to import through the countries adjacent to her vast quantities of goods that formerly went direct to her own ports.

Want Full Blockade.

"To the average Englishman such laxity in turning British naval superiority to account has seemed little less than criminal. What the country demands is the enforcement of the blockade in its full rigor. What it is getting very tired of is seeing its supremacy as sea frittered away by one concession after another to neutral nations. That is not war and it is not business.

"Every concession of this kind, every breach in the naval fence increases by so much the effort England and the Allies have to make on land. The country would like to see the whole problem of the blockade taken out of the hands of the Foreign Office and placed exclusively in the hands of naval men. It believes that then the siege of Germany would quickly become as absolute as sea power could make it. No doubt neutrals would suffer in the process. If it were enforced to its full extent they would be confined to such trade, and no more, as they were carrying on among themselves before the war.

"From the standpoint of Great Britain and the Allies, who see neutrals straining every nerve to add to Germany's strength and resources, the present situation is fast becoming impossible. To change it radically involves some pretty obvious difficulties. But if Americans for one moment will put themselves in England's place they will see, I think, as reasonable men, that changes and very drastic changes can no longer be avoided. I may add that whatever complications may flow from the tightening of the blockade the English people are quite prepared to deal with them. They are taking off the gloves and fighting from now onward with bare knuckles."

Mr. Brooks is staying at the Gotham Hotel.

MILITARY NEWS

"I object to your calling yourself a blackguard" replied the parson.

But there's a lot of truth in it all the same.

Pa Pa.

The Lindsay Post says: Bandmaster Wm. Hefferman, of the 109th Battalion Band, has gathered about him about sixteen first-class players who are practicing night and day in the band room over Wonderland. "Billy" is bound to have the best band attached to any of the overseas battalions and if steady practice counts for anything, and it assuredly does, his ambitions will be gratified. The Band will be strengthened by new members from now on.

The following items of interest about the Norwood detachment of the 93rd Battalion, are taken from the Norwood Register:

A mass meeting will be held in the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, 26th inst., at 8 o'clock. Among those present will be Col. T. J. Johnson, Major Watt, and other senior officers.

The Norwood squad will be detailed to visit all the homes in this vicinity to recruit during Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week.

Norwood Platoon will march for divine service in the Baptist Church of this Village on the coming Sabbath.

The following have been taken on the strength from the 14th inst:

Pte. G. H. Graham, Pte. W. A. Richmond, Pte. George Digbey.

The recruits not yet on strength are: W. Simpson, W. Teal, I. Bond, F. Buck.

The following are on sick leave: Pte. Grieves, R. Killingbeck, W. H. Killingbeck.

The following is absent on duty: Pte. Percy Killingbeck.

Mr. Ed. Riley of the Oak Hall store has received the following letter from Lance Corporal J. H. Cobb, 21st Battalion.

Somewhere in Belgium, 29-12-15.

Just took the notion to chase a short note across to you. I dare say you will be surprised to know I am still alive. As a matter of fact I am surprised myself.

This is some country. England was bad enough for rain, but this place has got the tin hat on them all. In our particular spot in the line the German trenches are on a slight hill and we are in a hollow. Consequently all their draining runs into our trenches, which have been washed away entirely in most places, leaving us with nothing but barb wire entanglements to stop the bullets, whiz bangs and everything else our kind neighbours across the way feel inclined to send over, and believe me they sure do send over some dope. You've heard of Jack Johnsons, well they've quit throwing those things. Now they throw whole iron foundries at us and when they break up into pieces in our trenches each piece has a black-letter label on it "for you." You're supposed to do the disappearing act and fade away behind a sand bag.

We didn't do so bad Christmas eve. Old Fritz has a brass band playing and seemed to be having a fine time. When they started to invite us over our artillery opened up on them and they closed up in a hurry. They gassed us the other morning, or at least tried to, but no damage was done apart from making our eyes sore. Withal there is a certain amount of fascination in it, such as working on the end of a muck-stick and having the bullets tickling you or the shrapnel bursting around. I am writing this in a dugout, and this morning I even had a wash, and that's going some out here. Scotty Rogers is still in the running and just the same as ever. He told me he had heard from you."

THE TOWHEE

THE towhee, chewink, or ground robin as it is variously known, inhabits nearly the whole of the United States east of the Great Plains. It breeds from the Middle States northward and winters in the southern half of the country. Naturally associated with the catbird and brown thrasher, it lives in much the same places, though it is more given to haunting hedgerows along roads and fences.

After snow has disappeared in early spring an investigation of the rustling so often heard among the leaves near a fence or in a thicket will frequently disclose a towhee hard at work scratching for his dinner after the manner of a hen; and in these places and along the sunny border of woods old leaves will be found overturned where the bird has been scratching for hibernating bees and larvae. The good which the towhee does in this way can hardly be overestimated, since the death of a single insect at this time, before it has an opportunity to deposit its eggs, is equivalent to the destruction of a host later in the year. The towhee has also been credited with visiting potato fields and feeding upon the potato beetle.

Its vegetable food consists of seeds and small wild fruits, but no complaint on this score is known to have been made. So far as observation goes, the bird never touches either cultivated fruit or grain; in fact, it is too shy and retiring even to stay about gardens for any length of time.

FOUND DRIVE-WHEEL RIM CRACKED, IN THE YARD

Mr. Homer Lavoie, G.T.R. Engineer, Located a Weakness that Might Have Caused Trouble.

A cracked tire or rim on one of the drive wheels of his engine was discovered by Mr. Homer Lavoie, engineer on the Peterborough—Belleville line a few days ago. It is the custom of careful drivers to examine all parts of their engines before every run, and Mr. Lavoie is no exception to this number. The locating of the cracked tire necessitated calling to Lindsay for another engine.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELIZABETH KRUGER.

The death occurred last evening of Mrs. Elizabeth Kruger, wife of Mr. Christopher Kruger, 261 Sherbrooke street. Deceased had been ailing for some time and her death was not unexpected. The late Mrs. Kruger was in her 68th year. Besides a husband, two sisters are left to mourn her loss. Deceased has resided in Peterborough for the past ten years. Prior to that she lived in Otonabee.

The funeral will take place on Monday at two o'clock from 261 Sherbrooke street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. R. W. MUNCASTER.

Intelligence has been received here of the recent death at Florence, South Carolina, of a former well known Peterborough lady, Mrs. R. W. Muncaster, whose funeral took place on Jan. 17th. Mrs. Muncaster was a daughter of the late John and Ellen Dolan, well known and prominent citizens of Peterborough about 35 years ago. In early life she taught school in Chandos and Douro townships. Her husband, R. W. Muncaster, was for many years in the jewelry business in Peterborough, first as a member of the firm of Muncaster & Sanderson, and later on his own account. Mrs. Muncaster is survived by her husband, two sons—Charles of Detroit and Harold, a lieutenant in the United States army—and four daughters—Mrs. Arthur Smith of Montreal, Mrs. Charles Arrington of Macon, Georgia, Mary and Lillian at home. Three sisters also survive, Mrs. (Dr.) Ward and Miss Alice Delaney of Montreal, and Mrs. W. Morrow of New York, and two brothers, Mr. John Delaney of Vancouver, B.C., and Dr. W. J. Delaney of Naugatuck, Conn.

"Hoh!" contemptuously ejaculated Uncle Oracle Onken, during the recent spell of low temperature. "You young fellows don't know anything about cold weather. Why, I remember the winter of eighteen hundred and so forth when it was so cold that if you flung a dipper an b'ilin' water out o' doors, it cracked like a gun. Yes, sir, and a live coal would freeze solid in five minutes. Worse than that, your conversation actually froze before it could be heard."

Attended the Civic Improvement League

Local Representatives Made Double Use of Their Trip to Ottawa

The civic deputation composed of Mayor Duffus and Aldermen Dobbin, McIntyre and Stratton, returned this morning from Ottawa where they were lined up with the associated counties of Peterborough and Victoria in a request to the government for assistance in the rebuilding of the Pigeon Creek bridge.

The local representatives yesterday attended the Civic Improvement League meeting at which many Canadian municipalities had some of their solons present. Town planning, terms of aldermanic service, and many other questions were discussed affording a general knowledge of civic problems, which should serve the visitors in good stead in their future work.

FAMOUS AIR WOMAN DIED LAST NOVEMBER

Expressed a Wish That Her Death Should Not be Announced.

LONDON, Jan. 21. — Miss Trehawke Davis, the famous air-woman, died last November at the age of 33. She expressed the wish that her death should not be announced. It became public through the sale at auction of a part of her property. Miss Davis inherited a fortune, including valuable jewelry, from her mother. She made between 30 and 40 successive wills bequeathing her possessions to various persons of prominence, destroying them all, and died intestate. Her friends say that each will directed that her death be kept secret and that she be cremated and her ashes scattered to the winds. These directions have been fulfilled.

NO SINGLE MEN NEED NOW APPLY

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—The young unmarried man who applies to Hon. G. Howard Ferguson next Spring for a place on the fire-ranging staff, will need to bring a medical certificate with him, showing that he has offered himself for military service and has been refused.

The Minister announced that a regulation had been passed providing that no single man who was fit and able to enlist would be employed as a fire ranger. It is estimated that the new order will mean that a good portion of the present staff will either have to get into uniform or find other employment. Among the woodsmen taken on in the North Country there is a considerable percentage of married men, but most of the young fellows from Older Ontario, many of them students, are not encumbered with family ties.

FUGITIVE GERMANS SET FREE IN MAINE

CALAIS, Maine, Jan. 21.—Four alleged German prisoners of war, who escaped from a detention camp at Amherst, N.S., and were detained here after crossing the border, were formally admitted to the United States to-day. A board of special inquiry, which gave them a hearing to determine their right to enter the country, decided they were able to fulfil the immigration requirements.

The men, who gave their names as Gustav Hartwig, W. Schroeder, Geo. Kleinworth and Hans Neu, said they planned to leave to-morrow for New York.

GUELPH PATRIOTIC FUND TOTALS NEARLY $90,000

The City's Giving will Average Over $5.50 Per Capita

BUELPH, Jan. 21.—After a three days' campaign, with the objective placed at $80,000, the Patriotic Fund is close to the $90,000 mark. At the noon luncheon yesterday it was officially announced that the sum subscribed exceeded $80,000, but since that time more returns have been handed in. If this amount is subscribed it will bring Guelph's givings to this fund to slightly over $5.50 per capita, which is considered a splendid showing. The amount given is much in excess of anticipations.

INJUNCTION SHUTS OFF GAS FROM BRANTFORD

Mayor Fears the Supply From Tilbury will be Inadequate.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 21.—Announcement was made that the United Gas and Fuel Co. had obtained an injunction restraining the Dominion Natural Gas Co. from diverting gas from the Selkirk field to Brantford during the winter months. Mr. Curtiss, manager of the local gas company stated that the injunction would not affect the city, as Selkirk gas was not being burned here, the supply coming from Tilbury alone. Mayor Bowlby states that the city is using Selkirk gas as well as Tilbury, which alone is not sufficient for the city, and the injunction will mean that hundreds of men may be thrown out of employment. What action will be taken or what will result is anxiously awaited by citizens.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 3—EYE TESTING APPLIANCES

TO MANY people the mention of the word "instrument" in connection with eye-testing, suggests some sort of an operation. The natural dread of anything of this nature often deters people from coming to the eye specialist for an eye test. This feeling is entirely wrong, however, as the oculists' instruments are used to test the eye-sight, not the eye itself. They are so nicely adjusted that with them the specialist is able to measure your strength of vision exactly, and it is only necessary to to look at a given point, to answer the purpose of the eye specialist. In cases where a weakness requires a direct examination, one special instrument enables the specialist to see the eye, brightly illuminated, but, here also it involves nothing more than looking into the instrument. The value of an optical parlor so fully equipped and modern as that of Mr. Fowler, is inestimable to his patrons.

PILL UP THE RANKS OF THE 93RD BATTALION.

Fill up the ranks of the 93rd,
You boys and men of Peterborough;
Why do you walk around the streets,
When there is a place awaiting you.
Are you afraid or what is wrong,
Don't you hear the bugle calling;
Be a man or a hero and come and enlist,
Not wait till your country is beaten.

Come lads see how your brothers are fighting,
Fighting for country and right;
List to the bugle calling,
Come brothers, come and fight.

Come lads see how your brothers are fighting,
Why are you not like them;
Come and enlist and be a man
And not be a coward yourself,
Come list to the bugle calling,
Calling for country and right;
Fill up the ranks of the 93rd,
Come and let's fight, fight, fight.

Hark 'tis the bugle calling,
Why do you delay;
Come while the uniform's waiting,
Waiting for you and for me.
Come let's be men not be cowards,
Fight for your country and King;
Fill up the ranks of the 93rd,
And go fight Kaiser Bill.

You who have lived in Canada,
The country of freedom and right;
Would you let it be taken,
When you could fight, fight, fight:
Come lads give up yourself to the Government—
They will look after you there,
Fill up the ranks of the 93rd,
And march along with them there.

Hear how Britain is calling,
See Little Belgium is gone,
Why will you let the Kaiser rule
Over all the land.
Come lads, there is room for you all there,
Room for to fight and win;
Come and join the colours,
And form a glorious ring.

See he is slaughtering the women and children,
As well as the men;
Think of yourself as you stand lads,
Safe on a glorious land.
Why will you stand there firmly,
When Britain is calling you there;
Come lads, let's be heroes or die on the glorious land.
Don't let the Kaiser boss you when you could be brave men.

Come lads 'tis to glory we steer,
To add something more to this wonderful year;
To Britain we steer you, not press you like slaves,
For who is so free as the sons of the waves.
Hearts of Britain are our ships' hearts,
Of Britain are our men;
We always are steady, ready, boys, steady,
We'll fight and we'll conquer Germany again.

MARJORIE REED.

A famous singer, when crossing the Atlantic, once got into conversation with a ship's barber.

"I 'opes," said the barber, "that we shall 'ave the pleasure of 'earing you at the concert to-night?" .....

"No," replied the singer. "I've just finished a long and exhausting season, and within a few days I am to open in London. I have decided not to do anything on the voyage."

"It's the same way with me," said the barber, sympathetically. "When I'm ashore I never looks at a razor."

AMERICAN AIRMEN ARE IN DEMAND

French to Enroll a Score of Them in a Special Fighting Squad.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—In the name of France I wish to express the national gratitude and appreciation of your efforts and inform you that steps will be taken immediately to enroll all American aviators here—some twenty altogether—in one French-American squadron." This was the statement made yesterday afternoon by M. Besnard, Aviation State Secretary, to the American airmen. Thaw, Prince, and Cowdin, and Prince's brother and Robert Soubiran of New York, would-be aviators. The Americans were delighted at their reception of aviation headquarters.

M. Besnard further declared that he would order every encouragement given to American flyers, and especially to learners, at the Pau Aviation School.

The meeting was arranged by Eugene Boggiano, a fellow-passenger of the airmen on the Rochambeau, after a trip to America as special correspondent of the Petit Journal. Through his agency they were also presented to M. Berthelot, chief of the permanent staff at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and to former Foreign Minister Pichon, director of the Petit Journal, who thanked them in the name of the French press.

The aviators look exceedingly fit after their furlough and say they had "a splendid time."

LOOK AT A CHILD'S TONGUE WHEN CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Take No Chance! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mothers can rest easily after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you can have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Fear and hate bring evil thoughts to the mind.

The light within us is the perfect light. We seldom credit others with higher motives than we possess.

SEPARATE PEACE WITH BELGIUM

Frankfurter Zeitung Openly Proposes the Belgians Will Look With Favour on the Same

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—The Frankfurter Zeitung openly proposes that Germany negotiate a separate peace with Belgium and adds that the Belgians probably will look with favour upon a peace offering.

"At present Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg considers Belgium only an article of exchange for territory seized by the Allies," said the Zeitung. "Sensible Belgians ought to be warned not to wait too long or Belgium will be regarded by Germany as too good a prize to be relinquished."

Potato Market Inclines To Higher Prices

British Columbia Potatoes Are Offered on the Ontario Market--Tea Shows an Upward Tendency

THIS WEEK'S MARKET

The potato crop was firm last week, but it is firmer again this week. There has been a 10c advance in N.B. Delawares, which, up to last week, had advanced 5c or more from the week before that. British Columbia potatoes are also much firmer. Moreover, if it had not been for the B. C. potatoes, which certainly relieved the tightness occasioned by the dearth of Ontarios and Delawares, prices would have been considerably higher before this. However, the Western crop came along and helped the consumer to some extent. Nevertheless, it could not keep down the rising market and the big demand, coupled with the fact of the cold weather, is, of course, an obstacle to shipping. Canadian Groces pointed out way back in November that we should probably see $3 potatoes within the next couple of months. We mention this to show that now and then we are among the prophets!

Advance in Tea.

This week reports from the London market show there has been an advance of 1c in tea. This is the fifth or sixth week in which an advance of either 1c or 2c has followed and tea men in Canada are talking as if they expect higher prices yet during 1916 than in 1915. This looks at first pretty nearly impossible, but we are rapidly getting now to the high spot touched last year and there seems to be less cause for hope. It is said—although there can be no absolute information—that the crop in India this year is something like 50,000,000 lbs. ahead of last year. Exports so far have totaled 15,000,000 lbs. ahead of last year; what has become therefore of the other 35,000,000 lbs. The only answer is that there are not freights enough to bring it over. It is probably lying around Calcutta still. This freight question which is hitting many lines is certainly playing havoc with the tea market. Not only does dearth of freight mean that it will be difficult to get teas out from the East, but it also means that whatever teas do get out are considerably longer in the getting. Whereas it took three weeks before the war to get to London, it now takes six or seven. Transhipment from London to Canada is just as bad. Whereas it took five or six before the war, it is taking eight, nine or ten weeks. Moreover, Russia is a very heavy buyer of tea at present and there is coupled with this fact that Great Britain had a stupendous consumption of tea last year—reports of which do not include tea sent to the trenches—due no doubt to partial prohibition of liquor.

The Egg Market.

We recorded in our summary last week, that new-laid eggs were on the decline. The excessively cold snap, however, which developed towards the end of the last week and beginning of this week has revolutionized the market again and there is a firmness which was certainly absent on the occasion of our last writing. While new-laids are not higher in price than quoted last week, they are considerably firmer and far fewer are coming.

The tremendous amount of labor devoted to munitions has been a big thing for this country, but it has affected a number of lines which are not directly interested. For instance, sal soda was coating the wholesaler about three or four months ago 60 per cent. of what it is costing him now. This is a very large increase. It is reported that molasses is also being used for munition purposes and that the heavy increases we have recorded from time to time in this line are partially the results of this purpose. Apparently there are more ways of killing a cat than by poisoning him and one might mention molasses for instance!

MONTENEGRO'S "SURRENDER" NEVER TOOK PLACE—KING WITH HIS ARMY

No Peace Negotiations Were Ever Begun by King Nicholas ---Remains at the Head of His Troops, Determined to Fight to the Last,

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Reports emanating from Berlin that Montenegro had surrendered and from Cettinje, after its occupation by the Austrians, that King Nicholas had issued a proclamation to that effect, turn out to be incorrect. It is now officially stated from Montenegrin, British and French sources that the Montenegrin army never surrendered, that no peace negotiations were begun and that the King remains with his army.

Official confirmation of the report that King Nicholas of Montenegro and his sons would remain at the head of their troops, determined to fight to the last, was received here yesterday by Sir John Roper Parkington, Consul General in London for Montenegro. Queen Hilena, with two of her daughters, the despatch added, have reached Italy on their way to France.

The official French statement was received here Thursday by wireless from Paris. It says the Montenegrin army never capitulated and, in fact, that no formal negotiations for peace were entered upon. King Nicholas was said to be at Podgoritza with his troops.

A further despatch from San Giovanni di Medua, Albania, received by way of Rome, said that the Montenegrin government had been installed at Scutari.

WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF KUT-EL-AMARA.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The British relief force in Mesopotamia has pushed forward to within seven miles of Kut-el-Amara, with whose beleaguered garrison it is seeking to form a junction, according to a statement in the House of Commons Thursday by Mr. J. Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for India.

Reports received here say General Aylmer's force was in close touch on Wednesday with the Turkish position at Essin, and the belief is growing that the troops under General Townsend, who have been defending Kut-el-Amara against greatly superior forces, soon will be relieved. The latest reports from General Townsend say there have been no recent attacks by the Turks at Kut-el-Amara.

The House of Commons also was informed that Lieutenant- General Sir Percy Lake on Wednesday took over supreme command of the Mesopotamia tapopd, succeeding General Sir John Nixon, who was relieved because of ill health.

S. S. Workers of This District Met At Mark Street Church

A splendid gathering of those interested in Sunday School work was held on Thursday at the Mark Street Church. Those in attendance represented the various Sunday Schools in the Peterborough District of the Methodist Church, Rev. Mr. Greatrix of St. James' Church is the chairman of the district, and Rev. W. T. Wickett of Lakefield is Secretary.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercises conducted by the Rev. R. A. Whattam, pastor of the Mark Street Methodist Church. This occupied the first half hour of the meeting.

Rev. W. T. Wickett of Lakefield delivered an excellent address on Sunday School work, generally.

The address of the Rev. C. W. Barrett on "The Sunday School and Missions" was one very able and interesting paper. It was well thought out and was prepared in such a manner that every point was perfectly clear to his hearers.

Miss Mary Collins, superintendent of the primary department of St. James' Church, dealt with what is generally considered the most difficult part of Sunday School work, namely the Primary Department.

The evening meeting was opened by a song service conducted by the Rev. W. T. Wickett, after which the chair was taken by Rev. R. A. Whattam who delivered a short address on his experience with Sunday School and Bible Class work.

Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, delivered a splendid address. His subject was "Home Essentials." The speaker divided this into two divisions, dealing first with parental authority, dealing with the bringing up of the children at home, and parental provision, dealing with the entertaining of the child. He referred as essentials in this division, the necessity for athletics, camping, and all kinds of out door exercises.

The closing address was delivered by the Rev. B. Greatrix, chairman of the district. He thanked the members for their attention during the meeting and hoped for a larger attendance at their next convention.

The ladies of Mark Street Church entertained those in attendance to tea.

When a young woman marries a man with less education than herself, she always remembers that. She forgets that he in contact with the world, is constantly advancing, while she, at home, does not keep up with his advance. It takes a woman of a superior mind to accommodate her mental attitude to this state of facts. If the man has the best intellect and she dwells in the past trouble is sure to ensue. He realizes his present superiority; she only remembers herself, as she was

Farmer Beggared By Girl's Fake Love

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Miss Lodavine Miller and her brother, J. Marion Miller, a lawyer, were found guilty of operating a confidence game. The crime is punishable by imprisonment from one to 10 years. Both were granted their liberty on bonds, pending the outcome of arguments for a new trial set on Feb. 11.

The Millers were charged with swindling Thomas T. Foulkes, formerly a farmer of Danbury, Ia., out of $11,312 and two farms, valued at $40,000. It was alleged that Foulkes gradually transferred his property to Miss Miller, under promise of marriage, until he had nothing left and had to go to work as a farm hand.

This was the second trial of the case. The Millers were convicted four years ago, but appealed and were granted new trials.

For Skins Affected By Winds and Weather

This is the season of the year when she who would have a spotless, lily-white, satiny complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the winter girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the despoiling effects of piercing winds and biting cold temperatures. The wax literally absorbs the chapped, reddened or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and gleamingly beautiful. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, applied slightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

She who coddles herself all day in an overheated house and finds her skin flushed and flabby as a consequence, can quickly freshen up for an evening by just bathing her face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. She will find this most refreshing. It smoothes out wrinkles and draws in the empty tissue.

THE AGONIES OF NEURALGIA

A Nerve Trouble, Always Due to Weak, Watery Blood

Only those who have been attacked with neuralgia can form the faintest idea of what its victims suffer. A tingling of the tender skin, a sharp sudden stab from some angry nerve, then piercing paroxysms of pain that is neuralgia. The cause of the trouble is disordered nerves, due to weak, watery blood. The cure is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which make new, rich, red blood, and thus sooth and strengthen the disordered nerves and cure neuralgia. Mr. Louis Martin, Mildmay, Ont., says: "I am writing to let you know the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me. Two years ago I was a physical wreck. My nerves were all unstrung and I suffered tortures from neuralgia, in the head and throughout the nervous system generally. I was almost unfit for work, and only managed to get along with the greatest difficulty. I doctored for about five months and in this time took over forty dollars worth of medicine without any benefit. More, I was actually growing worse, and finally had to take to my bed. My nerves got so bad that I could not turn over in bed without help and the pain was something awful. As I am a farmer you can easily see that necessary work was being neglected, so I sent for a brother who was in Alberta, to come and take charge of the work. When my brother arrived he at once urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, telling me of some cures that had come under his observation. I got half a dozen boxes, and before they were all gone there was no doubt they were helping me. Altogether I used nine boxes of the Pills and by that time I was a well man, and it is impossible to say how thankful I was for my release from pain."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

Freddy smiled at the involuntary humor of the head worker's phrase.

"Not with the foot," Ginbouliac hastened to add, "like that unfortunate Pagliatela. Bad manners we condone here, but dishonesty must be treated—must be treated, ah!"—

"Summarily," Mary helped out.

Ginbouliac smiled his thanks, with a lavishing show of regular, white teeth.

"Just so," he murmured. "My English is a little difficult at times, but with Miss Oakley to help me, I become like—how shall I say it—like another Shekspeer-a!"

At the compliment a faint shade of pink came over Mary's pale features, not unnoticed by Freddy, whose neutral attitude at the time might well have been translated by a low whistle. For the rest of the evening he watched Miss Oakley and the head worker closely, with a net result of six hand clasps and six resulting blushes from Mary, intermingled with a multitude of dazzling smiles from Ginbouliac.

"Ginbouliac's a pretty good sort," he said at length—"that is, for a dago."

"A dago!" Mary exclaimed. "Freddy Furnival, I beg of you"—

"That's all right," Freddy explained. "He is a dago, isn't he? That's the popular name for an Italian, just as Yank is for a down easter. I'm a Yank, you know, and you can call me one if you want to."

"I might be justified in calling you any number of things," Mary rejoined coldly, "except a gentleman!"

This time the low whistle grew audible, and Mary stopped short.

"I can go the rest of the way alone," she said.

"I'll take you to the subway station," Freddy murmured lowly.

"Thank you, no, Mr. Furnival," Mary replied.

As she passed on Freddy raised his hat with as good a flourish and bow as Ginbouliac himself might have made. He watched her till she disappeared down the subway stairs, and once again his lips shaped themselves to a whistle as he strode rapidly away.

IV.

On a Wednesday morning three weeks later John Oakley walked into the outer office of Furnival's suit, which he found entirely unguarded by office boy or stenographer, and passed without hindrance to Freddy's room. As he entered the young lawyer hastily thrust something into his waistcoat pocket and rose to greet his friend with rather forced cordiality.

"Congratulations, old chap!" Freddy cried. "I heard it this morning."

"It isn't generally known yet," said Oakley.

"Good news travels fast, you know," Freddy rejoined. "I had the pleasure of meeting Ginbouliac some weeks ago. He is a splendid fellow!"

"Indeed he is," Oakley agreed. "His people are great shakes in Italy. His father's a privy councilor."

"You don't say!" Freddy commented a trifle incredulous.

"He's quite an athlete, too," Oakley went on admiringly.

"So Taylor was telling me," Freddy broke in. "He kicked Taylor down Mott street for a block and a half."

"There surely must have been some provocation."

"There was. Taylor smoked six of his cigars."

"Six cigars oughtn't to disturb him like that," said Oakley. "He's the soul of generosity. Why, the ring he gave Mary is absolutely priceless. It's an heirloom in his family—a large ruby set with four brilliants. Perfectly stunning thing—you ought to see it!"

"I have seen it."

"What?" Oakley cried. "Impossible! He only gave it to Mary yesterday afternoon."

"As a matter of fact," Freddy went on calmly, "I believe I have it in my waistcoat pocket right now."

"What on earth are you talking about?"

For answer Freddy took the ring from his waistcoat pocket and tossed it upon the desk blotter.

"Large ruby and four diamonds," he said, "according to plans and specifications."

Oakley lay back in his chair and gasped like a landed trout.

"Perhaps," he said at length, "you'll be good enough to explain this—this"—

"By all means," Freddy replied. "This morning when I came in I found Taylor tossing a small object in the air and catching it again with such rapidity that it looked like a lot of colored balls issuing from a Roman candle. As soon as he saw me he pocketed it. My curiosity being aroused, I proceeded to knuckle him."

"Knuckle him?"

"Precisely," Freddy went on. "A schoolboy trick. Hurts like thunder. Old Torquemada knew his business, Oakley, for it wasn't five minutes before I had it out of my worthy young friend, and there you see it."

"How did Taylor get hold of it?" asked Oakley.

"More knuckling made him tall," said Freddy. "He confessed that last night he attended the Benvenuto Cellini circle, having made his peace with Ginbouliac. Of course he noticed Mary wearing the ring, and when she went into the anteroom to wash her hands and returned without it he concluded that she must have left it on the lavatory. That's precisely what she had done, as he found out immediately—and there you are. Lucky I came in just when I did."

"And where is Taylor now?"

"I've fired him," said Freddy. "I've meant to do it every day for the past three weeks, but I've always forgotten about it until today."

"Why on earth didn't you have him arrested?"

"What's the use?" Freddy yawned. "We have the ring, and now let us go and take it back to Mary."

IV.

The Oakleys dwelt in an English basement residence on West End avenue. One glance at the white leaded fanlight of the colonial front door and the curtained elegance of the upper windows established the Oakley respectability as firmly as did the family Bible and the "Social Register" beneath the big mahogany table in the library. It was to this chamber that Freddy had been ushered by Oakley on their arrival.

"Light up while I go and find Mary," he said, and started for the door.

Hardly had he reached it, however, when from the lower floor came a cry, half of rage, half of hysteria, which at once halted Oakley and brought Freddy to his feet.

"Now, what in the world is that?" Oakley ejaculated.

Another wail arose, and then followed the words:

"You lost out, you lost out."

"Ginbouliac!" Freddy whispered. "He's got 'em bad!"

"Ah, no, no, no, no!" re-echoed through the house.

"By George, he like Dane and Bernhardt simply skinned to death!" Freddy chuckled.

"Give me the ring, Freddy," Oakley said. "I think I'll go downstairs and kick him out."

Mingled with Mary's soothing contralto and Ginbouliac's shrill hysteria came an expostulatory growl.

"Confound it, sir, you're behaving like a fool!" it said.

"The governor!" Oakley exclaimed. "When I was a kid he always said 'Confound it, sir,' just before he whaled the life out of me. Exertion's bad for him, too. I guess I'll go down."

He took the stairs four at a jump, while Freddy went back to the library and closed the door behind him. For Marriage Not a Profession.

Marriage cannot be classed with anything but itself. It is marriage and nothing else—a wonderful mixture of experiences and duties on many different planes. So far as its spiritual demands go, it may ask of a woman, as of a man, all she has in her, or it may not. So far as its material demands go, it may require everything or nothing. It may of necessity fill her life or leave it empty. To call it a profession is to blur its meaning, for it is much more than this and much less.—Elizabeth Woodbridge in Atlantic Monthly.

Darnley, P. E. I.—"When my little girl was three days old a fine rash came out all over her head and face. At first I thought it was baby rash but after a week or two I found that it was very itching and she could not sleep. She got getting very fretful and cross and it made her sick. It itched and burned and it made nearly all her hair come out.

"By the time she was four months old the eruption was all over her face, head and neck. I then decided to send for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. By the time the box of Cuticura Ointment and two cakes of Cuticura Soap were gone there was not a sign of eczema and she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Philip Hands, May 12, 1914.

FILLING MEN'S PLACES

Here is a sample of the announcement we now see in London from day to day:

"In connection with the employment of women tram conductors, the London County Council proposes to pay them the same wages as men, viz., five shillings a day and a war bonus of three shillings a week. They will wear a uniform. Owing to the scarcity of men, women porter are to be employed at the L. C. C. stores department at wages from fifteen shillings to twenty shillings a week. No woman of twenty-one years of age and more is to receive less than the maximum, and in all other respects the conditions of service are to be the same as the male porters."

This is just one indication of what is going on over nearly the whole of the country. Even the Londoner, most conservative of Englishmen, is getting used to the way women are replacing men, and in some other cities the new workers are already taken as a matter of course. The war transformation of London has had no more interesting phase than this substitution of women for men as servants of the public. On the railways we have long seen the female cleaners, who take the place of porters in sweeping out railway carriages at the station and cleaning the carriage windows. Then there are the girl ticket-collectors—dainty in their uniforms, quick in their work, and touched by a courtesy which is refreshing.

Go down on to the Underground and you will find that in most cases it is not men, but girls, who serve you with tickets in the booking office. Who among us has not found them as speedy and as intelligent as the men they have replaced? At the bookstalls the daily papers are now to a great extent dispensed by girls instead of youths. They will then do it, too. In the business offices of the city many of the lifts which used to be worked by men are now operated by women. I am sure we all feel just as safe, or safer, under their care. —"Exchange."

We must not let these Belgian Children Starve

Their fathers are with King Albert in the trenches—or dead. Their mothers, destitute and probably homeless, are striving hard but helplessly to save these children on whom Belgium's future depends.

Nearly 2,000,000 old men, women and children in Belgium are absolutely dependent on help from Britain and America. Unless we feed them, hundreds of thousands must starve to death! The has saved them so far. Administered by a wonderfully efficient neutral Commission, it has for more than a year now provided food for nearly all the Seven Million Belgians still in the country. Those who have money pay for it, but there is a steadily growing number who must be fed free.

For this at least $2,500,000 is needed monthly in contributions. Great Britain, burdened as she is, is giving all she can. The United States has responded generously, and her business men are running the Commission as public relief was never handled before. Are we in Canada, prosperous and protected from the horrors of invasion, to enjoy the plenty that has blessed us while our heroic Allies starve?

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

HOME LOVE THE BEST.

I thing home love is the best. The love that you are born to is the sweetest that you will ever have on earth. You, who are so anxious to escape from the home nest, pause a moment and remember that this is so. It is right that the hour should come when you in your time should become a wife and mother and give the best love to others, but that will be just it. Nobody, not a lover, not a husband, will ever be so tender or so true as your father and mother. Never again after strangers have broken the beautiful bond will there be anything so sweet as the little circle of mother, father and children where you were cherished, protected, praised and kept from harm. You may not know it now, but you will know it some day. Whomsoever you marry, true and good though he may be, will, after the love days are over and the honeymoon has waned, give you only what you deserve of love or sympathy, and usually much less, never more.

Selfish people are unhappy and make themselves uncomfortable. They take no comfort in seeing others happy and envy those who may be better off than themselves in any respect; they think unkindly of them and, if they can, rob them of their pleasures. Discord and dissension are often the results of the snap and snarl of selfishness. Upon the other hand gladness may be diffused by a gentle word, a willing service gained by a kindly request and a soft answer turneth away wrath. There is no sense in scolding. It is more than a weakness or folly; it is a sin, doing much evil to the scolder and the scolded. It is the opening of the draft to internal and infernal fires that ought to be quenched. It scorches and inflames other's hearts and minds that should be kept from evil. Scolding never does good. Affability toward others cultivates amiability in the actor. The courtesies practiced in social life are just as charming in the home circle. "Be courteous."

Child of sorrows, knowest thou not that beyond the clouds there is always a light, and that all night long the stars are in the sky. The bright green heart of spring may be, is beneath the deepest snow. Look up, the tweet tomorrow may cause a forgetting of the disappointments of today. The sun follows rain and the seas ebb away to rise again. Remember that only the highest mountains rise above the clouds and that around the heaviest cross is hung the prize—the brightest crown.

The average business man is too busy and gets very careless in regard to his duty to his family. It seems to us if he loved his family as much as himself it would not be so hard to remember that he owes them. What wife is there that knows what neglect means but would rather by far have plainer clothes, plainer food, plainer furniture and more love from her husband, love that means kindness at all times, remembering that the sweetest moments of a woman's life is when a husband is kind and thoughtful for her comfort? A man that loves his wife does not have to be reminded of little acts of kindness he can give so many times a day. If a man does not love his wife he ought to be as thoughtful and as courteous to her as to her neighbor, anyway.

As a soul in heaven may look back on earth, and smile at its past sorrows, so even here, it may rise to a sphere where it may look down on the storm that once threatened to overwhelm it.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

La Grippe.—For the past few weeks there has been as widespread an epidemic of la grippe as this country has ever known. In Chicago alone during the last week of school before the holidays there were detained at home over 80,000 school children, which is almost 30 per cent. of the pupils. The principal of one school told me that in one room where there was a normal attendance of 42 pupils, 21 were at home sick. During that same week over 700 of the teachers were also sick with the same malady. At the present time the local newspaper reports say that nearly 20 per cent. of the teachers are unable to report for duty.

The change from la grippe to pneumonia is unusually frequent and many deaths from that trouble are reported. The attacks have come on very suddenly. In one case, a rugged looking boy was playing with others in the snow, feeling fine. An hour later he was in bed and two hours later his temperature was 104 degrees. One of his playmates was stricken an hour later and in less than two hours had a temperature of 102 degrees. High temperature and a hard dry cough seemed to be an almost universal symptom.

In using home medicines one is usually safe in the milder attacks, but when the temperature goes up quickly it is not only unwise but extremely unsafe to depend wholly upon them. The family physician should be called at once. In the meantime you can do much and should not idly wait until the doctor comes. It's quite likely that he is already engaged with other cases and cannot respond at once.

In most cases you can readily tell from the appearance of the patient that there is high fever. There is dryness of the skin, the palms of the hands are hot and dry, the face is flushed, the head aches and there is a case of threatened pneumonia, an anxious frightened look in the eyes. Careful questioning will as a rule show that constipation is present and the bowels have not moved that day.

The first thing to be done is to remove the waste matter from the colon. While I do not recommend colon flushing as a regular method of moving the bowels, it is the very best kind of emergency treatment and should now be promptly used. After thoroughly washing out the colon by the use of about two quarts of warm water and a fountain syringe, put the patient in bed. Examine the feet and if they are cold, wrap them well in hot blankets and if necessary a hot fomentation of half an hour duration. You will probably find the pulse at about 120 or more in young people and children. A cold compress on the throat and chest will give relief and if the doctor does not or cannot come, sponge the entire body in warm vinegar until the fever goes down. In some cases when there appears to be a deep croup cough and there is distress in the lungs, the full directions for the treatment of pneumonia as given in Vol. 2 of the Home Health Club books should be vigorously applied.

The cell salts, Ferrum Phos. and Natrum Mur, should be given alternately every 15 minutes or half hour until the skin becomes moist. These simple remedies, you should be able to secure from any homeopathic physician. Tablet form is the best. There is no danger in their use and in the absence of the doctor they frequently save a life. If you have some of your herb remedies on hand, you will of course, know how to use them. A vigorous application of the Grandmother's Ointment around the throat, chest and under the arms will reduce the danger of pneumonia to the safety point. Don't forget to apply the directions given in your Home Health Club books and thus avoid danger.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework, and have a family of ten."

Choice Recipes

Holiday time is over with all its gayeties and fun, and the housekeeper is doing her best to settle down to everyday life once again. And the family! Well, they will not want any more fancy dishes for a while. Even our old friend the turkey has palled on them. So possibly some of the Basket Lady's recipes for plain, ordinary food will be welcomed by Madame Peterborough, always on the lookout for something new. You may have had some chicken or even turkey left, and if so nothing would please the children more than some of these sandwiches to take to school:

Instead of the usual sandwich take small round rolls, cut piece from top for a lid, pull out the crumbs and fill the cavity with chicken chopped fine, well seasoned and moistened with a little cream or mayonnaise, if preferred.

Perhaps you didn't use quite as many cranberries as you expected and have a few left. If so, why not make some cranberry and raisin jam?

One pound cranberries, one pound seeded raisins (one package), one cup sugar, half teaspoon salt. Wash the cranberries, put on with one cup of boiling water, cover and place on quick fire; boil five minutes. Remove the cover and mash the berries and sugar and the raisins that have been washed, and put through food chopper. Simmer slowly one hour, or until thick, stirring quite often. The raisins not only add to the food value, but save one cup sugar.

For a luncheon dish nothing could be nicer than baked stuffed potatoes. Wash and scrub large potatoes and rub each with a litle lard, then bake till they are tender. Cut each potato in two lengthwise, scoop out the inside into a warm bowl, and when all have been treated in this way season with half a teaspoon of salt, a tablespoon of butter and a tablespoonful of cream; mash and beat well, then fill the potato shells with them, heaping up well in the centres. Stand the potatoes skin side down in a baking pan and brown in a hot oven.

Celery can be purchased now. Some Canadian celery is still to be had, but the California celery is very good, and celery roast might appeal to the family: Toast neat slices of bread, butter and trim the crusts from them. Drain, dry and broil small oysters till their edges begin to curl, then spread them over the toast. Sprinkle with salt and cover thickly with finely chopped celery. Pour a cup of hot cream sauce over the dish and place in the oven for a few moments. Serve very hot.

Do you like dates? If you do date muffins will please you. Take two cups flour, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup melted butter, one half cup milk, one cup of stoned and chopped dates, two eggs. Break the eggs into muffins without beating them. Beat the muffin mixtures hard.

Cauliflowers, too, are to be had now, and with one cauliflower and some cheese a delicious dish can be made.

Materials. — Head of cauliflower; vinegar, one tablespoonful; grated cheese, one-third pound; salt, one tablespoonful.

Utensils.—Stewpan, tablespoon.

Directions—Cut head of cauliflower in six large pieces. Soak half hour in one quart water containing one tablespoonful vinegar add one tablespoonful salt. Boil for half hour in salted water. Drain water and add cheese. Serve hot.

And the pudding! We mustn't forget the pudding. This marshmallow and cocoa pudding is good: Put two dozen marshmallows—stale or fresh—in bottom of buttered baking dish. Make rich cocoa, as for breakfast and thicken with cornstarch paste. Pour this over marshmallows and bake one-half hour. Cover with meringue made with two egg whites and two tablespoons powdered sugar and brown. Serve cold. The marshmallows give this simple pudding a delicate taste.

HOW TO AVOID SNEEZING

By Woods Hutchison, M. D.

Remember you are not doing yourself the slightest harm in the world by "holding in" a sneeze. The only effect of a grip sneeze is more sneezes in the sneezer and more sneezers among the sneezed at.

A sneeze has some small degree of utility when it is caused mechanically by dust, or smoke, or irritating fumes, in the way of dislodging the intruders and setting up a protective flow of mucus.

But a sneeze during the grip, or for the matter of that, in any ordinary so-called "common cold" has no such value, because the irritant that causes it, the wily grip germ and his toxins, are already underneath the membranes and all through the blood.

In fact a sneeze, unless it be clearly due to a whiff of dust, or smoke, or pungent odor, is not a sign that you are catching cold, but that you have already caught it, usually twenty-four to forth-eight hours before, and that it is beginning to break out on you.

Mental Vagaries.

The indignant rejoined will rise at once to a score of lips, "I know better!—haven't I sat in a draft and sneezed and come down with a cold at once many a time!" But this is simply a familiar fallacy of logic technically known as Post hoc, propter hoc—whatever follows a thing is caused by it.

For every time that they have sat in a draft and sneezed and caught cold they have at last five and probably ten times sat in a draft, been sure that they were going to "catch their death of cold," and nothing whatever has come of it. The one bad coincidence they remembered for good and sufficient reasons—the nine harmless ones they forgot.

If anyone is loaded with infection to the bursting point and just ready to explode, the irritation and momentary depression of a draft or a chill may participate the explosion a few hours or half a day earlier than it would otherwise have occurred.

This is the only relation which drafts, chills and wet feet bear to the grip! If the "drafted" person be not loaded to the bursting point with infection the draft will do him no harm whatever, but on the contrary much good.

What to Do.

But the avoidance of sneezing and sneezers can be carried out in a more effective and successful way yet by intelligent co-operation, and that is by mutually agreeing to count an attack of the grip as an immediate and automatic "King's Ex" (from all public duties and functions which can possibly be transferred to some one else.

Children with a cold should invariably be kept at home from school, employes with a cold should promptly be granted leave of absence with pay from factory, from office, shop or store, for two, three, five days, save here this is physically or executively impossible.

This may sound impracticable, almost absurd, but it is actually adopted and in operation as a fixed policy not only in intelligently conducted schools but also in many up-to-date business establishments, stores and factories.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Geo. Huffman, Willington, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and can recommend them as a wonderful medicine for children. I am the mother of five and have used no other medicine for any of them." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing of the Tablets. That is why once a mother has used them for her little ones she would use nothing else. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Eggs, if cracked, can be safely boiled in a teaspoonful of vinegar is added to the water. When eggs are scarce one teaspoonful of vinegar is a good substitute in cake baking, and will make a cake light in which dripping has been used instead of butter.

Chapped hands during the winter are often the lot of the girl or woman who has to spend a portion of her time over the sink. Keep a little jar of oatmeal handy, and after washing and drying the hands rub the oatmeal well into the skin, and dust off. This dries and protects the skin.

WONDERFUL FISHES

How a Teuton Was Gulled by a Belgian Sentry

A civilian guard was on duty in the Place Poelat, in Brussels, not far from a stolid Mecklenburger sentry. The siege of Antwerp was then in progress and the Germans had taken all sorts of precautions to prevent any communications between the two principal Belgian cities. After examining the Mecklenburger out of the corner of his eye, the guard thought he saw a favorable opportunity to practise his art. Twirling his moustache, he gradually edged closer to the Teuton and, before long, the two were conversing quite amicably.

Assuming the most mysterious air, the Belgian suddenly whispered to his new acquaintance: "If you give me your word of honor you won't repeat what I say, I am ready to tell you a great secret?"

The Mecklenburger swore eagerly he would remain as silent as the grave.

"Right! Your Marshal von der Goltz has confiscated all the homing pigeons to prevent news getting into Antwerp, but all the time the people are laughing at him up their sleeve. You don't require a pigeon to take a message to Atawerp. In the Aquarium of the Avenue Louise, there are tanks full of live fish. All you need do is to fasten your message to the tail of them and let it loose in the Senne. It reaches Antwerp in no time through the Scheldt."

Is is necessary to say that the Mecklenburger lost as little time as possible in imparting such valuable information to his superiors? Within two minutes, he came out of the office again, limping painfully, much to the delight of his informant who was watching the result of his revelation from the street corner.

A "KIDDIE" THAT'S ALL.

(In Wetteren Hospital, Flanders, the writer says a little peasant girl dying from the bayonet wounds in her back which the German soldiers had given her).

Calm blew only a brother,
A lad who was fair and strong.
His murder was careless and honest,
A heated and sudden wrong.

And Judas was kindly and pleasant,
For he ensnared an invincible man.
But you—you have spitted the children,
As they toddled and stumbled and ran.

She saw the sun on your helmets,
The sparkle of glancing light,
She saw your bayonets flashing,
And she laughed at your Prussian might.

Then you gave her death for her laughter.
As you looked on her mischievous face.
You hated the tiny peasant
With the hate of your rapacious race.

Something impedes your advancing,
A dragging has come on your hosts.
And Paris grows dim now, and dimmer,
Through the blur of your raucous boasts.

The little peasant has tripped you,
She hangs to your bloody stride.
And the dimpled hands are fastened
Where they fumbled before she died.

ONE GERMAN SEES

Harden, the Socialist Editor Punctures Some Big Bubbles

The irrepressible Maximilian Harden, who occupies the same position in Germany as did once the late Count Leo Tolstoi in Russia, has once more been guilty of letting the official cat out of the bag. "I do not like to be considered responsible for the illusion of the common herd here who are being led to believe that the war approaches its end when the German army enters Constantinople," he says, and goes on to prove why this illusion is dangerous.

"Learn to understand," he writes, "that the enemy believes in victory. We are told now of the downfall of a Minister, now again of an entire Cabinet. It must, however, always be remembered that this Minister of this Cabinet did not fall because they were too warlike, but because they were not warlike enough. In the place of Sir Edward Grey the English chauvinists want Lord Lansdowne or better still, Lord Curzon. Sir Edward Grey is loyal and competent, but he is considered too soft-hearted. We have seen the arrival of the crew of Curzon, Lloyd George, Bonar Law and Chamberlain. There is no rift in the alliance of our enemies and if there occasionally be a small disagreement it is very quickly remedied."

RUSSIA'S GOLD CURRENCY

Cheque System Unknown—People Distrust Banks

The largest hoard of gold in the world is that held in the vaults of the Russian State bank, amounting now to about $850,000,000. Ordinarily a visitor may travel from one end of the Russian Empire to the other and not see enough gold coin to buy a pair of shoes. Paper currency is used universally. The cheque system, as it prevails in the United States and England and Canada, is practically unknown in Russia. Although the larger cities have many fine banks, the provincial business man distrusts banks, and there are hundreds of thousands of prosperous Russians who have never had a banking account in their lives. Their working capital is represented by paper currency of big denomination which they carry in a leather bag suspended by a thong around their neck. In Russia the visitor may meet shaggy men whose dress and appearance suggest the artisan class, who are carrying with them constantly from five to ten thousands dollars in currency.

Meet the Minister.—An old farmer, who was complaining terribly of a bad harvest, met the minister of the parish, and, as usual, proceeded to hold forth on his favorite topic. "Ah, yes, Farmer Giles," said the worthy parson, "you have, I must confess, good cause to complain; but you must remember that Providence cares for all, and that even the birds of the air are provided for." "Ay," said the old man significantly "An' o' my corn."

For your guidance in estimating, we might say that The Examiner is printing and distributing to the Merchants, for use on Dollar Day, 36,000 blanks, and it is only necessary to estimate what number each purchaser thinks will be used on the great day. Should any store run short of blanks, The Examiner will print more, so that the number printed might reach as high as 50,000. The number of estimates put in the first 3 Day Campaign was in the neighbourhood of 16,000. With this information, an estimate can be made before coming to town. Of course as many estimates can be made as the purchaser has blanks, and they will get one with every Dollar purchase they make.

TOMMY AT "THE BASE" STILL FULL OF HUMOR

The Soldier Weary of Constant Fighting is Sent Back Beyond the Firing Line—Quips Are Still Carried on

Tommy down the line is a notable person. "Down the line" means to be stationed at the base of operations, or on the lines of communication, many miles from the firing line. The majority of down-the-line Tommies are those who have been up the line the longest, and who have been fortunate enough to escape being wounded, or if they have been wounded only very slightly. Tommy usually gets sent down to the base, because, in simple words, he is worn out with incessant fighting. His limbs have become shaky from continued exposure, and his senses of sight and hearing more or less impaired from the unending shock of explosions. Often his health is permanently affected by the hardships he has undergone, although a few weeks in hospital set him up for a bit. When well enough he "carries on" with the dull, necessary things behind the firing line.

At Cinder City

One of the oddest camps for these men is at Cinder City, which, not very long ago, was a swamp by the sea; but a company of transport workers buried the marsh in cinders, and now the inhabitants, who have all done their bit up the line, carry out such work as mines drainage, erection of new camps, and in many ways making things comfortable for new troops coming in.

Individually, Tommy down the line is a splendid chap. If you are unpatriotic enough to ask him if he is not "fed up" with the base, he will reply in the most non-committal manner.

Homemade Verse

Back in his camp he gets up concerts, and puts his whole heart in to his songs, whether he sings of his best girl or his country. Amusing, too, are the parodies that crop up at these concerts. One poetic corporal of the London Territorials would ask for nothing more than:

"Sing me to sleep where the bullets fall.
Let me forget the world and all;
Damp is my dug-out, cold are my feet.
Nothing but bully and biscuits to eat."

Another Tommy would regularly sing cheerfully of his "little wet home in the trench, where the rain storms continually drench." While old Jock, the comedian—who was discovered one night nearly choking Taffy, of the Welsh Fusiliers, during a friendly scramble, and when asked to desist, innocently replied that he was waiting for Taffy to speak—was a great favorite, possessing, at the member of the Canadian contingent used to put it, a natural figurehead that made you smile every time.

Sometimes, of course, he recovers his health sufficiently to be sent back to the trenches. But this is a rare occurrence. He is generally vaguely spoken of as "for some reason unfit for the firing line again."

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN

Frederick Palmer, Writes in Praise of the Coolness of the British Gunner

Mr. Frederick Palmer, the accredited American correspondent at the British Headquarters in France, describes some visits he has paid to British batteries. "Hereafter I shall not be surprised," he says, "to see a muzzle poking its head out of an oven, from under grandfather's chair, or under a farm wagon, or up a tree, or in a servant's garret. Think of the last place in the world for emplacing a gun and one may be there; think of the most likely place and one may be there. One field battery I have in mind, placed in an orchard. Which orchard of all the thousands along the British front, the German staff may guess if they choose. If German guns fired at all the orchards one by one they might locate it—and then, again, they might not. Besides, this is a peculiar sort of an orchard. It is a characteristic of gunners to be neat and to have an eye for the comeliness of things. These had a lawn and a garden, and tables and chairs. If you are familiar with the tidiness of a retired sailor, who regards his porch as a quarter-deck, and sallies forth to remove each descending autumn leaf from the grass, then you know how scrupulous they were about the litter. For weeks they had been in the same position, unseen by the German aeroplanes. They had their daily baths; they did their week's washing, taking care not to have it where it would be visible from the sky. Every day they received their London papers and letters from home. When they were needed to help in making war, all they had to do was to slip a shell in the breech, and send it with their compliments to the Boches. They were camping out at His Majesty's expense in the pleasant land of France in the joyous summertime; and on the roof of sods over their guns were pots of flowers undisturbed by the blasts from the gun muzzles."

NEW WAR WONDER

A strange indirect result of the war is the formation of a new lake near Ruedersdorf, a few miles from the German capital. The village of Ruedersdorf has large limestone quarries which have been worked for more than a hundred years and are very deep. In some places the quarries extend considerably below the sea level. When the war broke out work came to a standstill, as most of the employes were called to the colors. The pumps had to be stopped and the water from subterranean springs began to rise. A lake formed and it now covers a large part of the basin in which the quarries are situated. It is three-quarters of a mile wide and 130 feet deep, and still growing.

Khemlee Exchange Witticisms

"How deep is the mud with you?" shouted a German soldier in Flanders. His voice came from behind a pile of sandbags which divided the enemy and the British in a communication trench. "Up to our blooming knees," said an English corporal. "So? You are lucky fellows. We're up to our belts in it."

The Temperate Man Does Not Need Compulsory Abstinence

There are thousands of people in Ontario who do not sell beer, wine or spirits, but who use them in moderation.

There are thousands quite indifferent to these beverages so far as they themselves are concerned, but who do not think it wise, expedient, or right in principle to interfere by law with the privilege of other people to use them.

There are other thousands who believe that some reform may be necessary, but who do not believe that this reform will be accomplished by stopping the licensed sale of liquor.

These facts, being correct without a possible shadow of a doubt, form in themselves a complete answer to the charge that the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred makes in regard to its petition, using these words:—

"Failure to sign means that you line up on the side of alcohol — the Empire's most deadly foe."

The adherents of the Prohibition movement are animated by a crusading zeal, and however misled they may be, they are organized and are working towards a definite end.

The object of this publicity campaign of the Personal Liberty League of Ontario is to voice the feelings of the thousands of moderate people, who are of the opinion that the temperate man does not need compulsory abstinence, while under Prohibition to meet the demands of determined drinkers, illicit dealers will operate in every part of the province, just as they do in those parts now under Local Option restrictions.

BUNCORD AGAIN

HERE is a man who has paid out his good money in ADVANCE for a suit of clothes he never saw. If he had only been wise in the FIRST place, he would have bought that suit of clothes at home. Then he would have been assured of a good fit, the same quality of goods and at a lower price. Yes, the home merchant can beat the catalog man on prices every time. That has been proved time and again. But people are only very slowly beginning to know it. The catalog business is so huge, its arguments are so impudent and overbearing that many a man is persuaded AGAINST his own judgment. He is carried off his feet and literally STAMPEDED into doing things he would not dream of doing if left alone to think it out by himself. Neighbor, don't be stampeded by that picture. Tear it out and bring it in to your home dealer. Figure it out with your home merchant. Get together with HIM. He WANTS to give you a square deal. Keep your money in your pocket till you are SURE.

BAGDAD FACTS: CITY OF ARABIAN NIGHTS

The Ancient City is Not Prepossessing, Squalor and Dirt Mostly Abounds—Many Mosques

Immortalised by Haroun al-Raschid, in the story of the "Arabian Nights," Bagdad, which has a population of about 160,000 was built on the ruins of an ancient Babylonian city dating back to 2,000 B.C. Records have been found on ancient bricks establishing its early date.

Ever since the days of Haroun al-Raschid the Jews have been the leading figures in the commercial world of Bagdad. There are 50,000 of them, with about 8,000 Chaldean (or heretical) Christians. The remainder of the population is made up of Persians, Turks, Armenians, Arabs, and Kurds.

Sindbad the Sailor was born at Bagdad, and all his marvellous adventures begin by his going down the Tigris to Busserah (the modern Basra), the way the British expedition came up.

Militarily, Bagdad is of no great importance, but the moral impression which its fall would make on the Arab and Persian frontier tribes would be very great.

Of late years many European houses have settled agents in the city, and Britain, France, and Russia have consuls there. Dates, wool, grain, and timbac (a substitute for tobacco) are exported, and a number of horses are sent to India.

The city stands on both sides of the Tigris, the two parts being connected by the famous bridge of boats, 220 yards long.

A brick wall, five miles in circumference and 40 feet high, surrounds Bagdad.

The city contains upwards of 100 mosques, though barely twenty of them are in use. The houses generally are old, dirty, and ugly outside, but the vaulted ceilings, rich mouldings, inlaid mirrors, and massive gildings bring back to the recollection of the traveller "the golden prime of good Haroun al-Raschid."

The streets are narrow, crooked, unpaved, and dirty, full of ruts and strewed with garbage, which, however, is for the most part removed by dogs, the public scavengers in the East.

In 1902 an irade from the Sultan gave powers to a German company to construct a railway from Konich to Basra by Bagdad through the Euphrates valley, a total distance of 1,550 miles.

A company was floated at Frankfort in 1903, with a capital of $750,000, to construct the first section, and this was completed and opened in 1904. Since then several other important sections have been constructed.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses; but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules given in the prescription: Go to the Wales Drug Company, or to any active druggist store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should not see your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

FRENCH-CANADIANS DIE

Casualty Lists Belie Charges Against a Brave Race

The reports of casualties continue to show a singularly large proportion of French-Canadian names in the lists issued by the War Office. As the regiments engaged were largely Anglo-Canadian this can mean only one thing, namely, that French-Canadians enlisted in large numbers in these regiments. We know that in several battalions both officers and men are of French-Canadian descent; what we did not know so well until the tragic lists from Ottawa came through was that so many men of the same race were represented in English-speaking units. I noted out of thirty-two recruits raised in one day, for the Montreal Grenadiers, eighteen, or more fifty per cent. were French-Canadian. Such a record, combined with those telling figures from the front, speak volumes for the patriotism, the warlike ardor and the sense of duty of a race to whom in the past little credit has been given, not only in the rest of the Dominion but even here in the Province of Quebec.—Beck's Weekly, Montreal.

SOLDIERS' SONGS

An English paper says that German soldiers have a patriotic song book supplied to them, and sing to order. The British soldier has an antipathy to patriotic songs. You never hear him sing "Rule Britannia." He does not wear his heart on his sleeve, and considers it bad form to exhibit emotion. He knows the British soldier is the best in the world, but does not shout the odds. He leaves the enemy to find it out. He sings to suit himself. At an impromptu concert at the front there was only one comic song. All the rest were about consumptive children, orphans, deserted maidens, the return of erring wanderers, and so on. A burly artilleryman sang "Shall I be an angel, daddy?" and a six-foot trooper gave "Don't go down the mine, daddy." "The Lincolnshire Poacher," "The Farmer's Boy," a Somerset folk-song, and "Shall Trelawny die?" was sung by a Cornishman. The Scotsmen are fond of a song which declares that "me and my true love will never meet again." The Irish in mixed company sing the songs of the Irish comedian, but when alone they croon the sad airs of their long-drawn out tragedy or sing songs that are frankly revolutionary. They sing for hours both in Welsh and English.

Information Not Quite Correct

It is said on the best authority that the German spies who have been shot spoke with great anger of their government. They were told: "If you succeed, well and good. If you are caught, the English will never kill you. They will imprison you, and in a few months we shall be over to release you."

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric-poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

Sold by E. L. Payne and McDermid & Jury.

MURRAY

General Sir Archibald Murray, who has just been appointed Chief of the Imperial General Staff, is one of the youngest and most brilliant generals. Fifty-five years of age, he entered the army at the age of nineteen, and at twenty-seven was a captain.

General Murray first saw active service in the Zululand campaign of 1888. His greatest experience of war—excepting the present one, of course—was, however, in South Africa, where he was dangerously wounded.

In the South African War he gained a great reputation for handling men. He was not only mentioned a number of times in despatches, but he was awarded the D.S.O., added seven clasps to his medals for the battles in which he took part, and emerged from the war a full colonel.

From 1907 to 1912 Sir Archibald was Director of Military Training, and from the latter year till the war broke out he was Inspector of Infantry.

As soon as war was declared, General Murray was appointed to be Chief of Staff to Sir John French, who stated in one of his despatches that "Sir Archibald Murray has worked day and night unceasingly with the utmost skill, self-sacrifice and devotion."

As Chief of the Imperial General Staff, General Murray will be responsible for the choosing and organization of the best military brains for running the various campaigns that are being fought. Part of his duties, too, will be to train the officers of the new armies, one of the most important duties of any at the present time, for much depends upon the way an army is officered.

Sir Archibald is exceedingly popular in the army, for he has won his high position through sheer hard work, and not influence.

HOW CATHOLIC PRIEST HELPED BRITISH TOMMIES

Brave Minister Marched to German Lines to Find Traces of "Hun"—Crucifix Forbade Enemy to Fire

Eight bombers attached to a well known regiment went out about nine o'clock one night and when dawn came they had not presented themselves. It had been a terrible night, black as ink, with the cold of the north and the rain of the tropics. As the morning wore on, the regiment pictured their comrades lying wounded and dying in the mud and the slush and decaying corn. If they could only know for certain what had happened it would be relief of a sort. But how to know? It was broad daylight; the German snipers were in position; even to put one's head over the parapet meant certain death. If their comrades were not prisoners and had not been killed outright, they would lie out there amongst the barbed wire, rank grass, and wasted grain.

The Brave Priest

Whilst they were thinking in this strain a Roman Catholic chaplain attached to the regiment came up to the firing line, and volunteered to go out in front and at any rate try to find the bodies. After some hesitation his request was granted. Donning his surplice and with a crucifix in his hand, the priest proceeded down one of the saps and climbed out into the open. With their eyes glued to periscopes the British line watched him anxiously as he proceeded slowly towards the German lines. Not a shot was fired by the enemy. After a while the chaplain was seen to stop and bend down near the German wire entanglements. He knelt in prayer. Then with the same calm step he returned to his own line. He had four identity discs in his hand, and reported that the Germans had held up four khaki caps on their rifles, indicating that the other four were prisoners in their hands.

Powder From Cotton

It takes 400 pounds of cotton to make the powder for one shot from the Queen Elizabeth's guns, or from one of the German 17-inch guns. The same quantity of cotton would provide ammunition for 400 shots from a field gun, or 80,000 rounds from a rifle. Some idea of the consumption of cotton in the war may be had from the fact that 1,000 tons a day required to supply the Germans and Austrian armies with powder. The British cordite consists of two-thirds guncotton.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS

Soldiers Who Have Been Fitted Show Remarkable Results

Since war broke out artificial limb makers have startled the world with some of their achievements. There is, for instance, the case of a dare-devil young officer who lost his right leg just above the knee at the Marne, came home, recovered, and was then fitted with an artificial limb. Directly afterwards a magistrate fined him for driving his motor car at excessive speed, and now he is a pilot of the Royal Flying Corps, busily employed in France.

Another adventurer, who left a leg in Mexico during one of the risings, went to England when war broke out, determined to play a part in the great world conflict. He, too, has been fitted with an artificial leg so perfect that he rides as well as ever he did, and only the wildest of buckjumpers might unseat him. It is said that a commission in a cavalry regiment has been granted him, and that he is now at the front.

Cures Biliousness Prevents Brights Disease

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Should this case not be similar to yours, write to us for the statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousnes, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique positions. By their combined action on these eliminating organs they prove effective in complicated ailments which defy ordinary treatment. The Empire's Call to Ontario: "ECONOMIZE"

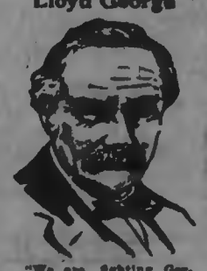
Lloyd George



"We are fighting Germany, Austria, and drink, and, so far as I can see, the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink."

Lord Kitchener

"The men who have recently joined the Colors are doing their utmost to prepare themselves for active service with the least possible delay. This result can only be achieved if by hard work and strict sobriety they keep themselves thoroughly fit and healthy."

Admiral Jellicoe

"In the Navy there are three qualities upon which efficiency mainly depends. They are discipline, straight shooting, and endurance; and Temperance unquestionably leads greatly to the promotion of these qualities."

Baron French

"There is no doubt that the work which the Royal Army Temperance Association carries on makes men infinitely better soldiers and better men. If men want to see regiments, battalions, squadrons, batteries, smart and efficient, they must practise these great qualities of self-control and self-sacrifice."

The existence of the British Empire depends upon the outcome of the War. All our resources must be thrown into the scale.

The Empire's call is for men, munitions, food, clothing, and, above all things, MONEY. We are being called upon to give our millions to carry on the war. Sir Geo. E. Foster has stated that the Dominion Government might even ask for a Domestic Loan of $300,000,000. It is only a few weeks ago that Canadians subscribed over $100,000,000 to a War Loan.

These facts bring right home to us that this is, as Premier Asquith stated, "A War of Money as well as Men."

Sir Robert Borden, Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, and other prominent men have emphasized the necessity of economy.

Conserve our wealth. Cut down expenses. This is what we must do.

Something to Think About

Did you ever seriously think about the millions of dollars expended annually for alcoholic beverages in the Province of Ontario?

As nearly as can be estimated from figures, based on Dominion Government returns, the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the Dominion in 1914 was $108,049,129. Assuming that Ontario, whose population is one-third of the Dominion, consumes one-third of the alcoholic beverages, her share amounts to $34,349,709.66. Let us say $33,000,000.

In other words, Ontario's Annual Consumption of Alcoholic Beverages represents the cost of—

1st. Rifles, Machine Guns and Field Guns for an army of 690,523 men on active service for a period of 12 months.

2nd. Or Accoutrements, Camp Equipment, Harness and Saddlery, Transport Vehicles, Signalling and Telephone Equipment, Tools and Miscellaneous Requirements for 1,269,231 men at the front.

3rd. Or one year's Clothing and Necessaries for 330,000 men.

4th. Or Rations, Subsistence or Money Allowances for 226,027 "boys" on active service for one year.

5th. Or the Canadian Government's Separation Allowance for 117,773 dependents for the entire year of 1916.

The foregoing figures are based on the war estimates of the Department of Militia and Defence for 1916-17, as published on December 31st, 1915, in The Toronto Globe.

Eliminate This Expenditure

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred believes that as a war-time measure, if for no other reason, this colossal expenditure for alcoholic beverages in Ontario should be eliminated. The Committee also has every confidence that the Provincial Government will move in this important matter as rapidly as public opinion will support them.

The function of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred is to organize, crystalize and give expression to the present state of public opinion on the question of prohibition. The Committee believes that it can demonstrate to the Government that Ontario is overwhelmingly in favor of prohibition. The people will shortly be given the opportunity of signing a petition for presentation to the Government.

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred is the executive head of this big new prohibition movement. It represents the whole Province. It numbers men of both political parties—men who welcome this chance to work for prohibition now that it has been taken out of politics—earnest men who are working together for the common good.

The public are urged to join hands with the Committee and insure the success of the movement. Ontario cannot afford the liquor traffic. It is claiming millions of dollars, and sapping the strength of the manhood of the Province, all of which the Empire vitally needs in the present crisis.

It costs money to organize and advertise. If you think the object good and approve our method, one way to express approval is by a liberal financial gift. Make cheques payable to Frank Kent, Treasurer, and send to Room 1404, C.P.R. Building, Toronto.

Signs of the Times

England

The sale of liquor has been curtailed to five and one-half hours per day. WHY?

France

The French Government has prohibited the manufacture or sale of Absinthe, and provided heavy penalties for any person supplying any such liquors to soldiers. WHY?

Russia

The most outstanding example in the world's history of the prohibition of the liquor traffic is Russia. Our ally has enacted absolute prohibition with incalculable results—both economic and moral. Vice and poverty have given way to happier homes and enormously increased savings accounts. WHY?

Germany

On February 17th, 1915, the General Commander issued a proclamation that any saloonkeeper serving alcoholic drinks to any soldier would be sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and his business closed up. WHY?

United States

Seven more States voted "yes" on December 13th, for State-wide prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor. WHY?

Canada

Prince Edward Island is dry.

Nova Scotia is all under prohibition except the city of Halifax.

New Brunswick has prohibition in ten out of fifteen counties and in two of its three cities.

Quebec has 966 dry municipalities and only 257 wet.

Manitoba will vote on prohibition this year. Saskatchewan.—Every bar was closed on June 30th last.

Alberta—Declared for prohibition on July 21st last by 21,000 votes, as against 17,000. British Columbia.—The Government is pledged to take a plebiscite.

Ontario

873 municipalities are now dry and there are licenses in only 274. This counts as dry the municipalities voted dry on January 3rd. During the past five years only a single municipality in Ontario has gone back from prohibition to license. Local prohibition has proved an immense success. You are asked to join with the Committee of One Hundred in the demand for a chance to pronounce on Province-wide extinction of the traffic.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

In a Signal Tower.

Ten years ago I was employed in a signal block tower on a railroad. These towers are used to operate the levers controlling the semaphores which direct the engineers of passing trains. They are raised high above the tracks, and those located out in a sparsely settled country are lonely places. At that time some of the towers were worked by women, and I was one of these women. Indeed, I was a girl of twenty.

My duties were not onerous. I had time for sewing or fancy work or music, the latter of which I was very fond. I had the night watch, and I and my colleague of the day watch kept our quarters in spick and span condition, with plants in the windows—indeed, everything to make the place homelike.

Our tower was some distance from any house, but I was never lonely or afraid, for at the approach of danger I could lock myself in, and with arms and ammunition the place had great advantages for defense. But I never thought of defending myself, for I could see no reason why I should be attacked.

One evening shortly before dark I was singing, accompanying myself on my guitar. I did not hear a footstep ascending, and suddenly, looking back of me, I saw a man standing in the room. He was quite respectably dressed, but there was something in his face I did not like. Bowing to me deferentially, he said:

"Pardon me for this intrusion. I heard the music and was surprised that it should come from a railroad watch tower. I am very fond of music, and your voice is delicious. Would you mind my sitting here," taking a seat, "while you sing?"

I was not deceived by his smooth tongue, but what could I do? I must meet deception by deception. I appeared flattered by his approval and continued my singing, though with a trembling voice. The song was "In the Gloaming." It was very appropriate, but I was not thinking of the gloaming. I was thinking how I might outwit some nefarious scheme I was sure the man had in view. It occurred to me to play Miss Simplicity. As soon as I had finished the song I began to talk about music, how I doted on it and how I felt an immediate liking for any one who loved it. But the man soon turned the subject to my work, asking me all manner of questions with regard to it—the levers, the semaphores and how I threw the trains on to the right track.

I judged from this that he was there rather with some object in view connected with the railroad than myself personally. I made it appear that I was pleased to tell him what he wished to know and talked incessantly in order that I might keep him on that subject, hoping to stave off any intentions he might have with regard to me.

"Now, suppose," he said, "a train should come along. What's the next train?"

"The Bentford express."

"Well, you wish to put it on the right track. What do you do?"

"I pull this lever."

"And if you wished it to take the right hand track of the Y, a short di-

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA

NEARLY LOST HIM.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "Get Rid of It."

Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well. In fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for 'Dr. Wood's'."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.

there up the track, what would you do?"

"I would pull this lever," putting my hand on another.

"H'm. It's very interesting. What a simple system when you once know it."

"Very."

He looked at the clock, rather nervously, I thought, and listened. There was a distant rattle of a train.

"Is that the express?" he asked.

"I have no doubt it is."

The expression on his face began to change. The interested look he had thus far worn gave place to one of resolution. He walked back and forth, and I saw him put his hand to his hip. I was satisfied that this was to make sure his weapon was in its proper place, though I did not see why he needed it for a girl like me. Perhaps he was going to shoot the engineer.

When the train came within a short distance of the tower I stepped to the levers and put my hand on one of them. My visitor stooped, evidently so as not to be seen from below.

"Not that," he said from behind; "not that one; the other. Throw the train on the right hand track of the Y."

I heard a click and, looking back, saw the muzzle of a revolver pointing at me. I pulled the lever he ordered me to pull, and the train went thundering by.

Taking a pair of nippers from his pocket, the man cut the wires connecting my telegraph instrument with the main line and, taking a piece of the wire with him, ran out and hurried down the stairs. I locked the door and, staggering to the window, looked out. He was running after the train. He turned and said:

"Goodby, sweetheart. You sing like a nightingale."

As soon as he was out of sight I fell on the floor in a dead faint. Then, coming to myself, I got up and, weak as I was, danced. When he had asked me how to throw the train on to the wrong course I had told him the way to put it on the right one.

I was called on the wire from another station and, not replying, a messenger was soon sent to learn the cause of my silence. Since there was no damage done, the missing wire was the only confirmation of my story. It was enough, and I received a liberal reward. My visitor's intention was never explained. It was doubtless intended to wreck the train and rob it.

Hardness of Icebergs.

The hardness and strength of ice increases with the degrees of cold, and as icebergs come from the region of perpetual cold of an intensity difficult to realise it is readily seen how they can become "demons of destruction." The hardness of icebergs is something wonderful, even surpassing that of the "land ice" reported from St. Petersburg in 1740, wherein it is declared that "in the severe winter of that year a house was built of ice taken from the river Neva which was fifty feet long, sixteen feet wide and twenty feet high, and the walls supported the roof, which was also of ice. Before it stood two ice mortars and six ice cannon made on a turning lathe, with carriages and wheels also of ice. The cannon were of the caliber of six pounders, but they were loaded only with one-quarter pound of powder and with hemp balls—on one occasion with iron. The thickness of the ice was only four inches, and yet it resisted the explosion."

NEY AS A FIGHTER

Napoleon Called His Marshal the "Bravest Man I Ever Saw."

THE RETREAT FROM MOSCOW.

Where the Heroic Commander With a Mere Handful of Men as a Rear Guard Fell Back, Facing the Foe. Minor Heroes of the Great Conflict.

Three towering personalities came to the clinch on the field of Waterloo. There are perhaps a half dozen names remembered in connection with that epoch making battle, but they are little more than names; only Blucher, Napoleon and Wellington have contrived to outlive the memory of their contemporaries.

Yet there were some at Waterloo who were not only brave fighters, but vastly interesting individuals, and it is more than unfortunate that they should have suffered eclipse. There is perhaps one exception. One cannot scratch the history surrounding any of the three great commanders who met at Waterloo without encountering Michael Ney, Napoleon's "bravest of the brave."

It is impossible to think of Ney except in superlatives. It is impossible to collect dry facts about him; the temper that matched his hair smolders through and sets them ablaze. Even Napoleon, always so unpleasantly eager to shift the blame for failure to other shoulders, wrote from the solitude of St. Helena, "Ney was the bravest man I ever saw."

One of his officers once asked him if he ever felt fear. "Never had time," was the curt reply.

The tales of his daring, his hairbreadth escapes, his unbelievable indifference to shot and shell, are legion.

He was always calmest in time of the greatest peril, and it was this quality that Napoleon appreciated. Again and again France and the crown were in Michael Ney's hands. Whenever Napoleon saw that the issue of a battle turned on a single point he sent Ney to that point. At the battle of Bautzen the emperor lay on the ground which is sheltered by a height from the town. He heard Ney's guns on the left. A bomb burst over his head. He sat down and wrote Marie Louise that the victory was gained. He waited only to learn that Ney was where the crisis turned to be sure of victory.

But the most dramatic chapter of this gallant fighter's life is that headed "The Retreat from Moscow." Meissonier might better have painted the rear of the Corsican's army than the van. He would have had a more appealing, a more gallant subject in Michael Ney, retreating with his face to the enemy. With a mere handful of men he flung himself between the fleeing French and the Russian army and backed slowly, stubbornly from Moscow.

This is the man who a little later was publicly shot as a traitor to France.

Ney's fellow marshal, Grouchy, does not fare so well. Grouchy was a loyal French patriot, and he had a record of engagement in 200 battles, which offered copious proof that he was no coward. But light headed, irresolute, vacillating he surely was. The Waterloo mistake is merely a repetition of earlier failures of judgment.

But to find the most truly picturesque in the group of lesser generals at Waterloo one must go over to the English side. "As rough, foul mouthed a devil as ever lived," said Wellington himself of Sir Thomas Picton. "But the

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys neutralize irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble acted, "no man could do better if the different services assigned to him."

He always carried a stick to tap on the horse's mane when he felt over impatient and wave in the air to emphasize his commands. Sometimes he carried an umbrella, as at Victoria, where he used it to beat Wellington's butler over the head. The unfortunate man was escorting the headquarters baggage and got in the march of Picton's division.

The visitor to the field of Waterloo, even though he know little of the personality of this fine old fighter, feels a thrill when the guide says, "Here Picton fell."

There could be no sharper contrast to Tom Picton than Sir Rowland Hill. The mild eyed, sweet tempered, ruddy cheeked general, soon to become the most influential politician in Europe, was the complete picture of an English country gentleman.—Chicago Herald.

His Honesty.

Bad men excuse their faults; good men leave them.—Johnson.

Fascinated.

The woman sitting opposite me in my hotel dining room spoke French to the waitress fluently, but there was an untidiness about her letter "r" that betokened English, and a wateriness about her eye that I thought betokened liquor. She was aged and—for all the world—she was "Sairey Gamp." She ate her tripe flauntingly. And she ate it voluptuously—not sectioning it with knife or fork, but rolling it omelette wise about her fork like an Italian with macaroni, and I followed each mouthful with my hungry eyes and opened my own mouth slightly each time and thrilled at her dexterity as when I watch a motorcar being lowered into the open hatchway of a ship.

Tremendous Tells.

"Professor, how would you like to receive a message from Mars?"

"Prepaid?" asked the professor cautiously.

Gentle Words.

Gentle words, quiet words, are, after all, the most powerful words. They are more convincing, more compelling, more prevailing.—W. Gladden.

Children.

There are few things in the world so easy as to make a child happy—and few things so well worth doing.

Echo of Sound.

An echo is a sound reflected from a distant surface. Sound is produced by waves of pulses of the air, and when those waves come in contact with a cliff or wall or other opposing surface they are reflected like light or heat, and the returning waves cause a repetition of the sound. The word echo is of Greek origin. According to ancient mythology, it was the name of a mountain nymph, daughter of the air and the earth. Echo was one of Juno's attendants, but her loquacity displeased Jupiter, so she was deprived of the power of speech by Juno and permitted to answer only when she was spoken to. Afterward Echo fell in love with a beautiful youth named Narcissus and was changed into a stone, which still retained the power of voice. Milton personifies her thus:

Sweet Echo, sweetest nymph, that liv'st unseen
Within thy airy shell,
By slow Meander's margent green,
Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair
That likest thy Narcissus are?

JOHN BROWN owns a prosperous grocery store in a thriving Canadian town. He is a live merchant, and advertises much of his success to his shrewd methods of creating interest in his store.

Recently, he took several lines of his regular goods, put them under cover in boxes and barrels, and wrote the name of each article on the outside. Only he mixed up the letters in each name so that instead of spelling the right name of the article, it spelled something different altogether. For instance box 9 contained Raisins, but Mr. Brown jumbled the letters in the words Raisins until they read "Si Rains." Then he placed them on display in the window, and invited the readers of his paper to come and see if they could read "What Mr." as you can see in the picture 11.

Fourteen lines of goods in Mr. Brown's store were displayed this way, and a prize was given to any customer who could place an order for all fourteen and tell the number of the box each was in. Little Mary went to Brown's store to make her purchases, guessed all the names correctly and won the prize. Can you do as well?

Two of the names are already given to you to start you right. What are the other twelve?

A FEW HINTS.—The goods mentioned under each of the fourteen numbers, are staple lines such as are to be found in every grocery store and in regular use in every home. No trade-mark names or products of any particular firm or manufacturer are given,—just the regular name of each product or article. A good plan is to write down the names of all the things usually found in a grocery store and use the list as your guide. Be careful, because 'abbreviations' and slang are not allowed. Spell out every word, because 'Sis.' means just as many points as 'Sister,' and 'Specs' is the same as 'Spectacles.' Some words are simple while others are compound, but each word counts 10 points. Although some words may be spelled two or three different ways, each is allowed full value. Remember, 10 points for each word. 120 points can be gained by reading the above carefully and counting the words in each answer. 60 points can be gained by reading a correct answer to each of the twelve names you can guess, these are not printed but are given for general neatness, ten for style, spelling, punctuation, etc., and when you qualify, 40 points additional can be gained. Take lots of time to puzzle out your answer, be neat and careful, and you can win a good prize.

THE OBJECT OF THE CONTEST.—Every loyal Canadian will approve of the object of this great contest. Frankly, it is to advertise and introduce EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's greatest magazine, to hundreds of new homes, which should know that a magazine of such excellence and real worth is being published right here in Canada by Canadians for Canadians. You can help us to do this, when you enter the contest, but you do not have to be a subscriber nor say you intend or expected to take the magazine or spend a single penny in order to compete and win the touring car or one of the other magnificent prizes.

EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD is now the established favorite in more than 80,000 of Canada's best homes. Though that is the greatest circulation ever attained by any Canadian magazine, it doesn't satisfy us. Our motto is "Everywoman's World in Every Home." Hundreds of Canadian homes which may not know it now, will welcome the handsome, interesting, up-to-the-minute magazine, and once it is introduced they will want it every month.

If, therefore, when your answers are received, we find there to have gained sufficient points to merit standing for the judging and awarding of prizes, we will write and tell you so, and send without cost, a sample copy of the latest issue of this premier of Canada's magazines. Then, in order to qualify your entry, we will ask you to do us the small favor of introducing it to three or four friends and neighbors. We will even send you sample copies to leave with each of your friends, if you will tell us they would like to have them. State your willingness to accord this favor when you submit your answers. The company reserves to itself the right to cash or reward you with a handsome gift for your trouble, entirely in addition to any prize your answers may win in the contest.

Six Negroes Lynched By Mob

Fifteen Automobiles Filled With Men Take Victims from Prison.

SYLVESTER, Ga., Jan. 21.—Fifteen automobiles filled with heavily armed white persons entered this city the county seat of Worth County, last night to avenge the murder of Sheriff Moreland, of Lee County, several weeks ago. They took six negro prisoners from the jail, and within fifteen minutes from the time they arrived they were speeding northward toward the scene of the murder of Sheriff Moreland, presumably to lynch the six blacks.

Sheriff Potts had taken off his shoes and was about to retire to his home, adjoining the jail, when he was called to the door.

There were four strangers in all, and he observed that one was handcuffed. "We have a prisoner here whom we would like to put in jail for safe-keeping to-night," said the leader of the men. The Sheriff thought nothing of this, as this is a frequent occurrence. He slipped on his shoes and accompanied the men to the jail.

Inside the jail the sheriff asked for their papers. The strangers grabbed him, seized his keys and bound his hands. Then they signalled for the others in the mob to come quickly, that the cells were unlocked. The others came inside, seized the six negro prisoners, placed them in the automobiles and drove away.

Five of the negroes were members of one family named Lake, residents of Lee County, which adjoins Worth County.

It was at their home that a pitched battle was fought more than a month ago, in which Sheriff Moreland, of Lee County, was killed and severely others wounded.

John Seymour one of the wounded negroes in that battle, was the sixth negro seized. The mob demanded a seventh prisoner, Jim Keith, but the sheriff had removed him to safer quarters two weeks ago when he received a tip that an attempt would be made to storm the jail. Keith is the one who is alleged to have fired the shot that killed Moreland.

Many a man who demands justice would whine for mercy if he got it.

If you intend to do a mean thing wait till tomorrow. If you are to do a noble thing do it now.

"I never could see why they always call a boat 'she.'" "Evidently you have never tried to steer one."

"How did that parrot of yours learn to talk so quickly? He couldn't say a word when I was here last week." "I know; but my wife's mother has been paying us a visit since then.

Amateur Work—"This poem was written by a prominent lawyer of this city. Has it any value?" "About as much value," said the editor, "as a legal opinion written by a poet."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

Panel ideas prevail to a great extent in all garments of the present season and they are very decorative when cleverly used, especially in waists. The model herewith offered is of the best of these styles.

The front of the waist has a flat yoke across the shoulders, and this is cut in one with the panel which forms the centre front of the waist. In the centre of this panel is placed the closing, and this ends at the base of the throat, where it is met by a flare collar, with pointed extensions at the sides.

The lower portion of the waist is full and is tucked at each side below the yoke; gathers may be used instead if desired. In the back the material is plain from the collar to the edge, held in at the waistline by a tape and a few gathers.

The sleeves are of the new loose type, plain at the shoulder and gathered into a straight cuff at the wrist. This cuff buttons at the back of the hand.

In making such a waist as this one material or two may be used. Much depends upon how the waist is to be worn. If with various skirts it is most usual to make it of one color, even when two fabrics are employed. Thus the panel may be of taffetas, the lower portion of voile or chiffon and the sleeves of chiffon.

When made part of a dress the front yoke and panel may match the trimmings and the balance of the waist be of the main dress fabric.

The waist pattern, No. 7354, is cut in sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch figured goods and ⅞ yard of 36 inch plain material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15c.

How Germany Mobilized Her Factories To Meet Shortages

Writer Says the Enemy Had Not Foreseen the Full Extent of the War She Precipitated—Had Not Expected Fighting on Two Fronts Simultaneously

Garet Garrett writing in the New York Times from Berlin contributes the following:

There was a situation at the Dardanelles which goes to show what chances turn to fortunes of war. When the allied Anglo-French fleet withdrew [illegible] the day of the great attempt to force five ships in the fight, the only Turkish fort with guns large enough to deliver a mortal shot against a modern battleship had only seventeen shells left. The German commander was in despair. A countryman of his, a newspaper correspondent asked him how he stood. He said it was all up with the Dardanelles. He could hope with his seventeen shots to sink two or three more ships, with luck, but that would be the end if it. The fleet would then go through, and the correspondent had better hie him back to Constantinople and get started home, unless he liked the thought of becoming a prisoner of war. But the allied fleet did not return to the attack the next morning. If it had, the current history of Europe might be very differently written. Later a German naval Captain, who had lost his ship in the North Sea and was not entitled to another command, arrived in Constantinople with permission to do anything he could find to do. He was a genius. Out of such materials as nobody else had thought of using, some old engines, a few old-fashioned machines, forgotten tools and the very scrap heaps by a kind of sorcery he created a munition factory which, in a little while, entirely relieved the anxities of the German commander in the big fort defending the Dardanelles.

The Unexpected Factors.

The unexpected factors which confronted Germany, and against which she had made insufficient preparation, or none at all, were these:

First—Economic isolation. She had never imagined such a catastrophe.

Second—Fighting on two fronts at once, east and west, with lines on both sides much longer than anybody could have foreseen. What she expected was an alternation of fighting, first on the west and then on the east. That was the military programme.

Third—The length of the war. All calculations assumed a protracted war to be out of the question, for the Teutonic allies, as well as for their enemies.

Fourth—The enormous quantity of ammunition required in modern warfare. Everybody greatly underestimated it. In the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71 there were used altogether 847,000 pieces of shrapnel. The present average consumption on the German side in this war is 4,000,000 pieces a month. That is to say, the total amount consumed in the Franco-Prussian war would now supply the guns for a little more than three days.

To meet these unexpected conditions heroic measures were necessary. The Government promptly laid its hands upon all industrial establishments and processes adaptable to the purpose, upon all raw material existing in manufacturers' and dealers' hands, and upon all the doctors and scientists whose specialized talents fitted them to help solve the problems in hand. The man best equipped by experience and qualities of mind to become economic dictator was put at the top of it all. Industries were classified. Inventory was taken of their stock. Then to a fabricator of cloth, or metal manufacturer, the dictator would say: "Your factory and your stock of raw material are now absolutely in the hands of the State. You are to work exclusively for the State. In order that the transition may not be too violent you may have 10 per cent. of your own raw material for private use during January and 5 per cent. during February; after that you are to fill only war orders for the State."

In this way the industries of Germany were commandeered, until 80 per cent. of them came to be employed directly or indirectly in the service of war. Their flexibility at first thought would seem extraordinary, but on reflection, it is less wonderful, because the distinguishing fact about German industry has always been its adaptability. For years and years it had been known that whereas the English sold English goods and the French sold French goods, the Germans would produce on order anything under the sun that a buyer wanted, as he wanted it, even Japanese goods, so perfectly imitated that nobody but an expert could tell the difference. If you wanted left-handed typewriters, or an engine to run upside down, the German would make it according to specification. That was his boast, and although there were many who thought it a bad thing for German industry, and that standardization of products distinctively German would in the long run be better, it was lucky in war to have an industry that could change instantly from what it was doing to what the State wanted.

Much more difficulty was the problem of creating that for which no specifications were known, that is, by new processes as yet undiscovered to produce synthetically what was not to be had in any natural way, such as rubber, saltpeter or an acid. Until then it had been thought that there were too many professors in Germany, too many doctors of this and that, too many scientists perhaps. But now their brains were commandeered or laid hands upon, like any other commodity. Scientific knowledge, which in most countries is a luxury, had long been a commodity in Germany which every industry could afford to buy a great deal of.

Knowledge as a Commodity.

A very interesting German, discussing this subject, said: "It is not that we have the schools. Any country may have schools like ours. It is the temperament of the students. Here a young man will study five or six years and take his degree, and then be contented with 300 or 400 marks a month (?75 to $100) in the laboratory of an industrial organization, whose as elsewhere a young man equally equipped would think of holding a chair in a university. In Germany even a very small manufacturer can afford his laboratory and staff of scientific workers, continually engaged in solving problems peculiar to that one industry."

When the test came the results appeared. The military authorities would call in the manufacturers of a certain group and say: "Gentlemen, here is the problem. We have got to have so much of this and so much of that, and we look to you to find the way to produce it. We shall expect you to meet here at this hour two weeks from to-day."

It might be sulphuric acid, or almost anything else. The manufacturers would then put it up to the men in their laboratories. Two weeks later they would meet again and exchange results. Among them, by putting all of their information together, they would find the way, and solve problems, which, in peace time, with each manufacturer jealously guarding his own secrets, might have had to wait for a solution.

Many problems are yet unfinished, chief of those being perhaps the problem of producing rubber in large quantities synthetically. Nickel is very scarce. But other things have been wonderfully accomplished. Substitutes have been found for cotton in the manufacture of high explosives. The possibilities of zinc wire in place of copper for conducting electricity have been discovered. All new installations now are made with zinc wire. The chemical equivalent of the saltpeter which was formerly imported from Chile has been commanded from the air, and this is a form of wealth that will perhaps endure after the war. The first costly electrical plants that were built for the process of obtaining saltpeter from nitrogen gas required German subsidies. Lately the two largest plants have been built with private capital by men who are convinced that after the war saltpeter may be produced by this process at a cost to make competition with the Chilean product profitable.

Copper is really not a serious problem. That becomes clear at once to the most casual-eyed visitor. Germany is full of copper. A country that had for many years been importing tremendous quantities of copper would have huge reserves in some form or other, because it is an indestructible metal. There is copper and brass everywhere. The metal was very lavishly used. Enough could be recovered from copper roofs to supply the war industry for months, and after that enough more could be recovered from the universal brass bedstead and the door trimmings to go on with for an indeterminate time. Besides a great deal is regularly recovered from the battlefields, which, as soon as they have been cleared of the dead, and combed by gangs sent to retrieve all kinds of material, including iron, copper, and leather.

RUSSIA'S FORCES ATTACKING THE PRINCIPAL CITY IN TURKISH ARMENIA

Grand Duke's Army Assaulting Erzerum Although Blizzards and Bitter Cold Weather Are Hindering Operations ---King Nicholas Calls on Montenegro to Fight to Last ---Better For Nation to Be Wiped Out Than to Accept Austria's Peace Terms.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PEROGRAD, Jan. 22.—The Grand Duke's Caucasus army has begun the assault on the outer defences of Erzerum, the principal city of Turkish Armenia, according to despatches received here to-day. Blizzards and bitterly cold weather are hindering the operations. The city is surrounded by modern fortifications, and no easy victory is expected by military authorities. The lull on the Czernowitz front continues. General Ivanoff is strengthening his positions around Raranaze, where Austrian counter-attacks are expected.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—King Nicholas' proclamation, calling upon the Montenegrins to renew hostilities against the Austrians, declares that it would be better for his nation to be wiped out than to accept Austria's peace terms, the Montenegrin Legation stated to-day.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The Norwegian steamer Sygna, reported to be carrying war munitions to the Russian port of Archangel, rushed back to quarantine at daybreaw to-day with a fire raging in No. 1 hole forward. After sending out calls for assistance several fire boats from New York and Brooklyn went to quarantine and began attacking the blaze.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Public opinion in America will sanction the tightening of the British blockade of Germany, the Spectator declares, in advising the Government that now is the time to take stringent measures to starve out Germany.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The State Department unofficially informed through the United States Ministers to Scandinavian powers that those countries would favour this Government's taking the lead in a point protest to England against her alleged interference with neutral trade, it was learned to-day. A high State Department official said, however, that the Department has never seriously considered the proposition, and intimated the Administration did not look upon it favourably.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 22.—Lieut.-Col. Davis, commanding the Second Pioneer Battalion, recruited largely in Western Ontario, is in hospital at Winchester Camp, with serious concussion of the brain, the result of his horse frightening at a road engine and throwing Colonel Davis against a stone wall.

DOLLAR DAY THIS YEAR WILL BE BEST YET

Merchants are Co-operating with the Examiner to Make the Event the Biggest Thing in the History of Peterborough

PRIZES ARE OFFERED

Two years ago when the Examiner first suggested Dollar Day to the merchants it was almost unanimously taken up, and enthusiastically endorsed by the merchants. Great preparations were made, and the first Dollar Day witnessed the greatest bargain feast ever seen in Peterborough. Streets were congested with a happy, good-natured throng of shoppers, through the entire day and up till ten o'clock at night, when the estimating ballot box closed. All this was done by the Merchants and The Examiner on very short notice, and this year, with ample time to go through their stocks, and make a much more general selection, Dollar Day promises to far eclipse all records.

The main attraction, of course, is the unheard of bargains that will be offered in practically every store. Dollars will surely do double duty, and in hundreds of cases, will have a purchasing power five times their ordinary capacity. The friendly rivalry between the merchants to see who can give the most for the dollar, all tends to increase the interest in Dollar Day to the buyer. In addition to the bargain feature of the day the merchants have provided a treasury box of $150.00, to be given away to buyers on the same plan as was used the first year. The stores that have provided the fund will issue a blank form for every dollar's worth of goods purchased in their stores on Dollar Day. The total amount of these blanks will be about 36,000, and the customers must estimate the number he or she thinks will be used and deposited in the box at the Examiner Office by 10.15 p.m. on the evening of Dollar Day. As a guide to the probable number it might be stated that there were in the neighbourhood of 16,000 used and dropped in the box

What are the boys in the trenches asking for?

The following letter addressed to the President of a Chapter of the I.O.D.E. speaks for itself:

Mr. Dear Mrs. McMartin:—

Do you think your Chapter would like to send smokes to the men of No. 3 Company? I am sure the boys would enjoy a smoke from home, and although I know you have a great many demands made on your resources, I thought I would ask on their behalf.

Kindly extend to your Chapter the "Compliments of the Season" from the Officers, N.C.O.'s, and men of this Company who still remember the work your Chapter has done for our Battalion.

Yours sincerely,

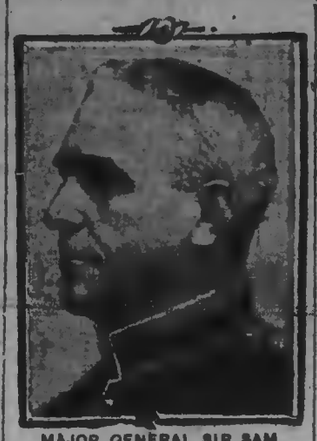
Sir Sam Hughes Arrived At Noon

Minister of Militia Marched at the Head of the 93rd Battalion in the Parade From the Station---Inspected the Battalion.



MAJOR GENERAL SIR SAM HUGHES

Minister of Militia, who addressed a big Mass Meeting To-day.

MASS MEETING HELD

The 93rd Battalion had the unique honour to-day of being lead by Major General Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B. The Minister of Militia, who arrived on a special C.P.R. train shortly after 11 o'clock to address the big recruiting rally in the Armouries this afternoon, was met at the station by the battalion, and after inspecting the men declined to ride in the vehicle provided, preferring to march with the men in khaki.

Owing to some confusion in the minds of the public as to the station at which Sir Sam was stated to arrive, many people gathered at the Grand Trunk and were doomed to disappointment. It was only a short time before the hour of arrival that it was officially learned that the Minister was coming via C.P.R., instead of G.T.R., as first announced. The result was that even some of the civic officials were fooled and had barely time to get to the other station before the arrival of the special train.

The 93rd Battalion in command of Lt.-Col. Johnston and headed by the Brass and Bugle Bands marched to the station at 11 o'clock, and the battalion made a fine impression as they swung down George street with their rifles at the slope. It was the finest parade that the 93rd has yet held, as every man that was not on other duty was in line and for the first time all carried rifles. The battalion was an imposing spectacle as the sturdy lads of Peterborough City and County marched along to the martial music of the band.

On reaching the station the 93rd was drawn up in two long lines on George street, stretching for a block and a half and awaited the arrival of the Minister. As Sir Sam alighted from the train he was received by Lt.-Col Johnston, Mayor Duffus and others. The Minister of Militia, who was accompanied by Lt.-Col. Stewart, Inspector of Supply and Transport for No. 3 Division, Capt. Daly, his military secretary, and Capt. J. H. Burnham, Paymaster of the 93rd, who came down from Lindsay with him, proceeded at once to inspect the battalion. As he made his appearance the 93rd presented arms while the band played a few strains of the Regimental March. Sir Sam looked at every man closely as he moved down the lines, and shook hands with each officer. The men were steady and soldierly under the scrutiny, and doubtless made a good impression upon the Minister.

The inspection over Major General Hughes took the head of the column and marched in front of the band to the Empress Hotel. Here he watched with keen interest the battalion march past him in fours.

The Minister was the guest of honour at a luncheon held at the Empress at which were present the officers of the 93rd and other military and civic officials. The band of the 93rd furnished a programme of patriotic music during the luncheon.

Afterwards Major General Hughes was escorted to the Armouries where he delivered a rousing address.

A full report of this meeting will appear in Monday's Examiner.

SUPERIORITY OF ALLIES IN WEST DAILY INCREASING

French and British Are Now Firing Two Shells to the German's One--Next Advance May Break German Line

DOMESTIC SITUATION

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Very little is doing at any of the fighting fronts. Both sides are making time and preparing for big operations in the spring. These will take the form of a great offensive movement by the Allies if the Russians can complete their requirements in time. It will probably mark the beginning of the end of the war.

Every week sees the increase of the Allies' superiority on the Western front. A friend just back tells me that the French and British are now firing two shells to the German's one. The greatest prevails that that when the next advance is undertaken the German line must break. Until the Russians are prepared to co-operate however, it is obviously foolish to waste the strength, which if applied simultaneously would have infinitely more effect. Russia's new armies are now fully ready. Their equipment is steadily progressing, but no general move will be made until sufficient reserves of munitions are collected to ensure that the advance, once begun, can be pressed home. This entirely depends on the rapidity with which the American and Japanese factories can deliver their products.

The forward movement in Bukowina, which has been temporarily suspended owing to the condition of the roads has given the greatest satisfaction to the Russian commanders, convincing them of their ability to roll the enemy back when the proper moment comes.

The domestic situation here continues perfectly sound. The readiness wherewith the country accepted the compulsory service bill has intensified the confidence wherewith the whole nation looks forward to victory. The feature of the compulsion bill debates has been the tributes enthusiastically paid by Mr. Balfour, Mr. Bonar Law and other Unionist leaders to Ireland's magnificent services in the war. Mr. Redmond has not only secured Ireland's exclusion from the bill. Instead of this prejudicing her in the eyes of the British public, they freely make allowance for the special circumstances dictating it, and are content that she shall make her contribution in her own way.

This is a sound policy, and Ireland will repay this practical measure of

TWENTY SALVATION ARMY OFFICERS COMING TO-NIGHT

Commissioner Richards and Col. and Mrs. Gaskins With Other Special Officers Will Be in the City Over Sunday.

There will be a great reception of officers by the S.A. folks to-day at the G.T.R. station at 8:30, when about 20 special officers will arrive from the West. Already delegates from many places have arrived, and others will come in to-night at 8 o'clock on the G.T.R. The greatest reception, however, will be given Commissioner Richards and Col. and Mrs. Gaskin, when they arrive to-night on the C. P.R., at 8 o'clock. The bands will be there and a general good hearty welcome will be accorded the Leaders of the S.A. movement in Eastern Canada. After a march to the Temple there will be a great reception of officers and delegates. No doubt a very large crowd will be present. This is the largest number of visitors that Peterborough has ever had in Salvation Army circles.

Will Remove Three Children From Wretched Home in Belmont

Mr. Wm. Henry of the Children's Shelter Found One of the Worst Cases of Poverty in His Experience.

Mr. Wm. Henry of the Children's Shelter has returned from a trip from the outer fringe of Belmont Township, where he found three children living under such deplorable conditions that he purposes returning for them next week. The father is over 70 and the mother, said to be none too mentally alert, is 39. The shack that passes for their home is near Deer Lake, where the father fishes in the summer. What he engages in during the balance of the year was not mentioned, but it apparently isn't very lucrative, for the house was bare except for an old table, stove, couple of chairs and what appeared to be beds. The children, one boy and two girls from six to twelve years, seemed fairly intelligent, but in any case Mr. Henry concluded that they should be brought to the Shelter for proper treatment

BAD ACCIDENT IN A FACTORY

Floor of Machine Shop in Detroit Motor Car Plant Collapses

Special to The Examiner:

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 22.—While hundreds were at work in the building, the second floor of the machine shop of the Hudson Motor Co. collapsed shortly before noon to-day. Early police reports state that several had been killed and many injured. All the employees of the stock and varnishing departments, located directly under the machine shop, were buried in the debris.

The factory officials refused to estimate the number of men at work in these departments at the time.

Ambulances in the city were sent to the factory and the police and firement were sent to direct the rescue work.

H. H. Stevens Confident Prohibition Resolution Will Be Successful

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—H. H. Stevens, M.P., Conservative, who will introduce a Dominion-wide prohibition resolution measure in the House of Commons, was in the city to-day and states he has arranged to have the resolution a non-partisan measure by getting Hon. Charles Marcil, ex-speaker and Liberal member of parliament for Bonaventure, to second it. He has great hopes that it will carry by a large majority.

DOLLAR DAY.

"In regard to home interests, which have to be taken into account a little, even in this strenuous time of war activity, "dollar day" takes an important place. It has a double interest; it permits our merchants special opportunity of showing how well they can serve their customers in city and country and place these opportunities prominently and attractively before the people. It also serves another purpose; it tends to bring the people of city and county closer together in mutually profitable relations and thus helps a condition that lies at the base of the mercantile and business prosperity of the city.

"Dollar day" was inaugurated by the Examiner in 1914; last year the merchants conducted the enterprise. This year at the request of the merchants the Examiner is managing the dollar day opportunity.

This year "dollar day" promises to be more attractive to the purchasing public than ever before and more important to our merchants, who are preparing to offer a wide range of exceptional values.

Remember that Peterborough's "Dollar Day" falls on Thursday, Feb. 3rd.

IS IT BRITISH JUSTICE?

In Nova Scotia a man was jailed as a punishment for treasonable talk. He declared that the recruiting slogan "Your King and country need you," should be — "Your King and country bleed you." For this an obscure and uninfluential citizen was punished by being sent to jail. We see in the Quebec Legislature a member of the Nationalist brand declaring that Canada owes nothing to England, and has no right to, or obligation to participate in this war. We have also in the Senate, the highest legislative chamber in Canada, a member of that distinguished body, talking in the same strain. Yet they are allowed to talk treason in high places and defy as they do in so many words, anybody to meddle with them; and yet their treason is ten times more harmful—shouted as it is in the public forum with all the influence of representative position behind it, is a ten times more potent discouragement to recruiting, than the semi-playful travesty of a recruiting slogan, by an obscure man who was heard by only one or two men. Otherwise we have the treasonable utterances of Mr. Lavergne of the Quebec Legislature, and of Senator Choquette reported and sent broadcast throughout the Dominion.

It is asked by the man in the street if this is British justice—why one man is punished and the others allowed to escape? It is a natural question. Parliamentary privilege permits a member to libel any outsider with impunity, but parliamentary privilege should not protect treason from punishment. It may permit libel, but the line should be drawn at treason.

EXAMINE THE SHELL CONTRACTS.

Charges have been made on the floor of Parliament by a responsible member, to the effect that excessive charges were made for the manufacture of shells, and that orders were distributed in a way to give middlemen who had no facilities for making munitions, opportunities for undue profits without adequate service. These contracts, involving an expenditure of the immense sum of 350 million dollars, were intrusted to a commission of Canadian business men, chosen by the Canadian Government. This places the responsibility for the proper performance of contracts upon the Government, and both on business grounds and on grounds of national honour, it seems incumbent upon the Government to probe the charges that are based upon foundations sufficiently specific to give place to the fear that there has been waste of the trust money of the British people placed in the hands of the Canadian Government to spend.

It would seem that Canada's good name for honorable dealing and honest business methods is so directly involved that investigation is inevitable in order to disprove charges of so much consistence, if fortunately they should prove to be unfounded; or, if justified, to definitely place the responsibility.

It is hardly conceivable that the Government has taken the position that it will oppose strenuously any attempt at inquiry into this serious matter. Yet it has done so in face of consistency, in defiance of the considerations of the national honour that are so directly involved. It may be, as is claimed by some, that there is little in the charges that contracts were so manipulated as to give huge and inordinate profits, involving the waste of millions of dollars of trust money. We were told the same about other charges, that, investigated, proved to have been well founded. It was proven, as charged, that dishonest methods, excessive charges and unrighteous profits were made in the purchase of horses, medical supplies and other military requisites for the government. In all these cases the charges made were proven to the hilt, and the investigations made were amply justified in fact. Isn't there a possibility that similar results would follow an investigation into the manner of making munitions?

It is claimed that the Canadian Government is not legally responsible—that the money was British money—and that, though the Government appointed the commission to make the expenditure and secure fair value, the Government is not responsible. It may not be legally responsible in the strict technical sense, but it is responsible in a far larger way—it is in honour bound to justify its relation to the creation and operations of the shell commission. A man of sensitive honour who accepts, in a friendly way the responsibility of transacting a little business for a friend feels bound to exercise more care in such a matter of trust than he might do if the business were strictly his own. Being an honest man, if the business were dishonestly done, if his friendly client were cheated, he would not take refuge in the plea that the money was not his money; he wouldn't, as he couldn't do, shirk responsibility by refusing to talk the matter over.

So the Government is bound, in honour, to see that there is nothing, or something, as the case may be, in the charges made. By refusing the investigation, suspicion is at once aroused that there is something to be concealed. The British way is the fair, open way. If the Government feels that there is no ground for the charges, that, considering the currency that reports have gained, the noise they have made in the country, is all the more ground for an investigation to disprove them, which would be an easy matter if the facts would support an attempt at disproof.

There may be no grounds, in fact, for the charges of wasteful manipulation of shell contracts, but the Government, by refusal to grant investigation, furnishes grounds for thinking that there has been something wrong—something that, for the credit of the country, should be kept concealed. The credit of the country, on the contrary, the credit of the government, are involved, and at stake; and the only way to wipe out the reproach is through investigation. If nothing wrong should be discovered, so much the better. If, as has proven the case in other charges that have been investigated, there has been wrong doing proven, then the responsibility will be fixed, and the government and country will have shown that they will be no consenting and excusing party to a course of action that has wasted the trust money placed by the British government in the hands of the Canadian government, and has given short value and long profits in the matter of the expenditure of money devoted to promoting the sacred cause of freedom and the safety of the Empire.

WOMEN IN THE CABINET?

One reservation may have to be made in the statement that the Manitoba Legislature has carried women suffrage to its logical conclusion. We do not know that women are yet eligible to seats in the Cabinet, though that would seem to be involved in their capacity to sit in the Legislature.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

A NOTE OF DISCORD.

Manitoba has discovered what has been Ontario's experience with regard to bilingualism. Many disputes have arisen in Manitoba in school districts populated by more than one nationality in consequence of the regulation which permits foreign teaching when ten foreign children attend the school. As a consequence Manitoba is going to abolish bilingual schools—a wise decision. As in Ontario, French will be taught in its place, but English will be the language of instruction. Nothing could be better designed to create a united Canada. Bilingualism is a note of discord to our greater nationship.

SHALL THE SHELLS CONTRACTS SCANDALS BE DULY PROBED?

The announcement of the Solicitor-General at Ottawa yesterday, that the Borden Government will strenuously oppose any inquiry into the conditions under which projectiles have been and are still being manufactured in Canada, will shock the country. The charges made by Dr. Pugsley on the floor of the Parliament cannot be ignored. The national honor is involved. The spending of the colossal sum of three hundred million dollars provided by the British taxpayer for the manufacture of shells in the Dominion was entrusted to a committee of Canadian business men chosen by the Canadian Government. The British War Office placed implicit trust in these men. If that trust was misplaced; if contracts were awarded to associates of the members of the committee at prices which were notoriously excessive; if middlemen who had no facilities whatsoever for the making of projectiles were given orders which they peddled about the country and sublet at prices giving huge rake-off profits, the people of Canada are morally if not also legally responsible for the wasting of millions of dollars sorely needed for the legitimate expenses of the war.

In most European countries men guilty of the offences definitely charged against specified individuals by Dr Pugsley would be sent to jail with the utmost promptitude. In Canada there should be at least an opportunity for bringing out the truth before a Parliamentary committee. The contrast between the methods of shell manufacture followed in the Dominion and in Australia, where the metallurgical industries are not nearly so well developed as in Canada, is greatly to the discredit of the Dominion. The Federal Government of the Commonwealth tackled the problem so wholeheartedly and with such absence of the spirit of profiteering that large numbers of projectiles are now being delivered at actual cost.

Unlike Britain and Canada, the Commonwealth did not possess mechanical and engineering plants, and all the tools and machinery required for the manufacture of munitions had to be imported from distant countries. A Metal Exchange was established to control metal supplies in the country, and a Munition Committee was formed, which enrolled a Munitions Workers' Corps, including all men of military age regarded as indispensable for the manufacture of munitions. After consultation with the British War Office the Federal Munition Committee proceeded to manufacture 18-pound high explosive shell, unloaded, for the British army, and a price of $5.05 per shell, including the cost of the steel, was fixed, and all contractors ready to accept this price were free to tender as to the quantity they could handle, subject to a revision of prices after March 31 next. Contractors accepting these terms are free to supply all the shells they can manufacture up to June 30 next, three months' notice to be given by the British Government of expiry of the open contract.

Four of the nineteen tenders accepted were from the State Government of New South Wales, South Australia, Victoria, and Queensland, the contract for the latter being undertaken by the State Government Railways Department. In each of these four cases the larger part of the work is being done at actual cost. The public services were not alone in this patriotic offer to manufacture shells at cost. Several private firms accepted the contract price fixed, but stipulated that they would refund any balance over and above actual cost when ascertained. The Barrier Munitions Company Proprietary, Ltd., of Broken Hill, New South Wales, announced that, with the exception of the manager and his staff, "the company seeks no profit whatever." The Department of Defence of Australia put in motion all the machinery of the Government engineering shops for the manufacture not only of shells but of guns for the British War Office, and this without graft or profit. New Zealand followed suit, and is also turning out shells and machine guns at cost for the British army.

What a contrast, in national service and Imperial devotion, is here shown between the action of Australia and that of Canada! The price originally fixed in Canada for machining and assembling 18-pound high-explosive shells—not including the cost of the steel forging, which were supplied free to the contractors—was $5.70 each, and large contracts were let at this high price. Adding the estimated cost of steel forgings, the cost in Canada was nearly seven dollars each shell, as compared with $5.05 in Australia.

Thousands of Canadians have freely offered their lives on the altar of patriotism. What shall be said of a Canadian Government which permitted the exploitation of the necessities of the Empire at the most critical period of its existence in order to enable its friends, among whom Dr. Pugsley names at least one member of Parliament, to obtain undue profits? Australia and New Zealand have chosen the better part, but it is not yet too late to turn the searchlight of publicity on the shell-making scandal in Canada and stimulate practical patriotism by the pressure of public opinion.—The Globe.

THE GREATEST WEALTH

The conservative estimate of the census and statistics office, Ottawa, published this week, places the total value of the field crops of the Dominion last year at $800,000,000. New high records were established both as to quantity, quality and market value. The earlier estimates as to the grain yields of the prairie provinces have had to be revised upward. Canada's total wheat yield is now estimated at 376,208,600 bushels, or 215,038,600 bushels more than the previous year, with an average yield per acre of 20.98 bushels, as compared with 15.67 bushels per acre in 1914. The average yields of oats, rye and other cereal crops show similar phenomenal gains. This is a record which will atone for many past economic sins.—Monetary Times.

A TIMELY DENUNCIATION.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's denunciation of the Nationalists was timely and came properly from the distinguished son of his Province. He bore testimony to Canada's freewill action in making war which should prevent further diatribes about Great Britain's incidious control of the national action—Montreal Daily Mail.

POOR EXCUSES.

One of the poorest excuses that a man ever gave was put up to one of the collectors for the Patriotic Fund on Tuesday. "I gave all I intended to give last year. I have nothing to give this year for that purpose." Why could a soldier who enlisted with the first contingent not say: "I went through the battle of Langemarck and Hill 60. I will go through no more battles. I am through." One would be as reasonable as the other. —Guelph Mercury.

To jump at conclusions may be to vault over the rights of others.

THIS GUARANTEES A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Recipe Sure to Produce Joyous Twelve-Month.

Take 12 fine, full grown months, see that these are thoroughly free from old memories of bitterness, rancor, hate and jealousy, cleanse them completely from every clinging spite; pick off all specks of pettiness and littleness; in short, see that these months are free from all the past—have them as fresh and clean as when they first came from the great storehouse of Time.

Cut these months into 30 or 31 equal parts. This batch will keep for just one year. Do not attempt to make up the whole batch at one time (so many persons spoil the entire lot in this way), but prepare one day at a time, as follows:

Into each day put 12 parts of faith, 11 of patience, 10 of courage, nine of work (some people omit this ingredient and so spoil the flavour of the rest), eight of hope, seven of fidelity, six of liberality, five of kindness, four of rest (leaving this out is like leaving the oil out of the salad—don't do it), three of prayer, two of meditation and one well-selected resolution. If you have no conscientious scruples, put in about a teaspoonful of good spirits, a dash of fun, a pinch of folly, a sprinkling of play and a heaping cupful of good humour.

Pour into the whole love ad libitum and mix with a vim. Cook thoroughly in a fervent heat; garnish with a few smiles and a sprig of joy; then serve with quietness, and a Happy New Year is certainty.

Sailed To Death In War Romance

Death of Young Woman on Brindisi Last Chapter of the Story.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The boy laughed, shrugged his shoulders and clicked his heels together when he saw the worried, caseworn faces of his fellow passengers on a boat whose nose was pointed toward the war. The girl smiled, blushed and drew a little closer to him.

"We're going to the war to find happiness," said the boy.

"And perhaps we can share a little of it with those who are less fortunate," softly added the girl.

But now they know that there is no happiness—only death—within the sound of cannon's roar. The boy lies in a desolate grave in Serbia, near the vermin-filled hospital, where he tried to help suffering victims of the war. The girl lies at the bottom of the Adriatic Sea, drowned when the ship that was carrying her on a similar errand of mercy struck a mine and went down.

The romance that ended in tragedy began in New York early in the war, when nurses and physicians from various parts of the country met to organize the Frothingham Red Cross unit. Miss Stephanie Hampl, only twenty years old, offered herself as a nurse. Dr. John Kara, a boyish appearing applicant, from Chicago, announced that he would go as a surgeon.

From the first the two were inseparable companions. Their ambitions and their worries, their hopes and their fears, drew them together. It was a surprisingly short time later that their friends learned they were engaged. Marriage was to make no difference in the life's work they said.

They thought that the two had found the antidote for war—that they had robbed it of its horrors. The voyage that carried them to the conflict seemed more of a vacation to the two.

But at their destination they were separated. Dr. Kara was rushed to Serbia to join the army of medical men who were to work wonders with that pestilence breeding filth that already had claimed more lives than the bullets of the enemy. He carried out his commission, but at the cost of his life. Dr. Kara fell a victim of typhus, and was buried among the hundreds of graves of those who had been his patients in a little town in Serbia.

Miss Hampl was all but heartbroken. Her hope of finding happiness within sound of the cannon's roar vanished and she returned home. For two months she remained with her parents at their home, 705 Jackson Avenue, The Bronx.

Then she again set out to accomplish her first mission. She still could carry comfort, perhaps happiness, to others who were suffering through the war. She returned to Italy, sailing from New York on the Brindisi late in December. The Brindisi never reached its destination. One of the mines placed by those who would have profited by the young woman's ministrations carried her and 260 others to death.

News of the death of Miss Hampl reached New York yesterday in a dispatch from Dr. Edward F. Ryan, of the American Red Cross. He said the nurse had been buried at San Giovanni di Medua, Albania.

DOZEN "DO'S" FOR YOUTHS

Pastor Sets Out Rules Which Young Men Should Follow.

A dozen "Do's" for church-going folk have been prepared by the Rev. C. L. Peck of Cleveland.

Here are his "Do's" for young men:

Demand a strict account of the little things in life.

Build your fortune in good manners.

Tact and common sense are the secret of a successful life.

Have grit and pluck.

Live within your means. Extravagance is the road to failure.

Make the goal of your life greater than wealth.

Seek first the kingdom of Heaven and make a Christian life your foundation.

Be on time.

Always wear a smile in the home, office or factory. You must take your joy to Heaven with you, for you will not find it there.

Be prepared for your job.

Have respect for honesty.

Life is a dream in this world that is continued in the next.

The woman who is careless in her frock should ever keep on the door of love a lock.

A woman's hesitating no, no, no, ever is but yes, each man for self must his answer guess.

Is Life Worth Living?

It Depends Upon the Liver.

Wrong living is the cause of most physical ills and generally stomach and liver are first to suffer.

Tea and coffee drinking is a very common cause of digestive disorder, but it usually takes the user some time to fully realise it. Fact is—some people drink tea or coffee with seeming impunity, but when disturbances of the digestive organs result in headache, biliousness, irritability, and other common symptoms of caffeine poisoning, it's time for the tea or coffee drinker to look to his table beverage for the true cause.

For any tea or coffee drinker who finds that his health is wrong, but doesn't know just why, it's a good idea to quit both the tea and coffee and use

POSTUM

—the pure food-drink

Made of wheat and a small amount of molasses, Postum has a rich snappy flavour, yet contains no caffeine (the drug in tea and coffee) nor other harmful element.

There are two forms of Postum. The original Postum Cereal must be boiled; Instant Postum is soluble in boiling water and can be made in the cup at table. Both kinds are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

A change from tea or coffee to Postum is a good move toward right living.

LONG CASUALTY LIST OF ATHLETE HEROES

Leaders in Canadian Sport Who Gave Lives in One Year—Every Branch and Club Appears

The year 1915 went down on record as one of the saddest in Canadian sportdom. Many of the most prominent athletes in Canada gave up their lives in the great struggle for freedom. Every city in Canada contributed largely to the Canadian overseas forces, and the majority mourn the loss of prominent officers and members. Casualties among the athletic members of the Canadian forces began shortly after their arrival at Salisbury, but it was not until after the first big battle that sportsmen in this country realized the great sacrifices rendered necessary in that memorable stand of the khaki-clad Canadians on the outskirts of St. Julien. Among the popular Canadian athletes who gave up their lives in France were: Ross Binkley, the manly little ex-captain of the Toronto Argonauts, one of the most brilliant centre halves that ever booted a ball; "Meddo" McDonald, another Argonaut stalwart, who figured on the eight at St. Catharines and also the football team; Arthur Muir, a Winnipeg boy, who was in the Highland brigade, a former Varsity football hero; Jeff Taylor, famed as the Argonaut stroke in that famous race against Detroit and Ottawa at the Canadian Henley in 1912; Capt. Bill Jarvis, a noted Toronto yachtsman and footballer; Allan Davidson, a Kingston boy, who came into prominence as a member of the Toronto hockey team; Ed. Harris, the St. Catharines lacrosse player; Jerry Kenna, who figured on the M.A.A.A. lacrosse club when it went West after the Minto Cup; "Blais" Dussault, an Ottawa boy, who played with the Nationals in the intermediate N.L.U.; Dan Stoddard, a well known Ottawa bowler, missing since the first important engagement; Lt. Helmer, of Ottawa, who was prominently identified with Ottawa Collegiate sports; Mr. Gerald Lees, former champion of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club and runner-up on two occasions for the amateur championship of Canada; Will Harrison, an Ottawa boy, who died in England as a result of gas poisoning at Ypres; Capt. Guy Drummond, Capt. Newton, Major Rivers-Bulkley and many other golfers; Johnnie Baker, a Pacific Coast rugby player, was killed in France, and many other athletes, who may never be heard from, are still on the list of missing.

A Fitting Memory

Few thought when the Canadian contingent embarked amidst so much enthusiasm in 1914 that a few months would bring such sadness, but a glance along the list is sufficient to convince the most sceptical that Canadian sportsmen have given convincing expression to their loyalty. "Billy" Sharpe, an Ottawa aviator, met death in a fall a few weeks after his arrival in England, and his remains were brought back for interment at his former home in Perth. The majority of the other Canadian athletes are sleeping their last sleep under rough wooden crosses behind the British trenches in Flanders. Their graves were marked, however, and a movement launched by the Canadian Sportsmen's Patriotic Association to keep green in the memory of youthful Canadians the names of those who shall not return.

FAMOUS WAR PHRASES

Sayings Great and Otherwise Which Will go Down to Posterity

Out of this war have sprung many famous phrases. But the majority of people do not know from whom they originated. Mr. Lloyd George is responsible for two of the most notable. One is "Every shell is a life guard," and the other "Silver bullets." "Somewhere in France" came from the Press Bureau; "A scrap of paper" from Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg; "I nibble them," from General Joffre; "Business as usual" from Mr. H. E. Morgan; "Too proud to fight" from President Wilson, and "French's contemptible little army," from the Kaiser. Mr. Jack Judge has the credit of inventing the phrase "It's a long, long way to Tipperary." "Gott strafe England" comes from the German people generally, and English people return the compliment with that splendid phrase which will go down to history "To the last drop and the last shilling."

Peer's Famous Ancestor

Old memories are recalled by the death in battle of Lord Ninian Crichton-Stuart, brother of the Marquis of Bute. He was descended from the last of royal "favorites," the Earl of Bute, the intimate of George III. The Earl's famous advice to his royal friend was: "George be a King." The organs of the popular party showed him in cartoons as a "jackboot." This Earl of Bute got the erudite but impecunious Dr. Samuel Johnson his pension of $1,500 a year.

A man said to a little girl: "Who was that gentleman you were talking to?" "Why, that was no gentleman," she replied, "that was papa."

SERBIA

The kingdom of Serbia, as we know it to-day, began in 1878.

At one time there were 700 patients to 300 beds in Nish hospital.

Most of the people in the Balkan States firmly believe in fairies.

The river frontier between Serbia and Austria extends for 340 miles.

In some Serbian districts every master of a household drives a lamb to church one day each year.

KING PETER

Serbians have a practice of forecasting the future by means of the shoulder bone of a roasted sheep or pig.

Every grown man in Serbia can claim five acres of land from the Government, and this is exempt from all claims of debt.

Practically the whole of the population of Serbia dwells on the land, and farming and pig rearing are the staple industries.

SOCIALIST AND KING

Belgian Chatted With King Albert, Whom He Admired

In a letter to his wife in Canada a Belgian soldier who before the war was an ardent socialist speaks in terms of the highest admiration of King Albert. "Our brave King Albert, whom we have all learned first to respect and then to adore, very often comes to see us here in the plainest manner, which has absolutely nothing royal about it. I am sure he feels how glad we all are to see him and how much his visits cheer us up. More than once I have seen the King in the first line trenches and once he was only fifteen metres from the enemy. It is impossible to imagine a man more calm than he is. He speaks to all of us. With the better educated ones he has long talks on all kinds of subjects. For the others he has always words of encouragement and cheer.

"I have had two long talks with him on socialism and it was he who started the subject, of course. I told him that when a country was fortunate to have a King of the right kind I knew of no better government than a constitutional monarchy, which had a certain stability Republics did not possess, but that unfortunately there were many kings who did not see their duties in the proper light. He laughed and said that he quite agreed with me. And what is more, I think he meant it. Twice I have seen him pick up a rifle and fire at the enemy. Surely Albert is a first rate soldier as he is a first rate King."

CROWNS IN WARFARE

Kings Who Carry Their Regalia Into Battle

Monarchs no longer ride forth crowned to battle, as did King Richard III. to his last fatal fight on Bosworth Field. Nevertheless, even today crowns figure in the spectacular side of war more often than is commonly supposed. The King of Italy, for instance, although he does not of course always wear it, carries his crown with him wherever he goes, and frequently dons it when he reviews his troops on ceremonial parades.

The aged King Peter of Serbia, again, has twice during the present war appeared robed and crowned before his armies on the battlefield, when addressing them in those splendid speeches that have done so much to stimulate and encourage them in their heroic resistance to the foreign invaders.

King Ferdinand of Roumania will probably go crowned to war, if he goes at all; precisely as did his two predecessors, Prince Alexander Couza, and his uncle, King Charles I.

In Kent, England, the authorities have adopted a regulation making it incumbent upon people to have rear lights on perambulators. The police consider that anything from a bicycle to a traction engine is a "vehicle."

Never let your energy leak away little drops at a time.

A man can be better than his reputation but never better than his principles.

QUICK-WITTED WOMAN FOOLED CAPTAIN OF SUB.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The story of the outwitting of a German submarine captain by a quick-witted woman has just been brought to New York, with the result that German statements of the seizure of important documents from Captains Napier and Wilson are being discredited. The nationality of the woman is being carefully guarded in order to prevent new complications with Germany.

Captain Wilson was returning from Sofia on the Adriatic, when, as he was conversing with a woman passenger, he noticed the periscope of an approaching submarine, according to the story of a returning American.

"Well, they're after me, I guess," he said then. Looking searchingly at his companion he said: "Can I trust you?" "Absolutley," was the reply.

Then the officer told her about his important despatches. He asked that she take them and deliver them to the War Office on her return to Italy. She took the papers and did deliver them, later being personally thanked by Lord Kitchener. Captain Wilson threw his empty despatch box into the water, and, when it was later recovered by the submarine crew, they gave out that important documents had been recovered.

Never anticipate to-morrow's troubles, and those of to-day will be more easily borne.

The censure of a critic is never worse than praise from a fool.

There is sweet music in every home where the heart strings are touched by gentleness and courtesy. The mild word, the gentle answer, the tender act, the patient considerateness, will touch chords of kindness and make sweet melody in the family life as everywhere. A desolate, dreary place is a home devoid of those little courtesies which are practiced in the best social life.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA

THE newspaper in the Peterborough zone of Ontario to be granted Newspaperdom's "Winning Daily" emblem was the EXAMINER. After investigating the local field, the following considerations were established: First, the EXAMINER has a materially larger circulation than any other Peterborough daily; second, it is the leading evening newspaper of Peterborough and the tributary territory; third, it is supreme in volume of advertising published—and this volume is made up of gilt-edged business from local and foreign advertisers in Canada and the United States. Local advertisers unanimously endorse it for its result-getting efficiency. It invites correspondence regarding the Peterborough zone as a business possibility in 1916; the possibility of dealer cooperation, etc.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Young American, Going Through Windsor, Decides To Join Army--and Joins

WINDSOR, Jan. 21.—One of the hardest men in the world to get excited is the gray-haired veteran conductor on a fast train. Anyone who has travelled on an express, where every [illegible] worth money, and who sees the ticket-puncher going through the aisles of his train, will hand him the prize as the most unrued man in the universe, no matter what situation comes up.

But one really became excited and enthusiastic Tuesday afternoon while the train he was in charge of was under the middle of the Detroit river, in the Michigan Central tunnel. It was a fast train, going from Detroit to Buffalo. Immigration Inspector C. Wright, of Windsor, was making his rounds when he came upon the cause of the excitement.

Questions Young Man.

Lounging in the smoking car of the train was a well-dressed, well-built young man who was gazing absently out of the window. Over his head was a fine suitcase and an expensive overcoat, evidently his property. Inspector Wright asked the usual questions of the young man, inquiring where he was going. The traveller said he was bound for nowhere in particular, although he had bought a ticket through to a city in Tennessee and was going by a roundabout way, in order to see the country.

"By the way," remarked the stranger, "we will be in Canada in a few minutes, won't we?"

Wright informed him that Canada would be visible at the other end of the tunnel.

"You have some kind of a war on your hands, haven't you?" was the next query.

Wright said that there was a little fight somewhere over in Europe in which Canada was taking an active part.

Not a Private Affair.

"Any chance of getting in, or is it a private war?" asked the stranger, a new light coming into his eyes. "Can an American subject who has had a little war experience go over and take a shot at the Germans."

When Wright said that an American Legion was being recruited in Windsor the stranger arose, pulled a through ticket from his pocket and handed it to Wright. He then took his suitcase from the rack and put on his overcoat.

"This is all the far I am going," he announced. "Lead me to that American Legion office, I want to enlist."

Among the interested listners to the conversation was the conductor.

Conductors Gets Excited.

"That's the spirit to show," he declared enthusiastically. "I am an American and if I was younger I would enlist. Give him three cheers, boys."

And the cheers were given and the young American left the train in tow of the immigration officer.

He gave his name as Henry Stoner, born in Illinois, at the 97th battalion office.

Mother Would Approve.

"I believe my mother would want me to go to this war if she was alive," he said. "When I was a kid she drove me 16 miles through the mountains in Tennessee to join a regiment that was being recruited for the Spanish-American war because she thought our cause was a just one. I believe she would think the same about this war."

The man was sent down to Toronto after passing the medical examination.

Australians, Back in London, Talk of Pals Buried in Gallipoli

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Australians and New Zealanders are drifting into London since the abandonment of the British positions on Gallipoli Peninsula. In London tea rooms, on street corners and elsewhere the tanned, burly Australians, the dusky Maoris and lighter complexioned New Zealanders meet. They talk a great deal among themselves about the abandoned dead. "It wasn't leaving the place that hurt; it's the thought of a fellow's best friends buried in those gullies and ravines," said an Anzac fighter to-day. He talked about the appalling number of casualties suffered by the Anzacs; of lonely cemeteries under the cliffs, and in Shrapnel Gully; of burials under cover of darkness to escape the enemy's fire and of midnight funeral services where the officiating priest or clergyman could be heard and not seen. Almost everyone of the thousands of graves at Anzac is marked with a cross—sometimes bearing the name, but more often reading: To the Memory of Fifty Australians, or "To the Memory of Fifty New Zealanders". To the Maoris it was not so hard to leave their dead. They believe the place where a dead man lies is sacred; watched over by spirits who would do evil to intruders. Grotesque wooden idols with sea shell eyes perch garishly on sticks above the graves of the Maoris warriors. The true spirit of humanity which animates the Turks in their fighting is shown in the stories of the Anzacs. An instance of this was shown in May when both sides agreed to a burial armistice. An imaginary line was drawn through No Man's Land between the trenches and pickets from both sides patrolled it while searching parties from both scoured the underbrush of the hills and hollows. The Turks brought the Christian dead to the line, the Anzacs doing likewise with the slain Mohammedans. Religious rites were hurriedly observed on both sides as the bodies were placed in hastily dug trenches. Crosses were erected and the armistice came to an end. It is this spirit on the part of the Turk that makes the Anzacs believe that the last resting places of their dead, crosses, inscriptions and all, will not be molested. Hundreds of Anzacs will go back there after the war to visit the silent graves. It is declared not improbable that all the crosses marking the thousands of graves will be replaced by more durable markings of stone to forever commemorate the memory of the dead.

Presentation To Rev. Fr. Casey By Congregation at Bracebridge

Magnificent Farewell to Popular Priest Who Goes to Norwood to Take Charge of St. Paul's Church There

The C.M.S. Hall, Bracebridge, was crowded to the last inch of space on Thursday night, when the congregation of St. Joseph's bade farewell to Rev. D. A. Casey. The warm place that Father Casey has won in the affections of the people of Bracebridge was eloquently testified to by the extremely large attendance, not only of Catholics, but of many of different religious affiliations, and also by the very substantial purse presented to the departing priest, as well as in the many able addresses delivered during the course of the evening. Two notes pervaded all the speeches—one of congratulation, in so much as His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, has been fit to promote Father Casey to the more responsible position of pastor at Norwood; the other of regret that his relations with Bracebridge were about to be severed. Mr. P. J. Marrin presided over the meeting, and a musical programme initiated the night's programme. Those who contributed included Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Aff. Slater, Miss Kennedy, Mr. Didero, who sang a song in Italian, Miss Elemere Caisse, and Misses Nellie, Agnes and Gertrude Fenn. The following addresses were read by Mr. Thomas Pelletier:

From the Bracebridge Women's Institute, To Rev. D. A. Casey:

We, the members of the Bracebridge Women's Institute, desire to express to you our hearty appreciation of the services you have tendered to our Institute in many ways.

Please accept the accompanying gift as a small token of our regard and esteem, and we wish you every happiness and success in your new field of labour.

Signed on behalf of the Women's Institute, Clara J. Brown for Mrs. Salmon, Pres., Mrs. G. Simmons, Mrs. C. Fryer, Mrs. C. G. Merritt, Mrs. H. Linney, Mrs. O. Gavin, Mrs. A. Loughery, Mrs. J. Caisse, Mrs. Wm. Lowe, Mrs. W. P. Tinkiss, Mrs. R. F. Taplin, Mrs. W. G. Hill, Mrs. Harry Walliss, Mrs. A. S. Bates, Mrs. Lou Pelletier, Bella Hodgson, A. J. Corrigon, Miss Ethyle J. Armstrong, Teresa Arabella Galbraith, Mrs. R. E. Armstrong, Mrs. Kirk, Mrs. S. H. Armstrong, Mrs. W. C. Mahaffy, Vice-Pres., Mrs. Riley, Vice-Pres., Mrs. W. Galbraith, Secretary.

The Institute's gift a gold mounted umbrella, was presented by Mrs. John Murphy.

The following address from the congregation of St. Joseph's was read by Mr. Thos. Pelletier, and the accompanying purse presented by Mr. Murphy.

Bracebridge, Ontario,
January 6th, 1916.

Rev. D. A. Casey:

Dear Father Casey,—Having learned that His Lordship, the Bishop, has promoted you to be parish priest of Norwood, the people of the parish have assembled here this evening to bid you farewell, or as we would rather say, "Adieu," and to express to you our mingled feelings of regret and pride—regret that you are leaving us, and pride that His Lordship is giving you a well earned promotion.

It is now some four years since you first came to us, and we can truly say that we can look back at this period, on our part at least, as one of many advantages to us, owing to the unstinted manner in which you have spent yourself on behalf of all the people of the parish.

To us, as Catholics, you have ever been a true Shepherd of souls, a Priest of God, and a Preacher of the Gospel of Love, and if, we might venture a guess as to your favourite text it would be "Little Children, Love one Another," and if you have taught us nothing else than to be charitable to one another's failings it would be sufficient to mark you the true priest and Soggarth Aroon.

We do not wish to hurt your natural modesty by enumerating your various activities in the parish in many ways other than those we have mentioned, such as the Catholic Men's Society, our Dramatic Club, and so on, but we want you to know that all these good works of yours are more than appreciated by us, and as a very small token of regard for our dear Father Casey we ask you to accept this purse of gold, and with it what we know you value far more than all the gold in the world, the love and esteem of a Catholic people for a good priest.

And now once more, dear Father, we bid you "adieu," and bid you God speed in your new field of work. Our prayers will go with you, and we will ask you in return when at the Altar of Sacrifice to remember your faithful people of Bracebridge.

Signed on behalf of the congregation, P. J. Marrin, Geo. Fenn, Wm. Galbraith, John Murphy, Maurice Fitzmaurice, Henry Speedie, W. J. Fitzmaurice, Thomas Pelletier, Joseph Caisse, Thos. Fitzmaurice, Jos. Couture.

In a very feeling reply Rev. Father Casey expressed his heartfelt thanks for such a splendid tribute of respect and esteem. "I feel," he said, "that I deserve but little thanks for whatever I may have done for the people of this extensive parish. I simply did my duty, and for doing that no one deserves any gratitude." He complimented the Catholics of Bracebridge in their sterling faith, of which the gathering that night was a concrete expression, "for," he said, "I do not take this presentation as meant personally for myself, but rather as a proof of your love and reverence for the priest of God, and as such I value it." In reviewing his time in Bracebridge he paid an eloquent compliment to the worth of his pastor, Rev. Father O'Leary. "During the four years that I have been intimately associated with him in the work of this parish, he never spoke an unkind word, or did an unkind act to the one whose privilege it was to be his curate, and one of the abiding memories I will carry away with me from Bracebridge will be that of a great big hearted priest, who was ever an elder—A very little elder—brother to me. I do not think that I shall ever feel more at home in my own house in Norwood than I have felt in Father O'Leary's house in Bracebridge." To the non-Catholics of Bracebridge he returned his sincere thanks for the many courtesies extended to him during his sojourn in their midst. "I do not think that in all this vast Dominion you will find people of a broader tolerance, or more ready to play fair." The meeting applauded enthusiastically. Intolerance, he said, is altogether foreign to Catholicity, above all the Catholic priest, and it is a supreme joy to the priest to find those who differ from him on questions of dogma prepared to meet him half way. "My last word to the Protestants of Bracebridge, whom I am proud to call my friends, is the wish that no matter what may be the line of division amongst the people on this community that it may never be drawn denominationally." To the ladies of the Institute he returned his sincere thanks for their totally unexpected remembrance, and he assured them that if he had ever been of any assistance to them in their work that assistance was given away as gladly as it was received. He insisted on the necessity of unity amongst the members of the Catholic body, and also of tolerance for those who worshipped at different altars, and as a parting message wished them the best of God's gifts — an abundance of genuine faith.

Mr. Coutre followed with his usual weighty and witty remarks. Mr. Galbraith paid a tribute to the Sacrifices entailed by the work of a priest in Muskoka, and made special reference to Father Casey's able editorial work on The Catholic Record. Messrs. Speedy, J. D. Smith, Bayaville, R. Dinner, Lou Pelletier, and Geo. Fenn, handed out some more bouquets, and Rev. Father O'Leary wound up a notable evening in Catholic circles in Bracebridge by expressing his regret at Father Casey's removal, and his satisfaction in the thought that he was going to wider and higher spheres of usefulness.

DEATH OF WOMAN DUE TO OPERATION

Coroner Declares "Race Suicide" is on Increase in Toronto.

TORONTO, Jan. 21. — So conclusive was the evidence given at the adjourned inquest last night into the death of Mrs. Elizabeth McKerron, of 648 Hillsdale Road, that it took the coroner's jury only a very short time to bring in a verdict that death was due to bloodpoisoning caused by an illegal operation. To this they added that from the evidence they believed that the operation was performed by Mrs. Louisa Cull, but did not think Mrs. Christiana Hay was an accessory to it.

Mrs. McKerron died on December 19th at the General Hospital, where she had been taken from her home. There have been several previous sittings of coroner and jury on the case, and last week Mrs. Louisa Cull, of 46 Helena Avenue, and Mrs. Christiana Hay, of 51 Marlborough Ave., were arrested in connection with Mrs. McKerron's death. Mrs. Cull being charged with murder.

In his summing up Coroner De. Cotton said: "The question of race suicide is growing to alarming proportions in this city." The coroner added that there were between 300 and 400 cases in the hospitals last year as the direct result of illegal operations, in addition to many cases in private houses which were not discovered.

518 Persons Are Arrested In Crusade Against Expectoration

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Team work by the Health Department inspectors, the police and the city magistrates gave a decided impetus to the anti-spitting crusade. In all 518 persons were in court during the day, of which all except about thirty paid fines ranging from $1 to $5. Many of the police courts were congested, and no excuses were accepted by most of the magistrates, who declared themselves in thorough sympathy with the campaign.

Magistrate Ten Eyck, in the Jefferson Market Court, disposed of the greatest number of cases. Sixty-six persons were arraigned before him, and he fined each one. Those who had expectorated on the sidewalk were let go after payment of $1 each, but those accused of spitting in the subway or elevated railroad stations had to pay twice that amount. A large part of those arraigned were business men who sheepishly admitted that they had been at fault.

Magistrate Corrigan in West Side Court was more lenient. Of the thirty men brought before him, he discharged all except one with a warning not to repeat the offence. Magistrate Krotel in Morrisania Court fined thirty-two Bronx offenders five dollars each. Magistrate Groehl in West Farms Court imposed nineteen fines of one dollar each. The prevailing rate elsewhere in Manhattan and the Bronx was two dollars.

Fifty-two persons paid fines in Brooklyn and Queens. Magistrate Handy in the Adams Street Court discharged three men who had expectorated on the railroad tracks, asserting that there was no law against it. The Magistrate also declared that spitting against the trunks of trees or telegraph poles was legally permissible.

Health Department officials declared that the campaign would be pressed vigorously until the present epidemic of grip had been checked. They declared that spread of the disease was due more to promiscuous spitting than to any other one cause.

Australia To Raise a Fresh Army of 50,000

MELBOURNE, Jan. 21.—One of the first official acts of the new prime minister of Australia, Wm. M. Hughes, has been the announcement that a fresh army will be furnished by the Commonwealth, and that this army will number 50,000 men.

"This further contribution," said Mr. Hughes, "will bring the total number of men supplied by Australia by next June to something like 300,000 men. It is to be understood that the principle of voluntary enlistment is to be adhered to. No request has been made to the Commonwealth by the imperial government for more men. The offer was made quite spontaneous. I have not the slightest doubt that the necessary men will be forthcoming. These will form new units and are independent of the quota of 9,000 a month necessary for reinforcements."

"A government appeal will be made by mail to every man in Australia within the military age group based on the recent war census—that is, single men from 18 to 44 years.

FLOOD SITUATION IN HOLLAND GRAVE

Bridge Destroyed Near Namur and Several Persons Drowned in Villages.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Despatches from Amsterdam state that the danger continues to grow in the flooded districts of the Province of North Holland. Additional collapses of important dikes are reported. Near Wyadewormer the destruction of the railway line is threatened.

The Dutch Government has published a statement requesting sympathizers in foreign countries to refrain from opening relief funds.

A despatch from Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"The Appeldike, near Dendermonde has burst and the Arnof's dike farm is submerged. The high water in the Meuse has destroyed a bridge near Namur, and several persons have been drowned in the surrounding villages. Queen Wilhelmina inspected the flooded districts.

"The waters continues to rise, and at several places the danger is still great. The dike around Reest has been greatly damaged, and Hesslinger is completely flooded."

A SPLENEID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is perhaps no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orlene in capsule form and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orlene taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Canada.

A wrongly married man endures much, suffers much, rather than change. He dislikes to dissolve old associations and is a creature of habit, hating change. There is one thing that will change this, and emphasize his wrongs, make his suffering intense, and that is the appearance on the scene of another woman. This long-coming woman has saved, when delayed on the road, the homes of many mismated couples.

C. P. R. EMPLOYEES ARE ASKED TO GIVE FOUR DAYS' PAY TO FUND

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, P. Q. Jan. 21.—The following appeal on behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Fund has been telegraphed to-day as a "23" message so as to reach every employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The "23" message has precedence over all others.

To Officers and Employees—Sixteen months ago the officers and employees of the Company responded in a very generous manner to an appeal from our President for the contribution of one day's pay towards the Canadian Patriotic Fund, which was inaugurated to care for the wives, children and dependents of men who so nobly volunteered to serve their country.

At that time Canada had an army of thirty three thousand men, while at present there are over two hundred thousand either in the firing line or in training, and this huge force will ere long be increased to five hundred thousand. With such a gigantic increase in our army the demands on the patriotic fund will be almost overwhelming. It is, therefore, a most sacred as well as a most patriotic duty of all Canadians to replenish the patriotic fund in order that the dependents of the nation and empire may have the comforts and necessaries of life. While well aware that great numbers of officers and employees of the Company have made, and are making, regular donations to the patriotic fund, the Canadian Pacific does not hesitate to make a further urgent appeal to its officers and employees to once again come to the rescue of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Knowing the generosity and patriotism of the officers and employees, we feel certain they will willingly participate in another specific donation by each contributing one day's pay during the months of February, May and August and November. It is left, however, to each officer and employee to decide conscientiously whether he or she can bear the heavier burden now called for, but the Company feels assured that all that can possibly do so will respond to this appeal. Forms for subscriptions will be furnished to employees, and when properly signed the amounts will be deducted on the payrolls for the months designated.

WITH DEPUTATION SPOKE OTHERWISE

Warden Mulligan of Victoria County Talked Little Bob. Instead of Pigeon Creek

A deputation, consisting of County Councillors Robt. Shaw and Reeve-elect John Ingram of Harvey, Chas. Coben of Galway, chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee; E. A. Dayell of Otonabee; Mr. Brown of Ashphodel, W. H. Crough, of Enniskmore; M. Walsh of Douro; County Clerk Ed. M. Elliott, and County Solicitor E. A. Peck of Peterborough; Messrs. John Young and M. Perdue of Enniskmore; Mayor Duffus and Aldermen A. H. Stratton, F. Dobbin and A. McIntyre of Peterborough City; Warden Mulligan and other representatives of Victoria County, met Premier Borden at 11.45 a.m., on Wednesday, when they were introduced to Sir Robert by J. A. Sexsmith, M. P. for East Peterborough.

Mr. Peck introduced the subject of a new bridge across Pigeon Creek and explained the need of the structure, giving many reasons why the Government should make a large contribution towards the expensive project, the main one being that the extreme length of the floating bridge was due to the fact that the erection of dams on the Trent Canal system raised the water to such an extent that the original width of thirty feet now necessitated a bridge over a mile in length.

Warden Mulligan of Victoria County had nothing whatever to say on behalf of the bridge on which mission he presumably journeyed to Ottawa to speak on, but devoted the few minutes at his disposal to advancing the claims of his county in connection with a promised grant towards the Little Bob bridge, erected some time ago.

Mayor Duffus of Peterborough made a strong presentation of the needs of the proposed new bridge as affecting the prosperity of the city and county of Peterborough, and the urgent and rightful needs of the residents of both counties living in that section.

County Councillor Robt. Shaw of Harvey also added a few words in support of the need of the bridge, and the fact that though it was war time with the Government, it was also war time with the County, and that financial aid was therefore greatly needed in the matter.

Premier Borden, in reply, pointed out that he was totally unfamiliar with the situation, and that he would place the matter before the Ministers of Public Works and the Department of Railways and Canals. The fact that the extremely long structure had been necessitated by the raising of the water by Government dams, would, he said, have a most important bearing on the matter, if substantiated. The Government, however, he added, had decided not to enter into any expenditures unless positively necessary owing to the urgent need of war finances, but that the Government, himself and his colleagues would give the matter their earliest and best consideration possible under the circumstances.

on the first Dollar Day. The highest prize is $25.00, and there are fifty prizes ranging from $1.00 up to $25. Fifty people are going to be rewarded for their successful estimating, and a little thought and comparative calculation is all that is needed to secure the 150 crisp new dollar bills.

A responsible committee of merchants will do the counting and selecting and selecting the estimates to ascertain those nearest correct, and their decision will be final and will be announced in The Examier of the day after Dollar Day, if the work can be accomplished in time.

Remember that the success of Dollar Day not only for this year, but for years to come, depends as much on the response and enthusiasm of the people as much as it does on the merchants. A big crowd prepared to take advantage of the day to the full, will encourage the merchants to greater efforts on succeeding Dollar Days, so everybody talk it, boost it, and let your friends who live within reasonable shopping distance of Peterborough know about it so they can all come.

LIBERAL POLICIES WERE ENDORSED BY COMMISSION

Recommendations Made by the Government Commission on Unemployment Embody Leading Policies of Mr. Rowell

SOCIAL REFORM

Endorsation of some of the leading policies of Mr. Rowell and the Provincial Liberal Party is contained in the recommendations of the Government Commission on unemployment made public this week. They suggest, for example, the establishment of a Department of Labor.

One of the Liberal planks in 1916 was "the creation of a Department of Labor to study and promote legislative and administrative action for the betterment of conditions of the workers." This proposal has been rejected by the Government in the Legislature.

The Commission also advocates the appointment of a Provincial Labor Commission. This was a Liberal proposal rejected by the Government in the House.

Another clause in the report of this Government Commission urges the advisability of tax reform. This has been a leading policy of the Liberals for seven years. The Government has rejected time after time Liberal proposals for tax reform.

The Commission also recognizes what the Liberals have contended for years, the undesirable influence of the liquor traffic on social reform progress.

It is to be remembered also, that consideration of the whole problem of unemployment was unduly delayed by the rejection on the part of the Government, of a Liberal proposal in the Session of 1914, that the whole problem at that time should be thoroughly investigated.

$150.00 will be given away in cash by the merchants on Dollar Day. Read about it in the big add.

There was a mild and balmy feeling in the air to-day reminiscent of spring. By way of contrast, the morning of the 22nd January last year showed a temperature of 25 degrees below zero. To-day the thermometer has been around 45 degrees above.—W.P.

DANIELS DISMISSES ENSIGN L. K. FORDE

Convicted by Court-Martial of Failing to Support Wife.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. — With the approval of President Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Daniels ordered the dismissal of Ensign Lawrence K. Forde, U.S.N., who was convicted by court-martial at Pensacola, Fla., on the charge of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman."

The specification in the case charged that Forde failed to live up to an order of the secretary requiring him to support his wife after a decision in favour of the wife had been rendered by the common pleas court of North Carolina.

They also charged that the young officer violated a voluntary pledge which he gave not to drink intoxicating liquors for a period of five years. Forde was appointed to the Naval Academy from Wyoming and was born in New Jersey. He is 26 years of age.

To People Who Are Under Normal Weight

Good Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women Who Want to Put on Flesh

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness, and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitalizer, no one is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you prepaid.

The Examiner is giving away an additional $35. as an extra attraction on Dollar Day.

My Husband Made a Big Mistake

"If he happens to get a roast for dinner which is not as tender as it might be, he doesn't forget to comment on it. I am always anxious to please him, and last Saturday I bought a nice roast at Alex. Gordon's Meat Market. It cooked splendidly and although it was cheaper than I had been in the habit of paying it was simply the most delicious roast I had cooked for months. At dinner on Sunday, Harry helped himself to a second serving, and said 'I guess you paid a pretty stiff price for this roast. This is something like a meal.' He had to smile when I told him all about it. Naturally I am now a regular customer at Gordon's Meat Market. Try him. His phone number is 34" home rule by increasing her voluntary efforts in the struggle for human liberty.

SUPERIORITY OF ALLIES IN WEST DAILY INCREASING

One of the results of the coalition which probably observers are scrutinizing with closest attention, is the gradual difference it is making in the personal positions of so many of its members, and especially of those who are taken from the Conservative party. So far as most of those Conservatives are concerned, they have quietly dropped into the positions of silent heads of departments. Lord Lansdowne, instead of being the spokesman of the Unionist majority in the House of Lords, a position he filled with great dexterity, is now a minister at large, with no salary, and no department for which he is responsible. He occasionally stands up—especially when the minister is in a tight place and subject to serve criticism.

Lord Lansdowne is an interesting figure in the public life of England. Though he is half English and half Irish, through centuries of English and Irish history, he inherits from a French mother some of the qualities of that race. He is the one man in public life who speaks French exactly like a Frenchman. It used to be related of him that on one occasion when he had to address a meeting of French-Canadians as Governor of Canada, there was eager expectation to hear his first word; but when they came out with the perfect accent and tone of a born Frenchman, every man of French blood was delighted and recognised him as one of their own blood. The somewhat lean figure, the lean clean-cut sharp face, indicates the French origin, although the imperturbable tranquility of the face shows that British phlegm still forms the basis of his character.

Lord Curzon, keen, restless, ambitious, with something of the splendor still remaining to him on his arrogant, youthful self-confidence and of his glory as the viceroy of India, is supposed to be one of the keenest and most indefatigable of the apostles of Conscription but he is also without a department and his appearance before the public are rare. And thus both these prominent and distinguished members of the House of Lords are perhaps rather more obscure so far as the public is concerned than they were when they appeared before the war, when they were the constant and sometimes vehement exponents of their party creed.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain has always been known to be an assiduous and energetic head of a department. He is one of the men who was carefully trained for political life from his boyhood upward. His energetic and brilliant father once he had made a fortune in business never took much interest in anything but politics. Politics were the only subjects discussed at his dinner table, and to politics therefore his son was devoted from his earliest days; and he was still a stripling when he became a member of the House of Commons, charming in manner, handsome in appearance, with a singular resemblance to his father, and yet with the softer lines that came from the maternal side, he has always been personally a popular figure in the House of Commons, and has never excited the violent antagonism, which the sharp tongue and dominant personality of his father so abundantly created. But he also seems, in the affairs of his great department, the government of India, face to face every moment of the day, with difficulty and perilous problems has hidden himself from the House of Commons in his splendid offices in parliament street, and rarely appears in the House, except to give an answer with regard to some of the incidents of the Eastern campaign.

Mr. Walter Long, another prominent Unionist figure in the past has had to carry some bills in the House of Commons, and has been able to do so as adequately as any other minister by a bluff frankness and good nature that disarm all oppositions, as well as a readiness to listen to suggestions from all quarters. He also, however, has a tremendous amount of departmental work to do, and does not figure prominently in the House of Commons.

The two ministers of the Unionist party who are forced to the front are Mr. Bonar Law and Lord Robert Cecil. For some days, Mr. Law took the position of leader of the House. I do not know whether it is a permanent arrangement or not, but for the time being it worked very well. The Leader of the House, whatever his disinclination to speak, is forced by his position to speak frequently. Practice makes perfect, and that applies to speaking in the House of Commons as well as to anything else. I have seen many members of the House who have begun by being scarcely able to mutter a few sentences, become quite fluent speakers, by the very fact of having to practice the art several times every night of the session. Mr. Bonar Law certainly rose to the opportunity which fortune has thus placed at his disposal. He certainly has the admirable quality of knowing the use of language, facility, distinction, and above all the tactfulness of expression, are his natural gifts. In many respects he would be an ideal spokesman of a department like the Foreign Office. All these qualities were required when he had to defend the government and to defend himself against the assaults made upon both by the extremists of his own party whose strong idea was to destroy the Plural Voting Bill. Everybody who heard the speech was delighted with it—partly because it put his own position of the government with extreme lucidity and candor. All the prejudices against Mr. Bonar Law for his strong utterances during the Irish struggle were forgotten, and people recognized—as those personally acquainted with Mr. Bonar Law already knew, that he was essentially a frank and a sincere man.

Of course, Mr. Bonar Law is somewhat new to the parliamentary trade, for he had spent the greater part of his life in business before he entered the House of Commons, and he never held high office until the present ministry; but he has very considerably advanced his position in the House of Commons, both from the political and the personal point of view.

Lord Robert Cecil is one of the surprises of the new government. Everybody knew of course, that he was a man of great ability and of great parliamentary gifts. He has not the dazzling and intoxicating eloquence of his brother, Lord Hugh Cecil; but on the other hand, he has had the advantage over him of long years of training as a barrister, and in this way is much more a man of the world, much better able to pick his way through the mazes of parliamentary procedure and the thickest of legal phraseology. Thus, though he never had the power of rousing the House of Commons to the empyrean heights to which his brother could reach, he was much more, so to speak, "on the spot". The brother, who is great at a set oration, when he tried to do the rough and tumble work of ordinary parliamentary life and as a guerrilla warrior on the Opposition bench, was frankly a failure. Lord Robert on the other hand, was always to the point, always spoke at the right moment, was always vigilant and active, and in what I may call the dragoman work of the House of Commons, he soon rushed to one of the front positions of the House.

John Bright, who never made a speech without great travail of spirit, and who accordingly rarely spoke, and towards the end of his life never spoke at all, if he could avoid it, used always to half humorously complain that the clergymen and the barristers had a great advantage over the parliamentarian in the fact that speaking was so much a part of their daily life that they could always get on their feet without hesitation or trepidation. In the House of Commons you constantly see men of very great oratorical abilities fail because not being either ministers or barristers, a speech to them is an unusual and a difficult effort. Lord Robert's profession saved him from this creeping paralysis, that so often reduces to silence many eloquent Parliamentary lips. Now, as Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, he has to answer questions and make speeches almost every night through the Parliament? ary session. Sir Edward Grey is so absorbed in his department and has always had a great distinction for appearances in the House, that the Under-Secretary has become to all intents and purposes the Parliamentary spokesman for the great department. Lord Robert has risen to the occasion; his answers are terse, to the point, and lucid, and his speeches have the same qualities. Now and then the old hotness of temper which occasionally aroused in old pre-War days his opponents to bursts of fury, makes its appearances. But on the whole he is cool, self-possessed and conciliatory. A surprise to his political opponents is that in his great department he shows no sign of the narrowness of vision which characterized him as a party politician in domestic affairs. His mind is broad and receptive, he surveys the many factors of the extraordinarily difficult psychological problem which foreign affairs present, with a shrewd and cool judgment. It is quite possible that in the future another Cecil will be at the head of the great department of Foreign Affairs and perhaps equal the reputation of Lord Salisbury, who stands out in history as one of the greatest of our foreign ministers.

Y.M.C.A. WORK AMONG SOLDIERS

"This has been a military year. The flower of manhood of the British Empire has donned khaki, and the Young Men's Christian Association, as the servant of all men in need, has followed the colors to the trench, the desert, the hospital, and the prison camp."

This is the concluding sentence of the National Report for India, prepared by Paul B. Danner, and follows a vivid description of the work of the Y.M.C.A. men among not only the Indian troops that were sent to France, but the "territory" from England that replaced them in India, the internment camps there, and the soldiers that to-day are awaiting relief in beleaguered Kut-El-Amara.

"Perhaps no troops fighting to any zone of the war to-day have greater difficulties to contend with than those up the Persian Gulf in Mesopotamia, all of whom have come from India. Burning heat, biting sand and fiendish march strike down down more men than the bullets of the enemy Turk and the treacherous Arab." To labor for these British soldiers five Y.M.C.A. men were sent up the Tigris and were stationed at first at Basra, and at Amara, "following the troops on their fight to Bagdad."

So far as Canadian soldiers are concerned there are nearly 30 Y.M.C.A. representatives overseas who are devoting their time to the work, and 47 centres in Canada where there are winter camps located in which the Y.M.C.A.'s are engaged in physical, social and spiritual service.

DEATH OF MR. ED. A. RUNNELS

At His Late Residence 535 Downie St. Early This Morning After an Illness of Only Five Days

A well-known citizen of Peterborough passed away early this morning in the person of Mr. Edwin A. Runnels, 535 Downie Street, after a five days' illness, from pneumonia. The late Mr. Runnels took ill on Monday morning last, and throughout the week it was known that his illness was serious, but it was hoped that he might rally towards recovery. However, in spite of all that could be done, he passed away at 1.30 this morning.

The deceased was fifty years of age and was born in Campbellford, where he lived until twenty-five years ago, when he came to Peterborough, entering the employ of the late A. G. Dickson, dry goods merchant. At the time of his death he was manager of the store. He was a man who was well known for his splendid business integrity, and his genial, courteous manner in dealing with the public. He was a member of St. John's Church.

A wife, two sons and one daughter are left to mourn his loss. The sons are Mr. Vincent Runnels in the Southern States, and Dickson, at home, and the daughter is Mrs. F. C. Petrie of Hamilton. Three brothers, Messrs. William and Albert of Campbellford, and Frank of Hastings, and one sister, Mrs. I. J. Waller of this city also survive him. A son predeceased him just eleven months ago.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, 535 Downie Street to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Special Recruiting Market

The Boys in Khaki Lent Colour to the "Square"—One Volunteer Decided to Help Save His Country

The outside market was enlivened by the presence of a number of men in khaki, with the band of the 93rd, who discoursed some patriotic airs between recruiting speeches by Corporal White, Sergeant Wells, Captain Ackerman and Captain Muir.

The object of the gathering was to further the interests of recruiting. One recruit mounted the waggon in response to the entreaties of the heroes, who pled for comrades to join the boys at the front.

If the rally proved of no other use it at least served the purpose of educating a few men of the propriety of removing their hats during the playing of the National Anthem. Several citizens and farmers so far forgot themselves as to leave their cars on when the band struck up, "God Save the King." At the conclusion Sergeant Wells searchingly pointed his finger at an offender, and queried:

"Are you a Britisher? Why didn't you take your hat off? I'm ashamed of you—you ought to be driven out of the country!"

The lesson was a hard one, but no doubt many will profit by the experience.

Prices to-day were slightly in advance of previous Saturdays. For example, several meat dealers were quoting beef at 15c front quarters and 18c hind quarters; the majority however were asking 19 to 12c. Lamb sold as high as 20c front and 18c hind quarter. Pork brought 14c and 15c.

Potatoes have started on the second lap of their journey to the moon. Two or three bags stood at $1.85 while one dealer had the nerve to ask $2 a bag.

One barrel of figs sold for $6 50.

Several loads of second quality wood were offered at prices ranging from $6 to $6.50.

Vegetables brought their usual standard prices. Turnips 30c a bag, onions 20c a peck, red cabbage 10c a head, ordinary cabbage 30c a dozen. Celery 25c bunch.

BASKET SECTION.

Butter and eggs were offered in fairly large quantities. Butter sold at 30c a lb., two or three quoting it as low as 28c.

Eggs averaged 38c a dozen. A few residents asked 40c and several 35c.

Fowl were somewhat scarce and rather small in size. Chickens averaged 18c to 20c a lb. A 12-lb. goose brought $2 while a ten pound turkey realized $2.75.

Oranges were 20 and 40c a dozen. Lemons 20c and bananas 25c. Cream sold at 30c a quart.

Great White Light lamp burners sold lively at 25c each.

"THE OLD BREED."

"The Canadians have a right to be proud of themselves. They have shown readiness to enlist, zeal in training, fine vigor and courage in fighting. Voltaire's 'few acres of snows' are a nation full of fire. There are nearly 120,000 Canadian soldiers in Europe. There have been 212,000 enlistments. A hardy, 'fit' set of fellows those Canadian youngsters. The old breed in the new environment has improved."—New York Times.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HAUGHTON MAY CAPITULATE

It remains to be seen whether the change in ownership of the Boston Braves will be a blessing or a curse to the National League. It rests entirely with Percy D. Haughton as to whether the league shall gain or lose by his acquisition of one of the most profitable clubs in the organization.

Haughton, it will be recalled, refused to number his Harvard football players, and when advised that the public demanded it, was quoted as saying that he didn't give a rap for the public.

If he is wise, he will give more than a rap for the public and the press in his new role as baseball magnate. He will realize, before the has been in the game long, that his success depends absolutely upon fair treatment of the newspapers and the fans. College football may be able to prosper under the handicap of a "public-be-blanked" policy, but baseball is a different proposition. Boston newspaper men are doubtful as to Haughton's attitude. They have had to deal with him in football, and know just how hard he has been to approach. Let us hope, for good of the sport and of the league, that he will not be foolish enough to make a mistake at the outset of his career as a magnate.

CHECKING KAISER'S DREAM OF POWER

"Germany in the Orient," is the title of a leading article in a late issue of the Paris Temps which sets forth the primary motives of the present military and other activities of the Germans in the Near East.

"The conflict brought about by William II.," the French newspaper says, "is the result of a maturely deliberated political scheme. The war of 1870 founded Germany; that of 1914 was started in order to make it a world empire. A realization of this dream, which embraces both an increase of territory and an expansion of German economic influence, presupposes a free disposal of the maritime route to the overseas colonies and also of the overland commercial highway leading to the heart of Asia and India, by way of the Balkans and Turkey.

"In his drive on Calais, the Kaiser aimed at getting possession of a port facing Great Britain so that he might be in a position to dispute the latter country's supremacy on the sea. His march on Constantinople was for the purpose of preventing the Russians from installing themselves on the Bosphorus and at getting at the same time a foothold in the countries of Islam. The defeats on the Yser blocked the road to Calais, and now the Germans are instead trying to break their way through to the Orient, with the aid of the Bulgars and Turks, who have placed their armies at the service of the King of Prussia.

"In his vision of a Greater Germany William II. sees the Balkans, Turkey, the Suez Canal territory, India and China as economic dependencies of the Fatherland. For African possessions his mind has picked out Egypt, Morocco, the Congo and Angola. Since he was lucky enough to get Belgium, a part of France, Poland and Serbia in his power, the Kaiser thinks it might be worth while trying to realize also his other chimeric ambitions. That is why he is keeping the Sultan and the Bulgarian king busy fighting for him. It is according to the same idea that he is bullying Greece and Roumania and stirring up unrest through the Mussulman world. Any little tribe of the desert which may have a chance of making trouble for France, England or Italy is being seduced by the tempting offers of the Kaiser's agents, while the emissaries of the vassal at the Golden Horn are simultaneously arousing the religious fanaticism of their co-religionists.

"These activities have caused a certain number of sporadic uprisings in Tripoli, on the western border of Egypt, in Afghanistan, India and the protectorate of Aden, but as a rule the disturbances have been quelled quickly and without great difficulty."

Following an account of the measures taken to counteract the German plots and to check their future progress the article in the Temps sums up with the following general view of the situation:

"The establishment of a strongly fortified position at Salonica, the landing of Italian troops at Avlona, Durazzo, and Santa-Quarata, the rehabilitation of the Serbian army and the Russian concentration in Bessarabia prove that the allies are resolved on a co-ordinate effort to place insurmountable obstacles in the way of Germany's aspirations as far as the Orient is concerned. The Allies do not underrate the worldwide character of the war but it is not in the Orient that they are looking for any decisive action. All the same they appreciate the fact that the effective checking of an enterprise which occupies such an important place in the programme of their enemies as does the Oriental campaign of the Teutons, would involve a considerable prolongation of the war. Consequently they are impressed with the necessity of closing as quickly as possible the route which the Germans are trying to open. Salonica is one place where the Kaiser's onward march can be conveniently stopped and others may be selected later on. Besides, we may rest assured that the Entente Powers will know how to foil the German schemes in the Orient as they have done elsewhere."

COFFEE WILL REPLACE WHISKEY IN SEATTLE

Pastor Will Urge That as Substitute in "Dry" City.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 24. — Dr. Mark A. Matthews, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, and formerly moderator of the Presbyterian church of North America, says that he will take steps to find a substitute for saloons in Seattle, which went out of business Jan. 1.

Mr. Matthews says his plans include establishing coffee houses in parts of the city frequented by large numbers of men who follow seasonable occupations and spend their unoccupied time in saloons.

His plan is to sell them a good cup of coffee and bread or doughnuts for the same price they now pay for a glass of beer and to give them a place where they can read and rest if they desire.

HOW MUTE SOLDIER WAS RESTORED BY "MOVIE"

Billy Rhshie, the Famous Comedian of the Universal Co., Has One Miracle Placed to His Name

This popular "silent actor," writing in Pearson's Weekly, says: "I could not believe it at first. I received a cable from the London offices of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company which read: 'Your antics cured deaf and dumb British soldier. Congratulations.'

"Anticipating that I was about to have my 'leg pulled' over some new stunt or other, I thought to get in a little joke of my own first, so immediately I cabled back to London: 'Presume answer is a lemon?—B.R.'

"That little quip must have fallen with a dull flat thud, for the next letter I had contained a bunch of newspaper cuttings and a piece of notepaper on which was written: 'Dear Billie,—Don't be funny. Herewith find proof.'

"At last I saw what my friend was driving at, and here, in brief, is the amazing story the cuttings unfolded to my gaze:

"Corporal Robert Beck is a Manchester soldier, who, at the outbreak of war, became a motorcycle despatch rider. Whilst carrying despatches he was struck by a bullet which entered his breast, causing him to lose control of his machine. The resulting fall left Beck unconscious for ten hours, and when he was found by the R.A.M.C. men it was discovered that he had lost both speech and hearing.

Senses Returned

Corporal Beck was sent to a hospital but in spite of skilled attention he still remained a deaf mute. Then Beck paid a visit to a picture theatre. The first few pictures on the programme passed without event, and then came the presentation of "The Fatal Note." I trotted into view and commenced my antics. Poor Corporal Beck, unable to laugh with the rest, strained every nerve for the chuckles that would not come.

"Then"—to give the story in Corporal Beck's own words—'something seemed to burst in my ears. To my intense amazement I could suddenly hear the uproarious laughter of the people all around me, and almost before I knew what was happening I found myself shouting at the top of my voice. In another moment I was almost mad with joy, shouting and laughing by turns until the lights went up at the end of the film.'

"That, then, is the account of how my film fopling worked a miracle. You can just imagine how pleased and proud I feel over the achievement."

THE "BEEF EATERS"

The duty of guarding King George's sick chamber falls, by ancient usage and tradition, to the Yeomen of the Guard.

Their full official title is "The King's Bodyguard of the Yeomen of the Guard." It dates from early Tudor times, having been first established in 1485 by Henry VII., and the yeomen still wear the old Tudor uniform, that of the officers, however, being more of a modern type.

It is commanded by a captain, and he has under him a lieutenant, who is a lieutenant-colonel in the army, and an ensign, who must be a major at the time of appointment. Its assistant is known officially as the "Clerk of the Cheque," a title which sounds as though it ought to have something to do with money payments, but which has not, his duty being simply to keep and call the "cheques," or roll, when the corps parades.

The term "beefeater," is commonly applied to the Yeomen of the Guard, and also to the warders of the Tower of London, who wear a similar uniform.

A fly and a flea in a flue
Were imprisoned. Now what could they do?
Said the fly, "Let us flee!"
"Let us fly!" said the flea—
So they flew through a flaw in the flue.

German Women Seek a Voice In The Conflict

The attitude of the women of Germany has recently been becoming as engrossing a topic of discussion in the German press almost as is the war itself. From a disposition shown at the outbreak of hostilities, to accept all sacrifices imposed on them and to take for granted the coming of promised success in a role of submissiveness, the women have now reached a point where their action threatens to be a dominating factor in connection with the continuance of the war.

So energetically are they demanding a right to be heard that it is announced that the National Liberty party will make a proposal in the Reichstag that women from sixteen to twenty years old be mobilized for the purpose of giving a year's service to the country, the service to be performed in a way to be determined according to the circumstances.

The original proposal came from one of the women leaders, who, however, in the proposal which she made in this connection, embodied a condition that the women's services should be used in hospital work. The project now has taken a much broader extension, and it is proposed that women be used not merely in the preparation and manufacture of munitions of war, but also in the trenches themselves. As the women have to dig trenches in which to plant potatoes, one of their leaders said, there is no reason why they should not dig trenches for military purposes.

Some of the German newspapers hint that this form of service would relieve the community from many incidents of recent occurrences which show the new attitude of the women of Germany. The Taegliche Rundschau says:

"The war seems to be exercising a singular influence on the women. One would think that there is a militant spirit in the air, which is going to take away forever the docile and indolent character which our women possessed in normal times, and that this spirit is now transferring them into a species of suffragettes of the militant English type.

"The other day before a Police Magistrate in Berlin four of these women were accused of having attacked with violence another woman in the street. They threw her down, snatched off her hat, tore her clothes to shreds, and took away her shoes. Their defence was that they were outraged at seeing a woman show so little regard for present conditions as to deck herself up with extravagant finery."

The Berliner Tageblatt gives another instance to indicate the new attitude of the women and the militant spirit which they display. A Berlin merchant, it says, in order to bring out some of the hidden gold which the government needs so much, thought of the idea of offering half a pound of butter extra to those who bought two pounds of butter and paid for it with gold.

"However strange it may seem," continues the newspaper, "the result was marvellous. Lines of women presented themselves and offered their gold. They had gold pieces of 20 marks ($) and even 100 marks ($25). But the matter did not end peacefully. Scenes of extraordinary violence occurred as the women who had no gold set upon those who had, and the police had to interfere to stop the riot."

Suicides Due to Women.

To the new attitude of the women is also being attributed an explanation of the man cases of officers who have committed suicide, as reported from the eastern front. The explanation which was previously given regarding these occurrences was that the officers, through a lack of sufficiency of reserves, are ordered back to the front from the hospitals before their recovery from wounds and illness is complete and that in despondency they kill themselves.

It is now said, however, that many of these officers who have committed suicide have done so in distress over the news from home and the dread of returning without having achieved the victory which had been announced to the women and on account of which the women had submissively endured so many sacrifices for so many years while the army was being prepared and equipped and all else regarded as of secondary moment.

The Frankfurter Zeitung issues an appeal to the women to adopt a policy of restraint and of asceticism. It invites them "to abstain from eating caviar, mandarines, pineapples and truffles; from buying Swiss corsets and jewels, and from smoking so much."

The Koelnische Zeitung also proposes that restraint be used for economical purposes. "Let us learn immediately," it says, "to do without the superfluous, without the milk which we mix with our coffee, without butter to be spread on the bread and without roast pork, which is becoming very scarce."

It has been hinted that it was on account of its instrumentality in stirring up the women of Germany that the Lokalanzeiger was recently suppressed and continues in constant trouble with the German censorship. The Lokalanzeiger is not merely a Berlin newspaper, but has editions in other principal cities of Germany, and its influence on the women of the country is very large, as it does not limit itself to philosophic disquisitions on politics and sociology, but deals with the topics of the day in which women also are keenly interested.

KING ROSS IS DEAD

Scotch Adventurer Had the Most Extraordinary Domain in All the World.

LONDON, Jan. 8, by mail.—The news that King Ross of the Cocos Islands has laid him down in the shade of the palms and died, was cabled here to-day. The brief message rings down the curtain upon the last act of the first ruler of the real, original comic opera kingdom—The Land of Cocos—which lies upon the shimmering silver lap of the South Seas of diminutive emerald world in a setting of pink coral reefs. Andy Ross was a Scotch adventurer who after a roving youth, discovered and decided to cast his lot as king with the motely inhabitants of the little story book kingdom. From 1827 until his death he was the oldest king with the queerest subjects and the most extraordinary domain in all the world. His was a kingdom where the arrival of Sinbad the Sailor, Alice in Wonderland, Gulliver and the Boy Who Could Not Learn to Shiver and Shake, would not have seemed unusual. His was a kingdom, that put Romance into Real Life and Real Life into Romance. The Cocos Islands is distinctly an O. Henry land, a place such as Gilbert & Sullivan saw only in fancy, a spot that a Robert Louis Stevenson would be loth to leave.

Only One Excitement.

Ross, was king, court, government and owner of this group of Indian ocean isles, twenty in all, whose only excitement in history occurred during the present war—the destruction of the German cruiser Emden by the Australian battleship Sydney off the Cocos coast.

King Ross was the third of his line.

In 1823 an English adventurer named Alexander. Hare settled in the islands with a number of slaves given him by an Indian potentate. Two years later Ross, a Scotchman, rediscovered the islands and determined to colonize them. He returned in 1827 with a party of Scotch and found Hare in possession. The two factions settled by dividing the islands equally. Finally however the natives swore allegiance to Ross and he and his descendants have ruled their story-book kingdom ever since.

Interspersed with palm-covered atolls and flanked by reefs of pink coral, and picturesque little group of islands is more like a scene from a musical comedy than anything else. In 1856 the British Government extended protection to the Cocos. In 1885 parliament sent a commission to investigate conditions there. When the British warship with the commission on board steamed into the lagoon at Direction Island, the inhabitants and the king and his court welcomed them just like a comic opera South Sea island king would be expected to do.

The palace was thrown open to the Europeans and the royal family its salaaming Malady servants and their all was at the disposal of the men from civilization.

Of Powerful Physique.

All the people of the Island group are of more than ordinary powerful physique, muscular and lithe; quite Jack Londonish, in fact. The brown skinned natives speak their own language with a Scotch burr. The white royalty speaks the native tongue, too. Even the king himself knew little of the English tongue that his forefathers used. The chief industry is copra and coral gathering. There is no metal money. The king decided at first that money is the root of all evil, so he issued cards and not too many of them. The kingdom is administered on model lines. The King makes his own laws, polices his domain and provides everything for his subjects.

When the cruiser Emden was sunk off the islands, the survivors of the crew commandeered the royal yacht and embarked for Sumatra. Aside from this, the only other excitement the islands have had is cyclones. The natives, king, royalty and all, outmaneuver nature on these occasions by rushing into the lagoons and standing in water up to their necks until the blow subsides.

Streets Under Water.

The streets in some sections of the city would be improved if the snow and ice was removed from the gutters so that the water could get away.

May Be Re-elected.

There is a possibility that ex-Mayor Buller will be re-elected chairman of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Relief at the meeting that will be held on Tuesday evening.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Judge MacWatt declared that the Local Option by-law of Petrolea carried by a majority of 3 1-3. The recount gave the drys two more votes and wets decided to forego the scrutiny. It would require ten drys to be struck from list for wets to win.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ONTARIO MOTOR LEAGUE HELD

In Toronto at Which Local Delegates Attended—Several Matters of Importance Discussed

Dr. C. H. Amyn and S. J. Keyes were representatives of the Auto Association at the annual meeting of the Ontario Motor League held in Toronto this week.

The meeting was an interesting one and several matters of importance to motorists were discussed. Perhaps for our district the most important was the new Highways Act which came into force this week. The working of the Act was explained by Mr. MacLean, Deputy Minister of Public Works.

The Act provides for liberal grant for the construction and maintenance of roads—40 p.c. of the cost of construction and 20 p.c. of the cost of maintenance of trunk roads and 40 p. c. of the cost of construction of main highways.

Copies of this act will be sent to all townships and county councils in time for discussion at the coming meetings.

From the explanation it was gathered that roads leading to the city from the surrounding country could be classed as main highways and would receive the 40 p.c. grant to aid in their construction or improvement, while such a road as the one from Port Hope to Peterborough could be classed as a trunk road and would receive additional grants towards its maintenance.

If this be the proper meaning of the act it will be to the interests of the local motorists (who will pay about $10,000 in licences this year) to urge upon the townships adjoining the city to take advantage of the government grants and to improve at least one road leading to the city from each direction.

The question of reciprocity of licenses was discussed by Secretary Hugo who has control of the License Bureau in New York State.

He stated that New York would grant reciprocity in licenses as soon as Ontario would do likewise. This would enable motorists from Ontario to drive over the 8,000 miles of good roads in New York State without paying any license fees and would open the summer resorts of Ontario to the 250,000 motorists of New York State.

It was the opinion of the meeting that Canadians were likely to be the gainers by such reciprocity and it was stated that the matter would be considered before the coming motor season opened.

The Secretary of the local Association will arrange for a meeting between the motorists and the members of the County Council some time during the meeting of the Council next week and would urge motorists to make a study of the Highways Act in the meantime.

Good roads benefit the farmer, the motorist, and the city, so all should work together to secure them.

Samples of Proposed Legislation.

1. That the driver of every auto should give a bond, at the time of the issue of his license, for $5,000, this to be forfeited if he should break any of the speed laws during the season.

2. That an arrangement should be attached to the bottom of the car, so that when the car exceeded 20 miles an hour a trap door would open and drop out a card bearing the name of the owner of the car, his address, and his license number.

BONQUET TO THE 93RD AT GEORGE ST CHURCH

Provided by the Ladies Aid Last Night — An Enjoyable Occasion

The Ladies' Aid of George street church provided a pleasant evening last night for a detachment of officers and men of the 93rd Battalion. Supper was served in the basement of the church and seated with the soldiers were members of the Official Board. A short toast list followed the banquet The King, proposed by the chairman Rev. R. D. Peever; 'The Parliament of Canada,' proposed by Mr. E. R. Armstrong and seconded by Capt. J. H Burnham.; "The Army," proposed by Col. Miller and responded to by Col. T. Johnston; "Our Church," proposed by Mr. D. W. Dumble and responded to by Major J. C. Davidson; "The Ladies," proposed by Lieut. Quackenbush and responded to by Mr. G N. Gordon. Vocal solos were sung by Miss Lottie Hanson, Mrs. J. H. Renwick and Master Percy Luther, Capt. Ackerman gave a short, interesting address.

Presentation To Major Davidson

Major J. C. Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, was the recipient of an address which was accompanied by a beautifully engraved wrist watch. The presentation was made by Mrs. W. A. Turner on behalf of the Church Women's Association of St. John's Church.

The address reads as follows:

Major, the Rev. Canon Davidson, M.A., Rector of Peterborough:

"We, the Church Women's Association of St. John's Church, desire to congratulate you upon your great and continued patriotic efforts, culminating in the offering of yourself for Overseas' service.

Recognizing, as we do, your power for work, and your capacity for sympathy, we feel that the 93rd Peterborough Battalion has in you a spiritual adviser and soldiers' friend worthy of this city, and of the men who are willing to sacrifice so much for King and country.

In asking you to accept this small token of our respect and esteem, we can only say that we are proud of the stand you have taken, and our prayers will go with you.

Signed on behalf of the Church Women's Association."

BRITISH SUCCESS IN THE CAMEROONS—Big victories have attended the British advance in the Cameroons and other colonial points. Photo gives an unusual sight of motor transports, tropical trees and adobe huts with their thatched roofs and a coloured motor driver in very much "native" livery. The scene is at the Allies camp in Edea, preparatory to the march on Jaunde, the capital of the Cameroons, recently captured by the British.

Severe Storms Halt Relief Force Marching To Kut-El-Amara

LONDON, January 22.—Candler Bussorh, the official correspondent at Basira, on the Mesopotamian front, describes the operations of General Aylmer's relief force up to Jan. 19. He says in part:

"In the interval between January 9 and the Turkish abandonment of Sheikaid (20 miles below Kut-el-Amara, where the main British army is surrounded by the Turks) was occupied in preparing our advance.

"After a night march on January 12 our force attacked the enemy's new positions five miles above Sheikaid on the banks of a water course. Frontal attacks were made systematically with a movement around the left flank. A frontal attack pinned the enemy to his trenches during the day where he was exposed to the heavy fire of our guns. Monitors from the river took part in the attack.

"Both the frontal and flanking attacks were pushed home with great gallantry over ground devoid of civilization. A footing was established in the Turkish trenches. The enemy retired at night to the neck of the land between the swamp ground and the river, 26 miles from General Townsend's force at Kut-el-Amara.

"The enemy's losses were heavy. The Turkish general, Bekir Sami Bey, is reported to be dead. A hurricane, extreme cold and pelting rain hindered the operations for ten days. The Tigris has risen 4 feet. The water has the color of red brick. A large proportion of the annual rainfall averaging three and four inches, has fallen during the week, aggravating the hardships of our troops. The mud in Flanders is repeated but there is no relief in the form of roads and billets.

BIVOUAC IN THE MIRE.

"The troops have their bivouac in the mire. All the work is done in the open, and there are no communication trenches." The correspondent warmly praises the courage and endurance of the British and Indian troops. He says that the ambulance corps face abominable conditions. The correspondent continues:

"The British and Indian troops had to attack entrenched Turkish positions across a vast open plain unbroken by hedges, roads or trees as in Flanders. The casualties have been heavy but the costliness of our advance has not affected the spirit of the force which is filled with cheerful determination.

"The Turkish troops rounded up at Sheikaid on Jan. 7 were repelled, not by cavalry as stated in a previous despatch, but by one of our infantry brigades, which after two days of fighting carried the Turkish trenches under very heavy fire, aided by another infantry flank attack and supported by our artillery.

"More than 360 Turkish dead were buried the next morning. Two mountain guns, 3 Maxims and 600 prisoners were taken."

Storm Caused Death of Eight

Special to The Examiner:

OKLAHAMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 22.—Eight deaths and thousands of dollars of property loss resulted from the wind and rain storm that swept Southern Oklahama and Northern Texas, yesterday, and early to-day. The train service is interrupted, the wire communication uncertain, and hundreds of families still endangered by the floods.

BRITAIN TO PLACE FATS AND OILS ON CONTRABAND LIST

LONDON, Jan. 5, (By Mail)—Great Britain is expected soon to put fats and oils on the list of absolute contraband, just as it did with cotton. Scientists have been demanding that this be done for some time, saying it is the ignorance of government officials concerning the use of fats and oils in the manufacture of high explosives which has left this raw material supply open to Germany this long. Prof. E. B. Poulton of Oxford calls it "the national neglect of science," saying in part: "It is dangerous that a country which depends on science for its existence and prosperity should be ruled by politicians and civil servants, who, with hardly an exception, are utterly ignorant of science. Lawyer politicians, fixing their attention more steadily on American friendship than German defeat, have permitted the export from England of propulsive ammunition—fats and oils." Cotton is already on the absolute contraband list, this action having been taken after a widespread campaign by scientists who claimed that cotton exported to Germany was merely so much ammunition for the German army. Sir William Ramsay, leader of the scientists' campaign against cotton, has begun a campaign against fats and oils which, he says, are vital to German ammunition making. Sir William declared to-day: "One-third of German ammunition for heavy guns consists of nitro-glycerine; and fats are the source of glycerine. I really can't understand the incredible folly of going on providing the Germans with means of killing our men. Untold thousands of lives and an ever growing volume of human misery are a terrible punishment for the neglect of science. It is possible that military experts are mistaken in thinking the final decision in this war can be reached by fighting. It may have to be reached by economic and financial pressure." England's official ignorance of science as applied to war has lengthened the struggle." Sir William declared, continuing: "If the government had seriously considered this possibility at the outset and made preparations accordingly, asking for and accepting adivce on the subject, the war long ago would have been over." Manw well known British scientists have joined Sir William in his newest campaign against the export of fats and oils. It is predicted that the government soon will turn over to the navy the question of keeping Germany from getting these commodities.

GALLIPOLI INQUIRY WILL COME LATER

LONDON, Jan. 22—There will be no inquiry at present into the imputations upon British loommanders at Gallipoli contained in General Hamiltons' despatch on the landing at Suvla Bay.

Replying in the House of Commons to Mr. John Redmond, who urged an investigation, the Premier said that the government had decided it to be impracticable under present conditions, as the constitution of a tribunal and the assembling of witnesses would necessitate the withdrawal of too many officers required on the field, but that everything was being done to assure an adequate inquiry in due course.

BELIEVED TO BE SPY, IS THROWN OVERBOARD

Youth Found Half-frozen Near Dock at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 21.—His clothes frozen stiff, his hair a mass of ice and in a pitiful condition, Hendrien G. Lammar, 18 years old, ex Dordrecht Holland, was found half frozen near the docks here.

Lammar told the police that the crew of a Danish steamer hurled him overboard when the ship sailed because they believed that he was a German and would blow up the ship. The police turned him over to the consul for the Netherlands.

Woman never thinks of a man as a devil; when she gets where she thinks that she then knows that he is a devil.

A man's charity for the world, not to the world, is through his wife.

The basis of family life is charity of heart. The true spirit of charity is love of our fellowmen.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 8—EYE TESTING APPLIANCES

TO MANY people the mention of the word "instrument" in connection with eye-testing, suggests some sort of an operation. The natural dread of anything of this nature often deters people from coming to the eye specialist for an eye test. This feeling is entirely wrong, however, as the oculists' instruments are used to test the eye-sight, not the eye itself. They are so nicely adjusted that with them the specialist is able to measure your strength of vision exactly, and it is only necessary to to look at a given point, to answer the purpose of the eye specialist. In cases where a weakness requires a direct examination, one special instrument enables the specialist to see the eye, brightly illuminated, but, here also it involves nothing more than looking into the instrument. The value of an optical parlor so fully equipped and modern as that of Mr. Fowler, is inestimable to his patrons.

LAST OPPORTUNITY TO-NIGHT TO WITNESS PICTURES OF TROOPS

To-night will be the last opportunity of seeing the moving pictures of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces at the Grand Opera House. The very interesting programme presented by Sergt. Wells and Corporal White of the first contingent, returned prisoners from Germans attracted a fairly large audience last night and will be repeated this evening. The pictures are reminiscent of Canada's first efforts in recruiting and are a splendid reminder of the boys who went through Langemarck. They are clear, pleasing films and should draw a large crowd tonight. Sergt. Wells' story of his experiences is alone worth the price of admission. His address is racy and highly coloured, passing quickly from humour to pathos, and illumined throughout with numerous anecdotes. There isn't a dull moment in the programme. These pictures are under the charge of the government. It is not a private enterprise. Sergt. Wells made a plea yesterday for assistance to the prisoners in Germany, urging a co-operative effort to provide a continuous supply of parcels to be sent to Germany.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.—

Sir,—As the elections in Smith are over and the electors have made their choice. I suppose we are all well satisfied. But there is one thing as the defeated candidate for reeve which I wish to explain:

In the last issue of your paper before the elections there appeared a roorback written by (I know who) saying what an expensive chairman I was when on the House of Refuge Committee. He took (or they took) the first year the House was opened, which was no fair comparison, as we had all the stock and implements to buy, besides putting in water works and sewage system. A lot of other work to get the house and farm in running order had to be done. Now, my fees for that year were $139.10 at $3 per day paying my own expenses and driving all over looking for stock. The second year when everything was in running order as chairman I received $47.60.

Now, what did the economical reeve of Smith (Mr. McKee) receive the year he was chairman when there was scarcely anything to do as everything was in running order. The auditors' report says he received $105.20. For what? Now electors, form your own opinion between the two years and the work there was to do and I think you will decide that the present economical reeve was a very expensive chairman for what work he had to do.

Now, this is not written with any feeling of spite, only to put things in the right light. I wish to say in conclusion that any man that will rush a roorback in the last issue of a paper before an election when it is too late to answer, he is a coward from the feet up.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Alex. McGee, retiring President, and the election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dr. Graham, Fenelon Falls; Vice-President, J. T. Laking, Haliburton; Secretary-Treasurer, J. McKay, Fenelon Falls.

A resolution of confidence in and loyalty to N. W. Rowell, Provincial leader, and the policy of Provincial Liberalism was adopted.

Mr. G. H. Gillespie, M.P.P., Peterborough, delivered a brief address, outlining methods for thorough and effective organization throughout the riding. He also referred to the glorious part played by Canada in defence of the Empire. Splendid addresses along patriotic lines were made by Jas. Dickson of Fenelon Falls and N. FIRE SHOTS AT COUPLE WALKING ON BOULEVARD

NORTH TONAWANDA, Jan. 21. — "Hold up your hands!" This command, following a fusilade of revolver shots over their heads, was directed by supposed highwaymen to Edward Hildebrandt, 23 years old, and his sister, Lucy, 18 years old, on the Niagara Falls boulevard at the junction of Nash road.

Young Hildebrandt threw up his hands. His sister ran screaming down the road. The outcry she made alarmed the men. They disappeared without making further effort to rob her brother. Mr. Hildebrandt and his sisterwere walking along the boulevard toward thir home and about a half mile from the scene of the hold-up. A big limousine, travelling toward Buffalo at a rapid rate, passed them. When the machine had gone a short distance it stopped. Two or three men jumped out and began firing revolvers toward the Hildebrandts. The bullets whistled over the heads of the pair. After the girl ran screaming away, the men hastily entered their car and sped toward Buffalo.

Miss Hildebrandt, after running some distance along the boulevard, turned and saw that the men were leaving. Then she stood still and waited until her brother overtook her. The two then proceeded to their home.

Young Hildebrandt, in telling the foregoing story to the police, said that while he was standing in the road, covered by the guns of the men, he noticed that the number on their car was B-7643, N.Y.; 1915. He gave the police a description of the men, and search is being made for them.

The automobile number, which Hildebrandt says was on the car used by the robbers is credited on the state's records to Mrs. Charles W. Sisson of Niagara Falls.

Germans Penetrate the French Lines But Were Driven Out

BRITISH AND TURKS LOSE HEAVILY IN RECENT BATTLES

Renewal of Aerial Attacks Predicted By London Press

Second Air Raid Yesterday on East Kent Was a Complete Failure---Call Upon Government to Make Better Preparations to Defend London.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A renewal of German aerial attacks on London probably by squadrons of German fokkers, the "whians of the air," was predicted by the London Press to-day, in commenting on the raids on the Kentish coast yesterday. Aeronautic experts declared that aeroplane attacks probably would supplant Zeppelin visits until the weather is more favourable for voyages by the sky dreadnoughts.

They called upon the Government to make better preparations to defend London against the giant fokker battleplanes.

The Times assailed the censor for forbidding the publication of exact localities attacked yesterday. The Times declared that both raids were witnessed by large numbers of people, and that German aviators certainly knew exactly where they were.

The Daily Mail declared the Sunday raids showed the folly of believing that London has been made immune from air attacks.

Despite the anxiety felt in London over recent successes of the new German Uhlans, correspondents stationed at the British front report that skilled English aviators have encountered and defeated the fokkers' pilots. In one such engagement, the Chronicle's correspondent declared, a British aviator routed two fokkers and a third German plane.

NAPOLEON NO HORSEMAN.

Odd Precautions to Train and Break Emperor's Mounts.

Extraordinary were the precautions taken that Napoleon should never appear at a disadvantage on horseback, says the London Chronicle. The Emperor was not a first-class horseman, and his horses were always thoroughly broken in. Here is a description of the methods employed:

"They were trained to remain perfectly steady under tortures of every description; to receive blows about the head; drums were beat, pistols and crackers fired in their ears, flags waved before their eyes, clumsy packages, and sometimes even sheep and pigs were thrown between thir legs. None of the animals was deemed sufficiently trained till the Emperor could without the least difficulty pull them up short at full gallop, which was his favourite pace."

SAYS BRITAIN MUST CHOOSE BETWEEN BREAD AND BEER

LONDON, Jan. 21.—"Before long the country may have to choose between bread and beer," said Sir Alfred A. Booth, chairman of the Canard Company, in an interview to-day in citing the brewing and distilling industry as one that was absorbing the services of the ships of the country on a gigantic scale. The net result of this, he said, was only a decrease in national efficiency.

Sir Alfred expressed the highest satisfaction at the announcement of Mr. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, that articles not strictly necessary might have to be shut out of the country.

"I do not believe," Sir Alfred continued, "that the supply of either ships or transport facilities ashore can be increased to any great extent without encroaching on what is required for the effective prosecution of the war. At present the strain on port and inland transport facilities is almost greater than the strain caused by the shortage in tonnage."

"It is doubtful whether we could get more merchandise into the country even if we had more tonnage, for the reason that we cannot handle the stuff. More tonnage would only add to the list of steamships in port waiting to find berths. The competition for freights can only be reduced by the elimination of the demand for articles necessary for the support of the country or the conduct of the war. Otherwise freight rates will rise still further."

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. A RECRUITING SONG.

(With apologies to another writer on another war occasion).

Hark! Hark! Hark! our boys are calling:
"Put on khaki now and come;
We have fought our very best for great freedom and the rest—
Won't you come now join us, comrades, 'gainst the Hun?"

Hear! Hear! Hear! the boys are calling:
"Come now, why do you delay?
You may miss the final fight and the glorious 'Mafeking' night
If your coming you put off from day to day."

List! List! List! the future's talking—
Khaki Boy to Mufti seems to say:
"Was your father just a shirk who let others do his work, While mine fought at Langemarck, St. Julien and Ypres?"

"Oh, no! Hear, O comrades, hear us!
Hold on firm, we'll soon be there,
For it seems a crowning shame,
Not to up and 'Play the game!'
There's need for every man to do his share."

Joy! Joy! Joy! we've donned the khaki,
We dare now comrades to do right,
Nor more, our duty will we shirk,
now hide between a "shirt."
Nor play our games of hockey, while you fight!

Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! we all are marching,
Cheer up, comrades, we will come;
For beneath Canadian sky we have laid our mufti by
To proudly join our comrades 'gainst the Hun!

Come On, Canucks

Here is a recruiting song by Billy Breen, coach of the Electric Hockey Club:

Hark, hear the bugles calling once again,
And the air is filled with war and war's refrain,
From the broad St. Lawrence River to or far-off western plains,
The boys are proudly marching on their way,
See a soldier kiss love one's a fond good-bye,
See the sweethearts with a teardrop in their eyes,
Listen to the bands a playing as the boys go marching by,
And this is what the music seems to say:

CHORUS:

Come on Canucks and don't get left behind
For gallant sweethearts do not mind
—doesn't mind,
Hearts every day may be aching,
But Johnnie hides a tear as he goes marching
Keeping step to martial time,
Marching proudly in his khaki gay,
The bands will play while we're marching away,
So come on Canucks and don't get left behind.

Its your King and country that's in need to-day,
And the bravest of the brave must face the fray,
And while the bands are playing,
Mother, sweethearts should be saying,
God speed our boys and bring them back some day.
There's a cruel foe that would invade our shore's
But the flag we love shall wave for evermore.
So come on boys don't lag. Rally underneath the flag,
We'll sing the Maple Leaf on German shores.

CHORUS:

V.

Not only on that evening, but on many succeeding evenings Freddy called at the Oakley residence, until six months later, Mary was ready to wear another ring.

"No heirlooms for mine!" said Freddy as he took the measure of her third finger with a piece of string. "It shall be the conventional solitaire and the bluest whitest or the whitest bluest on Maiden lane!"

Accordingly, bright and early the next morning Freddy jumped off a Broadway car at the corner of Maiden lane and caromed from a policeman to a stunted newsboy, who was vigorously shouting the latest afternoon edition of an evening paper. He straddled himself by seizing the youngster's shoulder.

"Day wuz narten but winder glass," Taylor replied.

"Easy there, my boy!" he cried, and then he recognized the youth. "As I live," he shouted, "it's Tagliatela! Greetings, Taylor!"

The embarrassed Tagliatela wriggled and struggled to free himself, but Freddy held him close.

"Come on to the sidewalk," he said. "I'm not going to harm you."

He drew his reluctant captive to a shop window and proceeded to interrogate him.

"Do you ever go to the Tasso Settlement these days?"

"Naw!" Taylor replied. "It's blown up since Ginhoulias beat it."

"Beat it?"

"Sure," Taylor continued. "He went back to de old country."

"You don't say!" said Freddy. "You must have been sorry to lose your old friend."

"Old friend narten!" Taylor cried. "He wuz a cheap skate."

"There's gratitude for you!" Freddy exclaimed. "You smoke Mr. Ginhoulias's cigars and wear his heirloom ruby and diamond ring, and yet you call him a cheap skate!"

Taylor grinned broadly.

"Quit yer kidding," he said. "Dem segars wuz de rankest kind of flor de smellerinos."

"But surely the ring"—

"A lemon!" Taylor jeered. "I couldn't get two bones on it. When you hooked it from me I wuz goin' to give it back to Miss Oakley."

A great light broke over Freddy Furnival.

"You don't mean to say that that ruby and those four flashing diamonds were paste?" he cried.

"Dey wuz narten but winder glass," Taylor replied. "I got it straight from de fence, Mr. Furnival."

"And so you were going to give it back when I took it from you?"

"I suttenly wuz," said Taylor. "I ain't no petty larceny guy, you betcher life!"

"Then, my young friend, I did you a great injustice," Freddy declared, with mock seriousness, and tendered the lad a quarter.

"Dat's all right," Taylor replied, pocketing the saiving coin. "De best of us is liable to make a mistake wunst in awhile."

Freddy Furnival acquiesced in the sentiment with a solemn nod.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Pleasantscop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DESPAIRING WOMAN NOW HAPPY MOTHER

Mrs. Stephens Did Not Need The Surgical Operation.

Patoka, Ill.—"I had been married five years and my greatest desire was to become a mother. The doctor said I never would have a child unless I was operated on for female troubles and I had given up all hopes when a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly for sometime, and I am in better health than ever, and have a healthy baby girl. I praise your Vegetable Compound for my baby and my better health. I want all suffering women to know that it is the sure road to health and happiness."—Mrs. GEORGE STEPHENS, R. F. D. No. 2, Patoka, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

XI.—MRS. BILLINGTON'S FIRST CASE

[Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.]

In justice to Robert Billington, it must be said that in the beginning he did his best to discourage Mrs. Billington.

"One lawyer in the family," he said, "is enough. And, besides, I get all the law I need downtown. Be it your duty to shed sweetness and light over our happy home!"

"But," Mrs. Billington argued, "I should like to know what was the use of my college training if not to"—

"Exactly!" Bob broke in. "That's what I'd like to know too. If an academic education doesn't help you about the house, why study law on top of it?"

Mrs. Billington tossed her head.

"You know as well as I do what I mean," she insisted. "In the first place, I want to be able to talk intelligently with you about your business matters. You won't interest yourself in my affairs, so I suppose I must interest myself in your law!"

Thus Mrs. Billington, as usual, had her way. In three years' time, against the repeated protests of her husband, she added an LL. B. to her arts degree and successfully passed the bar examination.

It was in the tenth year of their married life that this event took place, and Bob was forced to admit that Mrs. Billington failed not at all in the performance of her household duties. Nor did she lose any of her femininity, and she continued to demand and receive all the little attentions that her husband had so unfailingly accorded her ever since their marriage.

Only in one respect was the even tenor of their married life disturbed—namely and to wit, as the lawyers say, in the matter of "intelligent conversation." Bob still talked the usual domestic commonplaces; but, while in the past Mrs. Billington merely echoed her husband's opinions, she now managed to twist Bob's every sentence into a mooted question of law. For instance, if he said that the Porteouses had a new coachman she professed to recognize in this an allusion to the law of master and servant, and she hastened to introduce the doctrine of "respondent superior."

She pursued these tactics until Bob grew weary, and if he found the conversation tending toward a legal discussion he buried himself in the evening paper or pleaded a headache and retired to a pipe in the library. Nevertheless at least four nights a week he found himself unwillingly going over his entire day's work in the courts or at the office, while Mrs. Billington listened with parted lips, fairly drinking in the legal phraseology.

"Now, this," she said at last, "is just what I've been wanting to do for you. I feel that I'm actually sharing the responsibility of your work, so that the burden of it won't rest so heavily on you."

"Won't it, though?" Bob rejoined. "It means that I do a day's work twice over—once in the actual performance of it and then again worrying it over with you in the evening. A sort of legal cud chewing, I call it. And Bowles, our managing clerk, is sick, and I've got to hustle down to a district court tomorrow and try a miserable little case myself."

Mrs. Billington's eye gleamed.

"Why don't you let me try it for you?" she suggested.

"You try it!" Bob shouted. "Why, by the sacred mustard, if I ever let you put foot in one of those dirty little east side courts may I be forever condemned!"

The gleam died out of Mrs. Billington's eye, but you may be sure that the ambition which kindled it remained. Ever since she had mastered—or thought she had mastered—the law of evidence she had been secretly anxious to try a case, and the opportunity was not long in coming.

"Just glance over this complaint, will you?" she asked one morning at breakfast, passing over the table a formidable looking legal document.

"That what?" said Bob.

"Complaint." Mrs. Billington went on steadily. "I presume you know that complaint is the name of the first written and verified pleading in an action at law. Well, this document is the complaint in the case of Kosvalitska against Schultz—action for wages as a female servant."

"In the municipal court of the city of New York, borough of Manhattan, Eighteenth district," it was headed. "Susan Kosvalitska, plaintiff, against Mary Schultz, defendant. The plaintiff, complaining of the defendant, by Mildred Billington, her attorney, respectfully alleges and shows"—

But Bob read no further and handed back the paper without a word.

"Well?" said Marion. "What do you think of it?"

"Think of it!" said Bob. "Why, I think this. I've been married to Marion Billington for ten years and I never knew her to do an unwomanly thing up to now."

He underscored the last three words as plainly as a sudden vocal crescendo permits.

"Unwomanly?" Marion cried indignantly.

"That's what I said," Bob declared. "When you spent your afternoons for three years in law school I stood it. I even admired the way you stuck to it. When you were finally admitted to the bar I took the ironical congratulations of the neighborhood in good part—felt rather proud of it, if anything, but I never thought you'd go so far as to want to try a case in a filthy district court!"

"And pray what is there unwomanly about that?" Marion asked. "As an attorney I have a right to practice there."

(To be continued.)

A good many years ago a steamer was sailing down a certain river, with a shrewd old Yankee captain in command. Suddenly the engines stopped and the steamer remained motionless for several minutes. The passengers began to talk among themselves and one of them, a portly, pompous person, advanced to the captain.

"What seems to be the trouble, captain?" he inquired. "Why have we stopped?"

"Too much fog," answered the captain curtly.

"But I can see the stars overhead quite plainly," argued the persistent individual.

"Maybe ye can," admitted the captain grimly. "But unless the b'iler bu'st, we ain't goin' that way!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

A friend of mine who is a cashier in a bank told me this incident which happened recently. "A pretty little rural school teacher came into the bank with an order for a month's wages. I handed her the amount in paper money. Noticing her hesitancy in picking the money up, I apologized for giving her torn and soiled bills, and remarked that I had forgotten that teachers were afraid of germs. She replied that such was not her thought at all, as she was certain no germ could live on her salary."—Farm and Fireside.

Veiled Insinuations Are No Argument!

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred, in referring to their petition to be circulated, say that

"Unless you are financially interested in the Liquor Traffic, you can hardly refuse to sign."

Surely a cause which makes pretensions to a high plane of morality ought not to require bolstering up with veiled insinuations as to the honesty of purpose of those who disagree, and do not favor signing this petition.

What of the Thousands whose ideas are not so warped and twisted that they cannot see the injustice of depriving men of their votes on a question affecting their rights and privileges while they are away to fight our battle?

What of Other Thousands of temperate men in all walks of life, who are neither prohibitionists, nor interested in the liquor traffic, but who are opposed on principle to stirring up an internal strife and introducing bitterness into our relations one with another, when all should be working in harmony to the one end of winning the war?

What of Other Thousands who know that Ontario Liquor Laws are among the most restricted, and the best administered in the world, and who believe that the short-hour day recently introduced is sufficiently advanced legislation for the present needs?

AND

What of Those Thousands of citizen soldiers whose absence on the supreme duty of fighting for their country deprives them of their right to fight for themselves here at the polls?

Do all these classes of citizens exist? They do.

Then why sneeringly insinuate that the man who is unwilling to sign a prohibition petition at this time is financially interested in not doing so?

It has ever been, that men engaged in promoting what they believe to be a moral cause have assumed an air of self-righteousness and superiority of purpose and have sought so to place themselves and their ideas before the public, that those who disagree with them must be deemed wanting in the qualities of good-citizenship.

OUR SERIAL STORY

V.

Not only on that evening, but on many succeeding evenings Freddy called at the Oakley residence, until, six months later, Mary was ready to wear mother ring.

"No heirlooms for mine!" said Freddy as he took the measure of her third finger with a piece of string. "It shall be the conventional solitaire and the bluest whitest or the whitest bluest on Maiden lane!"

Accordingly, bright and early the next morning Freddy jumped off a Broadway car at the corner of Maiden lane and cromed from a policeman to a stunted newsboy, who was vigorously shouting the latest afternoon edition of an evening paper. He straddled himself by seizing the youngster's shoulder.

'Dey wuz narten but winder glass," Taylor replied.

"Easy there, my boy!" he cried, and then he recognized the youth. "As I live," he shouted, "it's Tagliatela! Greetings, Taylor!"

The embarrassed Tagliatela wriggled and struggled to free himself, but Freddy held him close.

"Come on to the sidewalk," he said. "I'm not going to harm you."

He drew his reluctant captive to a shop window and proceeded to interrogate him.

"Do you ever go to the Tasso Settlement these days?"

"Naw!" Taylor replied. "It's blown up since Ginhoulac beat it."

"Beat it?"

"Sure," Taylor continued. "He went back to de old country."

"You don't say!" said Freddy. "You must have been sorry to lose your old friend."

"Old friend nerten!" Taylor cried. "He wuz a cheap skate."

"There's gratitude for you!" Freddy exclaimed. "You smoke Mr. Ginhoulac's cigars and wear his heirloom ruby and diamond ring, and yet you call him a cheap skate!"

Taylor grinned broadly.

"Quit yer kidding," he said. "Dem segars wuz de rankest kind of flor de smellerinos."

"But surely the ring"—

"A lemon!" Taylor jeered. "I couldn't get two bones on it. When you hooked it from me I wuz goin' to give it back to Miss Oakley."

A great light broke over Freddy Furnival.

"You don't mean to say that that ruby and those four flashing diamonds were paste?" he cried.

"Dey wuz narten but winder glass," Taylor replied. "I got it straight from de fence, Mr. Furnival."

"And so you were going to give it back when I took it from you?"

"I suttenly wuz," said Taylor. "I ain't no petty larceny guy, you betcher life!"

"Then, my young friend, I did you a great injustice," Freddy declared, with mock seriousness, and tendered the lad a quarter.

"Dat's all right," Taylor replied, pocketing the salving coin. "De best of us is liable to make a mistake wunst in awhile."

Freddy Furnival acquiesced in the sentiment with a solemn nod.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Pleasantscop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

XI.—MRS. BILLINGTON'S FIRST CASE

[Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.]

IN justice to Robert Billington, it must be said that in the beginning he did his best to discourage Mrs. Billington.

"One lawyer in the family," he said, "is enough. And, besides, I get all the law I need downtown. Be it your duty to shed sweetness and light over our happy home!"

"But," Mrs. Billington argued, "I should like to know what was the use of my college training if not to"—

"Exactly!" Bob broke in. "That's what I'd like to know too. If an academic education doesn't help you about the house, why study law on top of it?"

Mrs. Billington tossed her head.

"You know as well as I do what I mean," she insisted. "In the first place, I want to be able to talk intelligently with you about your business matters. You won't interest yourself in my music, so I suppose I must interest myself in your law!"

Thus Mrs. Billington, as usual, had her way. In three years' time, against the repeated protests of her husband, she added an LL. B. to her arts degree and successfully passed the bar examination.

It was in the tenth year of their married life that this event took place, and Bob was forced to admit that Mrs. Billington failed not at all in the performance of her household duties. Nor did she lose any of her femininity, and she continued to demand and receive all the little attentions that her husband had so unfailingly accorded her ever since their marriage.

Only in one respect was the even tenor of their married life disturbed—namely and to wit, as the lawyers say, in the matter of "intelligent conversation." Bob still talked the usual domestic commonplaces; but, while in the past Mrs. Billington merely echoed her husband's opinions, she now managed to twist Bob's every sentence into a mooted question of law. For instance, if he said that the Porterouses had a new coachman she professed to recognize in this an allusion to the law of master and servant, and she hastened to introduce the doctrine of "respondent superior."

She pursued these tactics until Bob grew weary, and if he found the conversation tending toward a legal discussion he buried himself in the evening paper or pleaded a headache and retired to a pipe in the library. Nevertheless at least four nights a week he found himself unwillingly going over his entire day's work in the courts or at the office, while Mrs. Billington listened with parted lips, fairly drinking in the legal phraseology.

"Now, this," she said at last, "is just what I've been wanting to do for you. I feel that I'm actually sharing the responsibility of your work, so that the burden of it won't rest so heavily on you."

A sort of legal cud chewing, I call it. And Bowles, our managing clerk, is sick, and I've got to hustle down to a district court tomorrow and try a miserable little case myself."

Mrs. Billington's eye gleamed.

"Why don't you let me try it for you?" she suggested.

"You try it!" Bob shouted. "Why, by the sacred mackerel, if I ever let you put foot in one of those dirty little east side courts may I be forever condemned!"

The gleam died out of Mrs. Billington's eye, but you may be sure that the ambition which kindled it remained. Ever since she had mastered—or thought she had mastered—the law of evidence she had been secretly anxious to try a case, and the opportunity was not long in coming.

"Just glance over this complaint, will you?" she asked one morning at breakfast, passing over the table a formidable looking legal document.

"That what?" said Bob.

"Complaint," Mrs. Billington went on steadily. "I presume you know that complaint is the name of the first written and verified pleading in an action at law. Well, this document is the complaint in the case of Kosvallaka against Schultz—action for wages as a female agrvant."

"Think of it?" said Bob. "Why, I think this. I've been married to Marion Billington for ten years and I never knew her to do an unwomanly thing up to now."

DESPAIRING WOMAN NOW HAPPY MOTHER

Mrs. Stephens Did Not Need The Surgical Operation.

Peteka, Ill.—"I had been married five years and my greatest desire was to become a mother. The doctor said I never would have a child unless I was operated on for female troubles and I had given up all hopes when a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly for sometime, and I am in better health than ever, and have a healthy baby girl. I praise your Vegetable Compound for my baby and my better health. I want all suffering women to know that it is the sure road to health and happiness."—Mrs. GEORGE STEPHENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Peteka, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

What of the Thousands

Then why sneeringly insinuate that the man who is unwilling to sign a prohibition petition at this time is financially interested in not doing so?

It has ever been, that men engaged in promoting what they believe to be a moral cause have assumed an air of self-righteousness and superiority of purpose and have sought so to place themselves and their ideas before the public, that those who disagree with them must be deemed wanting in the qualities of good-citizenship.

AN APPALLING LACK IN EVERYDAY LIFE

Great Need of Awakening on the Subject of Justice.

Neglect of the Principle of Justice Very Manifest in Christendom To-day—God's People Should Cultivate This Principle Carefully — Their Responsibility Great—Justice the Foundation of Character —Love the Superstructure.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 23.—Pastor Russell delivered a very impressive discourse here today. His text was, "Awake to righteousness and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame." (1 Corinthians 15:34.) He said in part:

This exhortation is not addressed to the world of sinners, but to Christians, as are all of the Apostolic writings. If we were to translate the text a little differently, it might better give the Apostle's thought. For instance, "Awake to a proper appreciation of justice. Do not sin against justice in your lives; for some have not a knowledge of God respecting justice, the principles of righteousness. And this is to your shame."

We who are in the School of Christ recognise that the Lord is teaching us and is preparing us for a great work in the future. The work of the Church during the incoming Age is, according to the Bible, to be kings, priests, and judges, to be God's representatives in the Messianic Kingdom. As kings, they will be sharers with our Lord Jesus in the ruling of the world. As priests, they share in the work of healing, instructing, and sympathizing with the world. As judges, they will administer justice, will give stripes or rewards to mankind, during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign. Manifestly, therefore, it is proper that whoever hopes to be of these kings, priests, and judges should now attain the qualifications of heart and mind which will make him competent for the work; for we may be very sure that God will not appoint any who are not properly qualified.

It is for this reason that God has been calling His Church out from the world during the last nineteen hundred years, and has been giving us the glorious instructions of our Lord Jesus and the Apostles and of the Law and the Prophets. All these things have been for our upbuilding in those qualities of heart and mind which will fit us for the great service to which God has called us.

But God is not testing His children according to their imperfect bodies; for He knows that we cannot do the things which we would. He is dealings with our spirits, our minds. Through the transforming influences of His Word, He is giving us a new mind; and it is this new mind which He receives into His family. This becomes the New Creature. (Romans 12: 1, 2; 2 Corinthians 5: 17.) We accept a new will, the will of God, instead of our own wills, and the Divine arrangements instead of our own plans and purposes. Thus God is dealing with us as His children, according to this new relationship into which we have come by faith and obedience; and through Christ our Lord we are reckoned perfect in God's sight.

The Knowledge of God's Will.

But how can we be perfect in will when our bodies are imperfect? We answer, as did the Apostle, "To will is present with me, but how to perform I find not." (Romans 7:18.) He did not always succeed in carrying out his will for righteousness. So it is with every one who seeks to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. We all know how to WILL right, but how to DO right is the problem.

Gradually we learn that God will not judge us according to the imperfections of our flesh; for so long as we remain faithful, these blemishes are covered with the robe of Christ's imputed righteousness. Therefore we do our best to show our Heavenly Father that we are trying hard to do right in every act, word, and thought. And since He expects every member of His family to have a perfect will, it becomes a personal question as to what is the will of God for us. So we seek diligently to prove "what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

To prove what is God's will means to come to a knowledge of His will, to demonstrate it for ourselves. If we are faithful, we are progressing in this more and more as the days go by. At first we had a little knowledge, and this we put into practice. As we grew in grace and in knowledge, we became better acquainted with the will of God; and it was for us to put this increased knowledge into practice also. This knowledge of the will of God we obtained, not in any supernatural way, but through the study of the Bible.

Whoever has come into the family of God has given up his own will and accepted instead God's will. Whoever has not given up his own will to the Lord is not His child. As the Apostle declares, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." (Romans 8:9.) The spirit of Christ was the spirit of full surrender to the Father's will; and as we come to this same condition, we give up our own wills and take instead the Divine will. This we do because it is the proper course for all who desire to follow in our Redeemer's steps, and because our own wills have proved to be unsatisfactory to ourselves. Our minds and our bodies are so imperfect that we have frequently gotten into difficulty through doing our own will. Therefore we are glad to know and to do the will of God, especially since we see that it is so gracious a will.

During the present time it is the will of God that His children shall have trials, difficulties, and polishings, in order that these experiences may develop in us a Godlikeness of character, a crystallization of character, that will render us fit to be used of God in the great work which He has appointed to the Lord Jesus, that we might thus become joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord in that Heavenly Kingdom which is designed of the Father for the blessing of all the families of the earth.

Justice First, Then Love.

Sometimes Christian people see the doctrine of love in the Bible, and forget that there is a lesson which precedes love. This primary lesson is the one to which we draw your attention to-day. It is the lesson of justice—righteousness. Our text really signifies, "Awake to justice!" We must all learn to distinguish right from wrong and to practise what is just, right. Justice is righteousness.

The Law of God was given to the Israelites at Mount Sinai to show what justice means. They were not asked to do anything more than justice. "Thou shalt not kill," said the Law; for to take another's life is wrong, except when God's own Law demands it. "Thou shalt not steal." To do so is wrong, unjust. "Thou shalt not bear false witness." To do so would be an injustice.

Thus we see that the Law of God given to the children of Israel amounted to this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul, mind, and strength; and thy neighbour as thyself." To do justice to your neighbor as you wish that neighbor to do justice to you is the essence of the Law of God given to the Jews for their treatment of others.

Did God give this same Law to the Church? Yes, so far as the spirit of the Law is concerned. God's Law is over all of His creatures. But during the Law Dispensation there was a special Law Covenant which God had made with Natural Israel. No others have ever been under that Law Covenant. The Jew who could keep that Law perfectly could live forever; and, having everlasting life at his command, he might have the opportunity of becoming a part of that great antitypical Spiritual Israel which was to bless all the families of the earth. This our Lord Jesus did. Moreover, in His statement of the Divine Law to Spiritual Israel, He "has magnified the Law and made it honorable" by showing how far-reaching and comprehensive are its requirements.

No intelligent person will question the propriety of dealing justly with every one in the world. This subject has many ramifications in all the affairs of our daily life. The principle of justice enters into every transaction, even the most trivial. It applies not only to our dealings with the world at large, but with every member of our own family. This principle of justice must be fellowshipped with our own as well as with others. If all might get this thought of the Golden Rule fixed in the mind, if each one could awake to righteousness, to justice, the whole world would be revolutionized.

Practical Application of Justice.

If this principle of justice were recognized and followed, men would not be shooting one another to-day as in Europe. On the contrary, they would be doing something better, something good, one toward another, just as they would wish others to do toward them. But men are not living up to this standard of righteousness, of justice. It is entirely ignored by governments and by individuals. The general excuse for violating the Golden Rule is, "It would never do for us to grant to others what we would expect for ourselves; for others would take advantage of us; they would not do their part; they would not reciprocate." Say the British, "It would not do for us to practice the Golden Rule toward the Germans; for we do not know what they would do to us." The Germans advance the same kind of argument.

This course of conduct is not the fear of God, but the fear of man; it ignores the fear of God. God says that if Christians are afraid of men and of nations and of what these may do, we are carnal, are living according to the flesh, are like the unbelieving world. How shall we who have come into relationship with God through the Lord Jesus Christ, we who have given our lives to Him, do under such circumstances? Shall we say that we fear to trust this principle of justice in our lives, that we do not dare to carry it out in every word, thought, and act? Are we afraid to trust God and to obey Him?

God did not say that we were to observe the Golden Rule whenever others observed it toward us, and to ignore it whenever others failed to observe it toward us. On the contrary, we are to practise it on every occasion, regardless of what others do. Then we shall know that all things shall work together for good toward us, because we shall be in line with God and His arrangements. He has power to overrule in all of life's affairs. The very least that we must do is to give justice to one another; and to do so will mean a great blessing to our own characters.

Whoever is violating the principle of justice, the Golden Rule, in his home or in the Church of Christ, or in business or social relations should, if he is a Christian, examine the matter earnestly and prayerfully, and "awake to righteousness [justice], and sin not." Thus to do violence to justice is sin; and so far as our knowledge goes, it is a sin that prevails everywhere. Many have not a proper appreciation of this fact. They do not see that justice is the very foundation of all character, of all right living. It is the foundation of the Throne of God. (Psalm 89:14.) In vain does anyone practice love to his fellow creatures or even toward God while he is at the same time violating the principle of justice toward that one. Only after we have rendered justice are we at liberty to practise love toward another. Then we may do as much as we are able along the line of love. Justice first, love afterwards.

Responsibility of God's People.

Those who are children of God are expecting shortly to be made the judges of the world. As the Apostle says, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Corinthians 6:2,3.) Moreover, God is seeking now to develop in our hearts and lives, in our characters, those principles which He desires. Therefore, unless we are just in our very hearts, unless we appreciate this principle of justice and rejoice to practise it, we shall not be fit for the Kingdom. We should not be unjust even to an animal. Every creature has its rights; and we should give each creature the rights which belong to it. The results are with God. Thus doing, shall we not be preparing our minds, our hearts, for the glorious condition which the Lord has in store for His faithful children?

We are not to think that the Kingdom of God is to be given on the basis of mercy or favor. There will be neither mercy nor favor in connection with the bestowal of the Heavenly reward. God shows mercy in connection with our sins and the weaknesses against which we are striving; but He will not allow in that Kingdom any individual whom He approves for joint-heirs with our Lord Jesus must represent the principles of righteousness and must know how to apply these principles now. Whoever is not disposed to justice to such an extent as to be willing to suffer loss rather than do an injustice will not have a share in the Kingdom.

The Bible everywhere pictures God as the great Representative of Justice. If we receive a place in the Kingdom, it will be apportioned us on the basis of works, on the basis of our growth in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Lord Jesus. If we have been justified by faith in Jesus' blood, if we then have made a covenant with God, and have been begotten of His Holy Spirit, He wishes to see us go on to perfection as New Creatures. We are not to think that our Heavenly Father is uninterested in us, and that He will coldly and indifferently judge us. On the contrary, we are to remember our Lord's assurance, "The Father Himself loveth you."—John 14:21.

Some Deeper Than Others.

This is a very beautiful text—"The Father Himself loveth you!" This is not said of the world. We know that God has a love for the world—"God so loved the world that He gave His Only-Begotten Son" to die for them. But our Lord is here declaring God's love for the Church, who are so dear to Him as "the apple of His eye." (Zechariah 2:8.) Just as we protect our eye lest anything should hurt it, so Jesus and His Church are very, very precious to their Heavenly Father.

From the very moment that God accepts any as His child and begets that one with His Holy Spirit, from that moment He especially loves him. He has appointed our Lord Jesus, our Redeemer, to be our Elder Brother, to take charge of us as the sons of God. He is the Head over this House of Sons, as St. Paul points out. (Hebrews 3:5, 6.) The Father loves us in much the same way that an earthly parent loves his children, and for the same reason. Yet as an earthly father may find a difference in the degree of his love toward his several children, so with God. Some are very dear children, because they are very dutiful, very obedient. So in proportion as we are zealous to do our Father's will, we have more of His love.

While the Father loves the spiritual babe, yet He does not expect as much of the Babe as of the grown child. As we develop, therefore, the Father's love increases. He wishes to see us so earnest that we will seek to know what things are written in His Book, and that we will develop a character like His own. Jesus said, "Be ye like unto your Father in Heaven." This is possible; for Jesus has a character like the Father's, and we are to become like that dear Son.

In conclusion, let us remember that if we are true, loyal children of God, all our blemishes are covered by the robe of Christ's righteousness; and if we are doing with our might what our hands find to do in this great matter of justice, dealing with all along the lines of the Golden Rule, we are showing the Father that we appreciate this principle as the foundation of his Government. Upon this sure foundation we shall build a superstructure of love. Thus shall we be blessed and made ready for the Kingdom.

"Awake to righteousness, and sin not." Does not the Apostle's injunction imply that some are not fully awake to the importance of this principle of justice? We think that this is the thought; that very few have been awake to the practise of the Golden Rule. To our understanding the great Judge is now at the door, and the final testings are very near at hand. If we are hoping to enter into the Kingdom there is little time left for character-making. This is a very solemn thought. Therefore we should take the greatest pains to find out what God requires of those who are to be kings, priests, and judges in the Messianic Kingdom, in order that we may be amongst those who will make their calling and election sure, that we may have an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Then we shall see Him as He is, and shall share His glory.

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

The duellist stepped down when he was ordered to, but the moment the officer had passed he jumped up again and went on with the game. His rival's shot had almost grazed his ear. Both sides were eagerly looking on and observing quite honorably the rules of this extraordinary game, when the Australian fell back into the trench, shot through the temple.

The shot came not from the Turk opposite, but from a distance to the south. While the Australian was shooting some other Turk had shot him.

In laying your plans for the improvement of the household of culinary departments, study comforts, study to save steps, to save time, to save money and to save that which is of vastly more importance, is easy to lose, yet hard to find when once it is lost, viz: health, perfect, robust health. It is sometimes worth striving for and though never appreciated as it should be until it is gone past all hopes of return, it is well worth studying. It is the convenience of life that saves it, the inconvenience of life that cause its lose.

SOLDIERS FOUGHT A DEATH DUEL

Anzac and Turk Fought Like Champions of Old.

The Australian Eye-Witness has a rare sense for dramatic incident. Here is a story—of the days when the Anzacs were still fighting the Turks in Gallipoli—which Captain Bean tells in a recent despatch.

You occasionally come across men of the madly daring sort of whom any story might be true.

Two months ago an officer was going along his section of fire trench when he found a man standing up a head and shoulder above the parapet and blazing at something over it, and then calmly lowering his rifle and standing there looking over the parapet, with a trench of the enemy's not 300 yards away.

It turned out that he was having a duel with a Turk.

I do not know by what quaint system of signalling they arranged it, but each one was having one shot at the other and then standing up there for the other to have next shot at him.

So they blazed at one another while the men along that section of the trenches looked on through their periscopes and loopholes, and no doubt the Turks were looking through theirs also.

The officer told the man to stand down at once and not to be a fool.

THEY REFUSE TO EAT

At periods in most childrens' lives they fail to relish their meals and refuse to eat even the delicacies prepared to tempt their appetites. They lack ambition, and growth seems impeded, which causes anxiety and worry.

To compel them to eat is a grave mistake, because nutrition is impaired. Healthful exercise in fresh air and sunshine is important, but equally important is a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion three times a day to feed the tissues and furnish food-energy to improve their blood, aid nutrition and sharpen their appetites.

The highly concentrated medicinal food in Scott's Emulsion supplies the very elements children need to build up their strength. They relish Scott's—it is free from drugs. Avoid substitutes.

WAR SACRIFICE

Considerable sentimental interest attached to the auction sale of one of the gift articles sold in aid of the Auckland Hospital Ship Fund. This was a silver teapot which had been taken to the auction room earlier in the day by an elderly man as the only contribution that he and his wife were able to offer to the fund. The teapot was a wedding present, and the old couple, who described themselves as simply "D. and K.," decided to part with it as an earnest of their patriotism. The teapot, at the first offer, was knocked down at $13. "Put it up again," said the buyer, and the article was resold eight times, at prices varying from $7 to $13. "Give it back to the old man," exclaimed the last buyer, and amidst a storm of applause, and the old couple, whilst retaining a cherished memento of the days of the past, will have the satisfaction of knowing that they were the means of adding over $90 to the fund.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

NEW DISEASE CREEPS UP IN WAR TIME

Women Are Leaders In the "Worry" Ailment—Rest Only Cure—Doctors' Skill Useless

Women are perhaps more prone to the new malady which is making itself felt than men. War worry has now become a definite disease. Its symptoms are very like those of neurasthenia. The victim becomes depressed, nervous, starting at any unexpected sound, is in a constant state of agitation, is ready to cry at the slightest difficulty, and is generally in a morbid condition of mental and physical health. What is the cause of this distressing trouble? When a woman has a relative or friend, husband or sweetheart or son at the front in deadly peril of his life, the day-by-day agony of mind, the anxiety as to his safety, the expectation of a fateful missive from the War Office, this dreadful anticipation of the worst, naturally produces an effect that one only result—if allowed to operate—is complete breakdown. But the same painful state is to be observed in many people who have no direct cause of pre-occupation with the war. There is an unhealthy craving for news. Every day, every hour some dramatic development is looked for, and the brain, seeking continually for fresh sensations, magnifies and distorts such information as is available. Rumor is called upon to supply what the newspapers, which have only the authentic messages to work upon, cannot provide.

A Good Cure

Housekeeping cares, intensified by the war, are also to be held responsible. Other causes might be enumerated, but what is of more importance is the remedy for these ills. The doctors are helpless. Drugs are useless. There is [illegible] one way only by which sanity may be preserved. It is simple, and it is sure. Try the restfulness of relaxing. Whenever things seem bad, so bad that they could not well be worse, sit quietly back and deliberately, consciously let yourself go. Let every limb fall limp. Do not allow a single muscle in the body to be stressed. To close one's eyes and put oneself in this attitude of entire peace is not as easy as it sounds, but it can be accomplished with a little practice.

Watch Yourself Now

Notice the way in which you are sitting at this moment. You are probably holding this paper with tightly clenched hands, and are reading it with straining eyes. Your mouth is tightly set. Your back is rigid. Your very toes are, as it were, clutching the floor. You are clinging with your body to the chair.

Don't do these things. The chair will hold you. You need not hold the chair. If you will allow yourself to be at ease, with every fibre free, for a space of five minutes, you will get up filled with new energy.

Practise this continually. Pause when you are weary and worried. Sink into complete abandonment. No war worry can stand against this treatment, for the tonic is lasting. A new woman, bright and happy, will take the place of the old tired and troubled creature who had suffered from an unnatural and a killing tension.

WAR GLEANINGS

The war is costing Italy $100,000,000 per month.

Paris is to have a bronze bas-relief of Miss Cavell's execution.

Halfpenny pieces coined from iron to the value of $1,250,000 are shortly to be issued in Germany.

There are at least 3,000 women fighting in Serbia. They represent all classes of the community and are armed just as the men are. In many cases they wear soldiers' uniforms for the sake of comfort.

Some idea of the consumption of cotton in the war may be had from the fact that 1,000 tons a day are required to supply the German and Austrian Armies with powder.

THE POET'S SACRIFICE

Rupert Brook, Brilliant Scholar, Gave His Life For His Country

A few weeks before the death of Rupert Brooke in a hospital ship off the Dardanelles he wrote a sonnet sequence on the war, in which he faced with quiet exultation the thought of dying for his country. Brooke was one of England's most distinguished young poets. The son of a master at Rugby, born in 1887, he took his degree at Cambridge University in 1909, then traveled and wrote contributing verse and sketches to the London weeklies. He was regarded as a man of the highest literary promise. When May and joined the eventful conflict Brooke observed, "Well, if Armageddon's on I suppose I should be there." He accepted a commission in the Naval Division and had his first taste of war at Antwerp, where he lay in the trenches under German shell fire. Returning home he was sent to the Dardanelles, where he died of sunstroke at Lemnos, where he was buried.

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health; keep the bowels regular and the blood pure, but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it faithfully.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." (Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.

7577

Loose and comfortable this coat is, one which will be found both stylish and comfortable in the cold days ahead of us. The garment is divided at the waistline, giving a separate waist and skirt section. The upper part has a closing which may be arranged at the side of the front so as to leave the neck snug and high or with small revers and a standing flare collar at the neck. The plain sleeves end at the wrist and may be finished with or without a cuff.

The skirt section of the coat is quite full. It is gathered all around and closes at the side of the front. At the waistline there may be either a wide belt or a plain seam joining the two sections.

This is one of the coats which are best made of soft loose woollen weaves and of the mixtures which are more serviceable than any plain colors. It will also be handsome if made of velvet, but as this is a costly material a plainer garment, requiring less in quantity, might be more advisable for it.

The pattern of this garment is perforated so that it may be made in a shorter length, and when this is used the heavier cloths and the more expensive ones can be chosen freely.

The sent pattern, No. 7,577, is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires for long coat, 3¼ yards of 50 inch material, for 3/4 length coat, 2¾ yards of 54 inch width.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

HOCKEY CAMPBELLFORD vs. THE 93rd BATTALION TO-NIGHT

AT BROCK STREET RINK

ENEMY IS PREPARING FOR ATTACK ON SALONIKA SAYS ONE REPORT

Austro-Germans Said to Have a Force of 320,000 Men For Assault on Allies---Russian Torpedo Boats Sunk 33 Turkish Vessels in a Raid Along the Anatolian Coast ---Cauadian Liner Pomeranean is Disabled.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ATHENS, Jan. 24.—It is rumoured here that the Kaiser accompanied by Von Mackensen has arrived at Ghevgelli on the Greeco-Serbian frontier. Austro-Germans it is said have nearly completed necessary arrangements for an attack on Salonika. An army of 320,000 men is reported to be ready, supported by heavy artillery including three 16-inch guns.

ATHENS, Jan. 24.—All Serbian and Montenigrin troops probably will be transferred to Salonika to reinforce the Allies if the Montenegrins are driven back to the Adriatic, according to Corfu despatches to-day.

Transports are arriving at the Island of Corfu every two days with Serbian troops from Valona, Albania.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 24.—Heavy fighting has been resumed along the Stripa River in Galicia and along the Bessarabian front, according to advices received here to-day.

By simultaneous assaults the Slavs are pressing the enemy back from the Strips and attempting to bend the Austrian right flank near Czernowitz. The assault is being directed so fiercely on every front that the enemy has been unable to shift reserves to meet the heavy Russian attacks.

Russian torpedo boats have sunk 33 Turkish sailing ships and destroyed seven at their docks, in a raid along the Anatolian coast, the Ministry of Marine announced to-day.

The torpedo boat flotilla bombarded three wharves and destroyed the stores, barracks and custom houses at the Turkish villages of Samson and Onnepatz on the Asia Minor Coast, Black Sea.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Jan. 24.—Mailed advices from Vienna intimate that the illness of the aged Emperor of Austria, Franz Josef, is still most alarming. The best physicians of Germany and Austria are at his bedside, but it is realised that the extreme age of His Majesty prevents much hope. Archduchess Zita, wife of the heir to the throne, is personally nursing her father-in-law.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Jan. 24.—The supposedly secret diplomatic codes of the United States Government are known to practically every belligerent in Europe, it was learned to-day. Col. E. M. House, who is conferring with the American Ambassador in Europe as confidential agent of President Wilson, will have this fact impressed upon him before he returns to Washington. Through him the State Department will be asked to change its cipher.

TORONTO, Jan. 24.—Apparently the Germans didin't succeed in reaching London in their aeroplanes Sunday. German official to-day says naval aeroplanes bombarded the station at Dover, England, barracks and docks, early Sunday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The United States will make inquiry of the Turkish Government concerning the knowledge it may have of sinking of the P. and O. liner Persia, Secretary Lansing said to-day.

OTTAWA, Jan. 24.—It is expected that the speech of Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, which will be delivered to-morrow afternoon, will deal with advantages both for the present and for the future, which have accrued and will accrue to the Dominion from the much criticized shell committee. Sir Robert Borden will close the debate.

It is practically certain that Sir Robert will produce correspondence between the Government and the British Ministry of Munitions in connection with the matter. It is believed that Mr. Lloyd-George has been asked whether he desires an investigation into the workings of the committee.

It will be apparent that the only answer which he can give is a negative one. The British Ministry of Munitions is probably now in possession, through its representatives, Messrs. Thomas and Hichens, of all the information it desires in connection with the committee.

It is considered probable that the Senate will inaugurate an investigation if the Government refuses to do so.

The Public Accounts Committee will get down to business at an early date, and a very considerable programme is anticipated, both in connection with war expenditures and also in connection with domestic expenditures.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 24.—The Canadian Allen liner Pomeranian, bound for Canada was disabled southwest of Fastnet and is turning back toward Queenstown, proceeding slowly.

Cause of accident is not known.

German submarines infested the waters of Fastnet early in the war, and recently are reported to have resumed their activity in this neighbourhood.

18 VOLUNTEERS AT BIG SUNDAY NIGHT RECRUITING RALLY

Duty of Enlisting Presented to Young Men in Terms That Left No Alternative But the Worst

CAPT. WINDEYER SPOKE

The Sunday night recruiting meeting in the Armouries resolved itself into a sifting of the chaff of a general assembly for the kernels of recruits. And the winnowing produced eighteen men who were arrayed on the platform in conspicuous "civvies" which they will exchange for khaki if attested. Meanwhile, as Adjutant McElhinney said, there were enough "skulkers" on George street to have more than filled the battalion.

It was an epochal meeting in the manner in which the duty and especially the immediate urgency of recruiting was vociferated with a directness that could not be ignored even if it were evaded. When Captain Windeyer, of Toronto, on Gen. Logie's staff, had completed his address and appealed for men to come forward, officers and non-coms of the 93rd circulated through the crowd bearing the demand to the individual, and Recruiting Sergeant Percy Luther was the most active of them all. It was an electric phase of the meeting with the crowd, expectant and aborbed, watching the process of threshing the chaff of apparent prospects.

When the excitement had subsided and the end of the meeting was near at hand, Capt. Rollins reminded his audience that the recruiting of this Battalion was actually an obligation resting with the citizens. Hence every one must unite their efforts for that purpose. He also observed that whatever had been said or done in the enthusiasm of the moment should be overlooked and that all should pledge themselves to the vital work that is presented to the city.

During the evening the 93rd Battalion band accompanied the Patriotic Chorus which was conducted by Mr. J. H. Renwick, but the excellence that Band Master Hughes' organization has attained was well exemplified in their overture "Le Diadem." Master Luther also pleased the audience with several recitations, his encore bearing the title "Fill Up the 93rd."

Captain Ackerman Presided.

Captain Ackerman made a capital chairman apart from the appropriateness of his selection for an occasion such as last night's. He emphasized the fighting spirit of volunteer soldiers as proven by the thin Canadian line at Langemarck when they turned back the German horde that out-

ANOTHER PLATOON SECURED FOR THE LOCAL BATTALION

Fifty-five Men Have Joined the 93rd Since Thursday Morning---Well Known Postman Enlists---Presentation to Sergt. Herb. O'Heron---To-day's Military News.

Since last Thursday morning enough men have joined the 93rd Battalion to form another platoon, fifty-five recruits having passed the doctors out of a total of over one hundred examined in the last few days. This week it is hoped to reach the 700 mark. On Saturday ten recruits weathered the medical examination.

Among the Saturday crop was Jas. C. Harrison, the well-known mail-carrier, and formerly celebrated as a long-distance walker. He was accepted by the doctors on Saturday.

On Saturday also Jim and Bruce Kennedy both were successful in passing the doctor. They are brothers of Pte. Percy Kennedy of the 93rd, who joined a few days ago. The three brothers are members of B Company.

Geo. Thomas Willshaw, another in the list of new recruits, is the father of Sergt. Willshaw of the 93rd, and has three sons serving the Empire.

As will be seen from the following list most of those who have been coming forward are residents of Peterborough:

I. Bonds, Norwood, Ont.
Jas. C. Harrison, 739 George St.
Jas. A. Kennedy, 246 Antrim St.
Walter Thorpe, North Monaghan.
Albert Wood, Peterborough.
John Groves, Norwood.
Wm. J. Sloan, 297 Stewart St.
Louis Simpson, 233 Mark St.
J. Bruce Kennedy, 469 Smith St.
Bruce Beavis, 69 Rogers St.
Wm. Fairly, 460 Bolivar St.
Geo. W. McNaughton, 869 George St.
Geo. Thos. Willshaw, 460 Union St.
Ed. Geo. Dormer, 516 Bonacord St.
Wm. Maudsley, 184 Edinburgh St.
Roy Spears, R.R. No. 6, Peterborough.
Peter Hammond, 396 Water St.

Writing to a member of the Examiner staff Driver Morris Montgomery a Peterborough boy with the Divisional Ammunition Column, 2nd Canadian Division, says: "Things here are rather quiet up the line this last few days. We generally see a few air duels during the day, but our guns have been quiet considering the weather has been fine here all day. It was nice to see the sun out, but it has turned much colder now. I met Giroux, the hockey player, and several boys from the city. I have not seen or heard of my brother, who is here. We are quite a piece away from one another. The Germans send a few shells over, but they can't get the range on our guns. We have our guns too well covered in. When you are on the road it is hard to see them, but when they are in action you can hear them all right. We spent a rather good Christmas. We had a small dinner, and towards evening we had a concert. Some of the boys were up at the front, but most of them were in that day. Adam Davidson is a gunner now. He is fine and wishes to be remembered to you. There are not many places left standing up near the front.

An interesting event took place at the Armouries on Saturday when Sergt. Herb. O'Heron who recently joined the ranks of the benedicts, was presented with a beautiful cut-glass dish by the N. C. O's. and men of No. 5 Platoon. Sergt. O'Heron who is to be the Machine Gun Sergeant of the Battalion, has been attached to No. 5 Platoon since its organization, and the presentation is an evidence of his popularity.

The officers of the 93rd took their musketry examinations this morning. Q. M. Sergeant Goodhouse is the examiner.

Sir Sam Hughes Pays A Tribute to the Men That Comprised 1st Contingent

Shooting Efficiency of Canada's First Army Was Well Above the Average---Big Recruiting Meeting That Was Held in the Armouries on Saturday Afternoon Was Largely Attended---Judge Haycke Issues a Challenge to Male School-teachers and Clerks,

ADDRESS BY BISHOP O'BRIEN

That the big recruiting meeting which was held in the Armouries on Saturday afternoon was a success from the standpoint of enthusiasm was due in a large measure to the band of the 93rd Battalion and the oratorical efforts of the speakers. The band played well and often enough to warm up the audience that filled the drill hall to capacity, while the speakers shelled the trenches at befitting intervals. The main appeal was directed at the young men, who were urged to come forward and fill up the ranks of the 93rd Battalion, while a number of appeals of lesser importance and varying character were made to the classes. The latter included mothers, sweethearts and concluded with a challenge to the male school teachers of the city and also clerks who are employed in local stores, and others, whose duties could be performed by women.

There was a disappointing number of eligible men present, but this did not deter the speakers from using their heavy oratorical batteries. The programme provided for a reception to a number of returned soldiers.

The Empty Sleeve.

His Worship Mayor J. J. Duffus opened the meeting by introducing to the audience a quartette of returned soldiers, namely, Sergt. Fred Wells, Corporal White, Private Bruce Mills and Private J. H. Wilson, all survivors of the second battle of Ypres. Sergt. Wells received a great ovation as he stepped to the front of the platform. His left sleeve was empty—a grim reminder of the ordeal through which the 1st Canadian contingent passed on the 23rd of April, 1915.

Mayor Duffus was followed by Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., of the 93rd Battalion, who paid a well-deserved tribute to the returned soldiers.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., made a strong appeal to the young men in the audience to come forward and fill up the ranks of the 93rd Battalion. "Many men," said the speaker, were compelled to remain at home by reasons of business ties, but he for one would relinquish his business activities and enlist if there were any possibility of the 93rd Battalion not being completed when the time came for it to depart.

Bishop O'Brien.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who was the next speaker, said he was present to express entire sympathy with the authorities in their efforts to swell the membership of the 93rd Battalion. "It is a real inspiration," said His Lordship, "to have with us four men who have returned from the scene of conflict. These men have expressed a desire to return to the front, and I hope they will not go alone. Canada has done well, so has Peterborough. I am told that Peterborough has enlisted six per cent. of the total population, but the war drags on and we are united here to-day with the chief of the Canadian Militia, in an effort to fill up the ranks of the 93rd Battalion.

I would say to Major General Sir Sam Hughes that I have a personal interest in him because he comes from Lindsay, and Lindsay being a part of this diocese, places him within the jurisdiction of the Bishop of this diocese. I am not so sure that the Bishop has been able to exercise that jurisdiction over him," jocularly observed the speaker.

A Total Abstainer.

Bishop O'Brien paid a warm tribute to Sir Sam's ability, and also drew attention to the fact that the "Kitchener" of Canada is a total abstainer. The speaker then referred to some of the causes that prompted Britain to enter the war. "In this war," said Bishop O'Brien, it may be said that Great Britain was not directly attacked. Nations, like individuals, must preserve their integrity and at the same time respect the treaties of other nations. The moment the treaty between Great Britain and Belgium was violated it became necessary for Britain to take the initiative. Supposing no treaty had existed and Germany had undertaken to crush France, England would have been justified in demanding that Germany stay within the westerly limits of her boundaries. It has been said by men who should know better that this is not our war. The reason it is not our war is because the grey walls of England with the English bulldog on top stand between us and the enemy. It is our war because we are British subjects.

Loyal to the King.

"I will allow no person to outstrip me in loyalty towards my sovereign," said Bishop O'Brien, with considerable emphasis. Catholic people are sometimes accused of being governed by a foreign potentate. We do not confuse the spiritual with the temporal. These things are so arranged that they will not conflict. We are loyal and will permit nothing of a temporal order to stand between us, or take the place of King George."

Bishop O'Brien concluded with a eulogistic reference to Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding the 93rd Battalion.

Enemy is Weakening.

The next speaker was Lieut.-Col. J. Mills, who accompanied the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, to the front. Col. Mills is of the opinion that the war, so far as trench fighting is concerned, will be over before the snow flies next autumn. The enemy is wearing down. The front is long and very wide, and is constantly presenting new difficulties to the Germans. The latter have prepared for this war for upwards of forty years. Great Britain was unprepared when the Germans struck, and they had only a "contemptible" army of one hundred thousand heroes with which to meet the initial onslaught. Things have changed. The superiority of the Allies is increasing every day, and with more ammunition and more men, a conclusive and successful result is not far distant.

Capt. Chas. Ackerman.

Captain Charles Ackerman, another member of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, who returned home after being wounded, said that the young men of the country should esteem it a privilege to go out and do something for their King and Country.

Sir Sam Hughes.

"I feel very much at home in Peterborough," said Major General Sir Sam Hughes, after the applause that greeted his introduction had abated. Bishop O'Brien's reference to the temperance question pleased Sir Sam, who remarked that less than two-thirds of one man per thousand had been found under the influence of liquor since the outbreak of the war.

"You can't enthuse a man who goes around with his hands in his pockets," observed Canada's Minister of Militia and Defence, as he referred to the efforts that were being made to fill up the ranks. Continuing, he said: "You are all acquainted with the causes of the war. We don't know what liberties we enjoy and we don't know what we would suffer if we lost them. The German people were a great liberty-loving people years ago, when they united with Great Britain on the field of Waterloo. Since that time they have been inculcated with the spirit of militarism, and a desire for world domination. The outbreak of war found Germany ready for the fray. I must say that German soldiers do not amount to much or they would have been in Calais and London. Their vast network of railways enabled them to roll eight millions of men into the field, whereas Great Britain had only eighty thousand men to oppose them. Germany has six hundred thousand rifles in Brazil in readiness for an invasion of the United States, but cannot use them owing to European complications. How long would the liberties of Canada and Peterborough last should the Germans win in the present war.

Good Riflemen.

"You will have no trouble raising

Convicted of Supplying Liquor

George Sidey Will Spend the Next Thirty Days in Gaol

George Sidey will swell the membership at that well known county institution, known as the gaol. In this morning's Police Court Sidey was convicted of having supplied Robert L. Anderson with two flasks of whiskey, knowing, it is alleged, that Anderson was on the black list at the time and also a member of the Overseas Forces. Sidey was fined twenty-five dollars, with the option of thirty days in gaol. The accussed accepted the latter.

HOME IN OTONABEE DESTROYED BY FIRE

House of Mr. Harold Fitch Wiped Out Early This Morning

The home of Mr. Harold Fitch in Otonabee, about five miles from the city, was completely destroyed by fire this morning between three and four o'clock. The building was a frame structure, and was quickly wiped out by the flames. Mr. Fetch was unable to account for the conflagration. He was able to save part of the contents. The loss is partly covered by insurance. The barns are situated quite a distance from the house, and consequently escaped destruction.

A PLEA FOR LESSARD

TORONTO, Jan. 24.—Claiming that General Lessard, the most popular of Canadian Generals, has been promoted to extinction by General Hughes, the Toronto Star editorially to-day demands that members of Parliament bring up the question in the House of Commons and ask why Lessard is not being used with the fighting forces of Canada.

THE FLY IN THE OINTMENT.

The news despatches tell us that the "dry"—prohibition—resolution to be submitted to Parliament is non-partizan—it is to be moved by a Conservative and seconded by a Liberal. In this event, there is some better prospect that something may come of it. Such a question as prohibition, if any, should not, and cannot, with advantage, be made the plaything of party politics. In this Province the question is disastrously mixed with party politics. Any campaign against the liquor traffic may be regarded as an attack upon the government of the day, since it is itself in the liquor traffic to the extent that it depends for a part of the provincial revenue upon the profits of the bar. In a recent election, when the question of temperance was to the fore, there was sharp emphasizing of party lines—thousands upon thousands of temperance electors, enough to turn the tide—subordinated at the polls their temperance principles to the interests of their party. So long as the temperance question is an element in party politics, so long will its interests be overridden and subordinated to considerations of party profit. Party politics is the fly in the temperance ointment.

THE PRINCIPLE ONLY COUNTS

Hon. Mr. Meighen, Solicitor-General, does not take a much more statesman-like, than pettifoging, view of the responsibilities of the government. In answer to the charge that there was a Conservative member of parliament interested in the manufacture of shells, he brings up the tu quoque argument. He declares that Liberals were on the board of directors of shell-making firms. That is no answer; is it more like a quibble. No doubt members of parliament of both parties are interested in manufacturing firms that make shells. That is not the point. The point is, was there improper manipulation of contracts, permitting extravagant and unrighteous profits; and were members of parliament who had influence able to use influence to swing contracts? Another point is whether the Government, as trustee of the British Government in the shells matter, has a responsibility to account for its trust, through an investigation, that will bring out the facts as to whether inordinate profits were achieved; whether money was wasted, and as to whether contracts were so handled as to give opportunities to favoured persons or firms to profit extravagantly. Not altogether the responsibility of members of parliament but of the government, is the thing in question. Individuals don't count except in their possible relation to the main point. The principle's the thing.

SLOW, BUT SURE.

Unless we have a generous endowment of natural optimism, we are apt to be discouraged over the slow progress of the war and to despair of ultimate success. If we think superficially; if we consider isolated and occasional adverse incidents, without regard to the general situation, we may find some justification of our pessimism; but if we grasp the whole situation we fell better.

In nature, great movements are slow, but they are resistlessly onward, and the result certain as fate. Even in human affairs, slow progress, but inevitable and triumphant progress are often illustrated. When one of the sturdy pioneers of this country first stood upon his hundred-acre farm, studded thickly with the trees of the forest primaeval, axe in hand, and struck the first of millions of blows, he might have felt, and an onlooker would certainly have felt, that he would never live to lay the forest low; to clear his land, and have it smile with thriving crops of grain. With his own hands he had to do the work; fell the trees and root out the stumps. But he did it. Men, single handed, by the thousands, cleared their land and lived to see the stubborn forest growth give place to "fields of waving corn." Men in this Province, in this regard, did the impossible—to the doubting and pessimistic. The work was slow, but they kept at it; like General Joffre and his Frenchmen they kept "nibbling" and won the day, as the nibbling tactics of the allied forces will win the day by steady, dogged, unrelenting, and persistent wearing-down; by persistent trituration of the forces and resources and defences of the enemy. We have encouragement in the fact that, though the progress of the Allies is slow, it is steadily onward; while the enemy is weakening and being weakened, our forces are growing stronger in all essentials of triumphant fighting, and as this process of strengthening through all the lines is going forward and the process of weakening the enemy is continuously in play, we see success ahead. What we want to do to win is to keep up the fight; to enable the Allies, especially the British, to exercise a continuously growing and triumphant pressure. To this end we must have more men. We are assured of a sufficiently plentiful supply of munitions of war; we only need more men to give this effect, to place them how and where they will do the most good to the allied cause.

Peterborough has done well in supplying men for the fighting game; but we are called upon to do better—we need something like five hundred more men to complete the establishment of the 93rd Battalion—our own battalion recruited entirely in our city and county.

NATURAL SURPRISE.

A fine, healthylooking farmer's son who came to join the 115th said yesterday that he was surprised to see so many able young men in the city in civilian clothes. His surprise was natural.—St. John's Times.

IN A WORD.

"Of the United States" a witty, if malicious, Englishman, is quoted by World's Work as having said: "They began with the Mayflower and ended with the Lusitania!"

BELGIAN RELIEF.

No tag-days, no house-to-house canvasses, just an appeal to the Canadian sense of duty is being made by the Belgian Relief Committee on behalf of 2,500,000 starving women and children. Two million and a half women and children in Belgium are on the verge of starvation for want of Canadian flour. Local committees all over Canada are receiving subscriptions to be forwarded to the Belgian Relief Committee in Montreal, to meet the situation in Belgium, which has assumed serious proportions.

A CALL FOR ECONOMY.

The country has made a magnificent response to the calls upon it since July 1914, and is prepared for further sacrifices; but the people will not go on listening to ministers mouthing homilies on economy, while extravagance riots in the departments under their administration.

The annual report of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1915, shows a deficit of nearly three million dollars. This increase in expenditure is not only very large, but also very unexpected. It is nearly 25 per cent. more than in 1914, while the population can have increased very little, if at all, so that it can hardly be claimed to be due to natural expansion.

The question of expenditure has become as important as that of revenue. Speculation is aroused as to what is happening during the current fiscal year and induces a feeling of unrest. It would be well if monthly returns by the Government, published in the Canada Gazette, gave the itemized expenditure in similar form to that now used for revenue.

The amount of capital expenditure for the first nine months of the fiscal year ending March 31 next, is $118,118,691, as against $35,002,443, the increase being entirely due to war expenditure. The amount expended on public works, $26,151,982 against $29,362,347 in 1914, seems very large, however, in comparison with the drastic cuts made by the great railway corporations and leading municipalities in the Dominion.—Financial Post.

SHOULD BE AN ENQUIRY.

It has been suggested that if the House of Commons refuses to investigate the business done by the Canadian Shell Committee, the Senate might undertake this duty. There would be a precedent for such action. In 1891 very serious charges were made against Mercier and his Government in Quebec. It was proposed that the Senate of Canada should investigate them. Against this proposal the objection was urged that the matter was Provincial, and concerned the Province of Quebec alone. But the objection was not sustained. Public opinion had been aroused and alarmed by charges against the Government of Canada, which were then being investigated by the House of Commons and its committees. Public opinion paid little attention to lines drawn by the constitution. It was in favour of all kinds of investigation of all kinds of public graft.

The charges against Mercier were investigated by the Senate, and the disclosures thus made had a good deal to do with the fall of the Mercier Government, which occurred soon afterwards.

As in 1891 the objection was raised that the matter to be enquired into was not Federal but Provincial, so, in 1916, the objection is raised that the matter to be enquired into is not Federal but Imperial. As a matter of fact, it is both. The danger is that the Dominion Government may put it aside as Imperial, while the Imperial Government may put it aside as Canadian; and so there may be no enquiry at all. There surely ought to be an inquiry. We in Canada cannot, if we would, divest ourselves of responsibility. It is our duty to contribute our share of money to the success of the common cause, it is our duty also to see that the money is wisely and honestly spent. It would be better for the House of Commons to make the inquiry, and so not raise the question of action by the Senate.—Toronto Star.

STOPPING THE SUBS.

The Literary Digest quotes the Vossische Zeitung as admitting that the British nets have stopped the submarine business. According to the Hun journal, one net stretches from Dover to Cape Griz Nez, another 150 miles west over the English Channel, from Portland Bill to Cape La Hague. Two other nets are said to run from the Mull of Kintyre to Ireland and from Carnsore Point (Ireland) to St. David's Head, in South Wales.

These nets, which have gates in them frequently moved, are anchored to submerged buoys and extend from the sea bottom up to within an ace of the surface. The depth of the Channel runs about 250 feet. The Germans have now given up their piracy in British waters, thanks not to American notes, but to British skill. They are as firmly barred off from peaceful shipping in those waters as from international fellowship everywhere.

Doubtless this success will have released a large number of destroyers and small craft formerly employed in escorting transports to France or hunting down the enemy submarines. Probably a good many submarine hunters are already transferred to the Mediterranean Sea and will gradually root out the pests of that region, running them down and discovering their basis of supplies. Nets may not be possible in the Mediterranean, but a very intense and concentrated hunt can be carried on.—London Advertiser.

SOLDIER AND "MOVIES"

German Novel Method of Explaining to Troops by Pictures

Among the German war novelties introduced in the Russian front the cinema is taking a prominent place. On the way to the attack, at the stopping points, the officers show to their men cinematograph views of the villages and town which they are to capture on the morrow. The soldiers see beforehand the road along which the army must march, with all its details. The officers explain how the difficulties of the route may be surmounted, where bridges may be thrown over the streams, and where the best and most comfortable river fords are situated. The attention of the men is directed to any depressions in the soil, the existing trenches, forests, and villages; nothing is omitted that can give to the soldiers an opportunity to lighten the labors of the march.

REACTION OF WAR CONDITIONS UPON THE CANADIAN LUMBER TRADE.

There are indications of a revival of the lumber trade of the Pacific Coast, which, although somewhat narrow in its nature for the time being, owing to the lack of shipping facilities, promises to become broad and far-reaching with the close of the war—particularly with the improved shipping facilities offered by the Panama Canal route. Recent reports state that lumber mills on the Columbia River and on Puget Sound have been invited to bid on 200,000,000 feet of fir lumber for immediate shipment to the French Government, and there are reports of further orders from other European countries. While these Government orders may not represent a normal condition of trade, they are an indication of market possibilities at the close of the war, and on the strength of them there are signs that the coast lumber business will be put on a much better basis than it has enjoyed for a considerable period.

The French order referred to calls for a large quantity of railroad ties and for lumber of other varying dimensions, to be used, doubtless, in lining trenches and in other battle front activities. The business is being handled through a San Francisco broker, and it is reported that practically the whole of it will go to mills in Oregon and Washington. However, the French Government is not the only one becoming interested in the Pacific Coast lumber field, and there are prospects that Canada will play a part in this export trade.

B. C. Lumber Corporation.

In connection with these different reports of foreign business inquiries have been made with regard to the activities of the British-Canadian Lumber Corporation. However, although there is certainly a better tone to the situation and a hopeful outlook for the future as regards export trade, the British-Canadian Corporation is at present dormant. The company, it will be remembered, passed into the hands of a receiver, and the last step in connection with its finances was to arrange for an issue of receiver's notes. Although this issue was not so successful as had been hoped, there were sufficient funds realized to hold things together for the present, certain pressing obligations being met, while taxes were paid and licenses renewed.

Before the B. C. Lumber could take an active part in the new business shaping it would be necessary to arrange some scheme of reorganization which would cover the raising of additional finances to meet the receiver's notes and to provide a certain amount of working capital. So far no active steps have been taken in this direction, but it is expected that when the improvement takes more definite form that something will be done. In any event, the outlook has recently shown marked improvement, and the future is certainly hopeful.

The Panama Route.

The terms of the French order cover delivery f.o.b. at the mills, and the French Government to provide for the transportation. The arrangement is that the cargoes will be handled altogether by water, and this is likely to be the case whether the Panama Canal is open when the shipments begin to move or not. It is figured in this connection that the shortage of cars and congestion of freight on the Atlantic seaboard provide difficulties which make the water route the more attractive one. These shipping problems are no doubt interfering with trade arrangements in many lines, and when the normal rautes are re-established there will undoubtedly be a considerable improvement.

Second Large Order.

In connection with the French inquiry for 200,000,000 feet, it is mentioned that this is the second big order in three months, a previous deal having covered a like amount for the Allied Governments, and this was placed with Southern pine manufacturers. The present indications are that there will be more of the business coming from Europe in the near future.—Financial Post.

GENERAL HAS TO BE JACK OF ALL TRADES

And Master of Them Too—Brain Must be Abnormal to Carry all Information and Not Forget It

When the man in the street talks of a general commanding an army, he generally sums him up as a "jolly good soldier," and fancies he has said all that need be said about the distinguished officer.

As a matter of dry fact, he has said nothing at all about the general. What the man in the street means by "jolly good soldier" means very little to the general, for to be a good soldier, that is, to lead armed men, is about the last thing necessary to a modern commander.

He has to be, of course, an expert in military methods in strategy, which means the art of handling forces at a distance from the enemy, and tactics, which means the art of handling that force when in actual touch with the enemy, and he must know military routine from A to Z. But that is only the cap of his knowledge.

A Walking Encyclopedia

For instance, he must know quite a lot about the comparative values of food, not only because he must keep his army well fed, but because he has to carry with him the minimum quantity to keep his moving army in a state of efficiency. He has to know how many horses can pull how many wagons of this food, and how many miles they can pull them. He has even to compute how much forage those horses will require, and what will be their daily rate of progress.

He has to know something about surveying, engineering, bridge building, road making, railroad laying, telegraphy, fortifications, mining, the manufacture and application of high-power explosives, trench turning, sanitation, camp, town and barrack planning, plumbing, cooking, camp range making, store keeping, ballooning, aeroplaning, rough medicine, first aid, rough surgery, veterinary, farriery, smith worth, lathe turning, small arm making, field gun repairing, and a host of other crafts and industries.

Assistance is Given

He has experts to help him, naturally, but he must know something of these things if he is to guide and take advantage of experts.

And when he has fought his battles, and defeated his foe, he must be an expert in both military and international law, and he must be a good disciplinarian and a good diplomat, too, for he has not only to restrain his own soldiery, but he has to see that he and his country are not overreached by the diplomatic skill of their adversary.

And above all, he has to be a human individual, and not a highly-skilled machine, so as to overcome the human element in the composition of his enemy, no less than to be humane in victory.

TOMMY'S THEATRE

Soldiers at Front Run Their Own Show —Cause Assists Others

This amazing war has proved at least one thing. It has shown that "Tommy," no matter what the circumstances may be, lives up to his motto. "Always Merry and Bright." If he cannot be entertained, then he makes his own entertainment. Bombardier A. E. Williams, "somewhere in France," says the soldiers have been running a "Follies" show since January last, which has proved a great success in entertaining tired soldiers who "after unobtonous spells in the trenches, pray for some slight remembrance of home life."

This "Follies" troop is comprised of two ladies who delight the Tommies in a novel dancing act, one officer, and nine men of the Field Artillery, 2nd Seaforths, and the London Rifle Brigade, all of whom have been through the great retirement from Mons.

"The greater part of our leisure," says Bombardier Williams, is devoted to rehearsals and keeping the show up to date. During the early months of 1915, two performances of one hour and a half's duration were given, but since opening up our new theatre (which, by the way, has been made extremely comfortable), one performance lasting two and a half hours is given.

"Officers are charged two francs (40 cents) admission, other ranks half a franc, and the proceeds go to the betterment of the show and also to providing Tommies with such things as may help to better the conditions in which they exist."

Campbellford To Play The Soldiers Here To-night

The 59rd Battalion Intermediates will tackle Campbellford here to-night in an intermediate O.H.A. game, and the probabilities are that Brock St. Rink will be the scene of a lively battle. Campbellford has a strengthened line-up with several Marmora players on their line-up, and are coming up with a special train hopeful of taking a fall out of the soldiers. The latter will also have a changed line-up. The new-in khaki have several dark horses in line for the benefit of the Electrics whom they play on Friday night, and it is likely that some of the new stars may be seen in action to-night. A win for Campbellford would be disastrous to the 59rd, but Tommy Moffatt is not worrying about that, and is bringing up the strongest team he can secure on a special G. T. R. train. A bunch of supporters will accompany the Easterners, and it looks like a real battle to-night.

A CHURCH BOWLING LEAGUE ORGANIZED

At a meeting the Y.M.C.A. last night to form a Church League Bowling Club, the following churches were represented: Trinity, St. James, Murray Street, St. Paul's, St. Andrew's and St. John's. The following officers were elected:

Pres.—Mr. Meserve.
Vice-Pres., Mr. Walton.
Sec.-Treas., Jack Green.
Executive Committee—Mr. Wilder, A. Lewis, Mr. Walton, C. Elliott, C. Davey, H. Austin.

RULES.

1. No player who plays in the Business Man's League on or after this date (Jan. 24) will be eligible to play in the Church League.
2. Absent members of a team will be given 75 pins in each game he is absent from.
3. If there are no members of a team present the game will be defaulted.
4. The games are to be played on every Tuesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon.
5. The teams will play for a trophy.

The following schedule was drawn up:
Trinity vs. St. Paul's, Jan. 25.
St. Andrew's vs. Murray St., Jan. 28.
St. John's vs. St. James', Jan. 29.

WORDS OF SENSE

England is suffering from too much law.—"Saturday Review."

Never had any supper table a greater Judas sitting at it than Germany.—Mr. T. P. O'Connor.

Nobody has been so much surprised as the General Staff of Germany, who expected to be in Paris and Calais in about three months.—Lord Haldane.

The croakers are like night birds sitting on our roof trees by daylight. They see nothing but what is dark, and say nothing but what is raucous.—Mr. J. L. Garvin.

In half an hour of an intense action I have seen more Christianity, more elevation, and more nobility than I have seen in the rest of my life.—Colonel Page Croft, M.P.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

British Navy Saves United States From Problem

"If Germany invaded Canada, would American interfere?" queries H. C., of Medford. If Germany invaded Canada, she would be violating the Monroe Doctrine. We should say that such a violation called for United States intervention to repel the invader; but then—one very eminent authority on international law says the Monroe Doctrine is a mere shibboleth. A "shibboleth" is "an empty phrase." We would hardly feel like undertaking anything in support of an empty phrase. No—this bridge is the hardest to cross of all that we have tried to cross before coming to them. The British navy is the bridge which Germany must cross before she can invade Canada. After Germany has crossed that bridge we shall be ready to cross the bridge suggested to us by H. C.—Boston Globe.

The Retort Courteous

A young American artist returning from driving a British ambulance on the war front in Belgium brings this back straight from the trenches: "One cold morning a sign was posted up above the German trench facing ours, only about fifty yards away, which bore in large letters the words: 'Got Mit Uns!' One of our cockney lads, more of a patriot than a linguist, looked at this for a moment and then lamp-blacked a big sign of his own which he raised on a stick. It read: 'We Got Mittens, Too!'"

REV. R. POGUE GIVES SERMON ON TEMPERANCE

Pastor of St. Paul's Makes Impassioned Appeal on Behalf of the Effort Being Made to Have a Dry Ontario by July 1st

The pastor of St. Paul's entertains no illusions on the temperance question. Neither does he serve up sugar-coated pellets to the erring of his congregation. Boldly from the shoulder he assailed the nefarious traffic in strong drink and plied with his people to do all in their power to curtail its baneful effects.

His text was taken from the fifth chapter of Daniel, verses 4 and 5: "They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood and of stone. In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaister of the wall of the king's palace; and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote."

Belshazzar, the king of Babylon, made a feast to a thousand of his lords and the women of the harem, and they drank wine from the golden and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple in Jerusalem. The lords and ladies with their red flushed faces, the wine in the golden vessels, the clinking of the chalices as they were emptied again and again, the unclean songs, the drunken language, the blood-shot eyes, and above all the loud acclaims: "O King Belshazzer live forevere." Suddenly a change comes over the countenance of the king. He sees the fingers of a man's hand writing strange hieroglyphics on the wall. He is the picture of terror. His hands tremble. His knees rattle. Is it a phantom? He calls his wise men. Daniel alone interprets the writing: "Weighed in the balance and found wanting."

So surely does the writing of every man of vision declare the doom of King Alcohol.

No one is ignorant of the war being waged against the liquor traffic, of the effort being made throughout Ontario looking to the abolition of the traffic by July 1st, 1916.

The Committee of One Hundred, composed of men in all walks of life, and of all political parties, is fathering an attempt to secure legislation to get prohibition.

This week an effort will be made to have every voter sign a petition to be presented to the Government asking them to pass a prohibitory law, or failing this to submit the matter to the people in the form of a referendum to be decided at the polls.

Mr. Pogue then pointed out some fingers which were writing the doom of King Alcohol, the attention of the world having been focused on these matters with greater impetus since the war began than during twenty years previous. The first finger:

Hygiene.

There was a time when people believed that alcohol was a cure for all the ills that flesh was heir to. Now we know it to be the cause of all ills. It is only recently we have learned the true nature of alcohol and its effects.

Even since the war began Lloyd George tried to get prohibition, King George lending his aid by his example, but a Bishop of the Anglican Church said he could not follow the example of his king, as he would suffer in health. He was as ignorant of the effects of alcohol as if he had been living in the centre of Africa.

Medical science has proved it is not a food. Instead it is a narcotic and produces divers diseases in the human system.

The moment people become educated intelligently enough to accept the results of science the doom of alcohol is assured.

Can you fancy a man offering wine to another man and calling it a treat? Can I give my friend a drink of that which I know to be injurious and be his friend?

Efficiency.

This is a word to conjure with at the present time.

Employers of labour everywhere demand efficiency from their employees. The one thing that spells success is efficiency. The Hon. John Wannamaker was once asked by an employee for an increase of wages. "Increase your usefulness" was the laconic reply. Truly the door of opportunity lies open to the man of efficiency. Eighty-eight per cent. of the employers of the United States demand of their employees total abstinence. One million men working on the railroads are by rules compelled to be total abstainers.

We have been wondering at the inefficiency of the British army since the war began; Lloyd George put his finger on the cause when he tried to get prohibition.

A special parliamentary committee reported that the productive power of the nation is reduced 60 per cent. by intemperance. In other words, the workmen of Britain in normal times are only 37 per cent. efficient because of alcohol.

If Britain had been sober, if the leaders had the courage (and they could have done it) to put a stop to the traffic the war would have been over months ago.

A series of experiments were recently carried on by a group of scientists to ascertain the effects of alcohol on different types of workmen.

On the day on which three glasses of beer were given to a certain number of typesetters their efficiency was reduced 8½ per cent. In all tests the men imagined they were doing more than on other days, but this is only natural for does not the man with a couple of glasses in him imagine he can whip every other man he meets?

Another test was made on a number of men adding figures. It was found they lost in efficiency from 25 to 40 per cent.

Still another more severe test was made in memorizing, and it was found that the men lost between 40 and 70 per cent. in efficiency.

These facts cannot be denied. The young man taking alcohol into his system is driving nails into his own coffin, and killing all chances of success in life.

Heredity.

It is an incontrovertible fact that the touch of wine to the lips of the parent influences the unborn child. In alcoholic families only 17 per cent. are normal, whereas among parents who are temperate 85½ per cent. are normal.

It not only destroys the individual who touches it; but it dooms the children of those who take it. It strikes at the nation through the unborn children.

It is bad enough for a nation to permit a man, through the liberty he enjoys, to destroy himself, but what shall we say of a nation which allows the child to be destroyed, to become alcoholic, epileptic, insane, and a burden to the state?

Race Degeneracy.

When Britain asked for volunteers for the South African war 80 per cent. were rejected as unfit for military service.

Dr. Keller, recently delivered a lecture in the Battle Creek Sanitarium. To illustrate it he had a picture of six trees with branches dying at the tops.

The first tree had few dead branches. It represented Bulgaria. There one person in every thousand lives to be over 100 years old, and many live to be 120.

The next represented the United States with more dead branches. There only one in every 25,000 lives to the age of 100.

Spain came next, then France, then England with over half the branches dead. Germany was the last and worst of all.

The nation with the highest average was Bulgaria, a nation whose favourite drink is buttermilk. The nation with the lowest average was Germany, whose favourite beverage is beer.

The greatest enemy of man is alcohol, yet our Government nurses and tends it as if it were a benefactor.

The last finger:

Patriotism.

This more than anything else is answerable for the great things accomplished throughout the world since the war began.

Patriotism is love for one's country; that one's country may prosper and live. A true patriot is the enemy of everything that is an enemy of his country.

Russia realized she had two enemies: Germany without, and vodka within; that she would never defeat Germany if she permitted vodka to remain. Her great victory over drunkenness is second only to the abolition of opium from China, a heathen nation, yet a supposedly Christian nation tolerates the thing that has the same effect on the people.

France followed the example of Russia, and French writers declare that if war has brought no other benefit it has produced freedom from drunkenness.

Mr. Pogue ventured a prophecy that if the war is not won by next July or August it will not be won at all; and the thing responsible for the defeat of Britain will be the liquor traffic.

Think of it: One thousand million dollars annually lost to the Empire, by being poured down the throats of the people!

Lloyd George says we are fighting three enemies: Germany, Austria and drink, and the greatest of these is drink.

Canada is at war as well as Britain.

Now Is the Time to Strike

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir, — Peterborough points with pride to her non-license hotel, the equal of which does not exist in the province; she boasts a Total Abstinence Mayor and a temperance representative in the Provincial House, to say nothing of a number of Aldermen of supposed temperance principles.

Yet, when a distinguished visitor like Sir Sam Hughes graces our midst he is taken in hand by temperance people and "led up to the bar."

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, during his excellent speech, on Saturday, in the Armouries, dwelt at length on the strong position taken by our Minister of Militia in regard to sobriety among Canada's soldiers—indeed he is famed throughout the Empire for his advocacy of temperance—and to a person of ordinary brain-power, the reception last Saturday would seem to be an affront to the well-known principles of a man of the calibre of Major-General Sir Sam Hughes.

The same remarks might be made with reference to the reception tendered Mrs. Huestis at the close of the recruiting meeting last Wednesday night, only with more emphasis, since it was engineered by some of our representative women, officially connected with the cause of sobriety.

In view of these facts is it not a pertinent question to ask: Who is responsible?

—O, For A Principle.

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—If there is one thing more desirable than another at this important juncture in our national existence, it is that our people should dwell in peace and harmony, and preserve the kindly feeling that now happily exists amongst them. Anything that tends to create disunion should be frowned down during the continuance of this cruel war. It would therefore be a national calamity if a referendum on total prohibition against the manufacture and sale of liquors was submitted to the people at this inopportune time, and thus create discord, disunion and ill-feeling amongst us, which are sure to result, as past experience has proved. Any man or set of men who would precipitate such an event would be worse than the Germans, for we hold the latter at arms' length, while the former occupy our camps and are calculated to do infinitely more harm. After the war ends they will have all the future to work out their aims, whether political or otherwise.

Every other movement to divert money from the funds of this country going into the various channels for the prosecution of this war should similarly be frowned down. The biggest rival for these funds are the missionary societies. They are constantly making demands upon us for money to Christianise the so-called heathen, who are living up to a higher standard of Christianity than the so-called Christian countries whom we are now fighting, and who are seeking to dominate the world and permeate it with their infernal doctrines of "Kultur" to the extinction of true Christianity.

Yours truly,
Unanimity.

An Uphill Task

An English journalist and a private of the Irish Guards were dining recently at a restaurant in a small French town. The soldier, who had picked up a few scraps of the language insisted on ordering everything in doubtful French, while the journalist would offer explanations that were in the nature of criticisms.

At length Tommy's temper rose to the explosive point. "Will you," he said in English, "be so good as not to interfere with me in my use of French?"

"Very well," replied the journalist "I simply wanted to point out that you were asking for a staircase when you wanted a spoon."

SERUMS SAVED MANY

Important Action Taken to Offset Ravage of Infectious Diseases

Decision of the Ontario Government to supply through the Provincial Board of Health anti-toxin for diphtheria, typhoid fever, spinal meningitis and other contagious diseases met with the strong approval of the Academy of Medicine. At the Academy a resolution was passed pointing out as well that this relief came when the cost of drugs has increased enormously. By this policy the Province of Ontario took the lead of any other Province or State on the continent.

While this was done at home, reports from Lt.-Col. A. E. Ross, M.P.P., Director of Medical Services with the First Canadian Contingent, indicated that splendid results were secured from the use of the anti-typhoid serum with which all Canadian soldiers were inoculated before leaving Canada. Col. Ross states in a letter to a friend, "The record of the health of our men is wonderful. We had only twelve cases of typhoid in eleven months." Col. Ross was in charge of the medical service in a force numbering about 30,000 men.

CHRISTMAS WITH THE CANUCKS AT THE FRONT

Following is another interesting letter received by Rev. Dr. Farquharson of St. Andrew's, from his son Lance-Corp. J. M. Farquharson, with the 18th Battalion, C.E.F.:

18th Battalion,
Dec. 28th, 1915.

Christmas day at last! and it seems much the same as any other day. For our Christmas dinner to-day we had MacConnachie army ration—jam and cheese—not bad dope when you are hungry, but scarcely the quality of stuff you expect on Christmas Day.

To be cheerful, it stopped raining last night, so we had a fairly dry day. Just about time as we were in danger of being flooded out. This morning the Colonel condescended to shake hands with all of us and wish us a Merry Christmas. The old man was quite happy and gave me a grip that nearly cracked my knuckles. He is peculiar in many ways, but it would be hard to find a better man for the job.

This year there was no truce to give the combatants time to sing Christmas Carols. Just enough fire was kept up to make you understand peace was out of the fashion. At present some guns are firing in the distance, although there is nothing doing on our immediate front.

We had a real Christmas dinner the night before we came into the trenches. It was certainly some dinner, with all the Christmas trimmings, including nuts, raisins, champagne, etc., and perrier water for Murray Sutherland and myself. To get that dinner ready, Murray Sutherland, Jack Turner, and myself, tramped over the greater part of Flanders. As we only decided to have its celebration 24 hours before it was to come off, it was some mad tear. Murray and I got a special pass from the Colonel to go to a town some distance away for the poultry and other things not available near our billets, and we left before day light. We managed to get a goose and two chickens for 44 francs ($9.00), and also managed to blow in the other 110 francs on extras. Imagine the load we had to carry back with us for about five miles. In the meantime Jack Turner had been "Mouching" around trying to borrow a couple of tables, and chairs to seat our section of 17. His attempts to borrow weren't successful, so we made tables with sheets of expanded metal and packing boxes, while we managed to rig up enough chairs with boxes. The dinner was a huge success. The goose and chickens (cooked by one of the company cooks), were excellent, and had it not been for our uniforms, we might possibly have imagined we were home. How we managed to collect the dishes is still a mystery to me. Jack Turner and I managed to borrow, or rather rent, enough plates by visiting three French farms, but to get the cups Murray must have gone farther afield, as at none of the places we visited were they available. Naturally there was trouble in the morning when the dishes had to be returned. We had a few speeches and quite a few songs, so that it was a very pleasant evening. Of course one or two of the fellows got a little tipsy, but by good luck we had arranged to have any of the fellows likely to err in that respect put at a table by themselves. Ordinary French champagne is not likely to put anyone on the rocks, but some of the chaps had managed to scout out some hard stuff earlier in the day. Tme next night we come in to the trenches to spend Christmas in a dugout.

To-day is the 27th, and the letter hasn't been mailed yet. We have had a quiet trip so far, without a casualty, so far as I know. I don't suppose they will do much strooling till after Christmas.

BELGUIM.

Oh land of tears and sorrow!
Oh land of woe and pain!
For you there'll be a morrow
When your freedom you'll regain;
Your cities are in ruins,
Your people foully slain,
Your churches desecrated,
And frightfulness doth reign.

When German legions flooded
Your country far and wide,
Your sons were not found wanting,
For they fought and nobly died;
But crushed by brutal power,
And seared by fire and steel,
You sank beneath the burden
Of a tyrant's iron heel.

But the freedom you defended,
Shall come to you again.
And the sacrifice you offered,
Shall not have been in vain.
Hope on, grief stricke Belgium!
Relief will soon be yours,
When Allied arms have driven
The German from your doors.

EVANGELIST SHARPE WILL GIVE ADDRESS

Evangelist G. M. Sharpe of Toronto will speak in Bethany Tabernacle tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Sharpe is well known to many of the citizens of Peterborough through the "big Tabernacle campaign," which he conducted in the city last summer, in the large tent which was located on Hunter street. He spent seven weeks in the city during July and August. The many hundreds who heard his soul-stirring messages, and who enjoyed the good old-fashioned revival spirit of the meetings will no doubt be, glad to know that they are to have the privilege of hearing him again.

Mr. Sharpe has just closed a very successful meeting at Ivanhoe where he has been preaching for the past three weeks. He is to be in Peterborough for one night only. A cordial invitation is extended to all to hear him at the Tabernacle to-morrow night.

WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY THE RED CROSS SOCIETY

Society is Established on a Firm Footing in Portugal—Canada's Contribution to the Work—Caring for the Belgian Prisoners of War

The doctrine of unpreparedness has few followers even in the countries which are not actively engaged in hostilities. Exceedingly cynical indeed must be any country, which can calmly contemplate the sufferings of millions of wounded men, with no thought of organizing medical assistance.

The annual report of the Portuguese Red Cross shows that Portugal is conscious of its obligations in this matter. Since the outbreak of war the Central Committee at Lisbon has occupied itself especially with the formation of provincial branches. The number of these is now twenty-five. Their administration, as in Canada, is completely autonomous. Each branch begins its labours by the formation of a hospital unit, composed of 4 doctors, 6 trained nurses, 40 litter bearers, and in addition provided with the regulation material for the transport and surgical treatment of wounded.

The chief work of the Portuguese Society has been the establishment, at Lisbon, of a Nurses Training School with a hospital annex. This hospital, which bears the name "Casa de Saude da Cruz Vermelha" or 'Hospital of the Red Cross," is situated in the suburbs of Lisbon, near the Zoological Garden, on the slopes of a hill from which there is an immense and splendid panorama. It is surrounded by gardens with an area of over 300,000 square feet, and has a capacity of 100 beds.

Through this and other ways much has been done to put the Red Cross work on a firm footing in the republic of Portugal. There, as elsewhere, it is realized that a country which keeps out of the world current of Red Cross activity, is a country which incurs an extreme national discredit.

The International Red Cross Bulletin gives some interesting facts about the working of the Austrian Red Cross. Up to the end of April, 1915, the cash receipts amounted to 16,300,000 Kronen. Over 7,000,000 of this came from Vienna alone, and over one million was contributed from abroad, presumably for the most part from America. All accounts are inspected and the expenditure is controlled by a committee of financial experts.

Canada's contribution of approximately $6,000,000 to Red Cross funds, considering population, bears more than favourable comparison with this Austrian contribution of $8,000,000.

An interesting item in the Austrian Society's activities is its maintenance of 3 hospital ships and 12 hospital trains. However, anything like a complete report of the Red Cross in Austria is unobtainable so that one is liable to estimate with what completeness Austria copes with its Red Cross obligation which must be of extraordinary magnitude. Brief as is this information about a hostile Red Cross Society, it should serve as a stimulus to our own Canadian Society which in the relief of the wounded should acquit itself honourably in this world Red Cross rivalry.

These Red Cross Socks Again.

There seem to be people in the country who delight in spreading any tale, however unfounded, which is calculated to injure the Red Cross or any other society which is engaged in patriotic work. The absurd sock story which has been so often refuted persists in cropping up here and there throughout the whole country.

A very vigorous refutation of this baseless lie is written by Sergeant R. S. Simmons in a letter to his father in London, Ont.:

"As to having to pay anything," states Sergeant Simmons, "for an article from the Red Cross or any other society, it is all utter rot. We are well fed and well clothed, and it costs us nothing. These stories are nothing but damnable lies circulated by men who have never been in the firing line or are too cowardly to stand in the firing line."

Thousands of other letters could be printed substantiating this denial. People who take such stories seriously are either very incredulous or else very anxious to grasp at any straw for an excuse to escape their Red Cross duty. There is not the least doubt that the Red Cross funds are well administered.

The Belgian prisoners of war are perhaps in the most unfortunate position of all prisoners of war. Their country is in the hands of the German invaders and their compatriots have very few means at their disposal where with to assist them. The situation has been remedied by the International Red Cross which, acting through the Swiss Consul General at Brussels, has established two organizations for the relief of Belgian prisoners of War. These are known as "The Soldiers' Cantine" and The Belgian Prisoners' Parcels Fund."

The Soldiers' Canteen sends boxes containing food and tobacco at prices varying from 2 to 10 francs. Nearly 110,000 of these "canteens" have been sent to Belgian prisoners of war in Germany, and over 30,000 acknowledgments have been received. This is notable proof that prisoners of war actually do receive the gifts sent them and that the German Government throws no obstacles in the way.

"The Belgian Prisoners Parcels Fund" differs only in the fact that it makes a specialty of sending daily postal packages of the value of one franc to every prisoner on the list. This method makes provision for the soldier's daily necessities. It also invites the public to adopt prisoners, and to send them packages of victuals selected out of an official list of foods, up to the weight of five kilos.

As the war is prolonged the question of the prisoner of war is one that requires increased attention. For Canadian prisoners it is complicated by the increasing shortage of food supplies in Germany. So that, if we wish to keep Canadian prisoners of war from privations, it is well to give increased support to the Prisoners of War fund of the Canadian Red Cross.

PROUD OF PARISHIONERS WHO SIGN PETITION

Rev. J. J. O'Brien Makes Strong Plea For United Effort Against Liquor Traffic

In a characteristically outspoken sermon on the evils of the liquor traffic, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, at the Church of the Sacred Heart, on Sunday morning, said he would feel proud of every man in his parish who signed the petition for provincial prohibition. Furthermore, he would be glad to set the example by signing it himself at the first opportunity. The present movement, Father O'Brien said, was non-partisan, and it could not be asserted that the clergy were taking part in a political matter when they lent their efforts to the petition which is to be presented to the Legislature. The liquor traffic was a menace to the homes, it gave scandal to children, it was a menace to manhood, and a menace to virtue. Father O'Brien urged co-operation in striking an effective blow at this traffic.

Convention of Sunday Schools in Lakefield

The annual Sunday School convention of the Township of Smith and the Village of Lakefield will be held in the Methodist Church, Lakefield, on Thursday, January 27th. There will be afternoon and evening meetings at which large attendances are expected. Mr. Allen B. Mann of Bridgenorth will preside.

IF BORN IN JANUARY.

People Are of a Serious and Grave Demeanor.

The first month is ruled by Capricorn and Aquarius, which act in conjunction to guide those who are born in their dominion.

The former governs the lower legs and joints, while the latter rules the knees.

Capricorn, acting alone, gives middle stature, thin, spare build and an awkward carriage to its subjects. Diplomacy and activity of thought will characterize them.

Aquarius' ruling gives moderate height, physical vigor, fair complexion and a firm, kindly but undeviating manner.

In conjunction they exert a force which destines their vassals to be of average physique, commonplace bearing and strong shrewdness.

People born in this period are reasoners, thinkers, of a serious and grave demeanor. They are likely to become puritanic in their attitudes toward life, being sour-visaged and harsh when thrown into association with frivolous people.

They will have high ideals of love and duty, are deeply religious and determined upon a strict interpretation of the ten commandments when aroused to make an issue of the matter of conduct. If not irritated by constant sights of the violation of the rules of mortality they soften and become lenient to a marked degree.

Their frequent narrowness of mind prevents them from acquiring high executive position, owing to the fact that they antagonize many of thier associates into dislike.

Their ideals are not molded according to convention because of "what people will say" because of their own intense and earnest conviction that the acknowledged rules of conduct are the best.

OH! SLUSH.

To those who associate with it the panoramic idea of thick mantles of glistening snow of luminous nights with a metallic moon set deep in a star-studded sky, of chimneys curling smoke wreaths, contrasting interior cosiness with the exterior snapping and crackling frosts, to those who envisage this image of the season, winter has thus far been a keen disappointment. Old Boreas merely tottered back into his place in the continuous pageant, and seems but to have infected the most of us with his enfeebling affection. Apparently he was grippe laden when he arrived, for its trail, long and broad, is easily traced back to him. The vitalizing ozone with which winter highly charges the atmosphere, has been felt only in a few gusts, whose passing enervates and saps the vigor so lightly stored. This action is roughly illustrated in the frowns of frost that recently formed on heavy stone walls in the wake of the recent thaw. Winter turns into the home stretch after a fitful performance of its old-time powers. There is another five weeks to be reckoned with, but hardy Canadians look forward to the season their grandparents boast about. One man is telling his friends he has yet to pull on his gloves. The seat of the general discontent with the weather is found in the succession of January thaws. A "soft spell" is usually expected with the new year, but a whole series of them running through a month is more than the regular measure. The Pussy willows will bud at Old Man Winter's efforts if he does not soon assert himself.

18 Volunteers at Big Sunday Night Recruiting Rally

numbered them forty to one. At Salisbury the Canadian officers had been criticised because they were on familiar terms with the men. "We would always say 'come on' not 'go on,' and we found that we could get the very best out of our men, that they appreciated it. And this was responsible for the wonderful spirit in the Canadian Division. The Germans were ordered to 'go on.' We couldn't see their officers because they were not out in front. Had the conditions been reversed on that memorable night of April 22nd, had we had the German numbers of our volunteers, and they our number of conscripts do you think we couldn't have broken through?"

Recruiting Here for 2nd.

Captain Ackerman recalled the speedy enlistment in Peterborough at the outbreak of the war, and asked the men to remember that spirit and to emulate it. They must remember that they should volunteer soon or the country must resort to conscription.

Adjutant McElhiney.

"It seems to me there are three classes of people here to-night," said Adjutant McElhiney, after a preliminary shake of his Samson locks. "There is the man who has made up his mind to do his bit, and is in khaki; second, there is the man who has tried to get into khaki, and who was turned down. For him I feel the very deepest sympathy. Third, there are females. They are the ones we've got to depend upon to a large extent to fill up the 93rd." After this earnest beginning the Adjutant whirled into Billy Sunday strenuosities and let loose a broadside of denunciation against the skulkers of whom he had seen sufficient between Simcoe Street and the Armouries to more than fill up the Battalion.

"We've got to get out after those men and make them feel they're the meanest beings on God's green earth. They're the men who can go, should go and won't go. Mothers have got to make up their minds to send these boys, or they will yet be a dishonour to them."

Adjutent McElhiney exhorted the young women to shun the shirkers, for they were and would prove unworthy of them. He told of a man in Ashburnham who had told a recruiting officer that before he would let his boys enlist he would rather see his daughters suffer the barbarities the women of Belgium suffered. "That's the kind of people we've got in Peterborough. This is war," the adjutant shouted, "and we can't afford to have enemies in your camp like that."

Manufacturers Must Help.

He next appealed to the manufacturers to turn loose the young men fit for army service and replace them by men who cannot go. He called to the business men who were being protected by the country to help provide more recruits. Then he got the range of the Normal School, where he said there was a whole bunch of young men. If he were Col. Walker he wouldn't give them five minutes' peace. Finally the Adjutant swept the audience, shouting: "What are you young men doing out there when there are better men than you out under the sod?"

Capt. Windeyer.

One of the points Capt. Windeyer brought out was the necessity of building up a British army sufficiently large to pursue the war alone. History has an unfortunate nack of repeating itself. It has happened before, and there is even now a feeling in France and Russia that Britain has not done a full share in providing land forces. We are still the underdog in the fight and there is nothing to be gained in deluding ourselves. The cry has come for more men and up to the present the most of the recruits have been British born. We have not yet scratched the manhood of Canada.

Capt. Windeyer gave up a $7,000 a-year position to live on Captain's pay and keep his family on the same allowance.

Many young men want to go as officers. They should not think that there is in the trenches the same difference between the rank and file as may appear here. At the front they share the same food and the same general conditions.

REV. T. D. McCULLOUGH CHILDREN'S AID INSPECTOR

But Catholic Priest Resigns—Protests at Appointment of a Minister

PORT HOPE, January 24.—At the adjourned meeting of the Children's Aid Society held on Friday, the Rev. T. D. McCullough, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, was appointed inspector of the Children's Aid Shelter, to succeed Mr. G. H. Mains, deceased. The vote was 12 to 9 in favor of Rev. Mr. McCullough, the other contestant being Mr. Bradley of Newcastle. The new inspector will commence his duties as soon as the appointment is confirmed by the government. The appointment will be brought before the Presbytery at an early date.

Before the close of the meeting Rev. Father O'Sullivan tendered his resignation as a member of the society. He gave as his reasons for resigning: First, that the election was irregular, a motion passed unanimously by the Board to notify all reeves and deputy reeves of the intended election of an agent for the society, and asking for any suggestion that they might see fit to give, never being carried into effect. Secondly, because he considered it detrimental to the interests of justice, religion and democracy that a minister of the gospel should be given a position for which a layman was better qualified.

Sir Sam Hughes Pays A Tribute

men in Peterborough to fill up the ranks of the 93rd Battalion. When the camp at Val Cartier was opened, Premier Borden offered the Imperial authorities twenty thousand men. Some doubted whether such a number could be raised. "I knew we could get them," said Sir Sam.

The 1st Canadian division was made up of the best men that ever stood in a jacket. They were the best riflemen in the world. Their average ranged from fifty to seventy per cent, while that of some of the British regiments did not exceed twenty per cent. Never was anything like it in the history of the world. Canada is in this war because if Britain's liberty goes down, Canada's will go down. We are inspired by the great principles of liberty and love for home.

Young Men Wanted.

Sixteen thousand men enlisted in Canada during the first half of January, and we are not pushing the thing at all, said the speaker. It is the young men and single men that are wanted.

Sir Sam concluded with a recitation by Bayard Taylor, entitled the "Song of the Camp," in which that well-known song "Annie Laurie," which was sung by Mrs. J. H. Renwick, during the meeting, was touchingly referred to.

Men Selling Ribbons.

"Sam Hughes wouldn't be Sam Hughes if he didn't make a mistake," said His Honour Judge Huycke, in moving a vote of thanks. Judge Huycke was referring to the criticism that was hurled at the Minister of Militia some months ago. "You don't hear much of it now," observed the speaker.

Judge Huycke trained his 42 centimetre guns on the pedagogues of the city. "There are any number of men employed as school teachers," said the speaker, "who could be replaced by women, also men selling ribbons and lace, behind the counters of our stores. I am also told there are many eligible men in our churches besides those much-abused patrons of the poolrooms. The duty is incumbent upon us to see that the ranks of the 93rd Battalion are filled up. What right have we to expect men who have fought once to fight again," said His Honour, with a sweep of his hand in the direction of the returned heroes, some of whom have signified their intention of returning to the front.

Mr. M. O'Brien, in seconding the vote of thanks to Sir Sam Hughes, said he hoped the good work would continue.

Sons at the Front.

Sir Sam Hughes, in reply, referred to His Honour Judge Huycke and Mr. M. O'Brien, as two gentlemen whom he liked to meet. Each of them had three sons with the Overseas forces. Sir Sam addressed a few remarks to the officers that amused the audience immensely. "A lot of them," he said, "thought that when they put on a uniform the Kaiser was beaten." The speaker made it plain that no officer would be tolerated in the Canadian militia who could not properly perform the duties that were assigned to him.

Adjutant McElhiney brought the meeting to a close with a vigorous appeal for recruits.

The Peterborough Examiner
PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA

THE newspaper in the Peterborough zone of Ontario to be granted Newspaperdom's "Winning Daily" emblem was the EXAMINER. After investigating the local field the following conclusions were established: First, the EXAMINER has a materially larger circulation than any other Peterborough daily; second, it is the leading evening newspaper of Peterborough and the tributary territory; third, it is supreme in volume of advertising published—and this volume is made up of gilt-edged business from local and foreign advertisers in Canada and the United States. Local advertisers unanimously endorse it for its result-getting efficiency. It invites correspondence regarding the Peterborough zone as a business possibility in 1916; the possibility of dealer cooperation, etc.

In making scones take one lb. of prepared flour, one teaspoonful of sugar, pinch of butter size of walnut small pinch of table salt, as much milk as will make into a nice consistency. Have the girdle very warm and thoroughly clean before starting, as it greatly depends on the firing. Put flour into a basin with sugar; rub butter in till it is quite powdered with the flour; add salt, and with a knife mix the milk, as this makes the scones lighter.

THE MENZIES BARONETCY.

MR. D. P. MENZIES' PETITION DISMISSED.

Sir James Balfour Paul, Lord Lyon King-of-Arms of Scotland, on Monday pronounced judgment in the petition of Mr David P. Menzies of Pleas Castle, Stirlingshire, for the registration of himself as holder of the arms of Sir Alex. Menzies, first baronet in 1673. Petitioner claimed to be the head of the House of Menzies in Scotland, and therefore entitled to arms as such.

Lord Lyon King-of-Arms dismissed the petition and found petitioner liable in expenses to Miss Menzies of Menzies. Miss Menzies is sister of the last holder of the baronetcy, Sir Neil Menzies, and opposed the petition. His Lordship said that with the petitioner's claim to chiefship of Clan Menzies and to the baronetcy created in 1665 the Lyon Court had nothing to do. Petitioner claimed descent from Robert, the fourth son of the second son of the first baronet, but His Lordship held that the petitioner had not proved that the Robert Menzies in question was grandson of the first baronet. The documents produced were not sufficient to prove that. On the motion of counsel for the respondent, Menzies of Menzies, the petitioner remitted the documents to the Lord Advocate for investigation.—Glasgow Herald.

Sleigh-drive of Fair Employees Immense

Most Enjoyable Time Spent at Home of Mrs. Harry Fowler, Near Best's

The employees of R. Fair & Company and their friends enjoyed a sleigh-drive on Thursday night to the residence of Mrs. Harry Fowler, near Best's station. It was a great drive in spite of the bare spots or probably as the result of them, for most of the crowd walked when the jitney hit the clay, and walking often presents decidedly compensating features. If the speed limit wasn't broken it was partly the fault of the official guide and scout, Sam Perry, who refused to shovel snow on to the bare spots. At that he purposely left the shoven at home. The night sped along with skating, dancing, cards and refreshments, a bill that would lure anyone to Best's or even Lindsay. Mr. Robert Fair and Mr. J. H. Ferguson were chaperones, of whom it might be said as of "The Tenderfoot"—"Harmless as a mosquito, giddy doings we veto." Let it be said of the chaperones that at least they showed the way to the milkmen into the city, for the party arrived home at five o'clock, leaving about fifty-nine minutes for a beauty sleep.

So successful was this combination walk and sleigh-drive that it is booked for an annual affair.

DOLLAR DAY INDICATIONS

Merchants Making Big Preparations For a Bumper Celebration

If the people are talking Dollar Day as industrially as the merchants, they are surely expecting, and going to have a mammoth day on Thursday, Feb. 3rd. But the merchants are doing more than talk these days, they are getting ready the very biggest offerings for the least possible money that they can find in their stocks. There is no question about the interest the stores are taking in the big day. They are each determined to outdo the other in a friendly effort to make 1916 Dollar Day a memorable one.

It is going to be the people's fault if they do not reap a big harvest of bargains on this one day of the year that the merchants throw their stocks open to the mercy of the buyers.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE ED. A. RUNNELS

The last sad rites were conducted by Rev. Canon Davidson, who referred fittingly to the life of the late Mr. Runnels. A number of the local lodge of the Woodmen of the World attended the funeral. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. S. Couper, James Lewis, W. J. Johnston, Frank Linton, Jas. Root of Montreal, and Kerr, of Kingston. Mr. G. E. Dane, of Hamilton, was also in the city for the funeral. The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous, and testified to the wide popularity of the deceased. Interment was in Little Lake Cemetery.

HIS FRIEND THE RAT.

The Mine Disaster Story That Went With a Stuffed Rodent.

Any man who will keep a stuffed rat in his room wherever he goes must have a story to tell about the rat. This man has.

"This story," he said, "concerns an experience that made my hair curl. I am an engineer. I was once retained to report upon the working of a mine in southern Arizona. The mine was called the Barbara. On an adjoining claim was another mine called the Hyperion. A dispute arose. The Hyperion people claimed that the lower levels of the Barbara had been bored into their ground and half a dozen fortunes in ore taken out of their mine.

"The first thing to do was to make a survey of the Barbara. The Barbara people, of course, objected. Finally, an order for the survey was secured from the court, and I was sent, with a man named Jim Banks, to make the survey.

"There are tricks in all trades, and the Barbara representative knew a few in his. When we reached the mine he said that the tunnel we wished to explore was in a dangerous condition. There had been a cave-in, the timbers were rotted, and so on.

"We classed him as a liar, though he turned out to be right. We worked our way into the tunnel until we ran against a jam of fallen timbers. The timbers, however, were sound and had plainly been arranged to stop our progress. Banks went back for an ax, while I worked at the roof with a pick to dislodge the center pieces.

"I succeeded and had climbed halfway over into the other side of the tunnel when there came a terrific crash of loose ore from the roof. It fell on both sides of the timbers, pinning me in a hole which would have been a grave but for a few sticks which held the mass of ore above.

"The place was barely large enough to move in, and I knew it was certain death in a few hours unless Banks could dig me out.

"The foul air was getting into my brain, and I think I was actually insane with the fearful dread of being buried alive.

"I had given up all hope and was almost swooning when I heard a strange, scraping sound above me. I yelled, but received no answer. With new energy I threw my body against the walls and tried to pick out the ore from between the lodged timbers. Still came the queer scraping noise, which seemed to come nearer and sounded not unlike the steady grinding of a saw. It seemed to last for hours, though it could hardly have been a minute after when a bit of earth dropped to my feet from the upper end of the wall, and along with it came a big gray mine rat.

"That rat saved my life, for he left a clear hole for his trail, and through it came a breath of fresh air that gave life to me. The fellow had bored his way through from the shaft side of the cave. I stayed there two hours after that, until Banks found the cave, got help and dug me out without breaking the airhole.

"I caught the gray rat too. I kept him fed up like a king until he died, and I wouldn't take a lot of money for his skin now."

Snowball Showers.

More than one explorer in cold climates has noted the curious phenomenon of a "snowball shower." The balls, it is true, are not very big, the average being about the size of a hen's egg, but they are true snowballs for all that—compressed globes of snow, not little lumps of ice or hail. A fall of the kind occurred in north London in March, 1880, and at the time it was observed that the balls seemed five times as dense and compressed as ordinary snow and in no way to be told from the usual handmade missiles. They had fallen during the night and were strewn many layers thick over a very large area. No cause—except a doubtful electrical one—can be ascribed for the strange phenomenon, and mountaineers are apt to discredit the stories of snowball showers told them by the old guides till suddenly in the midst of an ordinary storm they find themselves assailed as though by myriads of mischievous schoolboys.—London Standard.

Mrs. Paterson of 675 Water Street, has received a Christmas parcel from her son Russell, who is with Queen's Base Hospital, now stationed at Cairo, Egypt. One of the articles sent in the parcel is a beautiful Egyptian shawl for his mother. A few days before Christmas Russel received the box sent from his home the first week in October, the contents of which, he states, were in perfect condition, and were much appreciated. To make Christmas a little more home-like he did not open the box until Christmas day, for he says all the boys had a home-sick spell, their thoughts being back in Canada. The next day, however, they all began to be hopeful of spending next Christmas in Canada. Christmas eve there was a light rainfall which was the first to fall since the arrival of the hospital unit in Cairo last August.

A number of the 33rd Battery who are home on final leave from Kingston will leave to-morrow morning for Kingston and will be given a send-off at the G.T.R. station at 8.10 a.m. They will be escorted to the station by the 93rd band. Following are the men to go:

Corp. Hagerman.
Gunner H. Yelland.
Gunner H. Lewis.
Gunner Mc Clelland.
Driver C. M. Downer.
Driver E. Hill.

Gunner Arthur G. Hann of the 4th Battery, now in France, writes to thank the city for their Christmas card, and also Mrs. Shurety, who sent him tobacco.

THE MAN WHO WON'T.

Say, dont' you feel a little lonesome
When you walk the city streets
And read the signs that's really meant for you?
Don't you feel a little shameful
When at every step you take
You meet a lad that's dressed in khaki eyeing you?
Have you chosen to ignore them?
Have you stopped to count the cost in future years?
You'll figure up the toll;
you'll have earned the name of shirker,
And a chance you have lost,
Will mark the desolation of your soul.

Don't you think 'twill be forgotten—
No matter where you are
The question to be answered first of all will be:
"What Battalion did you serve in at the Great War?"
Can you tell them you have never heard the call?

Why, there are some men longing to have that trip to France,
But are hampered—age or sickness—foil their plan;
I can bring them by the dozen that would take the chance.
If it's only just to help you, play the man
You're at work at store or office,
There are girls to take your job;
Another pay roll is waiting for your name,
The boys are looking for you,
There are medals for your job
There's honours waiting for your claim.
If it's dying you are scared of—
Well, you have to die some day;
You're bound to live through your allotted span—
And if old "Death" should claim you
Could you find a better way
Than meeting him a soldier and a man?

You'll be the first to do the shouting
At the finish of the war;
You'll be standing near the woman with a "flag."
You'll be cheering for the Empire
As you never cheered before
And forget the days when your knees were on the sag.
Then you'll go back to the office, work, shop or store
To find your pay check waiting with a cam.
A smiling boss will tell you, you're not wanted any more—
The job you had is handed to a soldier and a man!

FARM AND GARDEN

The Department of Agriculture at Washington issues about 800 permits annually for the importation of birds; the number of birds imported amounts to about 800,000, and as many as 17,000 birds arrive in a single day.

One result of the great war has been to cause an unprecedented demand for Canadian eggs, on the British market. Great Britain is the greatest egg importing country in the world, the imports in the year 1913 amounting to 216,720,800 dozen.

The areas used for some of the principal crops in Ontario in 1914 were as follows:—Oats, 2,770,888 acres; barley, 579,473 acres; fall wheat, 665,692 acres; spring wheat, 118,607 acres; rye, 139,918 acres; buckwheat, 17,287 acres; field peas, 177,656 acres; field beans, 81,140 acres; and corn for husking, 226,817 acres.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

Judge Suspended Sentence on McNutt and Young Anderson

Stating that his action would doubtless be found fault with, Judge Huycke this afternoon allowed Robt. L. Anderson and Edward McNutt to go on suspended sentence. They had been found guilty of "rolling" Joseph Byers, Brock street, an elderly thresher, for sixty dollars.

McNutt told his Lordship he was 44 years old and resided in Asphodel. He had never been in court before. Judge Huycke said he was not impressed with the prisoners conduct. He could have been serving in a worthy cause at this time.

"Your conduct has been contemptible and I believe you were the more guilty of the two. All three of you should be heartily ashamed of yourselves. You spent the day drinking together and your experience should have taught you better than that. No doubt I will be told it is your first fault will be found [illegible]

Judge Huycke made a deeply paternal appeal to Anderson to retrieve his reputation in the service of the King and in all his future conduct. He was a young man who should endeavor to live up to the splendid reputation of his late father.

Caustic Comment Upon Coughing in Church

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I wish to draw attention to the widespread and general annoyance caused by the common and thoughtless practice of coughing in church. This is, in nine cases out of ten, a mere breach of good manners, since it is quite as ill-bred to interrupt a speaker by unnecessary noises, as it is to do anything else which distracts the attention of those persons who come to church to listen and to take part in the service. It is quite true that there are uncontrollable coughs; but these, in the case of persons able to attend church, are extremely rare; and, in fact, any one with a really uncontrollable cough has no business in any public assemblage. Most persons who cough, simply because they hear another coughing—for coughing is as contagious as yawning—could control it if they chose. That this is true may be proven by anyone who will take the trouble to watch and listen when people cough. Sunday morning there was a perfect chorus of coughing while the preliminary exercises, in the church I attended, were going on; but as soon as the soloist rose to sing, there was a sudden and remarkable silence.

Any medical man will bear out my contention that for a person able to be up and around the worst possible thing to do for a cough is to cough. I wish each one who reads these lines might consider seriously just how much his or her coughing in church is due to a thoughtless habit, and resolve henceforth, for the comfort of speaker and audience, to refrain. Incidentally, [illegible]

SAID TO HAVE LEFT THE CITY

A few days ago a well known local man appeared before His Honour Judge Huycke on a charge of stealing five dollars from an aged resident of East City, who was unable to defend himself. The accused was allowed to go on condition that he endeavor to enlist. It has since been reported that the accused showed his gratitude by leaving the city.

A TWILIGHT SLEEP CASE

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The late King Edward VII. of England was a "twilight sleep" baby, and his mother, Queen Victoria, was the first woman of Royal birth to use methods for painless childbirth, Attorney Jas. A. Farell declared in the Supreme Court this afternoon.

Farrell appeared in behalf of Dr. W. Wellington Kips, proprietor of a twilight sleep sanitarium on Riverside Drive. The owners of mansions in this exclusive block are seeking an injunction against Dr. Kips, alleging that the sight of ambulances bringing women to the sanitarium and the cries of new-born babies has a bad effect upon their nerves.

"DOING THEIR BIT."

Brave, patient, loyal hearts who stay,
And "do their bit" in homely toil;
Who hope and work and watch and pray,
And "do their bit" with cheery smile.

Their bit to give and not to go—
Oh! harder task a hundred times;
To check the tears that fain would flow,
And trust their loved in foreign climes.

To watch and wait through weary days
For news that tarries long—so long
To tread the dull familiar ways
And face the world with smile and song.

Oh! brave the hearts that face the foe—
All honour to our noble men;
But praise the true who bade them go—
Brave women folks in town and glen.

CARE OF GOOD CLOTHES.

The Finer the Stuff the More Watchful One Should Be.

It is a very common mistake to believe that good materials, whether of cotton, silk or wool, need less care than cheap ones. How often does one complain of the lack of wearing quality in a garment for which a big price has been paid. Yet, most frequently, what has worn out the fabric has not been actual use, but the neglect it has suffered.

One of the principal differences between good and cheap materials is that the better grades are finer spun. This may mean that the fabric is stronger and, in proportion to the uses to which it is put, may wear longer, but it also means that each tiny thread by itself is weaker and more apt to injury. Anything which may attack the threads one by one, therefore, does more harm with fine goods than with coarse.

No matter how careful one may try to be, clothes that one wears gradually get a trifle of the grease from the perspiration of the body. In spite of constant watching clothes will become dusty. This combination of dust and body moisture forms a regular breeding ground for tiny little vegetable growths. These are so small that it takes the most powerful microscope even to see them.

In themselves these bacteria do but little harm, but many of them eat from an acid which eats into the fiber of the material. If the individual fiber is coarse the deposit of the acid upon it is not enough to eat all the way through, but if it is sheer or woven of fine threads one by one the threads are eaten through and the texture weakened.

Good clothing, instead of being kept shut away in boxes and drawers, should be constantly aired and shaken. The finer the material the more often should it be looked after. A coarse piece of goods will wear out by using, a fine piece by being laid away.

MILITARY STRATEGY.

Retreating Through a City Is Disastrous to an Army.

If you suffer defeat in front of a great town and have to retreat through it under the blows of the victorious enemy you are in the worst possible position for conducting that retreat. The streets of the town (but few of which will run parallel to your course and can, therefore, serve as avenues of escape for your army) are so many defiles in which your columns will get hopelessly congested. The operation may be compared to the pouring of too much liquid into a funnel which has too small an orifice. Masses of your transport will remain clogged outside the place. You will run the risk of a partial and perhaps of a complete disaster as the enemy presses on.

There is very much more than this. A great town cannot but contain, if you have long occupied it, the materiel of your organization. You will probably abandon documents which the enemy should not see. You will certainly, in the pressure of such a flight, lose accumulated stores. Again, the transverse streets are so many points of "leakage" into which your congested columns will bulge out and get confused. Again, you will be almost necessarily dealing with the complications of a mass of civilian conditions which should never be allowed to interrupt a military operation.

In general, to fight in front of a great town when the chances are against you is as great an error as to fight in front of a marsh with few causeways. So far as mere topography is concerned. It is a greater error still.—From "The Elements of the Great War," by Hilaire Belloc.

Seville Nights.

In all the principal plazas and gardens of Seville moving picture screens are erected and small tables and chairs set out, the exhibitors either making their profits from the drinks sold or by a rental of chairs at 2 cents each. Thousands of people go nightly to the different plazas and gardens, and the entire life of the city for about four months centers around these moving picture shows.

Leakage in Steam Pipes.

To make a permanent cement for stopping leakage in steam pipes where caulking or plugging is impossible, mix black oxide of manganese and raw linseed oil, using enough oil with the manganese to bring it to a thick paste. Apply to the pipe or joint at leak. If the pipe be kept sufficiently warm to thoroughly thin the oil from the manganese a twenty-four hours the cement will be as hard as the iron pipe.

The Happy Mean.

"Why does Miss Oldgirl wear such exceedingly youthful confines? She doesn't expect, does she, any one will believe her as young as all that?"

"Oh, no, but she hopes the opposite will strike an average between her age and that of her apparel."

Ribbon of the Garter.

The dark blue ribbon now worn by the Knights of the Garter was originated to be present shade from one slightly in tone in the year 1522. The pictures of Charles I. by Vandyke always show the lighter shade. London Mail.

British Seize the Hotel Metropole

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A flurry of excitement in the hotel district was caused by the announcement that the spacious Hotel Metropole, in Northumberland avenue, which is well known to many Americans, has been commandeered by the Ministry of Munitions for administrative offices.

The urgent necessity of speeding up the supply of munitions has determined the government to put into force immediately a scheme for the dilution of skilled labor with semi-skilled, unskilled and female workers in all controlled establishments.

In a statement on the subject in the House of Commons to-day Mr. Asquith announced that the government was convinced that this offered the only prospect of obtaining a sufficient supply of munitions "to enable the war to be brought to a speedy and successful conclusion."

"Any lack of munitions," continued the Premier, "would exact a heavy toll in lives of soldiers. It is quite impossible that foreign supplies can take the place of the home production of munitions, but even if these sources of supply were indefinitely extended the increased demand thereby caused upon our financial resources and our shipping would present insuperable difficulties."

Mr. Asquith stated that both the owners of controlled establishments and the representatives of the great trade unions had loyally pledged themselves to support the government in the scheme of labor dilution. Considerable progress already had been made in certain districts, but he regarded that what had been accomplished fell "lamentably short of the national requirements in the present emergency."

"What would you DO—

if someone told you that for years they had suffered from the same ailment which you have, and had at last found a cure? Wouldn't you try it? If you are suffering with an ulcer, or an old sore, read what Mrs. Jeffrey, of Methuen, writes: "Thirty years ago an ulcer appeared on my ankle and spread to my knee. The pain was terrible, and for years I could hardly walk. I tried every remedy I heard of, but in vain. I had doctor's treatment for 25 years, but only got temporary relief. Then I heard of Zam-Buk, and, procuring some, I applied it regularly. Gradually the inflammation was drawn out, the pain disappeared, and after thirty years of suffering the terrible sore was healed by Zam-Buk in a short time."

Kaiser Said to Be At Ghevgeli On Greek Border

Presence May Be Preliminary to Attack of the Foe on Saloniki—Said to Have Large Army Ready

LONDON, Jan. 25—The Daily News correspondent at Athens says it is rumoured that the Kaiser, accompanied by Field Marshal Von Mackensen, has arrived at Ghevgeli, on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier.

The Austro-Germans, it is said, have nearly completed the necessary arrangements for an attack on Saloniki. An army of 300,000 men is reported to be ready, supported by heavy artillery, including three 16-inch guns.

More Work for Bulgars.

London, Jan. 25. — Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent sends a despatch from Sofia, which says Germany has invited the Bulgarian Government to occupy the towns and districts of Prisrend, Pristina, Krusevac, Kupyra, Pozarevac and Prekuplje in Serbia, and Djakova in Montenegro, which have been held recently by the Germans.

The Germans are said to have inaugurated in Serbia a veritable reign of terror. Domiciliary visits and the seizure of goods and property take place for the slightest reason. Floggings are administered in public with a severity which takes no account of age or sex.

Typhus has made its appearance among the Austro-German troops.

Italians in Danger.

PARIS, Jan. 25.—The Havas correspondent at Saloniki reports that the Italian expeditionary force in Albania is soon to be attacked. Bulgarians who, in co-operation with Austrians, captured the Albanian town of Berat are reported to be advancing toward Avlona which is held by the Italians. Austrian troops are said to be moving in the direction of Durazzo, where Essad Pasha, at the head of his Albanian troops, is preparing resistance.

Up Until Christmas Day the Troops Did Not Know They Were to Leave Gallipoli

French Had Made Elaborate Preparations to Pass the Winter on the Peninsula---Orders to Evacuate Came to British on December 29

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company, describing the withdrawal from Gallipoli, says that up until Christmas Day the troops were ignorant of whether they were to remain for the winter or to be withdrawn.

"In fact," says the correspondent, "the French had made elaborate preparations to pass the winter on the peninsula. On Christmas Day it became known, however, that the French were leaving and that the British would take over their sector and many weeks' supplies and provisions they had already landed.

FRENCH AIRMEN BUSY.

"Orders for the evacuation only came to the British on Dec. 29. The Turks, evidently aware of the possible contingency of evacuation, had kept up a most persistent air reconnaissance, flying much lower than usual and obstinately refusing to be driven away by gunfire. Ever since the 20th, moreover, the evacuation of the northern front had enabled the Turks to bring up a number of fresh guns from their positions there, and they had doubled or trebled their supply of ammunition, and every part of the British ground was open to their fire.

FRENCH WELL SUPPLIED.

"The French, in their scientific preparation for wintering, made with a thoroughness that might be an example to other belligerent nations, had collected an enormous amount of material of all kinds, which added to the difficulty of the evacuation. Nobody feared the Turkish infantry or supposed that the Turks, knowing that every inch of the ground had been mined and that the roads were blocked with entanglements, would dare follow the retiring troops, but though not a kick was left in the Turkish infantry, there was much danger from the Turkish artillery.

"There was nothing to prevent the Turks from converting the beaches into infernos of high explosives and smothering the roads and trenches with shrapnel. The Turks had maintained a heavy fire since the Anzac withdrawal, and heavy shelling continued throughout the evacuation. But the work on the beaches and piers went on as though no such things as shells existed. All this battering did but small actual damage and the casualties thereby caused on the beaches were surprisingly few."

A SEA OF FIRE.

The writer, on board ship describing the farewell to Gallipoli, says: "The beach appeared a sea of fire, with the distant popping of thousands of rounds of ammunition, ending in a huge explosion, and flames towering into the sky. A shower of wreckage fell into the sea. It was estimated that ten tons of explosives went up, and the shock of air was felt out at sea.

"Far up the coast another glare showed similar destruction. In the meantime the Turks realized what was doing. A row of red flares were set off in their trenches as signals and their guns began to throw shells and kept up the firing until after daybreak. Before leaving the trenches a letter signed by a German was thrown over, in which was written:

FAREWELL MESSAGE.

"'We enjoyed your bully beef at Suvla, although not as good as ours. We know you are going and we will see you again at Suez.'

"The only thing of value left behind were the field ambulances, which were not destroyed, as they might be needed."

More than 8,400 officials and 16,000 men are kept busy handling the military mail of the German armies, which now amounts to about 15,500,000 pieces a day, according to an item in the Cologne Gazette of Dec. 11. The number of articles sent through the military Post Office since the war began has reached the total of more than 5,000,000,000.

Every day some 190,000 pieces of mail are found to be insufficiently addressed or poorly packed, of which 25,000 bear addresses that cannot be deciphered at all.

"TRAIL HITTER" RAISES PAY OF 1,000 GIRLS

TRENTON, N.J., Jan. 25.—Irrespective of other successes the Rev. "Billy" Sunday may meet with here, his campaign has made at least one thousand girls and young women employees of the F. A. Strauss Woollen Mills happier. J. William Foster, superintendent of the plant, "hit the trail" last Tuesday night. He called together the woollen mills force today and informed them that every worker in the establishment would receive a substantial increase in wages, dating from last Monday. The amount of the increase will be made known when the pay envelopes are distributed to-morrow.

Mr. Foster took advantage of the occasion to tell the employes of the satisfaction he experienced in having made his peace with God, and urged them to pursue a similar course. The news of the increase in wages was hailed with delight.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Of course you have a right," Bob broke in. "You have a right to be elbowed by a hundred greasy practitioners from the east side. You have a right to see old Judge Hannan eat tobacco. You also have a right to inhale an atmosphere of garlic, herring and whisky, and if there are any other rights that have heretofore been in the exclusive enjoyment of your brother practitioners, why, go ahead and avail yourself of them."

Here Bob paused while the new maid brought in the toast, which he at once commenced to devour with loud crunches of indignation. As for Marion, it must be confessed that it taxed the self control of a regularly licensed practitioner, like herself to stem the flow of tears which almost impended. She had to gulp once or twice before speaking.

"Bullying a sister attorney," she said piteously, "is hardly according to professional ethics, is it?"

Bob, stricken with penitence, laid down his knife and fork and was around the table in a flash.

"Dearest lady," he said, after she had smoothed her rumpled hair and he was once more at his toast, "I didn't mean to bully you. By all means try your case. What did you say was the title of it?"

"Konvalinka against Schultz," she replied.

"Konvalinka against Schultz," she replied unsuspectingly.

"And who is your client Konvalinka?" Bob asked, as the maid re-entered.

"S-ah!" Marion murmured, and there was a protracted silence till the maid had retired. "Susan Konvalinka is her full name," Marion went on, "and she has just taken out the coffee."

"Indeed!" said Bob with uplifted eyebrows.

"And she's suing her last employer for wages."

"That's Mr. Schultz?"

"No." Marion corrected: "Mrs. Schultz."

"Mrs. Schultz!" Bob exclaimed. "Why, surely you're not"—

He stopped short and gulped some coffee.

"Surely not what?" Marion asked.

Bob had suddenly put on an air of such innocence that had Marion not been so wrapped up in the discussion of her first case she might have smelled a rather obvious rat.

"Why, I was going to say," said Bob, "that you're surely not going to begin your active legal career by bringing suit against one of your own sex?"

"My dear Bob," Marion replied, "there is and of right ought to be no sentiment about the practice of the law. I'm bringing suit for a woman against a woman, and as a reasonable woman myself I shall exact a proper fee for my services."

"Quite right," Bob agreed as he went downstairs to put on his coat. "By the way," he called back, "when did you say your case is returnable?"

"It was returnable yesterday," said Marion as she followed him to the street door, "and it will be tried next Tuesday."

"Good!" Bob blurted out, and as he kissed her a little southeast of the left ear he suffered not so much as the faintest twinge of conscience.

II.

"A strong jolt at the very outset is what she needs," Bob said to himself, "and a strong jolt is what she will get."

He made for the telephone booth at the nearest drug store and rang up his office.

"Bowles," he said to the managing clerk, "I'm going to stop at the Eighteenth district court on my way down this morning to save you the trouble of doing it yourself, and I'll be about half an hour late."

Ten minutes afterward he presented himself at the clerk's office of the Eighteenth district municipal court and was greeted by the assistant in charge with a cordiality strongly significant of many cigars judiciously distributed on various past occasions.

"Billy," Bob said to the calendar clerk, "you have a case on next week, Konvalinka against Schultz. Who represents the defendant?"

"Old Gebe Sundheim," said Billy, after consulting his docket. "Case ain't on till next Tooesday, though."

"Do you think you could manage to have me substituted as attorney for the defendant in place of old Sundheim?" Bob asked.

"Sure thing," said Billy. "Babe'll be tickled to death to hand you over his client for a two spot."

Bob produced a five dollar bill and handed it to the clerk.

"Haven't anything smaller," he explained. "Fix it up for me, like a good fellow, and I'll come here myself next Tuesday and try the case."

"You're on," said Billy, and Bob went out humming a tune.

He hummed tunes almost continually for the remainder of the week, and went home each night in a veritable gale of good spirits. At dinner, when Marion ingeniously switched the subject of aeroplanes to easements of light, air and access, he discussed the matter with a vim, and of his own accord introduced a topic of lateral support and the effect of severing or of merging the dominant and servient tenements. Not once, however, did he allude to the impending case of Konvalinka against Schultz, except that in a moment of temporary abstraction he asked Marion the name of the new maid.

"Why, you know her name," said Marion. "It's Susan. She's the plaintiff in that"—

"Oh, yes, Susan," Bob interrupted. "Talking about Susan, I read a novel decision today—the elders and so forth of the Lutheran church against O'Hara. Very interesting opinion of Judge Vann on the liquor tax law."

They followed a long description of an imaginary case, which took up the rest of the dinner hour. For the remainder of the evening Bob was positively lovelike in his attentions to his wife, and the next morning at breakfast he spoke vaguely about purchasing a couple of tickets for the theater that evening.

"I suppose," he said, "you're not going out today in this awful rain?"

A brisk shower was in progress outside, which looked as if it might settle down into a steady downpour.

"Of course I'm going out," she replied. "Susan's case is on today, and I'm going to try it, you know."

"Indeed!" Bob commented as he struggled into his raincoat. "I thought you'd given up the idea."

"Not at all," she said as she kissed him. "Wish me luck."

"I wish you all the luck you deserve," he replied and took the front steps three at a jump.

III.

An hour later Bob was standing in the lobby of the Eighteenth district municipal court, when Marion came in from the street, struggling to close a refractory umbrella. Her mackintosh was shedding buckets of water, and her hair clung to her rosy cheeks in little damp curls. Bob's first impulse was to rush to her aid and to feel with his lips if those red cheeks were as wet and cold as they looked. He restrained himself, however, and as soon as Marion had her umbrella well in hand he approached her, puffing hard on a particularly black cigar.

"Hello, Billington!" he cried, expelling a cloud of smoke full in her face. "Are we going to try that case this morning?"

"We?" Marion cried, not a little taken aback. "Billington?"

"Billington's your name, isn't it?" Bob asked. "And you're the plaintiff's attorney in that Konvalinka case, aren't you? Well, I'm for the other side. I've got a substitution from Gebe Sundheim, and I'm ready for trial. These little twenty dollar cases are an infernal nuisance, aren't they?"

Marion gasped.

"Let's go inside," said Bob.

He preceded her toward the swinging doors that opened into the courtroom and pushed his way through, leaving her to follow. When she finally reached the inclosure for counsel Bob was lolling back in a high back chair, exchanging pleasantries with old Gebe Sundheim. He paid not the slightest attention to Marion, who sat down at the long table in front of the rail that separates counsels' inclosure from the judge's desk.

"Hey, there!" said the court officer, prompted in advance to unusual gruffness by a cigar from Bob. "Git away from dat table! Dat's for lawyers only."

"How dare you"— Marion gasped, when Bob joined in.

"Smoke up, Ed," he said lazily. "Your pipe is out. Don't you know this lady's a lawyer?"

"Oh, a lady lawyer!" Ed cried. "Excuse me, lady. Set right down where you please."

At this juncture the judge entered, and Ed rapped with a paper weight on the rail.

"The justice of the court!" he bellowed, and the crowd in the courtroom rose to its feet, with one notable exception.

"Git up dere!" Ed hissed. "Don't you know nuttin?"

Marion turned on him with a glare, but the court officer greeted her with a smile and a broad wink. It was only his little joke.

Bob Billington seemed quite unmoved, and when Konvalinka against Schultz was called in its regular order on the calendar he answered "Ready!" without a tremor. Instead of old Judge Hannan, the presiding justice was a new incumbent—a lawyer of such marked judicial dignity that one rather suspected it might cloak a natural diffidence of shyness. He turned toward Marion deferentially.

"Whom do you represent?" he asked her.

"The plaintiff," she replied.

"I know," said his honor, "but what attorney do you represent?"

"I am the attorney myself," she replied.

The judge blushed, while Bob frowned.

"And are you ready for trial?" asked the judge.

"Yes, sir," said Marion.

"Then I shall take this case up immediately after the call of the calendar," he announced. "That will be in about ten minutes."

The ten minutes seem passed, and Ed, with a wink that embraced the entire courtroom, administered the oath to Susan Konvalinka. Thereupon Marion rose to her feet and tried to remember all she had learned in moot court days at law school.

"Where do you reside?" she asked.

"One moment," Bob said. "Now, if the court please, I move to dismiss this action on the ground that a bill of particulars was demanded on the return day, and none has been filed."

"Why, Bob!" Marion exclaimed. "I told you at dinner last week"—

"Dinners aren't bills of particulars," said Bob in a swift aside to Marion, as the judge ran hastily through the papers.

"The complaint is written and verified, and your client was served with a copy of it," said the judge. "I'll deny your motion. Proceed, madam."

"First blood for Marion," Bob murmured.

The attorney for the plaintiff tossed her head.

"Where do you live?" she repeated to the witness.

It was the conventional first question, but Susan declined to make the conventional first answer.

"Me?" she exclaimed. "Why, Mis' Billington, you ain't mean fer tell me you don't know where I live?"

Content With the Garter.

Lord Dufferin's story of the French stationmaster who approached him with a request that he would obtain for him a British decoration of some sort is worth re-telling. Most of the Royalties who had, so to speak, passed through his hands had conferred on him various stars and crosses, but, though he had several times been responsible for the safety and comfort of the British Sovereign, he had received no decoration in return.

"But most of our orders are given for military distinction or to civil servants," Lord Dufferin explained, soothingly. "For example, the Bath, the Star of India, and so forth."

The stationmaster looked very glum.

"There is, however," his lordship continued, "one order that is given for no particular merit or service—the Order of the Garter."

"Ah, well," said the stationmaster, "I suppose I must be content with that!"

Why Hindu Poet Avoids Japan.

A traveler returned from India to Japan, according to the East and West News, tells why Sir Rabindranath Tagore gave up his proposed visit to the land of the Rising Sun. First, he says, because the Hindu poet, like other poets, changes his mind frequently; second, because his tenants are suffering from want of food; third, he has become incensed at a Japanese who abused Tagore's confidence, pretending to be an admirer of the poet's most refined works, and all the while insanely addicted to London music hall songs. "He sings for hours in private, but at the top of his voice," the poet is reported to have said, with a withering expression of scorn, "what he calls 'Tippulaly!'"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE IRRESPONSIBILITY OF THE HOME

(New England Homestead)

IT was the last day of the Old year, and Ethel and Alice Addison were on their way to the village, where the former taught in the grammar school, and the latter attended the Academy. They were pretty, well-dressed, vivacious girls, popular in the community, in constant request for church and neighborhood service, and having a very good opinion of themselves and their powers. This morning they were exulting in the fact that the morrow was a holiday, and therefore they would be free to carry out various plans of their own.

"What do you think? said Ethel, as they walked along. "Dorina has been to father again about leaving home and getting married!"

"She has?" cried Alice. "What did he say?"

"What could he say?" replied her sister. "He told her that neither you nor I was able to take up the housekeeping now, and he couldn't possibly get along without her. It seems queer that she will persist in bringing up this subject over and over, when she can see, as well as anybody, how things are. It is very selfish of her, I think, to keep stirring things up this way, just for her own pleasure and Andrew's."

"I don't know about that!" said Alice thoughtfully. "She's kept house ever since she was eighteen—eight years, Ethel—and she's been just as good to us, and given us as much as mother could have done, if she'd lived, and I think it's been in her place I should feel as if it was about time for somebody else to step into the gap, and give me a chance to do as I want to myself."

"I'm sure I don't see who there is to do it!" said Ethel sharply. "I certainly can't give up my teaching to keep house for father, and you aren't out of high school yet."

"I shall be this spring," returned Alice, "and—and Ethel, I can't see why it's any worse for you to give up a few of your years than it is for Dorina to have spent so many for us, or than it would be for me to give up everything, and tie myself down to housework at my age."

"If you feel it your duty to keep house for father, so Dorina can leave home, do it!" snapped Ethel, "I don't. I have my own life to live, and I don't propose to spend the best years of it drudging in a farmhouse kitchen. Neither, if you'll take my advice, will you! Dorina is just fitted for the place she's filling, and she will never be able to fill any higher position. She is much better off in father's house than married to Andrew Burns, and living in his shabby little cottage, and it would be a real kindness to help her to realize it"

Alice was silenced, but not convinced. Ethel's superiority in years and learning, and her confident manner often cowed the younger girl when she instinctively knew that selfishness was the real animating motive which controlled her sister. Moreover her own self-interest was touched, since it was not only possible, but highly probable that if Dorina resigned her position, Ethel would rebel flatly against taking the vacant place, and she herself might be forced into it—and Alice loved good times and freedom, and hated hard work and responsibility! So she said no more on the subject, and they were soon chatting about something else.

Dorina's Case

Meantime in the big farmhouse kitchen, Dorina, the older sister, was doing up the morning's work with swift, practiced movements, and as she worked, she was thinking bitterly of her father's refusal to permit her to lay down her home burden, and to marry her lover, Andrew, who had already waited three years for her, and who seemed apt to continue to wait indefinitely. She had tried to give her motherless sisters a mother's love and care, and she had succeeded only too well. They had grown to feel that it didn't matter whether Dorina had good times or not, whether she was disappointed or not, whether she got her share of happiness for what she put into the family, or not. It was the attitude which many mothers have to meet, in their children, but it was doubly unjust in this case, since Dorina had just the same girlish tastes as her sisters, and the same right to happiness that they had.

Her father's reason for refusing to release her was as selfish as those of her sisters. He knew that Dorina was far more capable than either of his other children, and he also knew that it would be a hard thing to persuade either girl to assume Dorina's duties, so he took the easiest way, and clung to Dorina, and because she was meek and unselfish thus far he had prevailed.

"It isn't fair!" she murmured stormingly. "It isn't fair! the others ought to take their turn now; I've done my part! I've a good mind to tell them so. Not that it would do any good—" her voice trailed off into silence, but the light in her eyes grew stronger and brighter as she worked on.

She and Andrew had waited patiently, perhaps far too patiently. Were they not entitled as well as the rest of the family to be a little selfish concerning themselves?

That night the entire family attended the watch-meeting held in the church vestry, the two younger girls going with their father, and Dorina, according to custom, with Andrew. On the way to the church, he was naturally eager to know how his sweetheart's request, which he had known she was about to make, had prospered. When she reported the result, to her great surprise he burst out laughing.

"Why do you laugh?" she asked reproachfully.

Mixed Associations

"At something I was thinking," rejoined Andrew. "Let me tell you." The telling consumed the rest of the way to the church, and all the journey home, and kept Dorina standing fully ten minutes at the doorstep after they reached the farmhouse. When she entered the house at length it was to find the two girls hovering over the base-burner in the living-room.

"I'm frozen and starved to death!" cried Ethel pettishly. "Can't you make some cocoa, Dorina, and give us a little lunch, before we go to bed?"

Dorina had anticipated the request, and had made some preparations to grant it before in the cocoa and a tempting supply of cakes and cookies and her sisters and their father gathered round to do them justice.

One of Dorina's talents, which was much appreciated by her family, though no praises were even given her, was her ability to cook extremely well. Neither of the other girls cared to practice that very important art, but left it to the older sister.

"What an inspiring meeting!" exclaimed Ethel, as she nibbled and sipped. "How ably Mr. Noble spoke, and how clearly he proved that every one of us should make New Year's resolutions, and then keep them! I resolved as he was speaking to be more unselfish and thoughtful for others this year, than ever before."

"What he said about being just to others impressed me most," chimed in her father. "I resolved to try to be more just to those with whom I have to do; to try to see their side of things, as well as my own."

"I've resolved to be more hard-working and faithful in my school-work and at home," added Alice. "Dorina, have you made any resolutions?"

Dorina looked up from her cup of cocoa. If she had not been so overshadowed and almost effaced socially by her younger sisters, she would have been called a pretty girl. Even as it was, there was something about her Quakerish demureness which attracted some discriminating observers more than the showier qualities of Ethel or Alice.

"I usually don't bother to make resolutions at New Year's, especially," she returned. "Every day I resolve to make it the best I've ever lived right through the year, but this year, I have made one brand new resolution."

"What is it?" asked Ethel interestedly, for Dorina seldom spoke of such matters.

But the older sister smilingly refused to tell and all their urging could not beguile the secret from her. They were finally obliged to retire for what remained of the night, none the wiser on the subject.

The next morning when, rather later than usual, Mr. Addison shivered out into the kitchen to build the fire, he was astounded to see a note tied upon the tea kettle handle, and he lost no time in untying it, and tearing it open. It was addressed to him, and the writing was Dorina's.

"Dear Folks:

"I wouldn't tell you what my new resolution was, last night, because it would have sounded so awful after the splendid things you had determined to do, and still, I really believe that my resolution will do more to actually help you to keep yours, than if I had said I meant to be more unselfish and faithful too.

"I can see how I have spoiled Ethel and Alice, and encouraged them to think of themselves first, by always being at hand to do whatever they didn't want to do themselves; and how I have prevented you, father, from getting my point of view sometimes, by simply keeping still, when I ought to have shown you clearly what you were doing. And so my resolution is this: From now on, I am going to think of myself just enough to keep others from growing more selfish as I grow less so, and in carrying it out, I have gone with Andrew this morning to Mr. Noble's to be married.

"I hope you will get along nicely without me, and I am sure you will, if you can only live up to the program you outlined last night.

Yours lovingly, with best wishes for a Happy New Year.

DORINA"

Red Rose Tea "is good tea"

She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Feaire, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat; but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating throuhg the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

CARLYLE'S TEMPER.

It Was the Very Reverse of Bad, Said His Old Maidservant.

Carlyle bad tempered? Not at all, if we are to place any belief in the testimony of the maid behind the broom. One of Carlyle's servants, Jessie, who on marrying became Mrs. Broadfoot, has left a very favorable impression of her old master, says the London Standard.

"I could have lived with him all my days," she says, "and it always makes me angry when I read, as I sometimes do, that he was bad tempered. He was the very reverse, in my opinion. I never would have left him when I did if I had not been going to get married. I took great pride in attending on him and studying all his wants and wishes.

"It was one of my duties to rush out and move on all street organs and things of that kind. Many a time in the morning before he rose I used to fill his pipe, the short clay he used in his bedroom, for him and strike the match to light it. I always cut up his tobacco (he bought it in flat cakes) and kept his tin box regularly supplied. He was always so grateful for these little services."

So much for popular belief and the dictum of the democratic servant biographer.

Further Decadence Noted.

Of course "canned music" has not supplanted finger made music, but it must be admitted that there are in these days fewer proposals of marriage on piano stools than there have ever been before. They have fallen off 75 per cent in seven years. In former times, when wakeful mother heard the desperate lore music stop suddenly in the parlor and the old piano begin to respond fitfully to the dainty touches of only one little hand, she understood that right then and there it was up to 'another to decide just what was going to happen to Willie.—Dallas News.

IS THE WORLD'S CREATOR RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR?

In the article under this title by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, the writer expressed the opinion that it was a mistake to lay the blame of the war and its horrors upon God.

Mr. Meyer suggested that since the war began Britain as a nation had become unselfish and generous, and that from the scourging of the horror of the present, a new life will emerge triumphant. These opinions have created great interest all over and we print the following letters:

God's Reason For the War

"If only human nature had been sympathetic with these qualities (Light, Love, and Peace), there would have been no war." God gave us peace and love, but human ambition made many of us ignore His gifts. Often I have heard people say "How can God allow such things?" But I maintain that God has His Own good purpose.—R. L. S.

The Other Point of View

If a man believed in God as the Creator of all things, it is surely logical to hold God responsible for all things. As for the idea that this terrible war is making us better than we were, I can only speak from personal feelings. Two years ago, if I read of 100 lives lost in a train or mine disaster, I shuddered, and felt a touch of the real horror of the fact. To-day, I can walk past a placard declaring 10,000 men murdered in most hideous ways and scarcely feel an emotion, so callous does colossal tragedy make the individual. Does this not mean that I am coarser, lower, and less sympathetic than I was?—H. H.

Seeking Help

What I can't understand about Mr. Meyer's article, is this: Here are at least two nations, recognising the same God, fighting against each other, and each claiming quite sincerely that God is on their side. If God is all-powerful, then He obviously is responsible for the war. If the war is being fought against His wish, then He is not all-powerful.—E. G. L.

What Has Britain Done ?

If humanity has really lost sympathy in God's waves of Light, Love, Joy, and Peace, as Mr. Meyer asserts, is that any reason why the manhood of many nations should be wiped out? What has Great Britain ever done that was really opposed to such divine attributes? These theories are emblematical of the most tyrannical despotism, and if believed will help to create a world of infidels and agnostics, and raise up forces of unbelief and blasphemy that will shake the very foundations of Christendom.

The Humor of Drilling

The drill sergeant was real mustard, and the recruits were having a bad time. The weather had been very wet, and the parade ground was still slippery. In doing a movement smartly, as an example to his men, the sergeant slipped and fell full sprawl, and naturally the "rookies" could hardly repress their mirth.

Getting up with all the dignity he could muster, the sergeant's eye fell on Murphy's grinning face.

"Well, you grinning hyena!" he roared. "What's 'urting you? Do you see anything funny?"

"No, sorr," gurgled Murphy, tactfully. "But, shure, Oi was just thinkin' what a laugh we cud have had if it had been anywan else save yersilf, sergeant!"

Ancient Warfare Revived

There has been an unexpected revival of ancient weapons in this war. Elizabethan helmets, grenades of William the Third's time, and Roman catapults for the trenches. Murderous bowie-knives have also been recommended for underground fighting, but it is not generally known that the grenadiers and bayonet men of the bombing squads are taking to the Kaffir knobkerrie. The real article, a short ironwood stick with a heavy brass head, is both fashionable and effective.

A Brave "Cornstalker"

How Lance-Corporal Keyser, one of the best bomb-throwers in the Australian and New Zealand Corps, won his V.C. is described by Captain C. E. Bean, official Press representative at Gallipoli. During fierce attacks at Lone Pine, Keyser was throwing for fifty hours almost continuously. He not only threw bombs, but constantly smothered the enemy's bombs with his coat. Finally, when the enemy cut down the time of the fuses, he caught several bombs in the air like a cricket ball and threw them back before bursting.

• How To Make the • Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Have It. Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised to note how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Adversity, is most to be deplored when we fail to learn the lesson it has for us.

It is usually easier to stop a clock than to make it go—and it is easier to keep well than to get well.

If you want gravy for dinner and have not enough flour or cornstarch in the house for thickening (and that actually happens sometimes), fine cracker crumbs will answer the purpose perfectly.

In an Egyptian Room.

Soft rugs—real oriental rugs—comfort one's feet; vistas and glimpses of things half seen through arches and doorways soothe the eyes. Oh, those half concealed nooks behind screens of tall palms, where one finds a luxurious couch and inlaid taboret and sips his tiny cup of Turkish coffee! A dragoman comes into the lobby with a bunch of lustrous La France roses in his bronzed hand. The porter, in gorgeous livery of green and gold, motions him to an Arab servant in starchy white, with broad red girdle and turbouch, and golden bangs in his ears. On the second floor, as you go to your room, every servant on guard along the corridor rises and salutes as you pass, and you feel you really are somebody worth while—you get a little better opinion of yourself.—Suburban Life.

Measles and Morals.

Miss Rosamond Napier, in "Tom Harcourt," has this little gem of a story:

"Another little boy to see you, miss," said old Hobson, the butler, to Tom.

This was a very fiery red but clean little boy, holding tightly a book covered in black cloth.

"Well, Tommy?"

"Please, miss, I've brought back the library book as you give Sunday, as we're got measles."

Tom beamed all over her face. At last her words were bearing fruit.

"Good boy, Tommy!" she encouraged. "Who has got them in your house?"

"Me, miss, please. I broked out Tuesday."

Child's Beauty Saves Refugees From Jail Cells

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Geo. H. Gould was riding down Broadway in an automobile one day a week ago when the beauty of a little girl who accompanied her parents, street musicians, attracted her attention and then her sympathy. That sympathy last night saved the father from a cell, and besides keeping the little family together and safe from official disruption because of poverty, will attend to their future wants. Mrs. Gould, whose husband is retired from business and who is wealthy enough to have a fine home and several automobiles, is the fairy godmother who has come into the lives of a stricken Belgian family, the details of which came to light in the Men's Night Court.

Henry De Rudder, thirty-two years old, was leader in the orchestra of the opera at Antwerp, Belgium, before the war. He was considered fairly wealthy. His vocation was playing his violin and at this he was considered exceptionally good. His young wife also was musical and could play the cello. They had a little daughter, Madeline, six years old, with a wealth of gold hair.

The crash of the war swept away their home and their wealth. They fled before the Germans, and when they reached New York they were penniless, but had saved the violin and the 'cello.

Since then the husband and wife have been earning the barest kind of a living by playing in the street, accompanied by Madeline, who usually pushed a little toy cart about, into which the generous dropped pennies.

They were playing at Broadway and Sixtieth street a week ago when Mrs. Gould passed in her automobile. She was struck with the beauty of little Madeline and had the chauffeur stop. She called De Rudder to her and questioned him. That night she had the little family in her home and learned their tale of distress and their effort to support themselves in a country of which they could not speak the language. Mrs. Gould spoke with them in French and the following day verified their story at the office of the Belgian Consul General.

Mrs. Gould assisted the family financially and saw that they got a comfortably furnished apartment at No. 768 Columbus avenue. In the meantime, she was trying to get De Rudder into the Musicians' Union so that he could obtain employment in an orchestra.

De Rudder and his wife were playing their instruments in Broadway at Fifty-sixth street yesterday afternoon, when two agents of the Children's Society arrested him on a charge of improper guardianship over the child. Madeline was collecting pennies then. Mrs. De Rudder, an unusually pretty young woman, accompanied her husband to the police station and to court, and wept, when Madeline was sent to the rooms of the Children's Society.

Word was sen to Mrs. Gould and she asked the officers who made the arrest to go to her home. They did so, and she explained the case and said if De Rudder was discharged in court she would see that the offence was not repeated, and that not only Madeline but her parents would have proper care.

So when the case was called in Night Court Magistrate Groehl discharged De Rudder, Madeline was restored to them, and Mrs. Gould will make provision to-day for them until they are self-supporting.

"I was first struck by the child's beauty," she said last night, "and then her parents' honesty and willingness to work."

Mrs. Gould will not say whether she intended to adopt Madeline, but from the affection the mother showered on the child it was apparent she would not part with Madeline.

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended 'Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box, I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Quite dressy and suited only to soft materials is the costume shown in this illustration. The blouse is made with a yoke in front, deep and straight across, but without any in the back. The front yoke is cut in one with a panel which occupies the centre of the front of the waist and in which the closing is placed. The lower portion of the blouse is gathered and is quite full. The neck is open, with a standing flare collar at the back. The sleeve is plain and is in one piece. It is fitted to the arm by means of a small dart below the elbow on the outside of the arm.

The skirt of this costume is in four gores. The front gores are extended at the top to form yokes extending half way around the hips, and the material is slashed so that its greater width may be gathered in and attached to the lower edge of this yoke. In the back the yoke is entirely separate from the lower portion of the skirt, gathered and attached.

The skirt closes in front and is trimmed around the lower part by three folds of material.

This would make up handsomely in a combination of materials. For instance, the yoke and front of the waist and the yoke and front of the skirt might be of fine broadcloth, while the sides were of taffeta or of messaline or of charmeuse.

The dress pattern, No. 7,380, is cut in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 6 yards of 36 inch taffeta, 3 yard of 44 inch serge and ¼ yard of 36 inch collar material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending a request to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

GILBERT AS A WIZARD.

Curious Trieks of an Old Time Investigator of Electricity.

H. G. Wells has called attention to "The World Set Free" to a half forgotten worthy who, in "the spacious times of great Elizabeth," loomed large indeed. Science, to be sure, does not forget him, and one great English poet, Dryden, has proclaimed with resonant emphasis:

Gilbert shall live until loadstones cease to draw.

Nevertheless how many young students of electricity today ever heard of William Gilbert?

"It was Gilbert, Queen Elizabeth's court physician, who first pitched his brains with rubbed amber and bits of glass and silk and shellac," says Mr. Wells, "and so began the quickening of the human mind to the existence of this universal presence. And even then the science of electricity remained a mere little group of curious facts for 200 years, connected perhaps with magnetism—a mere guess that—perhaps with the lightning. * * * Except for the lightning conductor, it was 230 years before electricity stepped out of the cabinet of scientific curiosities into the life of the common man."

Gilbert's theories and guesses about magnetism—he concluded that the world is a vast spherical magnet—were serious and farreaching, and he embodied them in a book with a ponderous Latin title—the first great book on physics published in England. But his experiments were chiefly of the curio and plaything sort. An English collection of Elizabethan letters and anecdotes of court life quotes the opinion of a provincial young lady of quality, but recently come up to London to accept a position in the queen's household, who had witnessed some of them. She wrote home to her mother:

"The queen is now well recovered of her sickness, which was but little, tho it lookt at first as it would be greate. She puts much truste in her Doctor, one Gilbert, and soe doe her ladis for the moste parte, and I am taught at by alle but onely Lady Margaret for that I doe fear the man and his cures that they bee not such as are permitted to Xtian (Christian) folke to undergoe. I have seen him playe strange tricks, talking, for the diversion of the queen's ladis, a silke glove from one and her hodes of ambre from another and a scrappe of the writeing of her Love from another, if she have it about her and can be purswaded to give it uppe, and making the one to rumble and give forthe speckles of fyre, and the others one to pick the other appe by touching of it—and a blacke catte comeing in he rubed her that she brieled and gave forthe little fyres that daunced alonge her furre in the dark as if the wyches that love blacke cattes were stroking her back. Soche matters are of the divel and sholde not be medled with for sporte, they are not meet for good Xtians."

Poor, timid little lady! If she deemed Dr. Gilbert's tricks and cures of 300 years ago so perilous to the soul what would she have thought of the electric shocks, baths, massage and all the varied tingling, prickling, crackling and spark spitting electrical devices of our modern physicians?

Before the Toothbrush.

Before the invention of toothbrushes people used to clean their teeth with linen. This is evident from William Vaughan's "Fifteen Directions to Preserve Health," published 1602, in which the author tells those who want to keep the teeth "white and uncorrupt" that they must wash the mouth after every meal, "sleepe with the mouth somewhat open * * * and in the morning take a linnen-cloth and rub the teeth well within and without." In Vaughan's time several varieties of tooth powder were known, the recipe for one of the simplest being as follows: "Burne a piece of Corke till it looks like a Coale, then take it out of the Fyre and it will fall to ashes, wherewith rub your teeth."—London Chronicle.

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run-down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

MOTHER! YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH FROM CONSTIPATION

If Tongue is Coated, Breath Bad, Stomach Sour, Clean Liver and Bowels

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

FIRST AIR BALLOONS.

Dr. Johnson's Description of the Way They Were Inflated.

"The chemical philosophers have discovered a body (which I have forgotten, but will inquire) which dissolved by an acid emits a vapor lighter than the atmospherical air. This vapor is caught, among other means, by tying a bladder compressed upon the bottle in which the dissolution is performed.

"The vapor, rising, swells the bladder and fills it. The bladder is then tied and removed and another applied till as much of this light air is collected as is wanted. Then a large spherical case is made, and very large it must be, of the lightest matter that can be found, secured by some method like that of oiling silk against all passage of air.

"Into this are emptied all the bladders of light air, and if there is light air enough it mounts into the clouds upon the same principle as a bottle filled with water will sink in water, but a bottle filled with ether will float. It rises till it comes to air of equal tenuity with its own if wind or water does not spoil it on the way. Such, madam, is an air balloon."—From Dr. Johnson's Letter, Sept. 22, 1783, to Mrs. Thrale.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

It you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

The Thriftiest Parson.

A supreme example of thrift was the Rev. Robert Walker—the "Wonderful Walker." For the greater part of his life Walker was curate of Leuthenwaite, Cumberland, commencing there with a stipend of £5 per annum. His wife brought him a fortune of £40, and on the interest of this and his £5 annually Walker reared a family of eight. When after twenty years his stipend was raised to £17 10s. a year he contrived to save. And not only did the family "live well, though plainly," but, as he declared with justifiable pride, his children never lacked any of the accessories of life and were given an education to fit them for any rank of society, the boys, indeed, going to one of the universities.—London Standard

Sand Swept Asia.

In the arid lands of central Asia the air is reported as often laden with fine detritus, which drifts like snow around conspicuous objects and tends to bury them in a dust drift. Even when there is no apparent wind the air is described as thick with fine dust, and a yellow sediment covers everything. In Khotan this dust sometimes so obscures the sun that at midday one cannot see to read fine print without a lamp.

Where Scotland Joins England.

The width of the island of Great Britain at the point of contact between England and Scotland is about sixty miles. The river Tweed divides the Tweedstries for a few miles at the east, and the Cheviot hills serve as a boundary for the greater part of the rest of the distance.

GREAT SEAL OF CHARLES II.

Impression of One First Used by Monarch Found on State Papers.

There has just been discovered in a volume of the Clarendon State Papers at the Bodleian Library an almost perfect impression of the first Great Seal of Charles II.

The discovery, says the Bodleian Quarterly Record, supplies a gap in the series of Great Seals of England—otherwise complete except for the fourth seal of Henry VI. for French affairs—and has a special historical interest of its own. The Royal Seal of Charles I., captured at Oxford in 1646, had been defaced in Parliament that year, and its Parliamentary rival continued in sole use until the King's execution. In January, 1649, Parliament appointed a committee to take order for the framing of a new Great Seal, and in February this new Seal of the Commonwealth was brought into the House, and the old one broken up. Meanwhile the Prince of Wales, then an exile at The Hague, assumed the title of King of England and took steps to provide himself with a Great Seal of his own.

Clarendon informs us that this first Great Seal of Charles II. was lost in the defeat at Worcester, September, 1651. The British Museum charter, which was hitherto the sole evidence for its use, is dated September 18, 1649; the Bodleian example is attached to letters patent of Charles II. (on vellum) granted to Sir Edward Hyde and Francis Lord Cottington on May 10 of the same year, constituting them the King's plenipotentiaries in Spain. That it was made at The Hague is in every way probable, and it is natural to suppose that Charles II. issued orders for making a new Great Seal of England upon receiving news of his father's death.

The seal is in dark yellow wax and its diameter is exactly six inches. A portion of the obverse is missing. The impression is sharp and clear over the greater part of the surface, but there is a double imprint (due to a kind of side slip) over one side on both obverse and reverse. The obverse shows the King enthroned, wearing the mantle and collar of the Garter; the head is missing. Outside the throne are, on the dexter side a lion supporting between his forepaws a banner of St. George; on the sinister side a unicorn gorged and chained, holding a banner of St. Andrew. The reverse shows the King in Roman armor, on a prancing horse. In the field are the royal arms, encircled with an inscribed Garter; on the other side is a double rose consigned with a crown. Between the horse's legions is a lion standing.

The legend is: "Carolus II. Dei Gratia Magnae Britanniae Franciae et Hiberniae Rex Fidei Defensor."

Regimental Peculiarities.

The red and white feather worn by the Northumberland Fusiliers keeps ever green in regimental historic records the memory of the desperate fight at St. Lucia in 1778, when the men of the regiment plucked the buckles from the hats of the slain French soldiers and decorated their own with them.

The Gloucestershire Regiment enjoys the distinction of wearing the "Sphinx" on the back as well as the front of their headdress. This honor was granted to them to commemorate the gallantry of the 1st Battalion (the old 28th Foot), when Colonel Paget ordered the third or rear rank to face about, and in this way they beat off the enveloping attack of the French column at Alexandria.

The Coldstream Guards took their name from the little village of Coldstream, near the borders of Scotland. They were originally known as the Coldstreamers, which is the correct way to speak of them, and not as the Coldstreams. The regiment was first raised by Monk, the "King Maker," from among the hardy borderers, who followed him anywhere and everywhere, caring very little whether they fought for Cromwell or King Charles. When the former died Monk marched the Coldstreamers to London and restored King Charles.

How a Reprieve is Arranged.

Nominally the power of reprieve and pardon belongs to the Royal prerogative. At one time it was actively exercised by the Sovereign; but now, although the act is carried out in the Sovereign's name, and with the Royal signature, the responsibility rests entirely with the Home Secretary in England, the Lord-Lieutenant in Ireland, and the Secretary of State in Scotland.

The decision is sent to the governor of the jail, who is responsible for the man after he leaves the court, and by him it is rapidly communicated to the felon in the cell. If it be an adverse decision the news is broken to him as gently as possible. When a reprieve comes the convict is summoned to the governor's room, and when he gets that order he knows at once that his prayer has been heard. The governor may say a kind word or congratulate him; but the real business is to read out the letter of the Home Secretary to the man as he stands between two warders at the other side of the table.

Historic Inn Closed.

"The Three Pigeons," one of England's oldest and most famous inns, and the sole existing tavern of Elizabethan times, was closed a few days ago by the Middlesex Licensing Justices, in accordance with a movement inaugurated some time ago by the temperance leaders to restrict the number of licensed inns.

"The Three Pigeons" was used as a background for the low comedy scenes in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," and Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," and is alluded to in Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend." The inn, perhaps, has had more literary associations than any other English tavern.

RUSKIN IN THE KITCHEN.

How He Prepared Coffee for His Guest.

Ruskin not only preached the gospel of efficiency, says the Youth's Companion, but when the exigencies of the occasion demanded he practiced it also. In her entertaining book of reminiscences, "Thirteen Years of a Busy Woman's Life," Mrs. Alec Tweedie says that her father, Doctor Harley, a well known London physician, was a great friend of Ruskin's and often staid at Brantwood. One night Ruskin asked Doctor Harley whether he liked tea or coffee before he got up.

"A cup of tea," he replied.

"Why don't you choose coffee?"

"Well, to tell the truth, I have lived so much abroad that I don't fancy English coffee; it is generally so badly made."

His host said nothing. The next morning Doctor Harley was awakened, and a strong smell of coffee permeated the room. Turning to a servant, he asked, 'Is that my cup of tea?"

"No, sir, it is Mr. Ruskin's coffee."

"Mr. Ruskin's coffee! What do you mean?"

"The master was up early. He roasted the coffee himself, he ground the coffee himself, and he made the coffee himself, and he hopes you will like it."

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

The story runs that Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata"—always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works—was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a moment the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise—the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the tricksy elfin second part, and the glory of the close.

THE RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE IS INCREASING HOT FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Russian Troops Pressing Down From North-east Have Approached to Within Three Miles of City of Pinsk---German Attacks in West Heralded by Terrific Bombardment Ended in Failure.

THE ENEMY SUFFERING GREAT LOSSES

PETROGRAD, Jan. 25.—Russian troops pressing down from the north-east have approached to within three miles of the City of Pinsk according to despatches received here to-day.

The Germans are strengthening their positions along the Oginski Canal north of Pinsk to meet the expected Slav attack. The movement against Pinsk is an extension of the offensive launched against the Austro-Germans in the Kovel-Sarny railroad region a few weeks ago. Pinsk was occupied by the German troops under Field Marshal Von Mackensen in the Teuton drive following the capture of Warsaw. The Germans halted their eastward drive at Pinsk, and Mackensen then moved upon the Balkans. There have been no previous reports of a Russian advance on Pinsk.

PARIS (Official) Jan. 25.—The renewal of the German attacks followed a few hours after a bombardment in which more than 20,000 shells were hurled against the French positions. The Germans were first held to their trenches by a screen of fire from French field pieces and machine guns, but later emerged and by a desperate charge gained a foothold in the advanced French positions.

French troops drove them out almost immediately with a shower of hand grenades that inflicted severe losses on the enemy, the War Office stated.

The German offensive carried the enemy troops into two shell craters in the angle of the Arras-Lens road, and in the angle of Neuville-St. Vaast Thelus road it was also admitted.

These positions were subsequently recaptured by the French. The fighting all along this front continues.

LONDON, Jan. 25. Four hundred revolvers consigned to a firm at Amsterdam were taken off the Holland-Lloyd liner Gelria bound from South American ports. Fifteen cases of copper, brass and aluminum fillings have been taken off the Swedish steamer Urna from New York to Scandinavian ports.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Two German aeroplanes bombarded the French seaport town of Dunkirk at six o'clock this morning, the Admiralty announced.

Two hours later a German aviator was shot down a British airman at Nieuport, several miles from Dunkirk on the sea coast.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—It is believed here that the four German raids on English Channel ports in forty-eight hours, and the bombing of numerous villages behind the French lines, marks the inauguration of a new and vigorous Teuton campaign from the air. The British and French aviators' corps are ready to meet it, however.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—That Germany's representatives in Washington realize the new note is not satisfactory to the Government here was frankly declared at the Embassy.

It is Germany's last word, however, said one German official. He said he did not see how Germany can go any further.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—That an unsatisfactory rather than satisfactory turn has been given the Lusitania negotiations by Germany's latest note was indicated at the White House to-day, where it was stated that the printed forecasts showing complete concession to the United States demands were "unjustified by the facts." It was revealed that the note was delivered to Secretary of State Lansing by Ambassador Bernstorff Saturday, and by Lansing to President Wilson yesterday. The latter to-day placed it before his Cabinet.

The most important features of the note according to the stories which the State Department is said to object, are those telling that Germany has refrained from mentioning her warnings to United States citizens to stay off the Lusitania, and her modification of her refusal to concede wrong-doing on the part of the submarine commander.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Diplomatic problems between Europe's warring powers and the United States multiplied to-day.

The Administration has practically drafted a protest to England opposing British restrictions upon American commerce in its act prohibiting trading with the enemy.

The representations will go forward to Ambassador Page within a few days. Britain is to be told in vigorous and unequivocal terms that this Government will not recognise as legal the British law disturbing commercial relations of American firms or corporations which have German interests.

As a contrast to protests to Britain, the State Department to-day approached a final settlement of the Lusitania incident with Germany. Germany probably will again point out its pledges of future conduct of submarine warfare as an implied disavowal of the Lusitania's sinking.

The Administration also took steps to-day to secure from Turkey any information regarding the sinking of the British liner Persia.

If Turkey disclaims responsibility the Persia incident will be closed.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Thousands of Armenians, driven into the deserts of Syria and Mesopotamia, are dying of starvation and exposure, James Bryce, former Ambassador to the United States, declared in a statement issued to-day.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—There is more danger of war with Britain than with Germany, Republican Leader Mann to-day declared in a speech announcing he would support the preparedness legislation and raise an army of a million men.

MADRID, Jan. 25.—General Welter, 77, ex-Governor of Cuba, has been appointed head of the General Staff to reorganize the Spanish army.

PARIS, Jan 25.—German troops penetrated advanced French trenches in their new offensive movement near the mouth of the Yser, the French War Office admitted this afternoon. It was stated that the enemy was later driven out.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Dominion liner Norseman has been sunk by a submarine according to a Liverpool despatch to the Exchange Telegraph.

The Norseman is a 10,750 ton steel screw steamer, owned by the British and North Atlantic Steamship Co. of Liverpool, and flies the British flag.

She has been in service in the Atlantic, and presumably was sunk in the waters around the British Isles.

If this presumption is correct she is the largest liner, excepting the Lusitania and Arabic, sunk in British waters by a submarine.

C.P.R. OFFICIALS SEEK CO-OPERATION OF THE AUTHORITIES

They Complain of the Amount of Trespassing That Occurs on the Company's Tracks Within the Limits of Peterboro'—A Dangerous Practice

THE DEATH ROLL

Mr. J. P. Arundel, General Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and Mr. W. J. Uren, Superintendent, were in the city last evening. Their mission was to interview His Worship Mayor Duffus and Alderman J. Edgar, chairman of the Committee on Railways, concerning the question of trespassing on the company's tracks within the city. The railway officials claim there has been considerable trespassing at different points, and especially on the tracks west of Chamberlen street, and on the bridge crossing the Otonabee river.

Dangerous Practice.

Mr. Arundel pointed out that this is a very dangerous practice. In 1914, four hundred and ninety-three persons were killed while trespassing on railway tracks, while in 1915 ninety-five persons met death on the C. P.R. alone, as a result of this evil. The officials invited the co-operation of the civic authorities in preventing this practice. The law could be resorted to but this the officials did not wish to do. They felt that if the people understood the circumstances they would lend their co-operation to the elimination of this dangerous practice. Mayor Duffus promised the co-operation of the Council and any other civic body that might be interested in a movement to mitigate the evil.

NO SKATING TO-NIGHT AT BROCK ST. RINK

Owing to the continued soft weather the ice at Brock Street rink is covered with water. It was intended that the 93rd Battalion Band would present a good programme of music this evening but the weather has upset these arrangements. However, if it is colder this crack Band will be on hand to-morrow night.

Harry Lauder's Appeal

If there are any young men here who have not awakened to a sense of their responsibility to the Empire in the present crisis, I would like to earnestly point out to them that there is a place for them in the ranks of the British brigade. If they do not respond now they should realize that they will be scoffed at and sneered at when the war is over. And if when they are old the bairn on their knees asks about their share in the great war, I leave to themselves to say what the answer will be.—Harry Lauder at the Grand.

If Their Hands Are Clear They Will Grant an Inquiry Into the Canadian Shell Contracting Says Ottawa Paper

SIR SAM TO SPEAK

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.— The responsibility of deciding for or against parliamentary investigation of the Canadian shell contracting, says the Ottawa Citizen this morning, will rest with the Dominion government. They will grant an inquiry if their hands are clean and if they are concerned only with serving the National and Imperial interests, but if the Dominion leaders are conscious of being parties to guilt profiteering, or if they are concerned more with protecting their patrons than with saving the nation and empire they will [illegible] by word splitting and equivocation and mental reservation of shirking their duty. It is stated to-day that Premier Borden will not speak further on the debate and that the task of winding up the case for the government will be entrusted to Major General Sir Sam Hughes. The Minister is not expected to speak until to-morrow, however, and in the meantime Frank Carvell of Carleton, will further supplement the Opposition's demands for an investigation into the shell contracts by a comprehensive speech on the subject this afternoon.

Sanitary Inspector Finds Very Little Response and Improvement After Month's Operation

ASKS FOR CO-OPERATION

Sanitary Inspector Spence was discovered in the south end yesterday with a "what-do-you-know-about-that" look of disappointment written all over him as he realized the slight progress that had been made in the Augean task of cleaning up certain sections in that district. The garbage collection system was extended over the entire south ward with the beginning of the new year. Notices were left at every home announcing the collection days, but in a great number of cases there has been absolutely no response from the citizens. Some said they did not know the system was in operation on their streets, others said they had not seen the notices, ashes were being dumped in back yards as per usual, only a few had procured garbage cans or even boxes, and the receptacles put out for the collectors were conspicuous in their isolation. Some of the stores had made no effort to dispose of their refuse which they were piling with ashes in the yards. Several offending lanes which have long been a problem to the health officer showed no improvement. On Romaine street one house, for instances, was dumping its ashes on the roadside in front according to the stone age idea of the city beautiful. No wonder the Sanitary Inspector was peeved.

The accustomed practice of waiting until spring suns have dried up the yards to put them in order, and to dispose of the winter's accumulation of ashes, tin cans and other rubbish, apparently dies hard; but the citizens are asked to realize that they can obviate the annual clean-up by the regular collection of refuse and ashes. They are paying for this service which will make for a cleaner, tidier and healthier city, if everyone co-operates.

THE WEATHER

Some exceptionally fine weather has been experienced of late for the middle of a Canadian winter, and the weather conditions have been much more like the latter part of March than the last week in January. Each day the thermometer has risen to the neighborhood of 40 degrees in the shade. Weather conditions in the west, however, have been quite severe, and the whole country has been in the grip of zero temperatures.—W. P.

93rd to Parade $ Day

The Local Battalion Will Be Out Both Morning and Afternoon

The 93rd intend to give the big Dollar Day Crowd a chance to see them, and possibly add a few Dollar Day recruits to their number. The Battalion will parade at full strength accompanied by the band, both morning and afternoon. All who have friends in the ranks will have this opportunity to see how fine and noble the boys look in khaki, and it is to be hoped that some who notice vacancies there will offer themselves to help bring the battalion up to its full strength.

The martial music and military effect will be an added attraction for Dollar Day, and should help keep the enthusiasm at highest pitch.

People are already making their estimates, basing their figures on the number of blanks that were used two years ago, and the present condition of trade.

USELESS INFORMATION.

Dr. Edwards, the Conservative member for Frontenac, has placed on the "order table" of the Commons questions, asking for the birthplace and nationalities and religion of all the 200,000 Canadians who have enlisted. Such questions and their answers have several objectionable features. Time will be wasted and money wasted in compiling the statistics involved The information, when got, will be useless if not mischievous.

We are not rude enough to look the gift horse in the mouth; and we must not institute comparisons in the gift of service that Canadians have offered to the cause of Empire. What we want is unity of sentiment and purpose, and what we want, above all, is recruits, no matter what their racial origin or religious creed. So long as they are as good Canadian, as superb fighters, as all Canadians are, who have joined the ranks and come under the fire test of actual battle. We must do nothing that will interfere with unity of sentiment and effort. Getting parliamentary returns of the nationality and religion of Canadian recruits, will not only be useless information, but information possessing possibilities of evil results. Get the recruits; that's the main business.

OUR HEALTH DEBT TO SCIENCE.

Time was in the remembrance of many of us when the importance of science in the everyday affairs of life was ignored or scoffed at. There are still living farmers who scoff at what they call "scientific farming," yet today farming in all its branches owes its standing and success to the discoveries and applications of science. Science has given us the complex and numberless conveniences of domestic and civil life—like the telephone, the telegraph and the infinite variety of domestic conveniences we owe to electricity. We can't turn about but we encounter some of the conveniences, and, indeed, positive blessings, we owe to science.

In no domain has humanity benefitted more largely than in that of medical and surgical scientific research, and accomplishment. Some of us can remember when the medical art was simple and crude; when bloodletting and emetics and drastic cathartics were the fate of the unfortunate patient who called in a doctor.

Nowadays, however, medical science has made immense advances. It is true that there is still a good deal of the hazy and empirical and hypothetical about the healing art; the doctors in a good many things are still groping in the dark, and sometimes pass us along the dark way beyond the bourne, where, to our human eyes, there is still darkness. But the healing art, especially the surgical side, where triumphs of operation are now almost as marvellous as St. Peter healing the cripple at the gate of the temple called Beautiful.

But perhaps the greatest triumphs of science applied to healing research have been in the more important art of prevention of disease, and the recognition of preventive responsibility in respect of dealing with disease and promotion of the public health. A few years ago governments kept setadily to the hum-drum work of collecting revenue and spending it, troubling themselves little as to how the people sickened and died, or how they were healed or helped out of the world. Now we have governments alert to look after the health of the people. We have in every government a health department, theoretically and practically devoted to the prevention of disease, the promotion of sanitary benefits in guard of the health of the public.

Our own Provincial Board of Health has done much and is doing much in cooperation with local boards and of its own motion to safeguard the public health and prevent disease. There are half a dozen diseases once as obscure and cloudy as to our knowledge of them as the nebular hypothesis. Medical science has so far mastered these diseases as to provide each with an antidote or anti-toxin, a preventive serum. And the government has beneficently extended the area of paternalism, in no case more justifiable, and beneficent than in the matter of dealing with disease.

The Provincial Board of Health announces that on and after Feb. 1st the public will be supplied— absolutely, free of charge—through local boards of health and medical officers, with half a dozen biological products—prophylactics against the several diseases specified. The following is the official list of free anti-toxins, etc:

Smallpox vaccine (in capillary tubes.)
Diphtheria antitoxin (in vials).
Tetanus antitoxin (in vials).
Anti-meningitis serum (in vials.)
Anti-typhoid vaccine (in vials.)
Pasteur preventive treatment (free) for rabies (at the Laboratories of the Board, No. 5 Queen's Park, Toronto).

The announcement to the above effect is made by Dr. McCullough, Chief Officer of Health, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. The Provincial Board of Health is undertaking this work with the object, and in the hope, of lowering the death rate and reducing the morbidity of, and mortality from, communicable diseases, that can be influenced by the use of the products mentioned; and the hope is expressed that every physician of the province, will, as required, cooperate with the Provincial Board of Health by prompt notification of all communicable diseases.

In this relation it is unfortunately true that there is opportunity for much improvement — locally and throughout the province. There are many physicians careless as to reporting communicable diseases, and the unfortunate results are not lessened by popular ignorance and prejudice that lead to the concealment rather than reporting of such diseases. In this respect there is much to be done in the way of education, as to facts and improvement in methods. Officers of Health are not always fortunate in their dealings with the people in these matters; and there is sometimes a failure to forget autocratic methods in dealing with the public in such matters, and substitute the more diplomatic and reasonable—and reasoning—methods, which every physician as a gentleman is expected to employ. In the one case, we arouse antagonism and defeat purpose; in the other we secure, at least, passive acquiescence, with far greater prospects of success.

If we recognize the importance and value of scientific research in dealing with health interests, we should also recognize the necessity of enlarging the receptivity of the public mind as to their importance, and as to the wisdom and necessity of cooperation. We see and know and feel the effects of disease in our homes and in our persons; we would get a new sense of responsibility if to this knowledge we added a recognition of the importance of prevention, and of our duty to cooperate with, and not antagonize the agencies that are working to preserve the only condition that makes life worth while—health.

LIBERAL POLICIES ENDORSED.

Some of the leading policies of Mr. Rowell and the Ontario Provincial Liberal Party are endorsed in the recommendations of the Government Commission on Unemployment made public this week. They suggest, for example, the establishment of a Department of Labor. One of the Liberal planks in 1914 was "The creation of a Department of Labor to study and promote legislative and administrative action for the betterment of conditions of the workers." This proposal had been rejected by the Government in the Legislature. The Commission also advocates the appointment of a Provincial Labor Commission. This was a Liberal proposal rejected by the Government in the House. Another clause in the report of this Government Commission urges the advisability of tax reform. This has been a leading policy of the Liberals for seven years. The Government has rejected time after time Liberal proposals for tax reform. The Commission also recognizes what the Liberals have contended for years, the unfavorable influence of the liquor traffic on social reform progress As a matter of fact, consideration of the whole problem of unemployment was unduly delayed by the rejection on the part of the Ontario Government of a Liberal proposal in the Session of 1914 that the whole problem should be thoroughly investigated.—Montreal Herald.

THEY COME FROM THE ENDS OF THE EARTH TO SERVE THE EMPIRE IN HER NEED

That the Germans calculated on our Colonies, at any rate, partly failing us in regard to munitions and men is an undisputed fact, and it must be with the greatest chagrin that they read that Canada alone will contribute in a very short time 250,000 men and Australia 150,000—a wonderful testimony to the patriotic spirit which binds them to the Motherland, says London Tit-Bits.

From all outposts of the Empire men hastened to shoulder a rifle when war alarms sounded, giving up lucrative posts and in some cases travelling thousands of miles to the nearest recruiting station in order that they might "do their bit" for the old country. Perhaps the most remarkable instance of recruiting is that afforded by the case of Johnston, who worked for the Hudson Bay Company among the Eskimos, and who was so isolated from the rest of the world that he did not hear of the war until August of 1915. When he did so, he at once decided to come back to the old country and answer the call for men. A few days ago he reached his home in Edinburgh, and has now enlisted.

From the South Sea Islands.

Many thousands of miles, too, were travelled by a Scottish ship's captain, who, a few weeks ago, presented himself at the Newcastle office for enlistment in the Tyneside Scottish Brigade. This captain was the owner of the schooner trading among the South Sea Islands, and, leaving his wife and his possessions in the Pacific, he travelled home via Japan and Russia to enlist.

There is a man in the Canadian contingent at Shorncliffe who walked all the way from Alaska to enlist, at Winnipeg. When he got there he was turned down for flat feet! Then he tramped on to Toronto, and there he was more successful. A well-known Fleet Street newspaper man was prospecting near the Yukon, and, although middle-aged and married, he at once travelled post-haste back to this country to enter the Flying Corps, and has since won his commission.

Private E. Card, one of General Botha's victorious army, who has since come to this country, is a wonderful example of patriotism to faint-hearted slackers. He gave up a post of manager in one of the biggest stores in South Africa, which was worth £2,000 a year, to join the army and receive a shilling a day.

Refused to Be Rejected.

An extraordinary case was that of Charles Davies, the younger son of Mr. Davies, the parish clerk at Bangor, who at the outbreak of the war enlisted in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. He was discharged owing to a physical defect. Not to be daunted, he enlisted in the R.A.M.C., and was again discharged. Not discouraged, he entered a Liverpool hospital and underwent a serious operation. After leaving the hospital, his legs were encased in plaster and irons for several weeks, but he ultimately succeeded in enlisting in the West Lancashire R.A.M.C.

Instances of this kind can be multiplied indefinitely. One man came over from South Africa who had lately been accepted after twenty-two attempts to join; another underwent a painful operation; a third went in for a course of physical training so that his chest measurement should be increased to the stipulated number of inches, which proves that the call to the old flag is irresistible to the men who form the backbone of the Empire.

HOW TAXING STRONG DRINK HAS LESSENED CONSUMPTION

Whisky, for once in a long time, has escaped the heavy hand of the Chancellor but in all probability it is an Exchequer nest egg thumb-marked for another occasion which cannot be far away. In truth whisky has long been a veritable scapegoat of taxation, a Chancellor's friend, ready and willing to shoulder the heaviest burdens.

Fifteen years ago there were 11 distilleries in England, 143 in Scotland, and 28 in Ireland—a total of 182. Last year the numbers were 7 in England, 120 in Scotland, and 26 in Ireland—a drop of 30—and a considerable proportion of these are now only distilleries in name, for they have temporarily closed their doors. This falling-off is, of course, largely due to the ever-increasing burden of taxation whisky has been saddled with, yet a strange feature to the observant man is that the quantities of spirits actually distilled have been on the increase during the past half-dozen years. The growing imposts and restrictions have, until lately at least, not decreased the revenue; but they certainly have had the effect of driving the small distiller to the wall. The whisky distilled in the British Isles for the twelve months prior to the war was the largest quantity since the year 1900, being 24 million gallons for Scotland, 12 -12 for England, and nearly 10 millions for Ireland.

Scotland's Overplus.

A still more notable comparison is obtained from a scrutiny of the blended spirit stocks, which bear but a small relation to the quantities annually distilled. It has been a peculiarity of the liquor trade for many years back that if not a drop of spirits were distilled for a period of four or five years there would still be ample for all normal demands, the bonded stocks being so colossal. Twenty years ago there were 70 million gallons of whisky in Scotland as against 111 million a year ago; but of the latter huge total—which, by the way, is more than half the entire whisky in these islands—only 24 million gallons were removed from bond, and this aggregate, too, is well over the normal. The overplus of spirit is much more marked in Scotland than in Ireland, where for the past ten years considerably more whisky has been consumed than distilled, and the same may be almost said of England, in which country the bonded spirits of recent years have never at any one time equalled the amount annually distilled.

It is at once apparent from these figures that the full force of any government blow launched at whisky is felt first and foremost in Scotland. The fame of the "neat-reak" of Auld Scotia is eloquently shown by the remarkable increase in the quantities of whisky set abroad. Almost exactly 3 1-2 million gallons in 1894, the exports have steadily increased year by year until the high-water mark of 10 million gallons was reached.

Decreased Home Consumption.

These growing shipments have been a saving clause for the distiller, as, despite all the talk of increased drunkenness, the consumption of whisky in all three countries has shown a most decided diminution for several years back. Let us just pause to compare the red letter whisky year of 1900 with a twelvemonth ago. England received in 1900 for consumption roughly 25 1-2 million gallons, Scotland fully eight, and Ireland 4 3-4 as against 17 5 3-4 and 2 1-2 million gallons during the latter period—in other words, a drop of 13 1-2 million gallons in 15 years.

It is idle in view of these statistics to asseverate, as many people do, that you cannot discourage hard drinking by legislation. Why, following upon the 3s 9d per gallon of increased duty put on spirits by Mr. Lloyd George six years ago, the amount of drink consumed in these islands fell from 32 to 21 million gallons, while the revenue from it dropped 3 million sterling, or 3 1-2 million less than the Budget estimates for that year.

The rise in whisky taxation is a remarkable one. Seventy years ago the duty was 3s 4d per gallon. Gladstone, in his three years' Chancellorship, raised it in successive years to 6s, and sixty years later added another 1s 11d. The next Radical Chancellor clapped on 2s, making the duty 12s. Five years of Unionist Government saw it fluctuate between 10s and 11s, and then came the famous 3s 9d increase of Mr. Lloyd George, bringing the duty up to the record figure of 15s 9d.—Glasgow Weekly Herald.

A CRITICISM OF "UNANIMITY'S" ARGUMENT

Mr. Editor,—It is not often that I intrude on your space, but I crave to-day, the privilege of a few lines in regard to the bit of hypocritical slander that appeared in your issue of last night over the signature "Unanimity." Why did the writer not sign his other name, if he has one? Is it not a good name? Is it that his methods conform to those of the traffic he champions, and are better kept in the dark? Or, perhaps, it is that if his identity were revealed, there might appear the cloven-foot of the traffic itself.

With whining dishonesty, the writer pleads for unity while the business he represents is the most potent cause of disunion in the empire at the present time. Unity for what? That he and his friends may be allowed to go on in security degrading the manhood of the nation, robbing women and children of their right to comfort, happiness, and even to life itself, filling our homes of refuge, prisons, and mad-houses with their victims, and sapping the efficiency and resources of the whole people. The unity our friends want corresponds exactly to that which would permit the highwayman to stalk unmolested through the land because putting a stop to him would cause disunion.

Your correspondent's reference to givings for missions is peculiarly unfortunate. Let me point out to him that while one of the great Protestant Churches of the country, of whose operations I happen to have some knowledge, has been struggling to raise its total contributions for beneficent and missionary purposes to a million and a half dollars, the liquor business has been filching from the pockets of the people of Canada no less than a hundred millions a year. Not only so but a considerable proportion of the million and a half, and many times as much from other sources, has gone to try and repair some of the ruin and disaster wrought by "Unanimity" and his friends. It is too bad that the deluded people of this country will continue to give four or five millions a year for the purpose of Christianizing the heathen, trying to make Canadian citizens of our own foreign population, and relieving the distress generally, when they could just as easily give it to the liquor dealer and enable "The Trade" to boost its receipts to a hundred and five millions.

One is almost appalled at the effrontery of a business which will take from the people of the country a toll almost equal to what the war is costing us both in money and lives, and then set up a hidden tool like your correspondent to slander the people who are striving to right some of the wrongs they are perpetrating.

Thanking you for so much of your valuable space, I am,

Sincerely yours,
RICHARD LEES.

Mother's Cough!

It distresses you as much as her! Why continue to treat it by dosing the stomach (which is not ailing) with cough mixtures, syrups, tonics, and the like? You will never cure lung troubles by dosing the stomach. The Peps way is entirely different. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach—which is not ailing.

Peps contain no morphia, laudanum, nor any of the poisons which are found in many of the old-fashioned syrups. Peps are, therefore, best for aged people and for young children. Peps do not disorder the stomach; they sweeten the breath, are pleasant to take, and are the latest and best that science can offer for the treatment of coughs, colds, bronchitis and allied lung troubles. 50c. all druggists and stores, or fo.' price from Peps Co., Toronto. London Short of House Servants

LONDON, January 24.—As these months of war thus pass one cannot fail to notice how women in London are steadily giving up the domestic side of life, the sphere of work to which they are particularly well suited, and in ever increasing numbers are seeking employment along totally different lines.

Again, numbers of women write for advice and help in obtaining work who admit that they have had no training in any settled occupation, and though they may be accustomed to housework steadily refuse to offer their services in any capacity as domestic workers, though such posts are to be obtained on all sides. It is not work, excitement—anything for a change—that is wanted, and the demand is rapidly leading to a block in the market and a confusion that will be most difficult to rearrange.

The problems of domestic service become more acute every day. Wages are raised, every inducement is offered, but the women and girls deliberately shun such posts. The dearth of servants is a question that requires looking into and one finds that on all sides girls are leaving good homes, where they are well paid, well fed, and well housed, to take positions that, though apparently attractive really entail far harder work and many disadvantages.

Here, for instance, is a typical case. Ann is housemaid in a private hotel, receiving $1.75 weekly, an average of $1.25 weekly in tips, food, housing, washing and regular outings. She leaves to accept a post as elevator girl in a large store at $7.50 weekly, considering that she has "bettered herself." Out of this $7.50 she must feed, house and keep herself, pay her fares to and from her work and stand on her feet for hours every day. In a month's time she will probably realize that her first situation was far and away more profitable but just at present she is too full of enthusiasm for her new duties to see this point of view. If only women would realize these facts there would be less discontent to deal with in London.

Chicago Robber Kills Policeman In Busy Street

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 25.—A bandit, accompanied by a woman, robbed the tourist agency of Thomas A. Cook & Son of $900 this afternoon, wounded the cashier, killed a policeman and escaped.

According to the police, the deed was the most daring of years in this city. It was accomplished in one of the busiest streets of the downtown district at an hour when the thoroughfare was congested with automobiles and workers on their way home.

The woman did not participate in the actual robbery. She ordered a taxicab at the Great Northern Hotel, and John McCabe, of the Fay company, responded. The woman instructed him to drive to No. 15 East Jackson street, the Cook offices. There she waited without alighting.

Meanwhile the robber had entered the offices, The cashier, Ernest L. Walsh, attempted to reach a pistol, but was shot and painfully injured and backed into a vault with four other employes.

B. A. Johnson, a traffic policeman, was attracted to the scene, but found that the bandit had locked the door after entering. Johnson was trying to force an entrance when the robber suddenly threw it open and fired a bullet into Johnson's heart.

He scattered the throng on the sidewalk and leaned toward the taxicab. Pointing his pistol at McCabe, the robber ordered him to drive away, but McCabe jumped. The bandit hesitated a second and then sped up an alley. The woman followed. She gazed for a moment at the face of the dead policeman, and, according to witnesses, seemed about to faint, but recovered and disappeared in the crowd. McCabe was interviewed at Police Headquarters and allowed to return to work. The police were satisfied of his innocence.

The Cook offices adjoin one of the largest department stores in Chicago, and the robbery and shooting took place at a time when hundreds of women shoppers were starting for home.

In the opinion of Herman Schuettler, First Deputy Chief of Police, the robbery was carefully arranged, but was weak in one point. The fact that McCabe declined to start the motor, Schuettler said, probably saved the fugitive from capture.

"Jackson street is the main east and west automobile thoroughfare of the city," he explained. "At the hour of the crime—five o'clock—it is invariably congested with motor cars from the west side and from intersecting streets down town. The taxicab could not have gone many yards without being halted by other machines, the dense procession of persons on their way home or the street cars.

"The arrival of the woman was timed nicely, and, in fact, all the details seem to have been worked out cleverly. They were lucky McCabe didn't do what was expected of him."

Many witnesses called at the Detective Bureau with descriptions of the fugitive. Several of them said they saw a remarkable resemblance between a photograph of one William La Trasse and the robber. La Trasse, it is said, was known also as George Whiting, and as William Vandolah La Trasse was sentenced in 1913 to serve twenty-one years in the Kansas Penitentiary for robbery. He escaped November 22 last. He is about thirty-five years old.

The crowd attracted by the tragedy blocked all traffic on State and Jackson streets for some time. A few attempted to pursue the bandit, but soon gave it up.

"A Beggarly Lot, Sir, Senators Eating On $7 a Day" Say Henri

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—"Well, sir, if you ask me, sir, I should say, sir, that those Senators of that committee, sir, were a pretty cheap lot, sir," said Henri, as he glanced over a published copy of the restaurant bill of the Thompson Legislative Investigating Committee at the Biltmore Hotel, which bills have been criticized as being extravagant.

"Why, sir," continued Henri, "those bills show that the gentlemen only spent a mere seven dollars a day for their food, and that included both breakfast and dinner, sir, and I'd like to ask you, sir, how a man who knows anything about ordering a meal can live on seven dollars a day? It's all right, of course, sir, if a gentleman is dieting and trying to reduce his weight to get along on seven dollars a day for his breakfast and dinner, but for a healthy gentleman, and a Senator at that, sir, to economize in that way is all wrong"

Henri is one of the most intelligent waiters in New York and has nay years of experience in the finest hostleries so that he knows whereof he speaks on matters gastronomical.

"Now, we'll take an ordinary breakfast, for instance, sir," Henri continued. "The gentleman will begin with, say, compote de fraises Wiesbaden, fifty cents; then a cereal avec creme, thirty cents; then omelette aux clovisses, fifty cents, then a bit of fish, say basse rayee, fifty cents; then perhaps a poussin grille, $1.25, and pommes de terre hachees a la creme, twenty cents and un pot de cafe avec creme, 35 cents, and a bottle of Appollinaris, forty cents. That is a fairly good breakfast sir, and that comes to just—let me see, sir—yes, just $4. That is for breakfast alone, sir.

"Now, take dinner, sir, for you say they lunched elsewhere. Very well, sir, I'll just run over a dinner such as any gentleman with a good appetite would be glad to have served him at a hotel like the Biltmore, sir. We'll begin with a lobster cocktail, say. Kindly jot them down, sir, as I go along. Cocktail d'homard, sixty cents; caviar special, $1.25; potage torture verte ou Xeres, sixty cents; terapene, $1.75; ris de veau sous-cloche, Ideal, $1.25; chapon, 85; canard mallard, $4; asperges verte de serre, $1.25; artichaut, sauce Hollandaise, fifty cents; pois nouveaux, fifty cents; pommes de terre Parisienne, thirty cents; salade Biltmore, sixty cents, fraises Melba, sixty cents; fromage creme au Barle-Duc, forty-five cents; melon cassaba, fifty cents; cafe special, twenty-five cents, and Apollinaris, forty cents. Now, will you please add that up, sir? How much, sir? I forgot the wine. But, leaving that out, sir, it is quite a nice little dinner, as it is for a tired Senator after a hard day's work in the city, sir.

"So you see, sir, that an ordinary breakfast and a fairly decent dinner, sir, will come to $23.80 without wine and without cigars and not counting the proper tip, sir, which should add, say ten per cent. sir. And you say that they call $7 a day at the Biltmore extravagant living for a Senator, sir? I call it beggarly, sir, beggarly. Thirty dollars a day for the two meals would not be a bit too much, sir, counting everything a Senator should have—and yet, you say, they only spent seven. Take my word for it, sir, they were a poor lot—probably from the country, sir, and didn't know how to live in the city, sir. Yes, sir. Thank you very much sir."

Eugene D. Miller, auditor of the Biltmore Hotel, was not in the least perturbed yesterday about the charges of Assemblyman R. Hunter McQuinston that the hotel had charged for a room he did not occupy and meals he did not eat while he was serving on Senator Thompson's committee.

The bill was rendered in the regular manner," said Mr. Miller. It went to the chairman of the committee, Mr. Thompson, and he looked it over and checked it up and O k'd it. In the course of time the hotel was paid and the various accounts from which the statements were drawn were destroyed. We destroy all checks two months after payment. If we didn't we'd need another building as big as the hotel to store them in.

"The charges were made for the services rendered. If Mr. McQuinston never slept here. I cannot help it. He must have been registered here and must have had the room held for him, of he wouldn't have been charged for it."

It was the general opinion at the Biltmore Hotel yesterday that the committeemen had not been extravagant in their living, and that $7 a day was evidence that they lived moderately. Of course, it was said, there are cheaper restaurants in the city than that at the Biltmore but one would not expect a Senator, State or national, to go to places where he could get three sinkers and a cup of coffee for ten cents, and let it go at that.

Park Elephant Too Wild For Her

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—There's another wild elephant in Bronx Park! And, what is worse, the New York Zoological Society is accused of using the broncho-pachyderm as a 'common carrier.' Details of a wild ride on the beast were told yesterday in a complaint filed in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Lillie Gee, of No. 116 West 136th street, who says that she was so "sick, sore and disabled" as a result of it that she wants the society to pay $20,000 to her.

Mrs. Gee alleges that on the afternoon of August 8, 1915, she went to the park and there saw the elephant which was carrying passengers for "pay." "It was the duty of the defendant to provide the plaintiff with a safe place to ride on," she alleges in her complaint, "and the said animal should have been docile in all respects and under the defendant's control, and that proper and efficient guards and attendants should have been provided for the plaintiff's safety."

That's what she said should have been done, but what happened, according to her complaint, is set forth as follows:—"Plaintiff was sitting as a passenger upon the back of said elephant, seven or eight feet from the ground, when, through the carelessness and negligence of the defendant's employes, the elephant ran swiftly and violently around the enclosure or fence and then started to enter the elephant house, one door of which was closed, and the enclosure was so small that had plaintiff remained on the back of the elephant she would have been cut to pieces and trampled under the telephant's feet. The plaintiff leaped and fell to the road, sustaining personal bodily injuries." Further on in the complaint Mrs. Gee says that she was urged to jump by the society's employes.

There was a report that the elephant's strange antics were caused by a mosquito which succeeded in getting inside his trunk and biting him, but that was denied in the office of Mrs. Gee's attorney, Charles I. Engel, of No. 309 Broadway.

Niles and Johnson, attorneys for the society, entered a general denial of all of Mrs. Gee's allegations.

War Prisoners Are Tortured

BERNE, January 24.—Evidence accumulates that the Austrians are learning frightfulness from their Prussian masters. A number of Russian prisoners, captured by the Austrians in Galicia and removed some time ago to the neighborhood of Gorizia to dig trenches for the Austrian troops opposing [illegible] of international conventions governing the treatment of prisoners of war), succeeded in escaping and reaching the Italian lines. They have sworn information about their treatment by the Austrians, and admissions made by an Austrian cadet who fell into the hands of the Italians, confirm the story.

Many of the Russian prisoners refused to dig trenches for their captors, whereupon they were subjected to cruel tortures. They were deprived of food for several days consecutively; they were beaten; they were tied to posts; they were suspended from trees by ropes passed beneath their arms and around their wrists. Sergeant Alexander Sergieff, of the 27th Russian infantry regiment, declares that the Austrian General Hoffmann interrogated a number of Russian prisoners while they were hanging from trees in this way. The General asked them if they persisted in refusing to dig trenches and those who [illegible] were thrashed as they swung helpless and at the mercy of their tormentors.

Most of the Russians who escaped into the Italian lines were eye witnesses of the barbarous execution of four of their comrades by the Austrians. One hundred and fifty Russian prisoners simultaneously protested in spite of all punishments, and threats in refusing to dig trenches for the Austrians. Four of them were condemned to death as a warning to the others. Young Austrian cadets were assigned to the duty of executing them. This is the part of the Russians' statements confirmed by the Austrian cadet in Italian captivity. The execution took place and all the other Russian prisoners were compelled to be present at the scene of the butchery.

An Irish recruit was being drilled in the mysteries of sword-play.

"Now, cried the instructor, after carefully explaining various rules of fence, "what would you do if your opponent feinted.

"Begora, sir," answered the Irishman, winking knowingly, "I'd jest prod him wid the point o' me sword to see if he was shammin'."

Board of Health Wants Supply Of Pure Ice For Domestic Uses

Will Interview Allin Ice Company —Little Lake Supply Suitable Only for Cooling Purposes—Tenders For Queen Mary Hospital Ice.

The cutting of ice for domestic purposes is a perennial problem for the Board of Health. It showed its head again at a special meeting held yesterday afternoon and the discussion rambled from the practical to the purely academic, concluding with a drawn debate on the question whether freezing killed germs. The Board demands that ice used in water pitchers in homes, in restaurants and hotels, should be free from the contamination of sewage. Hence this ice must be cut from the river where the water is considered the purest. The Board consigned this question to Dr. Amys and Mr. Spence who are to interview Mr. Allin and find out in what localities he is now cutting ice.

It is known that operations are under way in the Little Lake, but this is ice for general cooling purposes. The Board desires to protect the citizens by obtaining a purer supply than this. Mr. Spence stated that the sewage from the Auburn Mills, Quaker Oats Co., private sources, etc., flowed into the lake and the water was unsafe. Moreover, ice for domestic uses would also be unsafe.

Ex-mayor Buller did not wish to put any extra burdens on the citizens and suggested that the problem be carefully considered.

Mr. Spence said that he was not worrying much about the ice. He did not think much difference would result from securing two qualities. It was stated in prominent medical journals that freezing killed the bacilli in water.

Dr. Amys disagreed with this statement, remarking that there were all kinds of opinions. He had been taught that boiling killed germs but freezing merely arrested their activity.

Mr. Buller—You must have gone to the wrong school.

In this strain the Board rambled along.

TENDERS FOR ICE.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Mr. Murty that tenders be called for ice to be supplied to the Queen Mary Hospital by March 1st, the tenders to be received before Feb. 5th.

ORDER FREE ANTI-TOXINS

On the suggestion of Dr. Amys it was decided to secure a supply of diphtheria and tetanus anti-toxins, the Pasteur treatment for rabies, anti-menegitis serum and small-pox vaccine. This is supplied free by the Provincial Board of Health.

Dr. Amys stated that not long ago he ordered a small quantity of diphtheria anti-toxin that cost then $8, and anti-menegitis serum for two patients that cost $50. This, he stated, indicated the saving that will accrue to the people of this province in the future.

Ald. Duncan presided, with Dr. Amys, Mayor Duffus, Mr. W. H. Buller, James Murty and Mr. Spence present.

Father Said To Be in Flight When Son Killed Him

CORNING, Jan. 25. — Lewis Smith, 18 years old, charged with manslaughter in shooting his father, George Smith, at Prattsburg last week while in the alleged act of defending his mother from an attack by the father, appeared in Supreme Court before Justice Clark to plead. He entered a plea of not guilty and was held under $5,000 bail, pending the presentation of his case to the April grand jury. Albert S. Cook and L. H. Cook of Prattsburg uncles became the sureties on the bond.

It was alleged that the bullet which killed the elder Smith entered the skull at the back indicating that he was running away from his son in flight after the first shot had been fired instead of preparing to kill his son as the latter has contended. This is said to have determined District-Attorney Edwin S. Brown to push the charge against young Smith.

The action brought by Mrs. Fowler A. Beekman, of Bath, wife of a manufacturer, against Mrs. Clara Eveland, proprietress of the Steuben House in Bath, long conducted by her husband, the late Robert Eveland, to recover $20,000 damages for the alienation of the affections of Mr. Beekman, was dropped from the calendar Thursday afternoon as settled. The terms of settlement are not given out.

Negro Chauffeur Describes The Shooting of Dr. Mohr

Swears He Stopped Automobile That Dr. Mohr Might Be Killed—Says He Was Promised $2,000 By Mrs. Mohr

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 25.—The manner in which Dr. C. Franklin Mohr was shot to death and the alleged insistence of his wife that he be killed, were described in detail by George W. Healis, his negro chauffeur, at the trial of Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr, Cecil V. Brown and Henry H. Spellman, charged with the murder.

Healis said it was at the bidding of Mrs. Mohr that he stopped the car at a lonely spot agreed upon with Brown and Spellman, whom the State charges with having shot the physician as he sat with Miss Emily Burger of whom Mrs. Mohr was jealous.

"All you will have to do is to stop the car, George," the witness declared Mrs. Mohr told him. He said that when he failed to stop the automobile, as agreed, two nights before the murder, Mrs. Mohr bade him hurry with the killing, saying, "This is my last chance. My suit for divorce comes up the first of the month."

Healis retained his composure during the cross-examination conducted by William N. Lewis, for the defence, and frankly admitted that he had stopped the car in order that his employer might be shot.

In resuming his testimony to-day, Healis said that on the night of Aug. 27th he was urged by Brown to go with him to Mrs. Mohr's house and and that he did so. Mrs. Mohr, he said, was alone when they arrived.

"Mrs. Mohr asked Brown how things were," Healis testified, "and Brown said O. K. Mrs. Mohr finally said 'all you've got to do, George, is to stop the car.' She told Brown he would get $2,000, that I was to get $2,000 and Spellman $1,000.

"The murder was planned for the next night. Brown said we could throw our guns into the water."

Healise began his testimony yesterday by relating the circumstances leading up to the alleged plot by Mrs. Mohr and the negroes to slay the physician. The chauffeur testified that Brown and Henry F. Spellman, the other negro defendant, worked for the doctor in the stables, and that Brown was discharged August 21, 1915, because he was suspected of communicating with Mrs. Mohr.

"Before Brown was discharged," Healis said, "he told me on August 14th he had come from Boston, and was on his way to Newport. He said he was going to get even with the doctor. He said he had a vial of poison in his pocket which Mrs. Mohr had given him to put a few drops in the doctor's coffee. He told me he was afraid, though, because his wife was a cook in the doctor's house, and he was afraid she would get into trouble. He opened his coat and showed me a revolver and said he was going to shoot the doctor. I thought he was joking.

After Brown was discharged he and Healis went to see Mrs. Mohr, the witness said: "Mrs. Mohr told Brown that now would be a good time to get even," Healis continued, "after she heard that Brown was discharged."

Got Supper for Negroes.

Mrs. Mohr prepared supper for Brown that night said Healis, and then Brown and Mrs. Mohr went into another room for two or three minutes.

"When we got outside," said the witness, "Brown showed me a $20 bill. He told me Mrs. Mohr gave it to him for the motorcycle. He said 'and if you stop the car on the way to Newport some night there'll be a whole lot more money. All you've got to do is to stop the car. You can say it is a case of hold-up."

According to the alleged confessions of Brown and Spellman, already in evidence, the murder was originally planned for August 28th, but it did not occur because Healis refused to stop the car that night, owing to the fact that Miss Florence Ormsby, the doctor's office girl, and Miss Martha Wilson, his housekeeper, were in the machine. The shooting occurred on the night of August 31st.

PROHIBITION TO BE PROVINCIAL MATTER

Dominion Government Will Not Likely Take Up Proposal to Make Whole Country Dry

OTTAWA, Jan. 24.—Indications point rather strongly to the Government turning down the Dominion-wide prohibition scheme, in support of which a delegation is to be heard this week, while later on the subject is to be debated in Parliament on the motion of Messrs. Stevens and Marcil.

Only when the proper time comes will the Government's policy in regard to the matter be announced, but it was under consideration Saturday. The view entertained is said to be not the most favorable, the main reason being the remarkable progress made in the same direction by the provinces. In the Maritime Provinces, there is no license save in St. John and Halifax. In Quebec 900 out of thirteen hundred municipalities are dry already. Ontario is in the throes of a campaign to have prohibition next summer. Manitoba votes on it in March, and Alberta is also to have a similar referendum, while in Saskatchewan prohibition exists already, and temperance is making big headway in British Columbia.

In view of the rapid strides thus being made towards prohibition provincially, and considering that the present session is essentially a war session, the Government is rather expected to leave the question where it has been heretofore—with the provinces.

NEW MOON HAS BEEN DISCOVERED

Which Makes Eight for Jupiter, the Scientists Say.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.— A new moon has been discovered. The discovery adds still another to Jupiter's collection, making a grand total of eight. Details of the lunar phenomenon were given at the Chicago Academy of Sciences, where an important exhibit of astronomical photographs and instruments is in progress under the direction of Lowell Observatory.

"It has been known for a long time that Jupiter had six moons," explained W. C. Brown of Northwestern University, "and something over two years ago a seventh moon was discovered. Last spring some remarkable photographs were taken, which evidenced the existence of still another moon, making eight. This verified the contention of certain well known European astronomers."

The Inventor Says "Don't Stir It."

Dr. Jackson, the inventor of Roman Meal, says it should not be stirred while cooking. Stirring spoils flavour and destroys granulation of the porridge, one of the most valuable features of this food in the relief of indigestion.

For early breakfast make porridge while getting evening meal. Stir into boiling water, cook in double boiler or another basin for half an hour. Next morning, first thing, light gas under boiler and allow boiler to set in boiling water while you are dressing. By the time you are dressed and the table set breakfast is ready. Follow directions on package and it's delicious, nutritious, and relieves constipation.

Sold by grocers at 10c and 25c.

GOD SAVE THE KING AND EMPIRE

Hotel's Reserve Supply of Teeth Great Aid to Woman Who Sneezed

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—A moment after the elderly but prominent woman from Troy, N. Y., sneezed while at the window of her room in the Prince George Hotel, she uttered a faint moan of horror, and as she sank back, covering her face with her hands, there came from the cement pavement far below the quick clatter of breaking particles, which a moment before had been her false teeth.

The elderly woman was dressed for the opera, as was her husband, who helped her to her feet with words of consolation on his lips and a suspicion of a suppressed laugh. The woman is just recovering from grip, and she was leaning out of the window to see whether she dared wear slippers or would be forced to spoil the ensemble of her evening make-up by wearing high shoes.

She opened the window, peered out, sneezed and her false teeth, the one great secret of her life, went gavotting through the air to the pavement far below. After her husband had consoled her without laughing, and thus proved that, after all, he was a model husband, his wife dried her tears, mumbled faintly, and wondered if it were possible to get a substitute set of teeth.

A. M. Gutterson, the manager of the hotel, was called and the tragedy was related to him. He smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

"Certainly, Madam, we can accommodate you," he said, and remembered that in the Lost and Found Department of a hotel everything may be found at least once. He remembered, too, that a week ago a dentist had left behind, when he went away without paying his bill, several sample sets of teeth made by a new process which he was trying to sell here.

With the aid of a porter the teeth were located, scrubbed, sterilized and placed in a neat case. The elderly woman, powdering her nose to destroy the ravages of her tears, tried a couple of sets, and found they didn't fit. There again the efficient Mr. Gutterson shone. He telephoned a dentist living in the hotel. The dentist came, did some filing, some fitting, some manipulating. At fifteen minutes to nine o'clock a taxicab bore husband and wife to the Metropolitan Opera House, with some new teeth which sat in all right, when too much conversation was not attempted.

$150.00 will be given away in cash by the merchants on Dollar Day. Read about it in the big add.

C. J. Darling Elected Warden By Rare Provision Re Tied Ballots

When Deadlock Resulted, With Reeve Brown Getting Same Number of Votes, the Act of Choosing Devolved Upon Reeve Anderson.

Reeve C. J. Darling of Dummer was elected Warden of the County this afternoon by a rarely utilized constitutional provision which transferred from the whole Council to Reeve Anderson of Otonabee the right and duty of election.

The nominations produced Reeve Darling, Reeve Brown of Asphodel, and Reeve Squire of Norwood as candidates. The first three ballots gave Brown eight and his opponents five votes each. On the fourth Darling's support increased to 6, and Squire's dropped to four. The latter then withdrew his name and the next ballot left Brown and Darling tied with nine votes each.

It was to break this deadlock that the seldom-required plan was resorted to. On a tie vote the selection of a Warden falls to the senior representative of the highest assessed municipality, which in this county, is Otonabee, with W. A. Anderson, reeve.

In the balloting by standing vote Reeve Anderson had supported and even nominated Reeve Darling. When he was called upon by County Clerk Elliott to name the Warden, Reeve Anderson said he regretted that he couldn't give it to Reeve Brown, and that the situation had developed in that way. Reeve Darling was long in the service of the county and was worthy of the position.

Reeves Squire and Brown accompanied the Warden-elect into the anteroom, where the usual robing ceremony took place, and their return together completely removed whatever slight tension had arisen. Warden Darling was greeted with a round of applause, and in a few words thanked the Council for the honour conferred upon him, and asked for the unanimous support that had been accorded his predecessors. He referred to the war cloud still lowering, of the extra problems that could be anticipated and hoped for a successful and speedy termination of the struggle.

HARRY LAUDER VERY FUNNY

Famous Comedian Delighted a Large Audience

That prince of entertainers, Harry Lauder, paid his first visit to Peterborough last night and delighted one of the largest audiences that ever gathered at the Grand Opera House. The famous Scotch comedian was on the stage for nearly an hour and in a repertoire that included a number of his popular old songs, as well as several numbers, he kept the audience in a hilarious state. He sang songs, funny and otherwise, told stories in his amusing Scotch burr, and even found time to make an impressive and effective recruiting speech.

Of his old songs, the one that pleased most was the melodious "Roamin' in the Gloaming," his opening number, which he made the most of, although the amusing "It's Nice to Get up in the Morning," probably provided the most fun. Of the new songs "Nanny, Nanny, I Never Loved Another Girl But You," was the best. Mr. Lauder, however, made a popular hit in his patriotic song "While the British Bulldog's Watching at the Door," the chorus of which runs as follows:

"It's a dear old land is the Mother land;
Her sons are ever true;
And her boys in far-off other lands
Will see her through and through,
It's a dear old home in the home land;
It's as good as in days of yore;
We are steady, aye, and ready,
While the British Bulldog's watching at the door."

A strong vaudeville company accompanied Mr. Lauder, the feature of which were the Al Golem troupe of Persian acrobats in a whirlwind act that delighted the audience. Dave Genaro and Isabelle Jason did some graceful dancing. Selwyn Driver contributed an amusing pianologue. Lucelle and her talking birds were entertaining and Albert Donnelly was funny with his shadographs. The Scottish Highlanders Band wound up the performance.

MR. D. HUGHES-CHARLES CANDIDATE IN PORT HOPE

At the urgent request of a large number of influential ratepayers our new citizen, Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, has decided to offer himself as a candidate for the council. Mr. Charles has had a wide experience in municipal politics and for several years held the office of President of the Board of Trade in Peterborough. He recently purchased a valuable property in Port Hope, and is now one of our citizens. Your interests are his interests; he has the time to devote to the duties of the office and Port Hope should elect Mr. Charles by a large majority.

BANKERS DEMAND PEACE THIS YEAR

Germany's Post-Bellum Monetary Margin Fading Away---Anxiety in Capital

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Daily Telegraph has the following from Leonard Spray, its correspondent at Rotterdam:

"Important news reaches me from a reliable source. Recently a meeting of the directors of the Deutsche Reichsbank, the Schaffhausen Bankverein and other great banking institutions in Germany discussed the financial situation, and came to the conclusion that it was absolutely impossible for Germany to remain at war after the end of next August without being faced by economic ruin.

"This does not mean that by that time the Germans will be at the end of their resources for continued the war. But the bankers made it clear to the Government that if hostilities keep up after that date there will not be left a sufficient margin of money for the Empire to be able to resume its economic life after peace is declared.

Leave Margin Untouched.

"The great representatives of German finance are bringing tremendous pressure to bear upon the Government to conclude peace before it becomes necessary to trench upon this monetary margin, which must be kept intact if Germany is to resume its commercial and industrial existence after the war.

"In the view of these authorities not even victory could insure her being able to keep her commercial head above water after the war.

"'Therefore,' they say, 'we must have peace this year.'

Ruthless Paper War Then.

"One who has been in close touch with the ruling circles of Berlin says: "'I believe that whatever may be its military position, firm peace overtures will be made by Germany next autumn or before. She will seek, if still in a position to do so, what Britain may regard as terms of premature peace. And if such terms are refused, then all financial considerations will be disregarded, the militarists will have their way, the war will be continued on a paper basis and Germany will continue to fight, heedless of everything.'"

The man who works because he can has not the thoughts of a slave, but the thoughts of a master; his mind is ever open to the perfect concepts of the way in which the details of his daily work should be performed.

GERMANY EXPECTS TO RETAIN BELGIUM

Incident Which Shows Her Determination To Remain in Antwerp

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The determination of the Germans to remain in Belgium and hold Antwerp is clearly shown by an incident told to The Mail and Empire correspondent by a neutral who has just returned from there.

The owners of the great printing plant of Bellemans Freres, which was badly wrecked by the bombardment, requested the "Kommandantur" for permission to rebuild. He was refused the ground on which the building had been located on the Marche Aux Oeufs, adjacent to the cathedral. The German governor declared the old buildings near the monument, including the Meir bridge, must be destroyed to permit the construction of official buildings of Teuton architecture.

The basement of the Hotel de Ville, the neutral reported, was already transformed into a rathskeller.

NO SUSPICION IS ATTACHED

The Brockville Daily Times says: His Honour Judge McDonald of Brockville, has received the letter quoted below from A. P. Sherwood, Chief Commissioner of Police at Ottawa, which letter is self-explanatory. The party referred to, a Mr. Shroder, was a former resident of Brockville, having been in the employ of the local Bell Telephone Company, acting in the capacity of a district superintendent. After leaving Brockville, he removed to Peterborough in the interests of the Company.

Ottawa, Jan 12, 1916.

My Dear Judge McDonald:

"I find that the party you referred to is Shroder, whom we have investigated at different times in the past. He has two brothers fighting with the British in South Africa, and is now on his way home to England provided with a passport from the Department of External Affairs in this city. There is not the slightest suspicion attached to his movements by those familiar with them and him.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) A. P. Sherwood,
Chief Commissioner of Police.

PARCEL RETURNED FROM GERMANY

Was Addressed to Hospital at Giessen But Prisoner Had Been Invalided Out

A parcel was returned to-day from Germany, which was sent to a local prisoner-of-war, and addressed to the hospital at Giessen. Before it reached its destination the prisoner was invalided out and evidently he could not be located, so the parcel was returned to the dead letter office, Ottawa, and forwarded to the next-of-kin of the prisoner here, though the parcel had been sent by a friend from Belleville. Everything in the parcel was in perfect order except the paper box in which it was enclosed which was in pieces. Three other parcels were returned in the same way and for the same reason. This fact shows that the prisoners of war get what is sent to them though it takes from one to two months to get there. If parcels are enclosed in paper boxes they should be sewn up in cotton so they will still hold the contents even should the box be broken.

Voice of The People

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—At the recruiting meeting in the armouries last night, I was delighted to hear Adjt. McElhiney give such a plain, strong talk concerning the men not wearing khaki, especially when he spoke of the young men in stores, factories and Normal schools. But at the same time I thought of all the fine, able-bodied men that are still in the Salvation Army band, and wondered what was the matter that so many of them have not yet enlisted. A few of them, I think are in khaki, and I am told a number have enlisted in other battalions. But the majority seem quite comfortable on the S. A. platform. Surely the Adjutant should be able to enlist quite a number of recruits from the men who sit behind him.

Yours truly,
A Patriotic Woman.

Editor of The Examiner:

In last nights' issue I noticed a letter complaining because Major General Sir Sam Hughes was entertained at a licensed hotel during his visit on Saturday. It strikes me that when one considers that two of the proprietor's sons and nine of his employees are on active service, fighting for King and country, it is a very appropriate place for the head of Canada's fighting machine to stay.

Yours, etc.,

UNION STATION FOR PETERBORO

Question Was Suggested to The C. P. R. Officials Who Visited The City Last Evening

The advisability of erecting a union station in Peterborough was one of the matters that was suggested to Mr. J. P. Arundel, general superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Mr. W. J. Uren, superintendent, upon the occasion of their visit to the city last evening. The railway officials agreed that a union station would have many advantages and the proposal was worthy of consideration. However, owing to existing conditions, the officials in question did not think that anything definite could be done at the present time.

Ald. Edgar, chairman of the Committee on Railways, who in company with Mayor Duffus, met the officials upon their arrival in the city, brought up the question of a footbridge in connection with the railway bridge crossing the Otonabee river. Mr. Arundel said that if the Council would make a request direct to the railway authorities, the matter would be considered.

TO-DAY--ST. PAUL

The Conversion of "The Apostle to the Gentiles" is Commemorated This Day—A Short Sketch of the Life of This Apostle and Martyr —Tradition Has It That St. Paul Converted England.

Written for The Examiner by Frank Russell

The Festival of St. Paul, or rather of the Conversion of Saul, afterwards known as St. Paul, was instituted by the church out of gratitude for so miraculous and so important an instance of Divine power, 'a perfect model of a true conversion,' as an old writer remarked. Butler, the historian, says it was for some time kept as a holiday of obligation in most churches of the west. It is still an important feast of the Three Churches.

It is not possible, in the limits of a newspaper article, to do full justice to the subject, so I must, perforce, content myself with quite a brief resume of the life of this apostle and martyr. To really do fair scope to this subject I could easily write a magazine article. However, in the space at my disposal I will give you what I can; a careful study of "The Acts of the Apostles," and St. Paul's epistles, will well repay the intelligent student.

Who Was Saul?

From St. Paul's own writings we learn that Saul was born at Tarsus in Cilicia; his father was a Roman citizen, of a family in which piety was hereditary, and which was much attached to the Pharisaic traditions and observances. In fact, his family was one of the strictest of the Pharisees.

Saul Afterwards Paul.

How was it that he bore the name of "Saul," afterwards "Paul?" As he belonged to the tribe of Benjamin, he was given the name of Saul at his circumcision, probably, because that name was common in that tribe in memory of the first king of the Jews But, as a Roman citizen, he also bore the Latin name of Paul. It was quite usual for Jews of that period to have two names, one Hebrew, the other Latin or Greek. These names were often joined together as was done by St Luke in the "Acts," when he speaks of Saul—see Acts 13:9. It was only natural that when he had become the apostle to the Gentiles that he should have adopted his Roman name of Paul.

A Tent Maker.

Every respectable Jew had to teach his son a trade, hence it was that young Saul learned how to make tents Lewin, in his life of St. Paul, however, affirms that Paul did not work really as a tentmaker, but that he made the mohair material from which tents were then made. It must not be supposed that the "young man Saul" was a cruel man. By no means! (But he was and, as such, had a rooted aversion to the new doctrines from his point of view—doctrines which the followers of the crucified criminal, the Nazarene, followed. He was an active member in the martyrdom of St Stephen, one of the chief witnesses in fact, who was consenting to his death, and later on we find him still in the exercise of his strongly religious views very active in persecution against the Christians until the time of his when he was breathing out persecutions against the church. It was on this journey that the marvellous vision which changed the whole course of his life appeared to him.

The Conversion of St. Paul.

I do not propose to enter much on this matter. The story is so well known. Three accounts of it are given in in the Acts of the Apostles; these present some slight difference, which is not difficult to harmonize, since these differences do not affect the true basis of the narrative, which is substantially identical. All efforts hitherto made to explain away, without a miracle, the appearance of the Saviour to Paul have failed. Renan's theory was that Saul never really saw Christ, but that he was the victim of hallucination brought on from various causes such as remorse, fear, fatigue, ophthalmia or a sudden thunderstorm Whatever attributed it to an excitable nervous temperament; a soul that had been violently agitated and torn by various doubts. But over and over again St. Paul asserts in his Epistles that he saw Christ. I could give many quotations to substantiate this, but the interested reader may find them easily for himself by referring chiefly to the Epistles to the Corinthians, to Timothy, and to Philemon.

His Early Labours.

After his conversion, his baptism and his miraculous cure from the blindness caused by the marvellous vision, Paul set about preaching to the Jews. Later on they withdrew to Arabia, to the region south of Damascus, more for meditation than for preaching. Returning from Damascus, the intrigues of the Jews forced him to fly by night, when he went to Jerusalem to see Peter, but as the Jews threatened his life, he remained there but fifteen days. Then he left Jerusa. his native city, and is lost sight for five or six years; and this fact should be borne in mind. Then on, Barnabas went in search of him and brought him to Antioch, where for a year they worked together. Then these two went to Jerusalem to carry alms to the brethren on the occasion of the famine predicted by Agabus. But they did not appear to have found the Apostles there, as they had been scattered by Herod's persecution.

Apostolic Career.

This covered a period of some twelve years, which may generally assumed to have been the most active and fruitful of his life. It comprised

Three Great Missions,

Antioch being in each instance the starting point, as was Jerusalem in the first instance. The first of the missions included Cyprus and Paphos, where Sergius Paulus was converted. Here it is that Saul suddenly became Paul. Then in Asia Minor Perga, Pamphylia and in the rough mountains of Pisidia, Iconium Lystra, Derbe and Galatia. It was at Lystra that the Jews stoned him, leaving him for dead. Then we find him and his companion, Barnabas, back at Jerusalem.

The Second Mission.

found Paul with Silas on their way from Antioch to Tarsus, Derbe, Taurus, to Lycaonia, Lyas, Phrygia, Bithynia, Mysia, Troas, Macedonia, Philippi—where they were beaten with rods, imprisoned and deported. Then we find them at Thessalonica, Berea and Corinth, whence they return again to Jerusalem.

The Third Mission.

Was to Ephesus. After a brief rest at Antioch we found him again in Galatia and Phrygia, passing through Central Asia and arriving at Ephesus. Here, in order to earn his living, so as not to be a burden on the converts, he toiled every day for many hours at making tents, or the material for them. But this did not prevent him from preaching the Gospel. As usual, he began with the Synagogue, where he managed to remain for three months. Then a certain Tyrannus placed a class-room each day at his disposal "from the fifth hour to the tenth"—that is from eleven in the morning until four in the afternoon; the days in those times commenced at six o'clock in the morning.

This Work at Ephesus Lasted Two Years.

Paul had many obstacles to overcome in this city, mainly arising from the jealousy of the Jews, and from pagan superstition. So effectually did he triumph that you, reader, will remember how the books of superstition and magic were burned to the value of 50,000 pieces of silver (about $9,000). Then the sale of statuettes of Diana, the goddess, and of her temple, was ruined, and the silversmith, Demetrius, stirred up the crowd against Paul. St. Luke has vividly described this scene in Acts XIX, v. 23-40.

Here the Apostle had to bow to the storm. After having been in Ephesus for two and a half years or more, he left for Macedonia and thence for Corinth. Then we find him at Troas, where he brought back to life the young man, Eutychus, who, it will be remembered, fell from a third storey window while Paul was preaching late into the night. Then to Miletus and Caesarea, where his coming arrest was predicted, but which did not prevent his going on to Jerusalem.

His Arrest and Imprisonment.

Falsely accused by the Jews of having brought Gentiles into the Temple, Paul was ill-treated by the populace, and brought in chains, by the tribune Lysias, to the fortress of Antonia. The tribune, having discovered a plot to kill the prisoner, sent him under a strong escort to Caesarea to appear before the procurator Felix. Here he was kept, to please the Jews, in prison for two years, until the arrival of Festus, the new Governor. Festus wished to send his prisoner to Jerusalem, but Paul preferred to appeal unto Caesar. Consequently his case could only be heard at Rome. Then came told so vividly and graphically by St. Luke. Paul must have reached Rome some time in March. "He remained two whole years in his hired house. . . . .preaching . . . . no man forbidding him." With these words St. Luke concludes his "Acts of the Apostles."

Very little is known of his doings subsequent to his arrival at Rome. Some authorities say the case against him was dismissed; others, that he was on what we should now-a-days term "bail." If this be the case there must have been some subsequent proceedings, of which there appears no record, which lead to his violent death.

The Martyrdom

of St. Paul took place towards the end of the reign of Nero. According to the most common opinion, he suffered in the same year and on the same day as St. Peter. Of this event there is but very scant history. It is generally accepted that the executioner's sword was the instrument of Martyrdom which won the cross for St. Paul.

His Burial.

Ancient tradition has made it quite possible to establish these facts: That St. Paul suffered martyrdom near Rome, at a place called Aquae Salviae, (now known as Tre Fontaine, somewhat to the East of the Ostian Way, about two miles from the splendid Basilica of San Paolo fuori le Mura, which marks his burial place.

His Personality.

Of his personality Paul tells us as much as may be known when he quotes the adverse remarks of his opponents at Corinth. His letters are weighty and strong; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech of no account. The Christian romance writer has elaborated the picture, of which some traits may have come to him from tradition:—"A man small in stature, bald-headed, bow-legged, stout, close browed, with a slightly prominent nose full of grace; for at one time he had the face of an angel." the meaning of his name is 'small'.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hamburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Sometimes I did not leave the room for hours. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I returned work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

For your guidance in estimating, we might say that The Examiner is Printing and Distributing to the Merchants, for use on Dollar Day, 36,000 Blanks, and it is only necessary to estimate what number each purchaser thinks will be used on the great day. Should any store run short of blanks, The Examiner will print more, so that the number printed might reach as high as 50,000. The number of estimates put in the first Dollar Day Campaign was in the neighbourhood of 16,000. With this information, an estimate can be made before coming to town. Of course as many estimates can be made as the purchaser has blanks, and they will get one with every Dollar purchase they make.

Make up your mind what and where you want to buy and come to PETERBORO' on THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3rd, expecting the greatest economy shopping event of your lives.

Soldiers Barely Beat Easterners In Hard Game

Campbellford Beaten 4 to 3 in a Hard-fought Game—93rd Led by 3 to 0 at the End of First Period But Visitors Finished Strong and Nearly Snatched the Game Out of the Fire.

Tommy Moffatt's winless Campbellford team threw a large sized scare into the 93rd Battalion in an intermediate O.H.A. game at Brock Street Rink, last night. The Soldiers barely managed to nose out a win by a score of 4 goals to 3, after a hard-fought battle that was not decided until the last couple of minutes of play. The boys from the East, after a bad start, settled down and played good hockey in the last two periods.

The 93rd opened out in commanding style and scoring three goals in the first twenty minutes, while their opponents were blanked, looked to be on easy street, when the first session was over. Right there, however, Campbellford fooled both the soldiers and the spectators, for they came back in good style in the second period, scored two goals and held the boys in khaki scoreless. They opened out strong in the last period, too, and finally drew up on even terms with the 93rd when they tallied their third goal. With the score 3—3, and the game drawing rapidly to a close, it looked like an over-time affair, but finally, with two minutes to go, Windsor, the 93rd's new recruit from the north, secured the rubber behind the Campbellford nets, and swept it around the post the rubber going into the nets off Cross' skates.

There was no further scoring and the 93rd skated off the ice winners.

Windsor, the new man on the 93rd line-up, showed a lot of class. He was tricky and clever and scored three out of the four goals for the soldiers. Ketchum, who played on the defence for the soldiers, was in his best form of the season, and Widdifield was good in the nets. Montgomery's checking always helped.

For the visitors, Graine, the Marmora man on right wing, was very effective, while Shannon, at rover, played a useful game. Lott, the red-haired defence man, was ofte in the limelight. Lou Marsh handled the game in good style.

The teams lined up as follows:

Campbellford		93rd
	Goal
Cross		Widdifield
	Defence
Farrel		Ketchum
Lott		Dupuy
	Rover
Shannon		Montgomery
	Centre
Clements		Windsor
	Right Wing
Graine		Blewett
	Left Wing
Christenson		Wedlock

Campbellford had 100 supporters along on a special train—pretty good support for a team yet to win a game.

TWO CITY TEAMS TO CLASH ON FRIDAY

The game of the season is slated for Friday night when the 93rd Battalion and Electrics will clash at Brock street rink. A win for the Electrics would give them a big edge on the group, and it is certain that there will be a red hot fight. The soldiers trotted out a good man last night in Windsor, who scored three goals for them, and it is said they have a couple more under cover for Friday. The Electrics will also have their strongest team in line, using the best of their juniors on the intermediate team. There is keen rivalry between the two teams. The Electrics play in Cobourg to-morrow, and if the latter lose they are out of the running, leaving the rave to the two city teams.

JACK MUNRO IMPROVING.

COBALT PUGILIST CONVALESCING AFTER WAR WOUNDS.

LONDON, January 24.—Jack Munro, who once gained fame by knocking down Jim Jeffries, when the latter was heavy-weight champion of the world, is now convalescing in a London hospital after having his right arm, with which he did the deed, carried away at the elbow by a German shell. The first operation after his wound was not a success and a second was necessary, but he is now getting along well.

Jack himself feels glad that it was no worse for he was a sergeant in the famous "Princess Pats," which bore the brunt of the terrible day in the second battle of Ypres when the Germans broke through the first British line, and only the Canadians saved the day.

Before he enlisted in the army at the outbreak of the war, Jack Munro was mayor of Elk City, Ont.

Two more members of C Company of the 57th Regiment joined the 93rd yesterday in the person of Norman and Gordon Hartshorn, brother and cousin of Sergt. Major Hartshorn of A Company, 93rd. C Company of the 57th has supplied 100 men for the various overseas units from Peterborough.

Lieut. Max. Hamilton of the 57th Regiment has been appointed to the 146 Battalion, C.E.F., Kingston, and left yesterday to join that unit.

Capt. Bolline, Quartermaster, and Quartermaster Sergt. R. G. Cottrell of the 93rd Battalion, are in Kingston, taking a course.

Gunner Manley G. Peever, son of Rev. R. G. Peever, George Street parsonage, is home from Kingston, on his last leave before going overseas. He is a member of Queen's Battery, Kingston.

Harold J. Devey, son of Mr. R. J. Devey, choir leader and organist of St. John's Church, left this morning to join the 33rd Battery, C.F.A., at Kingston. Another of the St. John's choristers, Pte. Evans, has joined the 93rd Battalion.

The members of the 93rd Battery, who were home on their final leave from Kingston before going overseas, were given an enthusiastic send-off when they left on the 8:10 G.T.R. train this morning. The artillerymen were escorted to the station by the bands and several platoons of the 93rd, and the latter gave their brothers in arm a hearty farewell as the train pulled out. A large number of friends were at the station to say good-bye.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Starr, Reid street, where a number of friends gathered to say good-bye to Gunner Harold Yelland, of the 33rd Battery, who is to leave for overseas shortly, all wishing him God speed.

In a letter to his wife, Pioneer Sergt. W. Edwards, of Peterborough, with the 39th Battalion, says:

Among the number of parcels I have received I think the little parcel of seven handkerchiefs from the boys and girls of the South Central school, appeals to me the most. When the little children remember you, we know then we have not only left grown ups behind us, but also the rising generation, who are determined to do what they can for those who have gone to fight the battle of our Empire.

I say, God bless such boys and girls, and would like you to convey to them my sincere thanks for their very nice gift, and tell them how I appreciate it. I also received a present from Knox church, which consisted of a flag, maple leaf, pencils, paper and envelopes, cakes, candy, cocoa and chocolates, etc. I will write to the Rev. McKenzie and give him my thanks for the people of Knox church for their beautiful gift; also received the photo of A. S. K. (or what is left of them) Bible class, one of Byers' store and the recruiting station and a scene in Jackson Park; also one of a house which I cannot place. They are all very nice.

I was very pleased to receive a Christmas card from Mayor Buller and am sending him one from the sergeants' mess.

one from the sergeants' mess.

Please convey my sincere thanks to the person who was so thoughtful as to send me the Christmas package consisting of chocolate, gum, cigarettes and khaki handkerchiefs.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Pay-Master of the 93rd Bastalion, is attending the Session at Ottawa.

Among those who joined the 93rd Battalion this morning was Joseph Alley of Havelock who although Canadian born, has had two and a half years' service in the United States regular army.

British Mesopotamian Army Surrounded By Turks Well Supplied

LONDON, Jan. 24—The main British Mesopotamian army surrounded by the Turks at Kut-el-Amara is well supplied. There has been no further attack on the fortress since the Turks closed their ring around it nearly a month ago.

These are the outstanding points in a report received from Gen. Sir Percy Lake, Commander-in-Chief of the Birtish in Mesopotamia, and given out by the India Office to-night. Sir Percy quotes Gen. Chas. V. Townsend, commander of the Kut-el-Amara defenders, as stating that "he has sufficient supplies." The report relieved to a great extent the anxiety which has prevailed here since the news reached London that the Kut-el-Amara force was bottled up by the Turks.

To-day's statement is interpreted as meaning that there is no cause for fear that the force will be starved out in the immediate future and it strengthens the hope that the relief force, under Gen. Aylmer, which is now six miles east of Kut-el-Amara, at Essian, facing the strongly entrenched Turks, will eventually break through and relieve the main force.

The report that the Turks have not again attacked the fortress is taken to mean that the relief force has been detaining sufficiently large Ottoman detachments to make an attack en masse against Kutel-Amara impossible. The all-day battle between the relief force and the Turks at Essian last Friday was so costly to both sides that, according to Gen. Sir Percy Lake's report issued to-day, a few hours' armistice was agreed upon on the following day to make possible the removal of the wounded and bury the dead. The commander reports a tremendous rise of the Tigris during the last 48 hours. The official report reads:

"During the last 48 hours the Tigris River has risen seven feet at Kut, and 2 1-2 feet at Amara, preventing all troop movements by land.

"An armistice was concluded for two hours on the 22nd for the collection and burial of the dead.

"Gen. Townsend reports from Kut-el-Amara that he has sufficient supplies and that his troops have not been further engaged."

CANADIANS WILL BE THERE

Where'er the tyrant tramples,
On fair freedom's sacred right,
Or war lords, crush the weak beneath
The heel of armed might;
Where hate and fell injustice, make
War's cruel sabre bare,
Valiant and strong, to right the wrong
Canadians, will be there.

If proud oppressions, lawless powers
Muster in fierce array,
And rush the despot's ruthless hosts
In millions to the fray;
Where red the tide of battle rolls,
And carnage rends the air,
Foremost, for liberty to strike,
Canadians, will be there.

Where'er it be, on shore or sea,
Brave deeds are to be done,
Danger, undauntedly to face,
Or glory to be won,
Where for their country, kith or king,
There aught to do or dare,
And to uphold our Empire's flag—
Canadians, will be there.

Where pale gaunt famine leagued with war
A ghastly harvest reaps,
And, hideous offspring of the twain,
Pestilence high revel keeps.
Where wounded, sick, or sad, require
The Red Cross Sisters' care,
And stern voiced duty leads the way,
Canadians will be there.

Where true, heroic, women give,
Though breaking hearts may bleed,
Husbands, sons, brothers, sweethearts in
Their country's hour of need.
Who shrink not from war's fortunes rude.
But staunch the burden share,
And patient, wait, and toil and pray,
Canadians will be there.

Where men adventure far in war
Dear life or limb for liberty,
Bold meets the foe, and deals the blow
For hearth, and home, and altars, free,
Where fame entwines her laurel wreath,
That patriot heroes proudly wear,
And honor writes her annals bright—
Canadians will be there.

Mrs. A. F. Calder.

CURLING

The Toronto Granites are expected to bring down five rinks to-morrow for the annual games.

To-day—St. Paul

A pagan caricaturist spoke of him in similar terms:—'Bald in front, with a slightly prominent nose, who had taken an aerial journey into the third heaven'.

* * *

It Is Said St. Paul Converted England.

As I have previously mentioned, St. Paul was lost sight of for five or six years (Acts ix. 20.30 Gal. 1.20.

There is a tradition extant, long held to, that at least three years of this missing portion of his life was spent in what was later known as England, where he was engaged in planting the Early English Church. It is well known from history that as early as A.D. 70 there was a branch of the Holy Catholic Church flourishing in England; the Church of England in fact. He is said to have been accompanied by Joseph of Arithmathea—the wealthy man who provided the grave for our Lord's burial—who settled down at Glastonbury.

Saint Paul's Cathedral.

It is commonly believed that the Metropolitan Cathedral of St. Paul, in London, was dedicated to him in commemoration of his conversion of England. The present Cathedral was built practically on the site of the old Cathedral which was not a basilica—as is the present Cathedral, after the type of St. Peter, at Rome—but was a cruciform church of very handsome dimensions; destroyed in the great Fire of London in 1666.

Old Custom in England.

This day used to be observed in the Motherland in great processional State. The "Chronicles of the Grey Friars of London" speak of a general processional of all the school children in the City of London together with all vicars, parsons, curates and lay clerks, in copes with their crosses; also the choir of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, and divers bishops in their habits and the Bishop of London with his pontificals and cope, with the Lord Mayor and Aldermen in scarlet, and the council and all the crafts in their best array. This procession went throughout the City and then the King with "my lord cardinal" went to St. Paul's and heard mass and went home again. And in the evening great bon-fires were made throughout London, for the joy that the people were converted likewise as St. Paul was converted.

To-day in England.

To-day this festival is magnificently celebrated in the huge, vast Metropolitan Anglican Cathedral of St. Paul, London (England). The music is mainly of the Grand Old Gregorian school. The huge capacity of the organ, the crowds of choristers, the length of the processions, the vastness of the building, and the solemnity which seems to pervade everything, makes this an offering of thanks to Almighty God, which once seen is not easily forgotten. I know whereof I speak, for I have taken part in it.

The Glastonbury Thorn

which has some connection here, is a species of thorn which flourishes in Glastonbury and other portions of England. The original thorn is said to have been the walking-staff of Joseph of Arithmathea who, some time after Christ's death came over to England accompanied by, so tradition states, St. Paul, and settled at Glastonbury. In what was later on the burial ground of Glastonbury Abbey, he stuck his staff in the ground, It broke off short and the piece in the earth immediately took root and put forth leaves, and on the day following (which happened to be Christmas eve) was covered all over with snow-white blossoms. On every recurring year it continued to bloom on Christmas Eve, great numbers of people visiting it annually to see this miracle. During the Civil Wars the original bush was destroyed, as savouring of idolatry, but several trees arising from cuttings still survive. Until the time of King Charles I. it was customary in the Mother Country, at Christmas time, to proceed in solemn state and present the King and Queen with a flowering branch of the Glastonbury Thorn.

Glastonbury Abbey is now but a mass of ruins, but it is preserved, for all time, by the British Government as an "ancient monument."

RUSSIANS WIN EVERYWHERE

Operations in Armenia, Where the Russians Have Made Important Gains, Promise to Influence the Situation in Persia

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The operations in Armenia, where the Russians during the last week have made important gains, and at last accounts were driving the Turks westward before them, promise more and more to influence the situation in Persia. The Russians who originally fought the Turks on a limited area in the Caucasus, have inflicted several crushing defeats upon the Ottomans since the Grand Duke Nicholas took the command. They have transferred the momentum of their offensive over the Caucasian border into Armenia, where they are now attacking Erzerum, an important city in the interior.

Thus the Russian offensive in that part of the Near Eastern theatre, if pushed with the same success that has marked it since the beginning of the year, presents a growing menace to Asiatic Turkey. South-east of the Erzerum front, around Lake Van, the Muscovites have been proportionately successful of late, though the Turkish lines appear on the whole to have held their own.

There is no doubt, however, that the Turks are compelled, both by the situation in Armenia, in the Caucasus, and in Persia — where the Russians are menacing Isaphan—to send very strong reinforcements of troops to the Asiatic theatre.

Roads Strewn With Bodies.

The Sunday Petrograd official report states that the precipitate retreat of the Turks in the region of Erzerum continues. In many places the Czar's troops are still capturing artillery, ammunition, provisions and telephone material. The pursuing troops are advancing along roads strewn with frozen bodies of Askaris.

Large numbers of prisoners have been taken at each inhabited place.

"One of our detachments," continues the report, "which has arrived at the Caucasian front from Manchuria, charged half a squadron of cavalry and three companies of Askaris, who were defending the village, sabring some of the force and capturing others.

"South of the River Charsanson we completely annihilated a strong Kurd detachment. In the neighborhood of Melazkert our cavalry engaged large forces of Kurds and took from them 600 head of cattle."

ROBERT FAIR & CO., LTD.

A PETERBOROUGH NURSE WRITES FROM SALONICA

The following letter has been received from Miss Anna Doig of Peterborough, who is a nurse with No. 4 Canadian General Hospital at Salonica:

No. 4. Canadian General Hospital,
Salonica, Greece,
6-12-15.

My dear Brother,—Your very welcome letter I received a few days ago, so decided to write you a short letter. It will not however be very descriptive as I have a critical censor to consider.

Well, I have travelled thousands of miles since I saw you and saw sights beyond my wildest dreams. Have been on duty in a Canadian hospital in France, a British hospital in Malta, as staff sister on a hospital ship, and lastly in our own No. 4 Canadian General Hospital.

Really it has been most interesting but it seems pathetic to see some of the suffering, but you have no idea how we admire the pluck of these poor fellows. They are wonderful.

I have been here near three weeks and it is interesting to see how quickly the place has grown into a hospital: it is just like a tent city. At first our few tents were the only ones for miles but others have gone up till now you see little else but tents. The traffic is simply marvellous, the road is fairly alive.

Our officers arrived here first and were asked to take patients almost immediately. We followed on a hospital ship so the work was progressing when we reached our destination.

We are fairly comfortable in Indian tents and we use coal oil stoves and lamps. The ground is covered with bulrush matting and you ought to see our furniture—a box makes a splendid dresser when covered with chintz, and we use folding stools or boxes for chairs.

The weather is not mild here as some people imagine; it is just as cold as it would be at home, or even colder. It began to rain one day and the next day ended in snow, consequently there was slush and mud of all descriptions, so long rubber boots and short skirts became fashionable. It is milder now but freezes hard at night. Already we have had several frost bitten cases, and very severe, among the soldiers.

It was very warm at Malta and on the Mediterranean so we did not require extra wraps, but it was bitterly cold when we anchored at Tenos. You have likely heard of that island but we only saw it along the coast as we were not allowed to land.

We were fortunate to get up to the Peninsula and saw naval engagements; also an action on land. The patients that brought down told us that the Turks fight very fair, so of course that rather surprised us.

The patients we are now nursing frequently speak of the Bulgarians and the Germans but I cannot give you any details on these subjects for a letter is too much energy to have consigned to the waste paper basket, and that is the warning we receive.

This is a Grecian town but was owned by the Turks till the Balkan war; traces of that war are still to be seen in the shape of trenches and ruins. I cannot describe the town as we do not go off the hospital grounds.

One very interesting feature here is Mt. Olympus towering away in the distance. It is gorgeous when the sun sets on the snow-capped mountains.

I wish that you could see the Greeks riding about on donkeys, very little bigger than themselves. The garb too is amusing. I hope this letter does not sound very complicated but we have to refrain from mentioning names but I expect you can read between the lines.

WHERE TO GO FOR ADVICE

"If I wanted to become a tramp I would seek information and advice from the most successful tramp I could find. If I wanted to become a failure I would seek advice from men that have never succeeded. If I wanted to succeed in all things, I would look about me for those that are succeeding, and do as they have done."

—Joseph Marshall Wade.

There is some very sensible advice from a distinguished man. Many an ambitious man has accomplished the ruination of his career by selecting as his advisor some lazy, miserable failure. That kind of a man is always willing to condemn anything that is good. "Misery loves company," says the old adage. The man too lazy to study and make something of himself will always advise others not to study, for he does not want to see them do better than himself.

If you want advice from someone about taking a course with the I.C.S. don't ask it of some man who has never taken a course, and who as a result of his lack of education has never been able to earn a decent living; don't ask it of some student who has merely enrolled—then laid his Instruction Papers away on a shelf to gather dust and cobwebs because he was too lazy to study them.

In short, as Mr. Wade says, don't ask advice of a failure. Seek the advice of some successful student. We have a book giving the names and addresses of over one hundred thousand successful I.C.S. students. We can if necessary, refer you to plenty of successes to whom you can go for advice. No need to seek the bad and worthless counsel of those in the "misery loves-company" class. They will do all they can to keep you down with them, if you will let them.

TEUTON CONSULS ARE RELEASED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 25.—Through the good offices of the United States the German, Austrian, Turkish and Bulgarian Consuls at Salonica, who have been held under arrest by the Allies on board a French war ship in the harbor, are to be released.

The condition of the release will be that the Consuls shall not resume their functions in Salonica, but must return to their own countries. Arrangements already have been made for the return to Turkey of the Turkish Consul by a devious route which will take him by water to France or Italy, thence by rail to Switzerland, from which country he can find his way through Germany and Austria to Turkey.

Mr. Einstein Charge d'Affaires of the American Legation at Sofia, has been instructed by cable to surrender, if Bulgaria insists upon it, the British Vice Consul there, who took refuge in his quarters when Bulgaria ordered the arrest of enemy consular officers in retaliation for the seizure of the Consuls at Salonica.

It became known late to-day, after the announcement that the Entente Allies had agreed to release the Consuls, that this action was taken some days ago and that Great Britain had been notified.

The Vice Consul fled to the rooms of the American Charge d'Affaires and asked asylum upon hearing of the arrest of his French colleague. He was received temporarily, and when the Sofia government demanded his surrender Mr. Einstein cabled to Washington for instructions.

After due consideration the State Department held that unless it could be shown that the Vice Consul's life was involved in the surrender he could not be given asylum. Nothing further has been heard from the case since this decision was communicated to the authorities in Sofia, and it is thought probable that the Bulgarian government chose to refrain from exercising its right pending the outcome of the State Department's efforts to obtain relief of the Bulgarian Consul at Salonica, which has now been successful.

ROOF CHASE FOR INCENDIARY FAILS

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Having rested for two nights Harlem's mysterious incendiaries made elaborate preparations to burn the five storey double tenement house at No. 246 Columbus avenue and was ready to apply the match when he was interrupted. It is the first time he has been seen and the first time a description of him was obtained. Fire was started in the same building Tuesday.

Although the block was surrounded quickly by police reserves and there was a lively man hunt on the roofs, the incendiary escaped. The incident caused much excitement, and the streets in the neighborhood soon were packed with people.

Five piles of rubbish in the basement had been soaked with oil. A trail of oil connected the piles with the woodbin and then a trail of oil led up the wooden stairs to the main hall.

The incendiary was soaking with oil the carpet the woodwork in the rear of the hall when Edward Putter, who lives in the building, entered from the street. When the incendiary saw him he dropped a large bottle of oil, pulled a black cap down over his eyes and ran up the stairs to the roof. Mr. Putter raised an alarm and followed the intruder up the stairs.

Soon excited women were shouting from the windows for the police, and most of the men in the house were following Mr. Putter to the roof. Policemen joined in the chase through the house. Word was telephoned to the West 100th street station and the reserves were hurried out, surrounding the block. Policemen and detectives joined the residents on the roofs and then led in a search of every house in the block. But the fugitive, who has started fires in fifty or more Harlem houses, escaped again.

Mr. Putter says the man is about twenty-five years old, with a swarthy skin, a rather thin, smooth face and black hair and eyes. He is about five feet eight inches in height and weighs about one hundred and forty pounds. He wore a long black overcoat.

Fire Marshal Prail and his aids said the incendiary had gone to unusual pains to see that the fire got a good start. Never before had he used oil or tried to spread the fire upstairs.

ANOTHER VICTIM IN MURDER FEUD

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Frank Le Manna, "The Wolf" one of the leaders of the Italian colony in the Bronx, is dying in Gouverneur Hospital. He was shot as he was walking through a crowded street of the lower east side. A man placed a revolver against his abdomen and fired. In the confusion which followed the assailant escaped.

For many years La Manna lived in the colony of Little Italy in Harlem. There he was opposed in business and other dealings to Giosue Gallucci, the "King of Little Italy," who with his son, was murdered in the latter's coffee house on the night of May 17 last. La Manna was forced out of business in Harlem and moved to the Bronx, where he opened a store for olive oil and wines at No. 2,235 Arthur street.

The police think that the shootings are closely allied. They gained more from La Mana than is usual in similar cases. He promised to identify his assailant if brought to the hospital before he dies.

As soon as he heard of the shooting Detective Di Martini who has known La Manna, went to the hospital and urged the man to tell who shot him and the cause. La Manna feebly shook his head and said that he had no enemies, had never been threatened and never saw his assailant before. In spite of this the detectives are endeavoring to account for those who probably were his enemies.

The shooting was at Chrystie and Broome streets. Chrystie street was filled with pushcart vendors and their customers. Philip Weymer, of No. 88 East Twelfth street, jumped for the assailant as he backed away from his victim lying on the sidewalk. The man ran, with Weymer in pursuit, darting in and out among those who thought to stop him and threatening them with the revolver which he held in his hand.

After running two blocks, with Weymer in close pursuit, the man slipped and fell. As his pursuer was about to fall on him the man put the revolver against Weymer and ordered him back. While Weymer hesitated the man got to his feet and darted into a hallway.

Reinforced by others, Weymer led the chase to the roofs. As the party reached the roof they saw the man disappear in a building in Hester street. Trace then was lost.

MONTENEGRINS IN RETREAT STILL FIGHT

ROME, Jan. 26.—Active guerilla warfare is being waged by the Montenegrin troops, on their retreat southward, and particularly in the Tarabosch Mountain west of Scutari according to reports received here to-day.

In advance of the Austrian troops who are in pursuit, a number of Austrian aeroplanes have been harassing the Montenegrins, flying low and using machine guns against groups of the poorly equipped soldiers of General Martinovitch.

Four Invasions of Albania.

Berlin, via Amsterdam, Jan. 26.—Practically all of Montenegro is now overrun by Austro-Hungarian troops, and four separate invasions of Albania are under way. Part of the Archives of the Serbian Government were captured by the Austro-Hungarian troops that occupied Scutari yesterday. Several thousand Serbians who formed the garrison, retired toward the south without offering any resistance.

The next objectives of the German allies in the Balkans are Durasso and Avlona, the two chief ports on the Albanian coast. Durasso has always been recognized as the seat of the Albanian government. Essad Pasha, the self-proclaimed ruler of Albania, who fled from Scutari when the Austro-Hungarian forces approached that city, is now at Durasso with a small force.

British Government Has Decided To "Stand Pat" on Its Trade Regulations

Net Thrown About Germany by the Existing Regulations May Be Tightened in Some Respects

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The British Government has virtually decided to "stand pat" on its present trade regulations, and will make no announcement of blockade of the entire German coast in Parliament this afternoon, the majority of well informed parliamentary writers agreed to-day.

Only a few papers clung to the belief that the Cabinet will announce a radical change of policy.

The net thrown about Germany by the existing regulation may be tightened in some respects. But it was the general belief of the London newspapers that the Cabinet has decided against any revolutionary change in policy.

The storm of protest raised in the United States and in Sweden, some of the papers broadly hinted, has cooled the ardor of advocates of the blockade, if it has not had its effect upon the Government. Newspapers gave prominent display to the warlike utterances of the Swedish Premier in his Ruchatar speech yesterday, and the Daily Telegraph and the Daily News cautioned the Government against any action likely to involve Great Britain with neutrals.

A formal debate on the blockade issue was expected to open with the introduction of a resolution endorsing such a drastic step by Arthur Shirley Benn, Conservative. Sir Edward Grey was counted upon to answer for the Government with a sweeping denial.

ZURICH, Jan. 26.—"The distinguished Turkish diplomats Refaat Pasha, Noby Bey and Etemm Bey, have arrived in Switzerland to prepare a scheme of Turkish peace proposals," the newspaper La Suisse declared to-day. Financial troubles have made Turkey desirous of peace.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Warwick Brookes, Coalition candidate, was elected in Mile End by a majority of 376.

Young Samuel's Best Act Was Howling When Interfered With

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—When Policeman Cassassa, of the Pickpocket Squad, seized Samuel Brown, fifteen years old, in the Grand Central subway station, a bevy of sympathetic beauty swooped down upon him, almost captured his prisoner and showered the bawling lad with kisses.

"I saw the boy dip his hand into the pockets of these new style skirts of several women and finally saw him get something from one girl's pocket," said Cassassa. "Then I grab him, and, like all kid pickpockets, he sets up a cry and yells that I'm beating him. Of course all the woman in the station—and there were several hundred of them—attack me. They call me a brute and tell me to let that poor, innocent child go. They think I'm a child stealer and call him a poor dear and kiss and hug him.

"All the time the kid's bawling fiercer, and struggling, with the women helping him, until I tell them I" run in the whole lot of them if they don't get away. However, it was lucky for me that a downtown train came along just then and I got the kid inside."

Samuel is a nice, model looking boy with a lamb-like face that is quite as deceiving as that of the "heathen Chinee." He even is a junior policeman and under his coat wore a badge indicating his unofficial connection with the East 126th street police station. Boys of the junior police wear badges and see that garbage cans are covered, fire escapes are unobstructed and that other children are not nuisances to the grown up policemen, but mostly they wear badges.

Samuel, who lives at No. 5 West 116th Street, said at Police Headquarters, according to the detectives, that he learned how to pick pockets while spending two years in a correctional institution, to which he had been committed by the Children's Court.

"We used to practise on the guards" he is quoted as saying, "and snake cigarettes and other things from their pockets. We had a regular school for pickpockets in the reformatory, so we could make a decent living when we got out. One thing we learned was to set up an awful bawling if a cop pinched us, so as to get sympathy and get turned loose. It usually works."

The net result last night, however, of Samuel's two years of training to be a skilled pickpocket so he could earn a decent living was a bone cloak button wrapped in a piece of paper. When Detective Cassassa seized the boy he also stopped Miss Emily Stratus, of No. 1,039 Simpson street, the Bronx, and asked her if anything had been taken from her pocket. She felt and said that a button wrapped in a piece of paper was gone. As it was a case of "Button, button, who's got the button?" Cassassa searched Samuel and said he found the button in his pocket.

Berlin Rioters Are Shot Down

Report Reaches Paris of Sanguinary Disorders on Jan. 12th

PARIS, Jan. 26. — Bloody riots occurred in Berlin on January 12, in which many civilians were shot down by troops using machine guns, according to a declaration made here to-day by a Portugese citizen who claims to have been in the German capital on that date.

The Portugese has just arrived in Paris from Germany. He declared that mobs of men and women surged through the streets of Berlin and that even children took part in the rioting.

The mobs were soon put to flight and many wounded persons were carried off to the hospitals.

Man conquers only through his strength; woman in her weakness.

The man that is a slave to none, none slave to him, can well rejoice.

A man often places his own value on himself by the bride he selects.

A man's true interest is not always the advantage of self-gain.

LOOKING FOR WORK

Everywhere men complain about work; even boys and girls in school or business find work tedious and irksome, but it isn't the work half so much as their own lack of physical strength that makes it hard.

Rich blood, strong lungs and healthful digestion make work pleasurable in business, in school or even housework, and if those who are easily tired—who are not sick, but weak and nervous—would just take Scott's Emulsion for one month and let its pure concentrated food create richer blood to pulsate through every artery and vein—let it build a structure of healthy tissue and give you vigorous strength—you would find work easy and would look for more. Insist on Scott's.

VICTIM OF THE TSETSE FLY

Dr. Pervell Slowly Dying of Sleeping Sickness Following Fly Bite.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.— With every desire to live, Dr. Albert C. Pervell, forty years old, of No. 14 Hancock street, Brooklyn, lies on his bed condemned to death almost as surely as though a judge had spoken his doom. And the cause— a little insect, no bigger than the common house fly — the dreaded tsetse fly of Africa.

Dr. Pervell, a graduate of New York University, after an internehip at Bellevue Hospital, and a few years of private practice, while on his second visit to the Belgian Congo in the employ of a mining firm, five years ago, was bitten by the tsetse fly while canoeing. A few weeks later he recognized the symptoms of the terrible sleeping sickness, the scourge of the natives of Africa and hurried to the Paris Pasteur Institute for treatment. He was discharged, apparently cured, and returned to the Congo.

Rendered immune, as he thought, he remained there until a return of the disease sent him back to Paris, whence he was discharged a second time "cured," and went again to his work in the Congo, but only for a short time, when he again became sick, and returned to civilization.

The disease which had gradually attacked his body, reached his legs last November, and he was forced to take to bed. He was for a short time in the Brooklyn Hospital, but returned home, where he has been ever since. The story of the sick man became known only a few days ago.

Four Persons Killed In Buffalo Explosion

BUFFALO, Jan. 26.—Four persons are known to have been killed, an uncertain number are missing and four were injured in an explosion that wrecked the plant of the Kelker Blowing Company, manufacturers of planing-mill exhausts and ventilators this afternoon

Charles Kelker, head of the firm, said that between 22 and 25 employees were in the plant and that 21 of them had been accounted for.

The known dead are— Miss Mabel Chandler, 17 years of age, stenographer; Charles Pabst, 18 years of age, teamster; two unidentified men. The seriously injured: Mrs. Helen Kelker, 48 years of age, wife of Charles Kelker, both legs blown off, probably will die.

The building occupied by the firm was a long two-story frame structure, the first floor and basement of which were used for the machine shop and the second floor as a storeroom and living apartments. The force of the explosion completely demolished all the walls and tore out large pieces of the concrete foundation, letting the roof down on the debris, which caught fire. Pieces of the foundation were thrown hundreds of feet, and the concussion smashed practically every window glass within a radius of a block.

It is a rare and fortunate man who retains the same woman for a wife, that he won as a sweetheart.

To Keep Skin in Fine Condition in Winter

It would be much better for the skin if little cream, powder or rouge were used during the winter term. These things, which clog the pores, tend to add wind and weather in roughening and coarsening the skin. Ordinary mercolized wax will do more for the complexion, and without encouraging the skin to chap, crack or become harsh and leathery. It is the ideal complexion for the season, as it not only keeps the pores clean but daily removes particles of scarf skin which have become spoiled by winds or temperature. By constantly keeping the complexion clear, white and soft, it does more towards preserving a youthful countenance than any of the arts or artifices commonly employed. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will completely renovate the worst complexion. It is applied at night like cold cream and then washed off in the morning.

To keep the skin from wrinkling or to overcome such a condition, there's nothing better than a face bath made by dissolving one ounce of powdered saxolite in ½ pint of witch hazel.

It is a constant struggle with men to know if they would live out their lives, or die in themselves and be born.

CHINA RAISING ARMY.

TEUTON OFFICERS TRAINING MILLIONS, RETURNED TRAVELLER REPORTS.

DENVER, January 26.—"China now has an army of 1,500,000 men under arms, and within the next ten years will have a standing army of about 2,000,000 men, and a reserve army of about 10,000,000 men," said Capt. Cushing A. Rice, U.S.A., retired, son of ex-Governor Rice of Minnesota, who has just returned to the United States from the Orient, and is in Denver visiting friends. He says that China has awakened to the necessity of a military strength sufficient to protect her from covetous enemies.

"Yuan Shi Kai," he says, "is going about preparedness as rapidly as he can, and the 1,500,000 soldiers already under training shows what he can do. These soldiers were trained and drilled by German and Austrian officers. Most of the soldiers are from the northern part of China and are big husky fellows.

"On my visit to Japan I found the people to be friendly to the United States. Whatever feeling Japan had against Americans has died out with the realization that other white countries are making similar objections to Japanese immigration that have been made in this country."

Captain Rice's home is in Havana, Cuba. When in the United States, unless travelling, he lives at the Army and Navy Club, in New York City. While in Australia and China he spent much of his time hunting.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"More to strike out the answer as unresponsive," Bob snapped, and the

"I am the attorney myself," she replied entire courtroom broke into a loud guffaw.

"Witness must answer the question," the judge said gravely. "Where do you live?"

"I live with Mis' Billington, sure," Susan replied, "at 2076 West End avenue."

"Do you know the defendant?" Marion asked, this being the second conventional question.

Again Susan made an unconventional answer.

"Why, Mis' Billington," she explained impatiently, "wot's de matter wit you? Ain't I told you all about dat lady? Sure, I know her."

Again the courtroom guffawed and Marion's cheeks flamed anew.

"Move to strike out all the answer," said Bob calmly, "except the words: Sure, I know her.'"

"Strike it out," said the judge.

From this point on Marion's examination of Susan was conducted in a perfect storm of laughter from the auditors and paper weight bangings from Ed. who was denting the rail in an effort to preserve order. As for Bob, he objected to the form of almost every question and was sustained each time, while he moved to strike out every other answer, with the like result. Consequently it was almost noon before he rose to commence his cross examination of Miss Konvalinka.

"Now, Susie," he began, "you're not used to working for private families, are you?"

"Sure I am so!" Susan replied, with asperity. "I always work by private families."

"As a matter of fact, Mrs. Schultz kept a boarding house, didn't she?" he asked pleasantly.

"Positively not."

"Well, it was a place where they carried on a business, wasn't it?"

"What you mean?" Susan asked.

"Carry on a business?"

"Why, Mrs. Schultz had some sort of business—some sort of dressmaking business—there, didn't she?"

"Positively not!"

"Well, then, Mrs. Schultz is a widow who works for her own living, isn't she?" Bob went on.

"No, sir," Susan answered. "Mrs. Schultz, she a married lady. She not work for her living. She not work for nobody. She never stir a hand to help her girls. No, sir!"

"Then," Bob asked, "where did she get the money to keep up her house? Who gave it to her?"

"Why, Mr. Schultz, sure!" cried Susan triumphantly. "He gives her lots of money. He got good business downtown. Why she no pay me I don't know."

"That's all," said Bob as he sat down.

"Have you any more witnesses to call, madam?" the judge asked Marion.

Marion shook her head. She was too choked up for speech.

"Then that is your case?" the judge went on.

"Yes, sir," Marion croaked.

"Now, proceed rapidly, if you please, Mr. Billington," the judge said. "This action has taken up too much of the court's time already. Call your witnesses, please."

"My witness has just testified," said Bob. "Now, if your honor please, I move to dismiss the complaint upon the ground that it appears by plaintiff's own testimony that the defendant is a married woman, living with and supported by her husband. She is not engaged in any dressmaking or boarding house business, nor was the plaintiff employed by her in a business capacity, or for business purposes. Therefore, the husband of the defendant is liable for the plaintiff's wages, and my friend on the other side ought to have brought her action against Mr. Schultz, and not against Mrs. Schultz."

The judge tied up all the papers together.

"I quite agree with you, Mr. Billington," he said. "The complaint is dismissed."

"With costs, if your honor please?" Bob asked.

"Five dollars costs," said the court. "Next case."

Bob grabbed his hat and coat and turned toward Marion.

"Well, Billington," he said, "so you lost your case."

But Marion was gathering her papers together and answered never a word. By this time the color had faded from her cheeks, and she had compressed her mouth into a thin straight line in an effort to prevent her lower lip trembling.

"Will you send me a check for the costs?" Bob went on, as Marion started for the door, "or shall I issue an execution against your client's property?"

"You big brute!" Marion exclaimed. "You can do as you please."

"Pass out quietly there," Ed admonished with a parting grin.

In the meantime Susan had been led from the witness stand. She made haste to follow her attorney out of the courtroom.

"Wait a moment, Susan!" Bob cried. She stopped short, and Bob pressed a twenty-dollar bill into her hand. "Don't say anything about this to Mrs. Billington," he enjoined her.

A smile spread itself about Susan's ears.

"Sure not!" she replied.

"And see that Mrs. Billington gets back to West End avenue all right," Bob called after her.

IV.

Going home that evening, for Bob, was like making a visit to the dentist, and his knees literally shook as he entered his house. He made straight for the dining room, where a cover was laid for one person only. Instead of Susan, the waitress, Mary, the chambermaid, stood behind his chair.

"Where's Mrs. Billington?" Bob asked.

"She sick," Mary replied.

Bob whistled. He had anticipated something of the kind.

"And where's Susan?" he went on.

"Susan, she gone," said Mary. "She get mad at Mrs. Billington and leave."

"What for?" asked Bob.

"She say Mrs. Billington owe her $20 what is coming from her other madam."

"Mrs. Schultz?"

Mary nodded.

"Sure," she went on, "and she want to know what Mrs. Billington going to do about it. And then Mrs. Billington say she not can give $20, but she say she give her $5—I don't know what for—and then Mrs. Billington say she get $20 from Mrs. Schultz's man. But Susan she get mad and say she want $20 right away, and she not wait for it from Mr. Schultz. So Mrs. Billington she give $20 to Susan and tell her she'd better go right away."

"And did Susan go right away?" Bob asked.

"No," said Mary. "She say if Mrs. Billington pay her month's wages, then she go, because her month was up Thursday."

"But I paid her last Thursday," Bob exclaimed.

"Sure," Mary replied. "Susan mean another month what ain't done yet."

"And did Mrs. Billington pay her for the new month?" asked Bob.

"No," said Mary. "Mrs. Billington say she wouldn't pay her one cent, and Susan could sue her in the court for it."

"And what did Susan say?"

"Susan say," Mary continued, "that she sue Mr. Billington, and not Mrs. Billington."

Bob could not restrain a laugh.

"And what did Mrs. Billington say to that?" he asked.

"She say for Susan to go ahead and she would be her lawyer, and then Susan say"— Here Mary paused.

"Don't stop on my account," Bob cried. "Tell me what Susan said."

"Well," Mary murmured, "she say, 'Mrs. Billington, I don't want you never no more for my lawyer,' she say 'You're a bum lawyer,' she said, and then she go."

A moment later Bob tiptoed upstairs and listened breathlessly at the bed

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE
FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

"D-but I'm not a brother attorney."

entered a faint sound of sobbing came from the darkness, and when he turned on the lights there on the bed lay Marion Billington, A. B., LL. B., attorney and counsellor at law, with her pretty face all flushed and tear stained. He fell on his knees beside her.

"Billington," he said softly, "one of the first lessons of the law is to bear defeat with equanimity and not to bear a grudge against a fellow practitioner because he won and you lost."

The sobbing grew fainter and then stopped altogether.

"D-don't call me Billington," she said. "Why, you don't expect me to be ceremonious with a brother attorney?" he asked.

Marion buried her face on his shoulder.

"B-but I'm not a brother attorney," she murmured. "I'm a sister attorney and a weak one too."

There was a long silence—that is to say, so far as coherent and articulate speech was concerned—but finally Bob spoke.

"Remember this, dear lady," he said. "Every case you try I shall be the attorney on the other side if money can buy a substitution, and if it can't then I shall pay the damages myself rather than have you thrust into the publicity and discourtesy of petty litigation again."

"But I never shall be," said Marion, smiling through her tears.

"Why not?" Bob asked.

"Because," she replied, "I've permanently retired from active practice."

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaker or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and drew this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

Pretty Shrewd.

It seems to be the aim of some people to acquire a reputation for shrewdness, which in many cases is only another name for roguery. Such people take a delight in tricking their friends as well as enemies, like the wealthy old lady who occupied her leisure in making patchwork quilts, which she regularly donated to the annual church fairs. They were hideous things and, as nobody would buy them, they were apt to be raffled off in ignominious fashion at the close of the fair, much to the chagrin of the old lady. One day, just before the fair time, this old lady sent for her lawyer and had him add a codicil to her will, bequeathing $25 to each and every person who should buy a quilt at the church fair. The lawyer assured her that her injunctions to strict secrecy should be faithfully observed, but it was noticed that a sister of the lawyer bought the silk quilt on the very first day of the fair for six years. When the old lady died the lawyer came smilingly forward with six quilts and his sister to claim the sum of $150. But he was tricked in turn, as the old lady had neatly cut the codicil from the will!

If a little salt is sprinkled in the bottom of a frying-pan the fat will not splash over the stove.

Milk will never burn if, before heating, a little cold water is put into the saucepan and brought to the boil. Then heat the milk in the usual way.

So many people are busy knitting socks for the soldiers that the following hint may come in useful. When the socks are quite finished darn the heels and toes on the wrong side by picking up the stitches and darning so as not to show them on the right side of the socks. This makes them last twice as long again before wearing into holes.

For oatcakes put 2 1-2 handfuls of fine oatmeal in a bowl, with a teaspoonful of sugar and a little salt. Pour over this three-quarters of a pint of boiling water in which one oz. of butter or dripping has been melted. Mix well with a spoon, then turn out on the board and knead with the hands in a round. Take the rolling pin and roll out very thin, taking care to dust the pin well with meal to keep it from sticking. Nick nicely round the edges with finger and thumb. Cut in four. Have the girdle nice and hot, bring it to the edge of the board, and slip the cakes on to it. Fire on one side until the edges begin to curl up. Then toast the other side in front of the fire. An hour or two in a moderately hot oven makes them nice and dry and crisp.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Question of Honor.

Sergeant Brady and his squad of men had been out from Fort Thomas for four days, cutting and placing telegraph poles, when they were fired on by the Sioux. There was a treaty of peace between the white man and the red, but it had been felt for three months past that the latter were getting ready to break it. The sergeant had gone out without instructions what to do in case he was attacked. When he found that he was menaced he did what a veteran captain would have done. He called in his men, scattered for two miles along the line, and threw up defenses and prepared to stand off the Indians until a courier could get through to the fort and return with instructions.

Unfortunately for Sergeant Brady, the regimental adjutant "had it in" for the grizzled old veteran, who had put in twenty years on the frontier and knew all the tricks of the red men. Three or four things had occurred to prove that the adjutant was after the sergeant's stripes, and for weeks the latter had walked the chalk line to defeat the former's plans. When the courier dodged the gathering warriors and reached the fort and reported the commandant was for directing the squad to come in at once, but it was the adjutant who said:

"Sergeant Brady simply reports seeing signs and being fired on. It is some of the young bucks giving him a scare. He's got rattled over nothing. We have no reports of outbreaks."

"He has shown his bravery a score of times, but perhaps he has made too much of this occasion," mused the commandant. "I will order him to hold his position for three days and then report again. I will also caution him not to provoke hostilities."

It was a tight squeak for the courier to return to the little command. The Indians were creeping up on all sides and boasting that there should be a wipe-out. Already there had come a demand for surrender, and hostile bullets had come singing over the defenses. The sergeant read his orders and then assembled his men, read them aloud and said:

"It's the hand of the adjutant, me boys, and it makes no difference to him that the rest of you have got to go down with me. It's rattled I am, is it, after being at the front in a score of shindies with the red devils! We are not to provoke hostilities with 200 copper faced heathen waiting for our scalps!"

Seventy or eighty Indians who had crept as near as they could find cover rose up at a signal and rushed the breastwork of brush and limbs and bowlders. The seven concentrated their fire on the rush and broke it. Twenty redskins lay dead when the living retreated.

"Take a long breath and do a little smiling, me boys," said the sergeant as he turned over and sat up. "That's a thing we might brag about at the post if any of us were to get there. We are going to get value received, but don't forget what the end is to be. If there were twenty of us and we had two guns apiece it would still be the same. Rafferty, what place in the old country is responsible for that mug of yours?"

"The city of Dublin, as far as I can remember," was the reply.

"I've been there myself and can't say too much in honor of the town. If you've an old mother back there you might do a bit of praying before our friends make another move. O'Grady, did you bring that red hair of yours all the way across the big water?"

"Indeed, sorra, but I did. It was colored for me in the county of Tipperary."

"The Indian who gets your scalp lock will be mighty proud of the same. O'Mears, are ye thinking of that sweetheart of yours back there in New York city?"

"That's what I am, Sergeant Brady. I'm thinking how much more decent it would have been of me to catch the smallpox and die within sound of her wailing."

"Well, laugh and smile over it just the same. McGraw, I'm thinking I see a wetness about your eyes. Have ye been rubbing at them with some fine cut tobacco?"

"Not at all, sarge, but curse the map who held us here to be wiped out!"

"It don't need no vote to see that we all think alike on that, but it's no time for tears. We've been put on our honor, and we are going to die with smiles on our faces. Whist, but they have bullets to spare around us!"

The Indians had completely encircled the little band, and for half an hour they poured in such a rain of bullets that every spot within the defenses was searched. Rafferty and O'Grady were killed and Sullivan and O'Mears desperately wounded before it ceased.

"Four from seven leaves three," said the sergeant as he rose to his knees and looked around. "The next move is to die smiling, me boys. They'll come with whoops and yells and be over the breastwork in a jiffy. Down we'll go under the crush, but some day the boys back at the post will learn that we did our best. Get ready—they're coming!"

* * * * * * *

"Dead—all of them!" said a captain as he looked over the defenses two days later. "Who was it that called it a false alarm? Who said that Sergeant Brady was losing his nerve?"

"See there, sir!" said one of the men as he pointed to the sergeant.

And all saw that the battle scarred old veteran had died with a smile on his face.

Chocolate, Spanish Style.

To know the finest method for making chocolate or cocoa one must learn of the practice in Spain or in one of the Spanish American countries. There one finds out two important things. The first concerns the utensil in which the chocolate is made. Our nearest approach to this is an enameled ware double boiler. Indeed, this is a perfectly satisfactory substitute for the heavy and fragile chocolate pots favored by some of the Spanish countries. The second point is that chocolate is better if not served freshly made. Chocolate and cocoa are much smoother and the flavor is much improved if they are prepared some hours before service. Cook the chocolate in the enameled ware boiler very thoroughly. Set in a cool place and let stand until required. Then beat to the boiling point and serve either with or without whipped cream.

Geographical Forenames.

The name "Dardanelles," which one girl baby bears, is more musical than some geographical names with which children are burdened. Mrs. Andrew Lang tells of a family where the babies were named after the places where the father happened to be when he heard of their births. He being a courier, there were a St. Petersburg and a Naples, Kattegat and Skagerrak were the twins, while the only daughter was named Vienna.

Another curious geographical name is recorded in the "Souvenirs du Chevalier de Comy." In 1820, when attached to the French embassy at Berlin, he met a Countess Bernstorff, who had been christened America because she was born there during the war of independence, her father at that time being in command of a Hessian regiment.—Pall Mall Gazette.

ELDERLY WOMEN SAFEGUARDED

Tell Others How They Were Carried Safely Through Change of Life.

Durand, Wis.—"I am the mother of fourteen children and I owe my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I was 45 and had the Change of Life, a friend recommended it and it gave me such relief from my bad feelings that I took several bottles. I am now well and healthy and recommend your Compound to other ladies."—Mrs. MARY RIDGWAY, Durand, Wis.

A Massachusetts Woman Writes:

Blackstone, Mass. — "My troubles were from my age, and I felt awfully sick for three years. I had hot flashes often and frequently suffered from pains. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now am well."—Mrs. PERSIS COMSTOCK, Box 239, Blackstone, Mass.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backache, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness, should be heeded by middle-aged women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has carried many women safely through this crisis.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys.

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are disturbed. When the kidneys no longer pass forth waste, uraemic poisoning occurs and the person dies, and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his medical opinion without charge—absolutely free. This "Anuric" of Doctor Pierce's is found to be 27 times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system as hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for blood and stomach.

WORRY, DESPONDENCY.

Kidney Disease is suspected by medical men when patients complain of backache or suffer with irregular urination, disturbed, too frequent, scanty or painful passage. The general symptoms are rheumatic pains or neuralgia, headaches, dizzy spells, irritability, despondency, weakness and general misery. Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets.

ENGLAND ECONOMIZES.

Dukes Ride on Buses and No Longer Eat Butter.

England is beginning to feel the financial pinch of the war and nowhere is it getting worse than among the peers and peeresses, and everyone is starting in to save, writes a correspondent.

All sorts of economies are being introduced. Buckingham Palace sets the pace, and it's said that Queen Mary now has only the simplest sort of food on the royal table. So it is nearly everywhere else. In plenty of great houses margarine has taken the place of butter. Electric light and gas bills are being cut down.

This economizing is popular, too, and everyone practises it. For those who never had anything anyhow it's quite a blessing, for now they don't have to worry about keeping up their end and making a good showing. Economy now isn't a thing to be ashamed of.

The other day I was in the provisions department of a great shop in London. In came Princess Henry of Battenberg, who deals there. She gave an order for five pounds of margarine, the substitute for butter, and sailed out again. I haven't the slightest doubt it was for her own table, as well as for her servants. I've heard of one duke's household where butter isn't used at all any more.

But economy doesn't extend all through the social scale. A day or so ago I was in another provision shop when a woman, obviously of the working class, came in. I heard the girl shop assistant trying to sell her margarine.

"No thanks, Miss," said the customer, "my old man wouldn't spoil his inside with this new-fangled stuff. The best for him or nothing."

People are riding on the motor omnibuses more than ever before—I mean real people, dukes and duchesses and so on. Someone was making up a list the other day of people who a year ago wouldn't be seen dead in a 'bus; they'd have their own car or a hired one, and as for riding in the stuffy tube, they wouldn't think of such a thing. This listmaker has spotted a couple of dukes, three or four duchesses, and no end of other people of high degree who had been seen atop 'buses, just like 'Arry and 'Arriett.

Colors of the Rainbow.

Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red are the colors of the rainbow. Most are sure of that. It is true, however, of only a very few rainbows. The colors of rainbows vary with their width, and their width varies with the size of the raindrops, big drops producing narrow bows with bright, clearly defined colors, small drops producing wide bows with pale colors. Here are the colors as generally seen: First, when the raindrops average one millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, light red, dark red; second, when the drops average one-tenth of a millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, and, third, when the drops average one-tenth of a millimeter, very pale violet, violet, whitish blue, whitish green.

Was Troubled With BOILS

ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TOOKE BROS. LIMITED MONTREAL

AUSTRALIA'S LLOYD GEORGE.

Another Welshman Who Rose by Persistence, Industry and Service.

The Lloyd George of Australia is the newly-elected premier, William Morris Hughes, a Welshman who went out to the big island 30 years ago and has just been made Prime Minister of the province.

Until he was about 10 years old William Morris Hughes knew but little English, but when he had acquired a better knowledge of that language he became a devoted student of it through the medium of classic works—the Bible, Shakespeare and Dickens. Before he was 20 he was obliged to earn his living as a state school teacher and, his health having suffered from the strain, he went to Australia.

This step he took in 1884. For the next 10 years his life was a succession of struggles to find work, keep it, and retain his health. He was at various times a boundary rider or ranch hand, a railroad freight stories hand, a shed-builder, a posthole digger, a vineyard helper, an employe in different capacities on coastwise steamers and a driver, and once he tramped 900 miles in search of employment, only to be disappointed.

An illness finally turned him to seeking his fortune in the city of Sydney, where he had to peddle books, mend umbrellas, and do almost anything else which came to hand. At this stage he became a Socialist and single taxer—the latter from hearing lectures by Henry George, who was then on a tour of Australia and reading Mr. George's work, "Progress and Poverty."

Upon the formation of the Labor party in New South Wales as a separate entity, Mr. Hughes threw his whole soul into the movement and he may quite properly be said to be a founder of the party as it exists in Australia to-day. In 1894 Mr. Hughes was elected a member of the New South Wales legislative assembly and he soon gained a reputation as a trenchant speaker and hard worker. It was during his service in this body that he introduced and had passed the Early Closing Act.

In 1901, when the first elections were held for the government of the forthcoming commonwealth, Mr. Hughes was elected a member of the House of Representatives by a constituency in Sydney which is composed mostly of wharf laborers. Mr. Hughes was admitted to the bar in 1903 and in 1904 he rose to cabinet rank. This was in Australia's first labor ministry—that of J. C. Watson. He was Minister for external affairs during the short life of the Watson Government, but on the labor party's again coming into power, in 1908, he became Attorney General. This position he has held in every successive labor cabinet and he does not expect to relinquish it now that he has become Prime Minister by the action of the labor caucus, which is to say he will assume the duties of both offices.

Prisoners Who "Do Their Bit."

The war has brought about a decrease in crime in the United Kingdom.

There are not nearly so many people in prison now as there were in times of peace. Indeed, in August, 1914, no fewer than 12,580 people were behind prison bars; in March last there were only 9,188.

Even those who are left in durance vile seem anxious to do their bit for the country. Numerous articles were required quickly for the use of Tommy and Jack at the Front. The prisoners put their backs into the work and turned it out in record time. As a reward the Government allowed them to be made acquainted with the progress of naval and military operations once a week. This stimulated them as nothing else could have done to turn out war stores.

From the outbreak of war up to May 1st last, 240 inmates of Borstal institutions who had previously served in the army were released to enlist. Thirty-five of these were later promoted to be non-commissioned officers, sixteen were killed or wounded, and only seventeen committed fresh offences.

Indian Tiger Superstitions.

In India the people believe in very many old fairy tales.

One of these is that the ghost of a man killed by a tiger rides on the head of the beast that slew him to warn him of danger and to guide him to new victims.

It is declared that Providence provides for the tiger's daily wants to the amount of one rupee (two shillings) a day; that is to say, if a tiger kills a calf worth six rupees he will not be allowed another victim for five days.

Eating the flesh of a tiger is supposed to give one great courage and alertness, but the whiskers must first be singed off the beast, or his spirit will haunt the man who fed off him, and he is likely to be turned into a tiger in the next world.

Tangible Evidence.

"That man cuts a big figure in the railroad world."

"He'll leave footprints on the sands of time, eh?"

"Well, he'll leave some tracks."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HOW WAR HARDSHIPS ALTER MAN'S NATURE

The New Soldier Turns From a Prig to a Man—Mother's Apron Strings No Longer—A Glorious Lesson

It is a mistake to imagine that men are selfish by nature. From the moment a baby boy comes upon the earth women does her best to make him so. The mother waits upon him with almost lavish devotion; the sweetheart worships and bows down to her lover; and the wife finds herself compelled to become a willing slave to her husband if she hopes for peace and happiness in her home.

Imagine a woman becoming almost ill with worry and anxiety because the laundry had not returned and a certain shirt her husband preferred wearing on Sundays would not be in its place. This did really happen, however, and it was with fear and trembling she broke the "terrible news" to him. The man had grown so accustomed to having everything he needed at hand that if anything in the home went the least bit out of gear trouble ensued.

Made Mother Slave

When war broke out he was one of the first to volunteer. The early days of recruiting proved very painful and irritating owing to the lack of customary comforts. Afterwards when in the trenches it dawned upon him that his wife must have been a martyr to his fads and fancies. He came home so considerate and easy to please that he seemed a different man.

Then there was a young clerk who was the only son of his widowed mother. They could not afford a servant, so the old lady did all the work, which included blacking her boy's boots, bringing coal, chopping wood, and working far too hard. Each morning she would awaken him and bring his shaving water, and it never struck the man that he could relieve his mother of some of her duties.

He wasn't the quickest to enlist. He had grown too accustomed to the ease of a comfortable home. Nevertheless, as soon as he found men were really needed his better nature awoke, and he was off at once. His first spell of leave brought a much less selfish man to his homestead. Roughing it had shown him what a prig he was to let a frail old woman do laborious work while there was a man about the house.

Classes Unite Again

The spirit of "grab" seems to be disappearing. Men are ceasing to think only of themselves. The itch to acquire and profit at somebody else's expense is not nearly so strong; and the war between class and class is not waging so fiercely.

In the ranks, therer are university men side by side with laborers. When war began the former would have regarded the latter as inferior beings. To-day they are comrades and friends fighting for the same good cause. Whatever has been the effect of other wars, there is little doubt that after this is over a spirit of mutual toleration, of better understanding, and of brotherliness will exist, which has never been known before.

A LIFETIME OF SICKNESS

Worn Out, Thin and Miserable Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

PALMERSTON, June 20th, 1914.

"Stomach Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives," your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. I said, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives." He said, "If Fruit-a-tives make you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can."

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

Why Wet Land is Cold.

"C. G. Hopkins, soil expert, says that five times as much heat is required to evaporate water from the surface of a soil as would be needed to raise the temperature of the same amount of water from the freeing to the boiling point," says the current issue of Farm and Fireside. "This explains why wet and poorly drained soils are cold.

"Tile drainage removes the excess water. Then the heat of the sun is able to make some headway in warming the soil. But if the soil is continually saturated with water the constant evaporation keeps the temperature down in spite of the sun's warmth."

Banish Pimples!

Pimples, Boils, and other skin eruptions are an almost infallible indication that the blood is impure.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the simplest and most positive Blood Purifier that can be used. Does Pain Interfere?

—There is a remedy

Sloan's Liniment

Read this unsolicited grateful testimony—

Not long ago my left knee became lame and sore. It pained me many restless nights. So serious did it become that I was forced to consider giving up my work when I chanced to think of Sloan's Liniment. Let me say—less than one bottle fixed me up. Chas. C. Campbell, Florence, Tex.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will not stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Fresh Figs.

The first known tree referred to in the Bible is the fig tree. We are apt to think of figs as very sweet dried fruit, brown in color, packed into long wooden boxes. When newly gathered figs are rather like plums in shape and of a green or purple color. Eaten in this state, the people of the east consider them the most delicious of fruit, but the figs are also dried, and in that form are included in almost every meal.

The Modern Way.

Mrs. Henry Peste—Men have degenerated sadly since the days of chivalry. Sir Walter Raleigh spread his cloak on the ground for the queen to walk on. Women do not walk on men's cloaks in these modern days, Mr. Henry Peste—No; they walk on men's necks now.

Open to Conviction.

"I understand," said Mr. Dolan, "that you declared there should be no more fightin'."

"I said that," replied Mr. Rafferty. "But I never was obstinate, an' mebbe a few words of argument from you can make me change my mind."

A Dilemma.

Wife—Henry, you really must have the landlord come and see for himself the awful damage the rain did to our ceiling. Hub—I can't without letting him see the damage the children have done to the rest of the house.

We are all born for love. It is the principle of existence and its only end. —Disraeli.

ESSENTIALS OF PITCHING.

First Comes Control, Then Knowledge of a Batter's Weakness.

"Control is the thing," say all the great pitchers, and all the great pitchers agree that a study of the batsman is next in importance. There are certain batters who can punish certain kinds of balls, while against a different style of pitching they are correspondingly weak. If a batter likes a fast ball at the waist line it becomes the duty of the wise pitcher never to give him a ball to his liking. Perhaps he is weak on a curve ball at the knee on the outside. The foxy pitcher makes a specialty of offering him that kind of delivery in abundance. In deciding what is best to pitch to the various batters a brainy catcher is of wonderful assistance.

Then, too, the pitcher must study situations. When he divines that a sacrifice is the play it is usually the best plan to keep the ball high. Such a ball is harder to meet squarely, while it is almost impossible to give it definite direction. On a low ball the skillful bunter can usually place it toward first or third, as is desired. For batters who have a tendency to pull away pitchers usually keep the ball on the outside, mostly depending on the curve. Seldom do batters who pull meet such balls squarely. As a rule they hit fast balls on the inside hard. The batter who hugs the plate closely and steps into the ball is bothered most by a fast ball on the inside, as it has a tendency to make him meet the ball on the handle, thereby losing most of the force he puts into the swing.

The pitcher must also take into consideration the position of his infield and must know who is covering the base on a throw, so that he may pitch to aid his infielders.—Billy Evans in St. Nicholas.

Christening Bottels.

There are many superstitions in England connected with the manner in which baby is carried into church for the baptismal service. It is supposed to affect the character and disposition in after-life. The nurse, or whoever carries him or her, should enter the church with the right foot, stepping briskly and dancing the baby in her arms, so that the little one shall grow up cheerful and light-hearted.

Another old-fashioned theory is that if a boy is baptized in the water previously used for a girl he will grow up feeble and effeminate; while if the case is reversed the baby girl will grow up lacking in womanly attributes. In every country white is employed for all baby garments, but where a little color is introduced the superstitious mother takes care that it is a lucky shade. Red is said to be a lucky color, pink and blue are also favorable, but green, the color of jealousy, and yellow symbolize strife.

Mayoral Curiosities.

There are several modern Dick Whittingtons among the new lord mayors and mayors of England and Wales. Councillor Charles Thomas, the new Mayor of Newport began life as a pitboy at Barnsley Colliery, while Councillor George Nicholls, who is the new Mayor of Peterborough, started work as a farm laborer, afterwards working as a navvy and helping to excavate Tilbury Docks.

Among other mayoral curiosities it might be mentioned that Alderman William James Hughes, the Mayor of Sandwich, who is elected mayor for the thirteenth time, was presented with a black wand in accordance with an ancient custom which commemorates the death of a Danish Mayor of Sandwich, who, in A.D. 840, was killed in the battle of the Danes at Bloody Point, in the Sandwich haven.

The old custom of "weighing in" the mayor is still kept up at High Wycombe, Bucks, and Councillor John Gomm, the new mayor, submitted himself to the ordeal of the scales, while the only working journalist in the kingdom to be elected mayor is Alderman J. T. Raby, Fellow of the Institute of Journalists, who fills the mayoral chair of Lichfield.

Sir John Lubbock's Ant.

In the biography of Sir John Lubbock, later Lord Avebury, is an amusing story of the notice accorded to an odd pet in the Lubbock family. One of two illustrious queen ants, sovereign of one of the colonies upon which Sir John based his famous studies of the ways of the little creatures, attained the venerable age of fourteen years and then died. Several scientific journals spoke of her decease, and the news penetrated to France, where a distinguished French journalist, in whose mind, insufficiently acquainted with the possibilities of English orthography, ants and aunts were evidently confused, offered profuse condolences to Sir John "on the loss of his aged and valued relative."

Outwitting the Court.

"I understand that when Dibbles and his wife separated they parted the best of friends."

"So they did, unluckily for Mrs. Dibbles."

"Why so?"

"Dibbles pays her alimony every month and then borrows half of it back."

A Matter of the Future.

"When does the fast train leave for Dobbsville?" asked the old lady at the ticket window.

"I don't know, ma'am," answered the elderly ticket agent, "but I don't suppose either of us will live long enough to take it."—Exchange.

Sydney Smith to His Daughter.

London, July 22, 1838.—Lucy, Lucy, my dear child, don't tear your frocks. Tearing frocks is not of itself a proof of genius, but write as your mother writes, act as your mother acts, be frank, loyal, affectionate, simple, honest and then integrity or laceration of frock is of little import.

And Lucy, dear child, mind your arithmetic. You know, in the first sum of yours I ever saw there was a mistake. You had carried two (as a cab is licensed to do), and you ought, dear Lucy, to have carried but one. Is this a trifle? What would life be without arithmetic but a scene of horrors?

You are going to Boulogne, the city of debts, peopled by men who never understood arithmetic. By the time you return I shall probably have received my first paralytic stroke and shall have lost all recollection of you. Therefore, I now give you my parting advice. Don't marry anybody who has not a tolerable understanding and a thousand a year, and God bless you, dear child.

Birds and Their Notes.

Most of us know the chickadee when we hear him calling over and over, "Chick-a-dee, dee, dee, chick-a-dee, dee, dee!" But when he sings his clear whistling note, "Phoebe, Phoebe!" we are likely to mistake him for the phoebe bird, says an exchange. The chickadee stays in the north in winter, and the phoebe does not come north till the early spring. The phoebe bird sings its name over and over, a very sweet, but penetrating sound. The peabody bird says, "Peabody, peabody, peabody!" over and over in a rather senseless way, as if he went round in a circle. Another bird that sings his name is bob white (the quail), only he often says, "Poor bob white!" His notes go up and down and are stronger than the notes of the smaller birds and may be heard at a long distance. Of course those birds do not really sing their names. But people listening to them have fancied that these names are what the notes sound most like, and so they have given the bird the name.—Exchange.

Why Languages Differ.

An interesting contribution to the discussion of a universal language is offered by the Montreal Family Herald.

The adoption of a universal language, purely spoken by all who use it, is made difficult by the fact that there are physical differences of an important character between the different races. The vocal organs are so unlike in different peoples that a language originally uniform would soon change in the mouths of the various nations until they could no longer understand one another. If the Italian language could be taught to all Chinese or Russians it would change so rapidly that in a few years no one would recognize it as Italian. One theory to account for this fact is that the people in the chilly north speak with the lips nearly closed and that those who live in milder climates give free articulation by opening the mouth.

Malicious.

At German seaside places they have a way of assigning each bather a number. These numbers are conspicuously displayed on beach chairs, tents and bathing dresses. The two young women in the swimming suits who had been drawing the eyes of all beholders were very agreeably posed as a group when they caught sight of a third young woman coming toward them across the sands.

"My," said the one in the red cap, "but Laura is wearing a big number on her suit! What is it—75,000?"

"Oh, don't you know?" giggled the nymph in green. "That isn't really Laura's number. That's the figure of her dowry."—Exchange.

Orotorios in English.

Speaking of the wonderful annunciation of Sims Reeves, Sir Frederic Cowen relates an anecdote illustrative of the opposite effect. "One could always understand what he was singing about, not like a certain other artist of the time (it is true she was German), who invariably turned the words of Mendelssohn's 'Oh, for the wings of a dove!' into 'Oh, for-ty grins, for-ty winks!'"

How To Rid the Skin of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

Money and Politics.

In his reminiscences of Grover Cleveland George F. Parker tells a story of the prodigal expenditures in politics. A rich man who had been nibbling at the Democratic nomination for governor of New York asked William C. Whitney's advice. This is the advice: "Of course you ought to run. Make your preliminary canvass, and when you have put in $200,000 you will have become so much interested in it that you will feel like going ahead and spending some money."

Turtles of the Amazon.

The fresh water turtle of the Amazon grows to a great size, especially on the upper river, where full grown ones three feet in length, two in width and weighing 200 pounds are often seen. Every house has its little pond or corral to hold a stock of these animals through the season of dearth, the wet months. Those who have Indians in their employ send them out for a month when the waters are low to select a stock; others purchase their supply.

Watches Are Sympathetic.

Superstition or not, I am half sure the watch is alive and knows its owner; that it has some sort of sympathy with the person who carries it. Do you not know the bitterness of sending your own watch to hospital and harboring another—a patient—in your pocket? It lies—always. The scientific man reduces the whole matter to rhythmic motion. To put it roughly, the watch likes—or does not like—your particular skip, jump, stump or decent walk. Really the scientist has nothing much more to say about it as a conclusion, but that—rhythmic—notion. The touch of the watch on the heart.—London Chronicle.

Oldest Temperance Lecture.

A foreign exchange has this interesting paragraph: "There is still in existence an Egyptian papyrus of the date of 3,500 years before the Christian era, which contains the following caution: 'My son, do not linger in the wineshop or drink too much wine. It causeth thee to utter words regarding thy neighbor which thou remembereest not. Thou fallest upon the ground; thy limbs become weak as those of a child. One cometh to traile with thee and findeth thee so. Then say they, "Take away the fellow, for he is drunk."'" This is believed to be the oldest temperance lecture in existence.—Christian Herald.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Sage Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up

GIRLS! HAVE WAVY, THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Save Your Hair! Double Its Beauty in a Few Moments—Try This!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

Thunder at Sea.

The Astronomical Society of France has again taken up the discussion which has been before it on several previous occasions, and that is the statement that thunder is never heard at sea. The statement was originally attributed to Baron von Humboldt, and it has been frequently questioned, but those who insist that they have heard thunder at sea have also stated that the peals were not so loud as on land. A large number of seamen have been found to agree with the scientist, although it is suggested that the other noises prevailing on shipboard during a storm may be the reason why the thunder often passes unnoticed.

Maker of Dictionaries Not Envied.

Can any one envy the maker of dictionaries? To Sir James Murray the readers were drawn in, those who were to garner words. Some hundred thousand "works" were examined by a staff of assistants with two eyes and a bit of brain, and they may have got the spelling right. But think of the task of the searcher, going through the books he loves in the search for a word! And missing all else. For the man with the demand upon him would read the Bible with one eye for misprints. No such torture for the lover of literature could be devised like the making of a dictionary.—London Chronicle.

I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The question of the school dress does not become less important after a month of school, for frocks become worn and stained and it is necessary to replace them frequently if the little wearer is to present a fresh and neat appearance. For this reason we would suggest several dresses of comparatively cheap materials rather than one or two of more expensive fabrics.

The dress shown in the illustration is one which is becoming to all children and to girls of larger growth as well. It also offers one of the season's novelties in the pleated skirt.

The blouse is plain and it has the new side front closing. The neck is of round finish with a collar of medium size lying flatly upon the shoulders. The sleeves are entirely plain, with no fulness at the shoulders, but with a trifle at the cuff.

The skirt has two distinct parts. One of these is the yoke, which is rounded to follow the shape of the figure, and below it the straight lower part is attached. This is side pleated from a plain front panel and the pleats meet in the centre of the back. The material may also be gathered if preferred. The closing is placed at the side of the front panel.

Nothing is more effective for such dresses as these than the pretty plaids which are shown in serge and poplin. Poplin has the advantage of shedding dust and of not showing a shiny place where it is rubbed. It costs a little more at the start, but it pays for the outlay. These are also numbers of cheaper novelty woollens, plaids, stripes and plain colors.

The dress pattern, No. 7832, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires, with pleated skirt, 3¼ yards of 44 inch material. Also ⅝ yard of 27 inch organdie for collar.

This pattern can be obtained by sending coats to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

What to Do to Get Fat and Increase Weight

The Real Cause of Thinness

Most people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day, and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly, and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Most thin people stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay-there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay there in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will improve their fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and distribute them all about the body—something that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition it is well to recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is simply a careful combination of six of the most effective and powerful assimilative and flesh-building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet has been wonderfully effective, and a single tablet eaten with each meal often, according to reports of users, has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by all good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight, firmness or money back.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 to the National Laboratories, 19 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

Allied Monitors Shell The Germans On Belgian Coast

Guns Did Good Work Say Dispatches From Amsterdam Blockade of Germany Proposed in British House of Commons---Toronto Raises $1,250,000 For Patriotic Fund in a Day and a Half---Berlin Says German Trenches in Argonne Were Destcoyed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 26.—Allied monitors drew in close to the Belgian coast and shelled the German positions at West-Ende, according to advices received here this afternoon. At the same time Anglo-French aviators bombarded the German works near Knocke and Heyst.

The shell fire of the Allies' monitors at West-Ende was particularly effective, according to the reports reaching here.

Numerous wounded Germans have arrived at Bruges and Ghent as the result of the raid.

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—At half time to-day Toronto and York county, which has set out to raise in three days, one quarter of the eight million dollars asked for from the whole Dominion for the Canadian Patriotic Fund, had raised one and a quarter millions. It is expected the full amount of two millions will be forthcoming Thursday at midnight when the campaign closes.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—Minor operations in Argonne in which French troops destroyed a portion of German trenches were reported in official despatches to-day. The Germans retained their hold on the wrecked works it was stated. There were no other important activities in any theatre of war.

British troops attempting to relieve the besieged garrison at Kut-El-Amara have ceased their attack after appalling losses near Felarte, said an official statement from the Turkish War Office to-day.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—Speech debate by Frank Carvell of Carleton yesterday resulted in a full Conservative caucus this morning.

Gen. Sir Sam Hughes speaks this afternoon. It is believed that he will confine himself to a discussion upon the benefits which the shell industry conferred upon the Dominion.

At the close of the caucus this morning the Prime Minister stated that "matters in connection with the sessional programme were discussed."

BRISTOL, Eng., Jan. 26.—By a big majority, representatives of more than two million British labouring men to-day adopted a resolution pledging their support to the British Government.

The resolution was passed amid cheers, shortly after a three-day session of the Labour Conference opened. With the same majority the delegate adopted a resolution, condemning German atrocities in France and Belgium.

The resolution of support refrained from mentioning conscription which is practically certain to meet with strong denunciation in resolutions to be presented either late to-day or to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Secretary Lansing and Ambassador Bernstorff conferred again to-day on the Lusitania matter, and again refused to discuss the result of their talk. Whether any progress was made toward adjusting the radical differences between viewpoints of the two countries made known yesterday with President Wilson's refusal to accept the German proposals, could not be told.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Lusitania matter is practically settled, Bernstorff said later. It is only a question of words. It ought to be all settled in a few days. He said he would communicate with his Government to-day.

BRISTOL, Eng., Jan. 26.—Wm. Crawford Anderson, member of Parliament, who presided at the opening session to-day, declared that attempts to make conscription the means of coercing unionists will result not only in great bitterness, but in failure. "I fear that England is attempting an impossible task," he said. "She is trying to become a great naval and military power, and a great industrial power at the same time. This is going to be a different world after the war. It will be a hard bad world for labour unless labour participates in the shaping of affairs.

ROME, Jan. 26.—Brindisi despatches to-day reported that Albanian troops under Essad Pasha retreated sothward towards El Bassan and encountered a Bulgarian force advancing from Conrida. The Albanians hurled back the Bulgars in a bloody battle.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—In a speech at Mansion House yesterday Father Bernard Vaughan said:

"Our business is to keep on killing Germans. Somebody has to be killed, and do you think we ought to be killed in view of what we entered this war for?"

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 26.—The serious state of affairs at Athens was emphasized by a Budapest despatch to the Berlin Lokal Anzieger to-day, reporting that M. Gounaris probably will succeed Mr. Skouloudis as Prime Minister.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Debate on the proposed blockade of Germany was formally opened this afternoon in the House of Commons. Arthur Shirley Benn, a Conservative member, moved the adoption of a resolution urging a blockade on all goods to and from Germany as an effective measure to shorten the war. Benn said he didn't believe America would interpose serious objections. In a speech supporting his resolution he declared that the United States and other neutrals would welcome the substitution of an admittedly legal blockade for "half way" measure, the legality of which they had questioned.

BRISTOL, Eng., Jan. 26.—Strong opposition to the Government's Conscription Bill was reported by delegates at the opening of the Labour Conference to-day, when six hundred representatives of more than two million workers gathered.

To-day's conference was the most important in the history of English Unionism, not only because of the conscription issue, but because of labour's attitude toward taxation and toward peace suggestions was to be discussed.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 26.—An unidentified vessel was to-day reported in distress off Cape Race, and sending up rocket signals for help.

PRIVILEGES OF THE Y.M.C.A. FOR 93RD SOLDIERS

Special Class Will Be Conducted For Men Rejected on Account of Some Slight Physical Defect

ASSAULT-AT-ARMS

General Secretary O. N. Meserve and Physical Director G. H. Roper of the local Y.M.C.A. were visitors at the armouries this morning to confer with Col. Johnston and staff regarding ways and means of interesting enlisted men in the privileges offered by the Y.M.C.A. Col. Johnston gave his hearty approval to an effort on the part of the Y.M.C.A. to get in closet touch with the men under his command, and also appointed Battalion Major Miller and Sergt. Major Hartshorn and Sergt. Loomis to act with the Y.M.C.A. officials in working out a schedule of events in which the men of the 93rd Battalion would participate at the Y.M.C.A. building. The representatives of the 93rd met in immediate conference with Messrs. Roper and Meserve and agreed to arrange an "assault at arms" to be held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium some night next week. Boxing and wrestling bouts, bayonet contests and other manly events to take place between the different platoons of the 93rd. The soldiers are to be given the right of way in bowling and billiards every afternoon from 4 to 6 and to be on the same basis with members in the use of the privileges during the evening. A special gymnasium class for soldiers is being arranged by Messrs. Roper and Sergt. Loomis for Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week. Other plans are being considered that it is hoped will serve to make the men of the Peterborough regiment feel perfectly at home in the Association building. Writing material and reading matter are always at the free disposal of the enlisted men.

Men who tried to enlist and failed because of some physical defect will be pleased to learn that the Y.M.C.A. proposes to conduct a special class for them seeking to overcome physical defects and qualify them for enlistment.

One More Attraction

Eight Day Clock to Be Given Away $ Day at Oak Hall

His Worship Mayor Duffus, wound and started a beautiful eight day clock at noon to-day in Oak Hall. The starting, however, is not the interesting part of it. When it will stop is going to keep a lot of people guessing. Everyone who buys a dollar or more value in goods at Oak Hall on Dollar Day, will get a guess for every dollar paid. They are to guess what time the clock will stop. The nearest guesser to the actual time, will be given the clock free.

The clock is a handsome mahogany case, chime hour strike, and is still another attraction to the doings on Dollar Day. ld-1w.

AN EXAMPLE TO THE CITY'S MANHOOD

Within the past couple of days there have been some incidents in regard to recruiting that should cause the young men of Peterborough who are not wearing the khaki, to stop and earnestly consider their position and their responsibility. On Sunday Mr. Geo. Thos. Willshaw of Union street enlisted with the 93rd. He has three sons in line, one of them with the Peterborough Battalion. Monday Mr. J. F. Ecobichon offered his services. Two sons of his are already in the 93rd. If the young men of Peterborough were alive to their duties there would be no necessity of these men, whose heroic sons are already in khaki, themselves shouldering a rifle and going off to fight for the benefit of others who are making no sacrifices.

BIG RECRUITING RALLY TO BE HELD IN EAST PETERBORO'

93rd Battalion Contingent Will Invade Norwood To-night For a Big Patriotic Demonstration, Going Down on a Special Train---Fourteen Men Added to the Strength This Morning---To-day's Military News.

The campaign for recruits for the 93rd Battalion will be carried into East Peterborough to-night, when a big recruiting rally will be held in Norwood. The 93rd Battalion will be represented by Lt.-Col. Johnston, Major Watt and other officers and by the bands and a number of N.C.O.'s and men. The contingent will leave on a special C.P.R. train at 6.30 o'clock and there will be a special train after the meeting. Judge Huycke and other local speakers will take part, and it will be the biggest patriotic demonstration ever held in Norwood.

Enlistment for the 93rd yesterday showed a falling off over Monday's big figure, five accepted recruits being the total for the day. Since last Thursday 63 new men have been taken on the strength, and some twenty more who passed the doctors will report in a day or two.

Bandsman G. Matthew, who has been transferred from the band of the 59th to the band of the 93rd, has joined the latter organization.

His many friends will be sorry to learn that Company Sergeant-Major Calladine, of B Company, is ill.

Writing to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Elcombe, 227 McDonnel street, Gunner Harold Elcombe, of the 2nd Canadian Reserve Brigade, says:

Jan. 10, 1916.

My Dear Father and Mother,—All the fellows came down to the soldiers' home to-night so I came along with them, and thought it would be a good opportunity to write a letter. This is a very comfortable little building fitted up with everything a soldier wants. There are pianos, writing tables, pool tables, every kind of a game imaginable and a very good canteen at moderate prices. You can even get a splendid meal here for a shilling. The weather over here is just beginning to be good. When we first arrived it rained nearly all the time. The mud was fierce. To tell the truth the mud was over your boot tops. A good many of the fellows were very sick with the cold but I managed to get through it fine. I was never bothered at all. The drilling over here is not so severe as it is in Canada. Instead of going for a mad gallop in the morning we go for a march at ease for about a mile. I think it is far better as you are not so tired for your day's work. The air over here in England is so bracing in the early morning. We are about a thousand yards from the English Channel. Every day we see air ships hovering about on patrol duty. Yesterday a Frenchman from the French aviation school flew across the channel and landed on our drill ground. He came down to get his bearings. Now and then we see warships pass up the channel guarding transports of soldiers which are leaving here every day in the week. I bought a kodak the other day. I took some good snaps last Sunday and I will send you some when they are finished. I am going to take a lot of snaps of places around here so I can make up an album. The scenery is magnificent around here. I was through Sandgate castle last Sunday. It was built by Henry VIII. (I wrote a post-card to aunt Alice as soon as I landed. She answered it the other day with a very pressing invitation to visit them. I am probably going down there next week.) We can get a pass here almost whenever we want it. Some of the fellows have got theirs already. I have met an awful lot of Peterboro fellows, Howard Crowe.

PETERBORO' HEADS THE LIST IN RECRUITING

GUNNER HOWARD COPP
93rd Battery.

This City Has the Largest Enlistment in Proportion to Population in Canada, East of Winnipeg. Therefore Question of Returned Soldiers is Important.

A MEETING TO-MORROW

For the last two weeks local activities have turned in the direction of building up the 93rd Battalion. We as a city made certain promises, and all energies have been bent in an effort to keep our word, that the 93rd Battalion should reach full strength. We will get there, as Peterborough has said. We now stand first in Canada, east of Winnipeg, for the largest enlistment in proportion to population. Let us keep that record.

There are other and serious things that claim our attention. Most material of these is that of the status and future of the returned soldier. All over the country cities, towns and communities are grappling with this momentous question. Now is the time to get ready. Not to leave it off. Not to look entirely to the government. Not to set it aside, individually, as something that should be attended to in the mass by some one else or some organization. It is our duty. Each should have a share. The service of the soldier comes alike to the benefit of all. Why dodge the inevitable issue that faces us for the future, the future of the disabled man.

Come Forward.

It is hoped that very many will come forward and take an interest in the work. Many helping, the duty will be shared. It is all very well to cheer the boys when they go away, but sad to show indifference when the bit has been done.

So come to the meeting to be held Thursday evening the Library Hall, corner of George and McDonnel streets. Your being there will show your interest. Attendance at such a meeting is an unfailing barometer of public feeling. A good meeting will help wonderfully. The speaker of the evening will be W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P., of Toronto, chairman of the Provincial Commission, who will place before the meeting the aims and objects of the association and the great need for a branch in this city. Local speakers will also speak, and will put before the meeting the situation locally.

You are urged to attend. Try and make it a personal duty. One that in which work you can lend a hand. There are many local organizations and all very active. One more will be quite in line and the hope is expressed that some new men, new in the sense that they are not now engaged in the activities going forward will pitch in and take a hand. If we all engage in these works we will have the satisfaction of knowing the returning men will not be neglected, and we will have a sense of civic pride that Peterborough is holding up its end, as it should and will. This is only one more organization and we can get the men to man it and direct its usefulness.

Just remember, Thursday evening. The Public Library, and at eight o'clock.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 26, 1916

WHAT FOR NO?

A Kansas woman wants to be vice-president of the United States. Why not? She would mate or "match" the beautiful femininity of Mr. President Wilson in his diplomatic dealings with the enemies and outragers of humanity, the wholesale slaughterers of United States citizens. When presidential diplomacy puts Uncle Sam in petticoats, why shouldn't a woman fill the merely ornamental position of vice-president?

A WEAK SUBTERFUGE.

One of the very weakest arguments of the opponents of investigation into the munitions manufacture scandals is the argument implied in the claim that the "majority of the munitions contracts," as Hon. Mr. Hazen said, "went to firms controlled by Liberals or in which Liberals are interested." What difference does that make? If there has been wrong doing; if inordinate profits have been made from the manufacture of munitions the wrong remains no matter who commits it. The Government, by appointing the members of the shell committee became responsible for the proper performance of its duties; and besides, as Canada had to pay a share of the money whose waste is alleged it is "good business" to try to discover where the money went to. The argument against investigation—that Liberals were interested—is only a transparent excuse for refusal to let in the light. Are we asked to believe the preposterous proposition that the Government refuses an investigation because of the plea that some Liber also might be incriminated? The horse marines might appreciate that contention; but no other sane person. In one sense the strongest proof that there was something wrong with the manipulation of the shell contracts is the very fact that the Government refuses investigation.

NEWSPAPERS AND MORALS.

A Montreal Doctor of Divinity, in the course of an address, complained that newspapers did not give wholehearted support to moral causes—they dealt with the publicity feature, making them known, by printing something in their issues, obscurely "in a corner." We don't know how it is in Montreal in this regard, but we know that in Peterborough moral causes and religious and moral interests get more publicity in the local papers than perhaps in any other city of Canada. In fact the charge is sometimes brought by those who prefer reading of a more sensational character, that too much space is given to religious and moral matters in the Peterborough papers. That, of couse is not the case. With reasonable deference to other public interests newspapers cannot give too much space to moral, religious and patriotic matters, for they deal with the higher part of our natures, and represent the supreme interests of man, whose possession of an immortal soul differentiates them from the brute creation. The Montreal Doctor of Divinity should come to Peterborough and he would see that the newspapers do not put references to, and appeals for, great moral causes "in a corner," but rather that moral and religious intelligence rather "corners" the news space of the local papers, which, however aim to have a due and adequate proportion of news relating to all the interests of all their readers. If the Montreal Doctor of Divinity would like to have some real work cut out for him, he should undertake to publish a newspaper. He would find that the trouble the prophet Job "wished on" his enemy in the way of his writing a book, would be pleasure, compared with the conditions newspapers have to encounter in catering to the varying tastes and wishes of the reading public. The doctor of divinity has a clear field. He entrenches himself—"digs himself in" his pulpit and has his auditory at his mercy—"their's not to make reply," but meekly listen, without talking back, to his ex-cathedra deliverances which may possibly put "in a corner" some of the things and issues and subjects his hearers would like to hear about. There are two sides to every question, and when one hears both sides of the responsibility and relation of newspapers to the public, they will be seen not to be sinners above all others. If doctors of divinity of the type of the Montreal one, take as superficial cognizance of their theology as they do of newspaper relations to the public, they cannot be very safe guides.

THE CALL FOR ECONOMY.

In the stress of this great war there is loud call for economy and sacrifice; and the citizenship of Canada has one of the distinctive marks of St. Paul's charity—"seeketh not its own." Nearly everybody is prepared and is making sacrifices, except a few whose "sacrifices"—of principle—takes the form of shell profits, or something like; and a few other political patriots of a similar kind. The Government does not neglect to provide a precedent, and help to some patriots "to seek their own." We are all called upon to practice economy and a great many of us do so—under compulsion. But unfortunately, the government in some respects has not set a very brilliant example. It has, for instance, so increased the expenditure of the post office department, that in 1915 there was one of the largest deficits in the history of the department, nearly three million dollars. This was not due to the practice of economy. One interesting way in which increased postal expenditure created the biggest deficit was the intensive application of the "spoils system." In the past four years a total of 5,287 post office employees were dismissed or "resigned." These dismissals were certainly not made because of inefficiency. In fact these five thousand odd officials were so efficient and serviceable that it required 9,903 new officials to do the work the dismissed had done before. In other words in the past four years, post office employees to the number of 5,357 have been dismissed and their places filled with 9,903 new officials. There are, therefore, 4,546 more employees in the postal department than there were four years ago—all, of course, drawing salaries and contributing to the extravagant expenditure that has produced a nearly three million dollar deficit. The same style of economy has apparently been practiced in the public works department, in which the expenditure four years ago was 11 millions, while for 1914-15, it was 29 millions. If for the cause of this war we are asked to practice economy, it is only reasonable for the government to set an example.

Interned Prisoners Clearing the Land In New Ontario

TORONTO, Jan. 24.—Lieut.-Col. F. F. Clarke, commanding officer of the 127th Battalion, just newly-arrived back from the internment camp at Kapuskasing, had many interesting things to speak about when questioned by The Telegram concerning his experiences in the camp. He declared at the start that the many wild stories in various papers as to men being eaten by wolves were absolutely untrue, as there is not a single wolf in that part of the country.

Kapuskasing camp is situated on the Kapuskasing River, south of James Bay, and is the largest of its kind in Canada. There are now about 1,400 aliens interned there, yet there is not a single German amongst them. There are a few Turks, but the majority are Austrians, and the work they are employed on is the building of colonization roads and clearing of land for experimental farms for the Dominion Government. It was this part of the work that the colonel waxed enthusiastic over.

Will be Great Asset.

"The work the prisoners are doing is going to be the greatest asset that the Ontario Colonization Department ever received," he declared, and went on to explain the principle on which the work is being carried out. "They are clearing the land so that settlers can start with the crops, and an attempt has been made to clear about twenty-five acres on each lot, fronting the roads that are being built, and small settlers' houses are being put up in order first to accommodate the men who are building the roads, and secondly, they are being left in good condition for the settlers when he arrives.

"The district, which only just over a year ago was nothing but thick bush with a small clearing of no more than an acre, has now been organized into a public school section, and is also being allotted a post office. Though it was nothing but bush when I went there, there are now about 122 buildings erected, which, leaving out Sundays and an odd day or so when we could not work, means a building erected every two days," said the colonel.

No Trouble.

He stated that there had been no trouble with the prisoners and he had never occasion to once call out the troops. About 30 to 40 of them have been released on parole, in cases where a bond has been put up. One thing the colonel emphatically stated was that not once has there been an organized strike, and he put this down to the fact that every reasonable complaint has been carefully investigated. The prisoners, who are organized into companies of one hundred each, are housed in camps made out of lumber and covered with weather-proof building paper, all the work being done by themselves. The actual camp only covers about twenty acres, that is, the buildings, etc., but the total area is now about 600 acres, and by next mid-summer will be in the neighborhood of 1,000 acres.

No trouble has been experienced in obtaining supplies, as these are all bought by the War Commission at Ottawa, and the Transcontinental Railway runs right through the centre of the camp. No trouble has been experienced in obtaining fresh water, as the river also runs through the camp.

The new officer in charge of the camp is Lieut.-Col. Royce of the Queen's Own.

THE BLOCKADE OF GERMANY MUST STILL BE MAINTAINED

Rather gratuitously it is assumed that Germany is immune from blockade, that is to say thoroughly effective blockade, because certain neutral countries in its immediate neighbourhood are not above making profits by transmitting to Germany army supplies and other contraband imported ostensibly for their own home consumption. That this kind of fraud is being carried on upon a large scale to the great aid and comfort of His Britannic Majesty's enemies, and to the undue prolongation of the war, is scarcely denied by the culprit little nations, and is loudly affirmed by the United States. Our American friends claim that a blockade which is not effective and substantially complete is not blockade at all,—technically. And technically they are right. To prevent the shipment of goods to German ports, and at the same time to permit their importation by way of Denmark, Holland, Sweden and Norway and to call that a blockade, is flat blasphemy against the great god, Technicality. A complete blockade may be much more annoying to the neutral states but it will be technically correct, and therefore lawful, and right.

Nobody on earth pays the slightest attention to the wails that come from Berlin about technical infractions of international law; because the Germans, by their persistent and contemptuous disregard of international law have placed themselves outside of the pale of the law. Outlaws are absolutely destitute of legal rights. The neutral states are in somewhat different case. They have certain legal rights unquestionably, but they have no right to interfere with the rights of other nations. It is not only the right but the duty of the Allies to hasten termination of the war by the practical blockade of Germany and the mercenary instincts of some of the subjects of neutral states, will certainly not be allowed to interfere with that course of action. If the only way to effectively, and therefore legally, blockade Germany is to blockade the ports of the neutral powers which are enriching themselves by surreptitiously transferring their imports to Germany, then the neutral ports will have to be blockaded.

It may be said that we have no legal right to blockade Denmark because we are not at war with Denmark. What is the matter with declaring war against Denmark? It need be only a technical war, unless our friends the Danes want to push it to extremes, which they do that, Denmark will afford us a most effective base for naval operations in the Baltic and for an attack upon the Kiel Canal. For a host of reasons we would hate to have any real quarrel with the Danes. The most popular woman in England to-day is a Royal Dane. Our impression is that if the British Government take a firm stand it will not be necessary to resort to extreme measures; but there must be no ambiguity about its position. Outside trading with the enemy must be stopped at any cost; we have gone too far in this direction to weaken. The situation in Holland is not quite the same as in the Scandinavian kingdoms, because to all appearance the Dutch have tried to live up to the international obligations in good faith, and in the long run they will not lose anything thereby. We do not see why all the neutral states cannot cordially co-operate with Great Britain and her Allies in preventing absolutely the smuggling of contraband into Germany. At any rate the blockade is the most effective method yet attempted for hastening the conclusion of the war, and its abandonment is not to be thought of. It is a regrettable necessity and will work much hardship to comparatively innocent non-combatants, but it is less frightful than German frightfulness.—Montreal Herald.

MR. ANTI-BELLUM LAVERGNE SAYS HE IS YET A GOOD CONSERVATIVE

QUEBEC, Jan. 25.—Following several verbal castigrations by Mr. J. M. Tellier, Conservative member for Joliette, and former leader in the Legislature, Mr. Armand Lavergne, National member for Montmagny, who recently denounced Canada's participation in the war, defended his "anti-participation in the war" utterances in the Legislative Assembly last night by telling the House of the close alliance between himself and other Nationalist leaders and the Conservative leaders of the Province of Quebec, now minister at Ottawa, to defeat Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the 1911 election.

"The Lavergne who is to-day described as a 'rebel' for saying in 1916 what he said in 1911, was the close friend and associate of those who thought the same as I did five years ago, but who to-day occupy portfolios at Ottawa," said Mr. Lavergne, who ironically remarked what a difference it made when a man had the chance to become a Minister.

He told the House that at Lorette, Mr. Justice Pelletier, former Postmaster-General in the Borden Government, then fighting Sir Wilfrid Laurier, referred to him (Lavergne) on the public platform as "Mr. Lavergne my young chieftain," but when Mr. Pelletier got into the Cabinet commented Mr. Lavergne, it was a different story.

Called for Bourassa's Help.

"Why in 1911," Mr. Lavergne went on, "Mr. Pelletier even got on his knees to ask Mr. Bourassa to address Conservative meetings and assist the Conservative party in Quebec. When he was asking Mr. Bourassa over the long distance telephone from Quebec to Montreal to come and speak at his meetings, he said, "I am appealing to you on my knees, Mr. Bourassa." "

Mr. Lavergne declared that the Nationalist campaign of 1911 against Sir Wilfrid Laurier was made in conjunction with present members of the Borden Cabinet, and he quoted Messrs. T. Chase Casgrain E. L. Patenaude and other ministers. He said their campaign was financed by the big purses of the Conservative party, who he described as pharisees. He referred to speeches which he claimed had been delivered by Conservative members of the Legislature and by men who were now ministers at Ottawa, and he claimed that these speeches were just as extreme as his, and if he was a rebel, some of Sir Robert Borden's ministers were rebels only a few years ago.

Prefers German Domination.

Mr. Lavergne declared that if he had to choose between the tyranny of the English majority of Ontario to the French-Canadian minority there and the tyranny of Germans to Alsace-Lorraine, he would prefer the latter.

Referring to the support given to the cause of recruiting by Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal, Mr. Lavergne said he took his religion from Rome, but his politics at home. "It is not for the bishops to say what we are to do regarding the wars of the Empire.

"I take my dogmas from the church, but regarding my politics, the bishops and even the Pope cannot tell me what opinions I am to hold regarding the wars of the Empire.

In conclusion Mr. Lavergne said the Conservative Opposition in the Legislature had no complaint to make regarding him, because, "I have always fought with them against the Liberal majority in this house.

SLIGHT WOMAN SEIZES BURGLAR

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Margaret Borthwick, young wife of a mechanical engineer, found the door of her apartment on the second floor, at No. 200 Central Park avenue, open when she returned from a shopping trip. As she and her son, James, five years old, entered she saw a man searching the dining room sideboard drawers and making a selection of silver.

The thief saw Mrs. Borthwick just then, dropped everything and tried to flee. It was necessary for him to pass her in the hall and, though of slight build, she blocked his exit.

"What are you doing here?" she asked.

"Never mind, now," the man replied, "just keep quiet and everything will be all right if you step aside."

"I won't step aside," cried Mrs. Borthwick, seizing the burglar. "Jimmie, call the hall-boys."

Then the intruder attacked Mrs. Borthwick, one blow on her chin, dropping her senseless on the floor. As the man ran out of the building the cries of little James brought the two hall boys, and they started after the thief.

Soon a score or more of men were in the pursuit and the men was chased into a saloon at Ninety-ninth street and Central Park West. Policeman Porter, who had joined the chase, arrested a man who said he was Robert B. Hessler, a chaffeur, No. 348 West End avenue.

Hessler was taken back to the house and there Mrs. Borthwick was found still unconscious, with her little son almost frantic by her side. When revived Mrs. Borthwick identified Hessler and also jewels valued at about $100 found in his pockets. The hall boys were unable to explain how a thief could have passed them and reached the second floor. Mrs. Borthwick said, despite the blow she had suffered, she still was unafraid of the biggest burglar that ever lived. Hessler was locked up accused of burglary.

SNOW AMAZED TROOPS.

Australians at Gallipoli Found Novelty in Winter Storm.

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 31. — Four-fifths of the Australians who filled the trenches at Anzac, upon the Gallipoli Peninsula, had never seen snow falling until a wintry storm descended upon them on Nov. 26. Captain Bean, The Commonwealth Press representative, in a cable despatch, thus describes the scene, which to the soldiers from the Far South was full of novelty, notwithstanding the discomfort they must have suffered:

"Last night (Nov. 27) a fierce and bitterly cold northeast wind turned the drizzling showers into snow. This morning Anzac woke up to find the whole country covered with a thin white mantle and big flakes still falling. The snowstorm arrived a month before the ordinary date of such conditions in Gallipoli, and undoubtedly caught the troops on the peninsula in some ways unprepared."

Some of the Victorian battalions had for shelter nothing except a thin waterproof sheet, tied up as best they could manage it. The men were half frozen after a miserable night, but in the morning when Captain Bean passed through these battalions the snow had begun to melt. The whole of the Antipodeans' position was inches deep in mud and slush. "Mud," he says, "had invaded the little bivouacs. A waterproof sheet, still covered with half-melted white lumps, was stretched no more than a foot or eighteen inches above ground, making a shelter into which the occupants with their blankets and overcoats had to crawl, but the whole camp appeared, if anything, more cheerful than usual.

"In many cases the first thing a man heard of the snowstorm was the thud of a snowball under the edge of a waterproof sheet. I walked through a great part of the firing line during the day. The men in the trenches were very cold, but surprisingly cheerful. Snow clustered on sandbags, on caps, on overcoats. Wherever the trenches were roofed, icicles dropped from the overhead shelter. The centries were continually stamping their feet. I constantly heard men admiring the scenery.

"'Look at those trees mate,' said one centry. 'Snow looks beautiful on leaves, don't it?'"

THE PROBLEM OF GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Garbage is, perhaps, not an inviting subject, yet considering how close a relation it bears to the general health of the family we can not afford to ignore it. Too long has the offensive, dirty garbage-receptacle been looked upon as a necessary nuisance. It should, on the other hand, be regarded in the same light as the disease-spreading fly—an evil that need not and should not be endured.

Methods of caring for garbage differ, of necessity, in the country and the city. In isolated districts, where there are no collections, regular or otherwise, the problem devolves upon the individual housewife. She can probably utilize much of the table-waste in feeding the farm animals, especially pigs and chickens. Again, the burying of garbage is a safe and sanitary means of disposing of it. It constitutes an excellent fertilizer, as every country dweller knows. A third and most acceptable way of treating garbage is burning it, says a writer in the "Pictorial Review."

Though many housekeepers can depend upon a regular collector for the ultimate disposal of their garbage, its temporary care must still receive attention.

But even where its removal is cared for, where to keep it is often a problem. The most up-to-date city apartments have an ingenious device in the form of a small wall-safe just large enough to accommodate a medium-sized garbage-receptacle. Two small iron doors shut it from sight, while an extension at the base of one of these holds the pail and swings it forward when needed. A slit through the outer wall furnishes ventilation.

Where the garbage-holder must be kept in the back yard, a problem of another sort presents itself: prowling cats and dogs must be guarded against, likewise flies in summer and freezing weather in winter. It was to counteract these obstacles that the underground garbage-receiver was manufactured—an article that has now stood the test of years and received enthusiastic approval from all who have tried it.

In this device, an outer receiver of sheet metal is sunk in the earth so that its hinged iron cover is flush with the ground. This cover is fitted with a smaller cover which is opened by foot-pressure and connects directly with the garbage-pail underneath by means of a chute. There is positively no chance of spilling food, for the garbage-pail proper is removed only for cleansing and emptying, when the large cover is swung back.

Now as to the material and care of the garbage-pail. In the first place, the receptacle must be durable and as germ-proof as possible. Tin is too fragile, agate or enameled ware is better, while galvanized iron or steel can be highly recommended for all-round utility. By no means use a wooden holder; even with the most scrupulous care it is apt to retain odors and invite germs. A tight-fitting cover is absolutely essential.

Again, the receptacle must be kept clean. This means more than a mere periodic emptying—such a procedure is far from effective, for small particles of food are bound to cling to the sides of the can and soon become foul and dangerous—a menace to public health. There is no reason why the garbage-holder should not receive just as much attention as any other kitchen utensil. A daily cleansing in warm soapy water, followed by a thorough scalding and drying, is the only means of insuring against decay and unpleasant odors. If washing-soda is dissolved in the water, it will be found a splendid agent for cutting grease and sticky sediment. The washing should be supplemented occasionally by the use of a good disinfectant. Either carbolic acid or creolin is good, dissolved in the proportion of one teaspoonful to a pint of water.

The lining of the pail with paper after it is cleansed is another important point. Newspaper will answer the purpose, though, personally, I prefer a heavy paraffin paper. If the bread you buy has this sort of wrapping, why not utilize it for this purpose instead of throwing it away? Some housewives prefer to wrap the garbage entirely in paper instead of lining the pail. It is true that it tends to eliminate odors, freezing, and putrefaction.

Several years ago, the progressive city of Minneapolis set us an excellent example in this matter of paper-protected garbage. A law was passed that all householders must keep their garbage-pail contents thus wrapped and the receptacles themselves above suspicion. Collectors were advised not to touch those which did not come up to the standard, while fines were imposed for continued negligence. "The next thing we will be asked to tie our garbage in baby ribbon," a few sneered, but when it was found that the scheme made for the increased cleanliness, economy, and comfort of the city, even the most skeptical were convinced.

Before garbage is deposited in the pail, it should be thoroughly drained, and here the sink-strainer plays its part. Every kitchen equipment should include one, for moisture is one of the biggest factors in rendering food-refuse offensive. If the garbage is thus made as dry as possible, garbage-bags can be utilized, which will facilitate the work of the collector. These bags are made specially for this purpose, and are strong enough to be lifted in and out of the receptacle.

There are some excellent garbage-pails manufactured to-day which, being constructed on scientific principles, merit the attention of all progressive housekeepers, for the garbage-pail is always with us, no matter by what approved method we finally dispose of its contents. The best are truly protective appliances and a big improvement over the simple pail. One of these, for example, lays particular emphasis upon disinfection. It has a sifter cover that contains enough disinfectant to last three or four months. When this is exhausted, a fresh supply can easily be inserted. Simply putting on the cover shakes the powder directly on the garbage underneath. The disinfectant is neither objectionable nor harmful. Furthermore, it keeps flies at a respectful distance. With a capacity of three and a half gallons, this utility sells for one dollar. For half the price, the filter pan alone can be obtained, which can be fitted to the under side of any garbage-can cover. —Saturday Night.

RUSSIANS FIGHTING IN 15 FEET OF SNOW

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Difficulties experienced by the Russians in the Caucasus are described in an officer's narrative, received at Petrograd.

"For weeks," the narrative says, "Our column at the summit of Mount ——, 1,900 feet high, east of Erzerum, was exposed to blizzards, which buried shelters fifteen feet under drifts and blew huts to pieces. Our position was most critical when at length we were ordered to march. A hurricane of furious proportions was raging when we began to descend the snow-clad precipices. The men marched in single file and forced their way shoulder high through the snow, firing their rifles to guide those behind them. Uniforms became sheets of ice and masks of ice covered our faces.

Guns were lowered on ropes, but not a man was lost. We had our reward in the panic which our unexpected appearance produced among the Turks."

An official statement issued Monday night said:

"On the Caucasus front we captured seven hundred Askaris and a convoy of artillery. Our artillery is again bombarding the Erzerum forts. In the region of Melazgher we defeated at various points Kurdish horsemen supported by infantry."

KAISER'S RIVAL AS WORLD'S BEST LIAR

Enver Pasha of Turkey Holds Second Place in Followers of Ananias—A Conceited Puppet

In Europe the Turk is called the prince of liars. Enver Bey is a Kaiser among princes. He is the most artful, cunning, and quick-change artist for many generations, and when you have said that you have said a lot. Yet this man was unknown to the vast majority of the world before 1908. In the July of that year the Sultan sent for him to promote him to high rank. Enver Bey refused the invitation and flew for his life.

Overthrew the Sultan

He organized the revolt of the Young Turks which overthrew the Sultan. Four months he wandered from village to village in Turkey and Macedonia as a peasant. In every village through which he passed he influenced the young men with his ready tongue and spurious promises, enrolling them into armed bands, for the overthrow of the Government in Constantinople. Enver Pasha promised them freedom, a properly constituted Parliament, wise laws, and an ever increasing and more powerful Turkish Empire in the future, at peace with all nations.

The Young Turks greedily swallowed all Enver told them, and overthrew the Government. The result has been that since Enver Bey has had the power his country has been engaged in three disastrous wars, has shrunk almost to nothing in Europe, and will probably be pushed out altogether.

Sold Himself to the Germans

Since the great war broke out Enver has sold himself and his empire to the Germans. Always greedy for money he has taken every scrap he can get from Berlin. The Turkish army and navy are organized and officered by Germans; they are armed with German guns and ammunition; they are paid with German money. And this has all been due to Enver Pasha. He is the apostle of German Kultur in Turkey.

Here is what a well known Turk wrote of him a short time ago: "This man, who has the celebrity and the ambition of a little Apollo, is, at the bottom, nothing more than a child with a large dose of vanity. He worships publicity; he loves to see his photographs in those big foreign papers, to read the gossip about his private life in which he used to pose as a blasé man of the world, surrounded by a full score of wonderful princesses wanting only to marry him."

GALLANT CRIMINALS

Prisoners Show That They Are no Shirkers—Very Few Exceptions

The war has brought about a decrease in crime in the United Kingdom. There are not nearly so many people in prison now as there were in times of peace. Indeed, in August, 1914, no fewer than 13,580 people were behind prison bars; in March, 1915, there were only 9,138.

Even those who are left in durance vile seem anxious to do their bit for the country. Numerous articles were required quickly for the use of Tommy and Jack at the front. The prisoners put their backs into the work, and turned it out in record time. As a reward the Government allowed them to be made acquainted with the progress of naval and military operations once a week. This stimulated them as nothing else could have done to turn out war stores.

From the outbreak of war up to May 1st last, 340 inmates of Borstal institutions who had previously served in the army were released to enlist. Thirty-five of these were later promoted to be non-commissioned officers, sixteen were killed or wounded, and only seventeen committed fresh offences.

HUN FAMILY KILLED

Deserter Loses Nine Brothers Killed and One Missing

A German deserter who arrived in a small Dutch town just over the frontier told an extraordinary story of fatalities.

He is about twenty-five, and was a clerk in Cologne. He had ten brothers all of whom took part in the war. Six were killed in Belgium, and three fell on the eastern front. The remaining brother is still fighting somewhere.

He himself has been wounded several times, the last time near Warsaw, after which he was moved to a hospital in Belgium.

He and four comrades ran away, intending to cross into Holland, but the others were killed by electrified wires along the frontier, where electrified metal plaques are hidden in the grass along those parts of the frontier line most likely to be chosen by intending deserters.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA

THE newspaper in the Peterborough zone of Ontario to be granted Newspaperdom's "Winning Daily" emblem was the EXAMINER. After investigating the local field, the following conclusions were established: First, the EXAMINER has a materially larger circulation than any other Peterborough daily; second, it is the leading evening newspaper of Peterborough and the tributary territory; third, it is supreme in volume of advertising published—and this volume is made up of gilt-edged business from local and foreign advertisers in Canada and the United States. Local advertisers unanimously endorse it for its result-getting efficiency. It invites correspondence regarding the Peterborough zone as a business possibility in 1916; the possibility of dealer cooperation, etc.

REPORT DEALING WITH THE WORK OF PETERBOROUGH BRANCH CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

Upwards of Five Hundred Peterboro' Families Are Receiving Assistance From the Fund—Mayor J. J. Duffus Was Elected President of the Local Branch—May Seek Financial Assistance From the Government—Financial Statement.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Relief Association, which was held last evening in the City Council Chamber, a report was presented by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, Executive Officer for the Association. The report contains an interesting resume of the work accomplished by the Association since its inception. The report follows:

The Executive Officer of the Peterborough Branch, begs to make report as follows, with reference to the work as carried on in the city:

It will be recollected that the campaign put on at the end of 1914 resulted in a substantial sum being raised for the purpose of the Fund. With this was amalgamated that which had been raised some time before on subscription and the whole merged in one organization. A properly accredited branch was at once formed and a Board of Governors elected. A Relief committee was at once selected and the detail of distribution placed in its hands. The list of officers and of the Relief committee are set out in the minutes of the meetings.

Some distribution had been made from time to time from what was known as the Old Fund, and late in December the Relief committee appointed an Executive Officer and the work was carried on without intermission. As was to be expected the detail of organizing the allowances was one that occupied the attention of the committee, and by the end of January was pretty well established. The first enlistment, and that following placed on the register of the local fund families to the number of about sixty to sixty-five. It required fully six weeks of patient investigation to fully establish the bona fides of these cases. Very many applications were presented to the committee that, not coming within the provisions of the rules of the Fund, could not be entertained. And to-day, after a twelve-months' experience there are many cases which appeal to the consideration of the committee on grounds of sympathy, and which present features that it would seem should entitle the wife or mother to some assistance. To pass outside the rules and recognise such would seem to be a commendable and humane act, but once the door is opened others would apply and endeavour to substantiate claims for consideration. It would seem that this phase of the work might have consideration early in the year.

The Executive Officer has pleasure in testifying to the loyalty, care and untiring service of the members of the Relief committee. They have given unselfish and useful public work. Unsparing of time and assiduous in attention. So far as possible all matters of allowances, etc., have been brought to the attention of the committee that each one should be fully cognisant of what was being done and approve. As a body it has been most harmonious. As a public institution one markedly efficient.

Thorough Investigation.

During the early spring and summer a thorough system of investigation and re-investigation was entered on to determine the status of all beneficiaries on the fund. As a result several cases were disclosed that resulted in the families being removed from the lists, having ceased to be in a position such as the rules would allow of the allowances being continued. Cases where the enlisted man was enjoying in addition to his pay as a soldier, a full monthly wage from his late employer or employers. These have all been deleted, and step were taken to have the amount allowed to those families from the fund, paid back to the Head Office. All cases are investigated from time to time to make such a thing impossible in the future. No doubt the assistance given to the families from the Fund has influenced the enlistment of married men. Those who have done so express satisfaction at the provision made. Following an appeal from the Head Office that due economy be used in amount of the allowances during the month of September the list was re-cast and some reductions made. In the end these were accepted in good spirit.

By October it was seen that with the growing responsibility of the local branch that the funds in sight would not be adequate for very long. The second appeal to the people met with a most hearty and gratifying response. Starting with the magnificent gift made by the City Council of $20,000, a total of $69,000 was realized. This put the organization in funds and it is hoped that should the war not be prolonged that the amount will last out the period of hostilities. Should it not be sufficient then another and third appeal must be made.

Lists Filling Up.

As might be expected, the work has grown. At time of writing the lists are filling up rapidly and with over 400 families on the fund at Peterborough. This branch is the largest in Ontario, outside the large cities and ranks next to Ottawa in point of number on the roll. By the time the regiment now being enlisted (93rd) reaches full strength it is expected that we shall have over 500 families to care for. There is no fear but that Peterborough will accept the responsibility and provide.

Appended is a statement showing the number of families on the roll and the number of children included. In all nearly 1200 souls are on the fund. In addition 169 families have been on the fund for varying periods.

Relief Association.

From the subscriptions of the first campaign a sum was set apart to furnish funds for the purpose of a new organization, the Peterborough Relief Association. To assist "those in adverse circumstances brought on by the war." There was a period of unemployment that placed many families in distress that in other years would have not had their status disturbed. The work of such distribution was an exceedingly onerous one, to prevent imposition and not to open the fund to the claims of what might be termed the professional applicant. Careful investigation and sifting of information held the disbursements to a little over $6,000. In all 246 families received assistance from this branch. No doubt the hardship of an usually severe winter were alleviated to a considerable extent. The committee have had many grateful acknowledgments, and feel that the good sense of the donors of this part of the fund was amply verified. This fund is not being used to any extent this winter (1915-16) as unemployment is not nearly so prevalent. In the work of the last campaign for funds no appeal was made for this branch of the work and there still remains in the bank a substantial amount to credit.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected:
President—Mayor J. J. Duffus.
Secretary—F. H. Dobbin.
Treasurer—F. Adams.

General Business.

A letter was read from the Toronto and York branch of the Patriotic Fund, asking the Peterborough branch to make representations to the Central Executive committee at Ottawa, that it would be in the interests of the fund to secure some financial assistance from the government, by a grant or by increased separation allowances. The matter was deferred until such time as the President deems it advisable to bring it up for consideration.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer presented a financial report which had been presented at a meeting of the Finance committee held in December. Mr. Aylmer also reported that the amount subscribed in the second canvass in December last, was $63,200; of this amount about $8,000 was in cash.

The report was adopted "and the thanks of the branch tendered to Mr. Aylmer.

The Finance committee was authorized to incur such expense as might be deemed necessary in the collection of the funds subscribed, and that such expense be paid on the order of the committee.

Those present were: His Worship Mayor Duffus (President), Messrs. D. O'Connell, Ald. F. H. Dobbin, B. F. Morrow, H. Rush, W. H. Dunsford, T. F. Matthews, F. D. Kerr, J. A. Aylmer, His Honour Judge Huycke, R. Harstone and S. R. Armstrong.

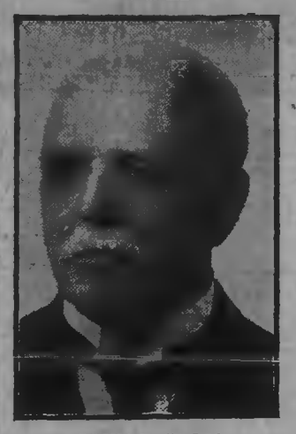
UNRULY CHILDREN

A truant officer has declared that most such children who come under his observation are not properly nourished. Mal-assimilation of food makes children cross, puny, peevish and unruly. Our local druggists, McDermid and Jury, and E. L. Payne, have in Vinol a reliable non-secret remedy for just such conditions, because it contains iron for the blood, and the medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers, aided by the nourishing properties of beef peptone, and if it fails to make weak, puny, ailing youngsters healthy and good-natured, they will give back your money.

NEW CROWN LIFE DIRECTOR



JOHN F. ELLIS.

John F. Ellis, Vice-President and Managing Director of the Barber-Ellis Co., Ltd., has been elected to a seat on the Board of the Crown Life Insurance Company, made vacant by the death of the late H. Markland Molson, of Montreal.

Mr. Ellis brings with him considerable experience in life insurance matters, as he was for some time Managing Director of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company. He is also a past-president of the Toronto Board of Trade, and a past-president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. He is well and favorably known in connection with the extensive business on his firm, both in Ontario and throughout the Dominion of Canada, and should be a valuable acquisition to the Board of the Crown Life Insurance Company.

The Examiner is giving away an additional $35. as an extra attraction on Dollar Day.

SAYS GOVERNMENT WILL BE FAVORABLE TO THE PETITION

May be Leaders in The Movement Yet ---Men of All Political Shades Are Signing

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—There have been many flutterings in the dove cots of the political organizations of the city and the entire Province since the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred got together to start their vigorous campaign for Provincial prohibition, and when the deputation of officers of the various branches of the Conservative organization of Toronto, with the local members of the Legislature assembled at the Parliament Buildings on Thursday, there were suspicions that the object was to confer with Premier Hearst and the Cabinet with reference to the party's policy on the momentous Provincial issue.

It is said now that these suspicions were well founded, and that the question discussed was the attitude of the party to the prohibition issue. The tying of the doors to the chamber and the secrecy maintained by the deputations made it impossible to get the definite line on the discussion, but sufficient information has percolated to indicate that the workers in the party have the blessing of the Premier and the Cabinet in their work with the Committee of One Hundred to increase the sentiment in favour of Provincial prohibition.

There was some doubt in the minds of many Conservatives about the wisdom of falling in line with the Committee of One Hundred if the leaders of the party were in opposition to such a policy, but the result of the conference was a complete understanding in favour of the temperance programme.

There was manifested a strong conviction that the people of the Province are to demand Provincial prohibition, and that rather than be followers after the band waggon, the party would prefer to be in the lead.

Among those who constituted the deputation were prominent temperance workers of the city, and it is understood that they voiced their opinions. They said they had been keeping their ears to the ground.

It is understood that the members of the Cabinet did not resent these opinions, but rather welcomed them as an evidence that the people would be behind the most advanced temperance legislation that could be framed by the Government. The impression was left that the Government is going to forestall the efforts of the Committee of One Hundred and bring down the legislation demanded.

The experience of those who were circulating the petitions in all parts of the city last night indicate that men of all political shades are intent upon having the Government take action.

"CODDLES"

The Funny Housemaid in a "A Pair of Sixes"

One of the most original comic characters now to the stage is that of "Coddles," the eccentric housemaid in "A Pair of Sixes," which will be seen at "The Grand" next Saturday, Jan. 29, Matinee and Night.

She is angular and quaint in appearance and is prominent in the action of the play through her infatuation for Boggs, one of the rich partners who is forced to act as butler in his partner's household. Coddles believes that he is sure-enough servant and sets her cap for him, greatly to his distress and peace of mind. The character made such a hit in New York that the newspapers devoted columns to it. The part will be played here by the well-known actress, Miss Lida Sutton, who was for many years a prominent star.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Jelmetone, painter and decorator, 316 College Street, will be answered —on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course

B. B., Peterborough, Ont.—I have had a partition built of some of this wall board or beaver board, and I am at a loss to know what to do with it to make it look finished. What would you suggest?

Ans.—The average wall board can be finished in many ways. Paint, paper, distemper, graining, marbling, etc., etc. As I do not know where the partition is, I cannot suggest a treatment. What would be suitable for a butcher shop would be entirely unsuitable for a den. And what might look well in a bridal chamber would hardly do in a printing office. So if you let me know where your partition is, either bedroom, office, or store perhaps I can be of some little service in offering a suggestion.

A Constant Reader, Peterborough, Ont.: "How should 'Red Wood' be treated? At Christmas I received a dainty jardinere stand, all made of 'Red Wood' in the raw state, and I want to preserve it. But am loath to paint it, so what can I do?"

Ans.—"California Red Wood" hardly needs anything to preserve it. Barns built in 1855, in parts of the United States, and having never received oil, paint or other preservative, are to-day standing in a good state of preservation. The California Red Wood is very popular in the West, where it is comparatively cheap on account of the size to which some of the trees grow, climbing, as they do, to a height of 250 to 300 feet, and sometimes 18 or 20 feet in diameter at the base. It is a beautiful wood, as you no doubt see by your stand, and I would not suggest hiding the grain with paint. A very unique finish is obtained by applying one coat of thin shellac, then paint it over with a walnut brown thin paint, and after letting it stand a little while, wipe the paint off or nearly all off. Allow this to dry, then wax, and polish. Or, give it two coats of shellac, (rubbing each coat lightly with fine sand paper) and wax. Or, you may simply oil it several times and wipe.

Mrs. J. McB., Lindsay, Ont.—I had a little sign, with "Dressmaking" painted on it in gold letters only two months ago, and now the gold has all nearly gone off. Some one told me it was German gold, and that's why, British gold stands better.

Ans.—It is quite evident that neither German nor English gold leaf was used to letter your sign. As either one should last longer than two months. I imagine it was gold bronze that was used, and as there are many very inferior bronzes, some of which turn dark quicker than others, I guess one of them was used on your sign.

Curious, Peterborough.—"What do you consider a fair number of rolls for a paperhanger to put up in eight hours? How long does it take to learn paper-hanging?"

Ans.—The above questions are foreign to the purpose of this column. But to satisfy "Curious" and enlighten the public, I may say, in answer to the first query, that my conception of paperhanging is that it is an art of a high degree, and immediately one combines art with speed dissatisfaction results. Men who hang paper can very properly be put in two classes: paper hangers and bill posters. With reference to how long it takes to learn paper hanging, I do not know. I've only been at it twenty-six years. Ask an older man.

Gertie, City.—What will soften paint that has hardened in a brush?

Ans.—If it is not very hard just vinegar will likely do. Otherwise [illegible] paint remover will soften [illegible] allowed to stand in it a little while.

Better Qualified Teachers in Rural Schools Shown By Report

Decrease of 21 Temporary Certificates and Increase of 11 Second Class and 10 Third Class—How Consolidated School Operates in Randolph County, Indiana.

A SATISFACTORY REVIEW

In his annual report to the County Council, Mr Richard Lees Public School Inspector, indicated a very encouraging improvement in the qualifications of teachers in his inspectorate and a gratifying decrease in the number of third class, district and temporary certificates, as follows:

"There were in operation, during the year, 71 rural schools with 78 teachers, and three village schools, with 17 teachers, besides the Continuation Schools at Havelock and Lakefield, with two teachers each. In the performance of my duties, I made 232 half-day visits, besides a number of shorter duration and three visits to sections in which schools were closed.

Qualification of Teachers.

The teachers employed in the rural schools last term were classified on the basis of qualification, as follows:

Asphodel — 5 second-class and 2 third-class—7.

Belmont and Methuen—6 thirds, 2 district and 5 temporary certificates—15.

Burleigh and Anstruther—3 district, and 3 temporary—6.

Chandos—2 third, 5 district and 2 temporary—9.

Douro—7 second-class and 4 thirds—11.

Dummer—2 seconds, 5 thirds, and 2 district—9.

North Monaghan—7 seconds—7.

Otonabee—1 first class, 12 seconds, 2 thirds—15.

Total—1 first, 33 seconds, 35 thirds, 9 district, 10 temporary certificates—78.

Compared with five years ago, this shows an increase of 1 first-class, 11 second-class, 10 third-class, and 3 district certificates, with a decrease of 21 temporary certificates. While this is encouraging, it cannot be said to be entirely satisfactory. There need not now be any temporary certificates, if all trustees were in earnest and the proportion of third-class and district certificates is larger than it ought to be.

Salaries.

A comparison of the salaries being paid last year with those of 1910 may not be without interest. The averages by townships, based on the rate being paid during the fall term in each case is as follows:

	1910	1915	Increase per cent.
Asphodel	$420	$571	33
Belmont and Methuen	383	482	26
Burleigh and Anstruther	319	438	37
Chandos	397	410	34
Douro	404	555	37
Dummer	377	517	40
North Monaghan	456	557	22
Otonabee	477	587	33

Government Grants

A new basis for the distribution of the grant on account of salaries was made use of last year. Instead of the former uniform rate, a graded plan was employed, based on the assessment of the section, as follows:

Where the assessment was less than $30,000, the grant was 40 percent. of the salary above $100.

Where the assessment was between $30,000 and $40,000, it was 35 per cent. of the salary in excess of $1.0.

For assessments between $40,000 and $60,000 the grant was 30 per cent. of the salary abov $200.

When the assessment exceeded $60,000, but was less than $100,000, the grant was 25 per cent. of the salary above $350. For all other assessments, it was 20 per cent. of the salary in excess of $350, but not exceeding a salary of in any case $600.

While the result of this was that the schools in the richer sections got less than in former years, the total for the whole inspectorate, under this head, was $1,470 more than in 1912 the largest previous year, and about $2,700 more than last year.

As a result of the increased amount received by the poorer sections, the grant from the Assisted Schools Fund will be reduced. Anticipating such a movement, a smaller sum was asked for. After the applications were submitted to the Department, a letter was received asking if it would not be possible, in view of the largely increased grant, to forego the Assisted Schools Grant entirely. In reply, it was pointed out that in making application, I had endeavoured to so adjust things that the schools assisted would be on just about the same basis as for the previous year. To this statement a reply has been received to the effect that the grants asked for would be paid in full, but with the understanding that they are to be used for the purpose of encouraging the getting of better teachers, and not for the reduction of existing rates of taxation unless these are abnormally high. It will, therefore be apparent to trustees that in order to benefit from this fund, it will be necessary to take advantage of it for the purpose of securing a better grade of teachers. There are a few sections in the inspectorate that have had enterprise enough to do this and while they are paying their teachers almost double what was paid a few years ago, it is costing the sections very little more. In these cases, it is not difficult to get the increased grant, as that is the purpose for which the Assisted School Fund exists.

Work in Agriculture.

I wish again to express my appreciation of the efforts of the District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture in connection with the work of the schools. During last year, they extended the field of their operations adding the township of Douro and an additional school fair was held there. This, as well as the other fairs, was well attended and much interest was manifested, both by parents and children. I am convinced that a good deal is being accomplished by this means. During the coming season, the township of Belmont is, I understand, to be added and a fair held there also. I have no doubt but the people of that township will give to the work the same hearty support and co-operation it has received elsewhere. The Department of Education is also offering increased inducements to trustees and teachers to undertake the teaching of agriculture under the regulations of the Department, and I am in hopes that some progress may be made in that direction by a few more schools undertaking the work.

About Consolidated Schools.

Through the courtesy of the last warden and the permission of the Minister of Education, I was permitted, last spring, to spend some time in a visit to some of the schools of the United States. My chief desire being to investigate the working of the consolidated rural school, I sought direction from the United States Bureau of Education and was advised to visit Randolph County, Indiana and certain parts of Illinois. It would be entirely impossible within the limits of a brief report to go into any detail in regard to what I observed, much of which has already been made public. I may, however, briefly refer to conditions in Randolph County. This county, which is situated on the eastern border of the state, is small, containing about 450 sq. miles or about equal to that part of Peterborough County, comprising the townships of Otonabee, N. Monaghan, Smith, Ennismore and Douro. It is a fairly good farming district and there is almost no broken or waste land. Corn is the staple crop.

REEVE F. BULLIED

Representative of Chandos on the County Council. He has been appointed Chairman of the House of Refuge Committee.

Representatives of the Department of Agriculture in connection with the work of the schools. During last year, they extended the field of their operations adding the township of Douro and an additional school fair was held there. This, as well as the other fairs, was well attended and much interest was manifested, both by parents and children. I am convinced that a good deal is being accomplished by this means. During the coming season, the township of Belmont is, I understand, to be added and a fair held there also. I have no doubt but the people of that township will give to the work the same hearty support and co-operation it has received elsewhere. The Department of Education is also offering increased inducements to trustees and teachers to undertake the teaching of agriculture under the regulations of the Department, and I am in hopes that some progress may be made in that direction by a few more schools undertaking the work.

While there, I was in the hands of Mr. L. I. Driver, County Superintendent of Schools, whose courtesy, kindness and desire to assist, were beyond praise. It is largely to the energy, ability resourcefulness and tact of Superintendent Driver that his county owes the unique place it occupies educationally, for though Indiana has done wonderful things, as a whole, no part has surpassed or even quite equalled, Randolph County. While there, I also met and received valuable assistance from the Agricultural Agent, an official corresponding to our District Representative. Other school officials were generous in the way of giving information and assistance. The State Director of Vocational Education, did me the honour of coming down from the state capital and spending a day with Mr. Driver and myself in some of the schools. In short everything possible was done to make my visit both pleasant and profitable.

Less than ten years ago, there were in this county 139 rural schools. At the time of my visit there were 39 and the number has since been reduced to 33 or 34. In the place of those that have disappeared, there are some 28 consolidated schools, attended by nearly 4,000 pupils, 2,144 of whom were conveyed to school last year, mostly in wagons owned by the schools and operated by drivers employed, under contract to do the work. Of these wagons 91 were used last year.

The buildings are magnificent. Several of them are, in plan and appearance, very much like the two buildings recently erected here in the City of Peterborough, but several of these visited were larger and more beautiful than any of the schools in this city. These buildings are not in towns or villages, but out in the open country. There is a high school in every township of the county. Five years ago, there were 61 pupils from the country districts attending high school, last term there were 691. Of the work of these schools, the wide and varied scope of their activities, the contentment and satisfaction of the children, the pride of the people in them, and their general efficiency, I should like to tell, but must desist. Suffice it to say that though I went expecting great things, I found the reality beyond my highest expectations.

THE BELGIANS ARE DRIVEN INTO EXILE

The Rev. J. F. Stillemans Says Germans Are Crushing Them.

The Rev. J. F. Stillemans, President of the Belgian Relief Fund at 10 Bridge street, said yesterday that Belgian business men were being driven out of their country by harsh and unjust treatment dealt by the Germans. They were not only compelled to pay a war tax of $8,000,000 each month, he said, but they had to pay the sum in marks. At the end of every month the Belgians have to send to Germany 40,000,000 francs to be converted into marks, which is paid in to the tax collectors and then sent back to Germany.

"The sole aim of the German Government," Mr. Stillemans said, "is to run everybody and everything by a system. At the present time there are 5,000 German officials in Belgium inventing all kinds of systems to crush the life and soul out of the people. The Government had to hold its hand in introducing systems into Germany, because the people would only stand so much and no more, or they would rebel. Belgium is a conquered country, in the opinion of the high Prussian officials, and therefore its people must stand everything without complaining, they think.

"Before the war there were no creameries, and each farmer made his own butter. The Germans have established creameries everywhere, and compel the farmer to take his milk there and have it churned. The Germans do not pay for the milk, but give 35 cents a pound for all butter produced at the creameries. The farmer is not allowed to keep any of the butter made from his milk, but he can buy some from the government at 35 cents a pound.

"If a Belgian refuses to shake hands with a German in Brussels or Antwerp the German complains that he has been insulted, and the Belgian is thrust into jail on the charge of having insulted a German. These civil prisoners are all sent away to Germany to be locked up. The Belgian lawyers have declined to plead in the law courts in Brussels and Antwerp because all decisions are given against their clients in favour of Germans.

"One of the best known grain merchants in Antwerp has just escaped from Belgium after being locked up for contempt of court for insulting a German. The merchant had been appointed to take charge of a big shipment of grain pending a settlement of litigation over it between a Belgian and a German. The German merchant demanded to have the grain turned over to him, and when the Belgian custodian declined, because he had not received a court order, he was promptly put into jail."

EASTER, APRIL 23; LENT BEGINS ON MARCH 8.

Easter comes on April 23. Lent begins on March 8. This is within two days of as late as it ever begins. It fell on the same date in 1905, but will not again until 2009. But once in the present century will Easter come on the last day possible. This is April 25, 1943.

COUNTY AUDITORS ARE REAPPOINTED

The County Council this morning re-appointed Mr. W. H. Casement, of Lakefield, and Mr. Jas. Calder, of Norwood, auditors for the county. Mr. Alex. Leason was nominated but defeated.

Mr. Donald McNaughton was appointed High School Trustee for Norwood.

A letter was read from Col. T. Johnston, of the 93rd Battalion, acknowledging the Council's grant of $400 at the December session to the Battalion.

Voice of The People

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the disgraceful condition of our city streets (which shows no signs of improvement), would it not be a good idea for some of the 93rd to be put to work to dig trenches to let the water off? This would make it possible to clean the sidewalks off, and would be splendid exercise for those shoulder muscles, besides being for the public benefit.

Yours sincerely,
"SOLDIER'S WIFE."

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—"Patriotic Woman" asks in to-night's Examiner, What is the matter with the fine able bodied men still in the Salvation Army Band that they do not enlist? and goes on to say she believes a few are in khaki and others have enlisted in other battalions.

Writing from memory, let me say, one of them laid down his life in the same battle as brave Major Bennett; another is fighting in the trenches; at least 2 Salvationists and adherents are in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion Brass and Bugle Band, and a number in the ranks as privates; one is in Bermuda, while at least ten Peterborough S. A. bandsmen are in the battalion now stationed at Brockville led by an S. A. bandmaster; while three of the "fine able bodied men" have been rejected as medically unfit. A number of the others are munition workers. Has any other church choir or musical organization in the city a record like this, out of 35 or 37 members, which was the strength of the band previous to the call to war. Adjt. McElhaney met his men months ago and asked for recruits. He got them, and with one or two exceptions they are all British-born—and the end is not yet.

A PATRIOTIC PATRIER.

To the editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—On seeing in your valuable paper last evening what Adjt. McElhaney said at the recruiting meeting on Sunday night and as I was there and heard him myself, I think as the Patriotic Woman thought, that there are still some young men to go off the Salvation Army platform. Now well I can call to my mind the last Sunday before my son went to the Salvation Army divine service, before he went to Barriefield, how I was asked why I let my son go in the soldiers, and the woman went on to say that if I had done as she wanted me he would still be in the Salvation Army, so I think that is the place to get out of if you do not wish to serve your King and country. This so-called Salvationist might as well insult a mother who I say is brave to let her son go. I am quite willing to say that if I had a dozen more they would not be stopped from serving their King and country in this great struggle. It is not the like of that woman who will help the Empire. Let her husband join the colors and get into the khaki, and do his bit.

I will say this, that the young men will have to be made to go before they can fill up the regiment here, and this is no time for us mothers to be cried down because we are doing our duty. I say, wake up, mothers, and let your sons go to aid us and to do all we can for God, King and country, before it is too late.

A MOTHER.

Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—I notice that the big posters bearing the advertisement of the Committee of One Hundred's campaign for a dry Ontario are headed, "We are sending our men to the front and we are backing them up." A very commendable legend, indeed, but it strikes me as a rather peculiar state of affairs that the chairman of the Peterborough County Committee is a captain in the Canadian militia, unmarried, and with apparently nothing in particular to prevent him from being one of those whom the poster mentions as our "men" whom "we" are sending to the front. Dont' you think the worthy Alderman-Captain would appear to better advantage in the public eye if he was devoting his time just now to chasing the Germans out of Belgium instead of trying to chase "chasers" out of Ontario?

Almost anyone can be entrusted to the safe occupation of circulating a petition, and possibly some patriotic member of the Women's Auxiliary to the Speakers' Patriotic League will volunteer to relieve the Captain-Alderman from the North Ward of his task in order that he may be able to respond to the call for men and move men that our leaders are bringing so prominently before us. "Backing up our men at the front" is a very commendable thing but in the case of a militia captain, is it seemly to do the "backing" so far "back"?

Yours dryly,
"WATCHFUL WAITING."

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—Do you know whether there has been any effort made on the part of our local Canadian Club or any of the Patriotic societies to bring to Peterborough Frederick Palmer, America's greatest war correspondent? I notice in the press that he is touring several Canadian cities, including Kingston, where he is speaking in the opera house under the auspices of the Canadian Club. Why should Peterborough be overlooked when Kingston is being honored by a visit from such a renowned writer and lecturer? Thanking you for the above space, I am,

JACK CANUCK.

"Unanimity" writes the following as a reply to the letter of Mr. Lees published yesterday:

His letter is a mere tirade of incoherent abuse. He whines, because unlike himself, I do not seek notoriety by publishing my name. It is not personalities but measures that the public want to discuss; but finding my letter unanswerable he tries to substitute abuse for argument. He works himself up to a frenzy and assumes that I am connected with the liquor traffic and proceeds to slander all and sundry the persons having any connection therewith.

When I tell him, Mr. Editor, as you may know, that I never drank a glass of strong liquor in my life, and have no desire to do so, and have no interest in the liquor traffic directly or indirectly, he must see what an exhibition he has made of himself in the public press; nor did I express any sentiments for or against the clique for which he constitutes himself the mouthpiece.

My letter merely stated that any scheme which would encroach upon our various war funds and create dissension amongst us at this crisis in our national life should be frowned down. To this he has not essayed a reply—nor can he.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—Reading in last night's issue a letter from a Patriotic Woman regarding the S. A. bandsmen being in khaki, a thought passed through my mind that it would be a good thing if the Adjutant got into khaki himself. It seems to me to be a case of "Don't do as I do but do as I tell you."

HARDEN PLEADS FOR POOR.

Demands That Germany Provide More Food For Them.

Demanding that the poorer classes of Germany be protected from food speculators, Maximillian Harden, the free lance journalist, published the following address to the officials in the Zukunf on Dec. 18, a few days before his magazine was suppressed by the censor:

"Sensible persons distinguish defects of distribution from a state of want, just as they distinguish budget speeches from melodrama, and finance policy from the craving for applause.

"We are told every day, (and we must believe it), that sufficient foodstuffs are assured to the people. In this case, your Excellencies, you should provide sufficient supplies, or else transfer to experienced business men a part of your excessive burden of work.

"If foreign countries offer fat at a price above the German maximum the empire must bear the loss in order to protect the poor from being underbed. A billion more or less is of no account now. The soldier must get higher pay, not that he may make purchases in the field, but so that he may send a few marks home to his family.

"It is a cheap joke for Ministers who enjoy undiminished salaries and the privations of a well-loaded table, to tell people to 'hold out. If necessary, demand new taxes to-morrow. Compulsory munitions are necessary. 'Public sentiment' can be looked after by the German people itself."

TIGERS FOR BATTALION.

William Marshall and Lieuts. Alex. McFarlane, Russell Thompson, Sam Manson, George Meyers, Lee Palmer and others. Major Roy Moodie of the 86th, is president of the Tigers.

FEW FRENCH IDLE

Not so Many Unemployed as Before the War

PARIS, Jan. 26.—The number of unemployed of both sexes in Paris, which at the beginning of the war amounted to 220000, has been reduced to 79,447, according to the official figures gathered in the period from November 20 to December 14, 1915. The statistics show that men in general have found work more readily than women. Among the latter are many servants who remain idle.

DRIVING OUT GERMAN FIRMS

British in Hong Kong Set April 30 as Time Limit for Them.

April 30 is the date set by the British Government for the completion of the liquidation of the business of German firms which operated in Hong Kong before the war. Information to this effect has been received by the Department of Commerce from Consul General George E. Anderson.

"Taking all lines of busines into consideration and allowing for many special cases," he says, "It is generally understood that the work of winding up the immense business of all these firms is about 75 per cent. complete. In most cases all business has been so arranged that further liquidation is a matter of periodical action from month to month, terminating with a short period.

"The disposal of stocks of goods of all kinds on hand at the time liquidation was commenced has presented the greatest difficulties. It was the part of wisdom, not only in the protection of the interests of German firms, but their British bankers and their British competitors as well, that goods be not dumped on the market in such a way as to demoralize it and thus prevent British and other holders of similar goods from realizing on their own stocks in a fair and profitable way. Instructions of the Hong Kong Government were carefully drawn to prevent any such demoralization. However, the disposal of such stocks has so far proceeded that the Government has fixed April 30 as the time by which it expects all stocks of goods to be sold, or the presentation of some adequate reason by liquidators as to why such sales have not been made.

"In general, stocks of goods have been sold to better advantage than had been anticipated. The shutting off of supplies of many lines of merchandise from Europe has enabled supplies of such goods in Hong Kong to be sold at satisfactory prices. Cotton piece goods, which constituted the largest item among such assets of most German firms, have been held until recently, when they have been disposed of at good prices. The recent rise in silver exchange has been particularly helpful in that line.

"Goods in the nature of luxuries, such as wines and liquors, have usually been sold at a loss, or, at best, about cost. There has been considerable difficulty in the handing of stocks and bonds and similar assets of firms as a result of the depressed condition of business generally, and especially in view of the bearish result which would follow the offering of any considerable portion of such assets on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange. Gradually, however, this property is changing hands, and the liquidation of these assets has been effected without as much loss as might reasonably have been expected."

For your guidance in estimating, we might say that The Examiner is Printing and Distributing to the Merchants, for use on Dollar Day, 36,000 Blanks, and it is only necessary to estimate what number each purchaser thinks will be used on the great day. Should any store run short of blanks, The Examiner will print more, so that the number printed might reach as high as 50,000. The number of estimates put in the first Dollar Day Campaign was in the neighbourhood of 16,000. With this information, an estimate can be made before coming to town. Of course as many estimates can be made as the purchaser has blanks, and they will get one with every Dollar purchase they make.

Make up your mind what and where you want to buy and come to PETERBORO' on THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3rd, expecting the greatest economy shopping event of your lives.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

FRIDAY NIGHT'S GAME WILL BE A LIVELY BATTLE

The eyes of all Peterborough hockey fans are turned on Friday night's intermediate game at Brock Street Rink, when the 93rd Battalion team will meet the Electrics. Last time out the Electrics won a nip-and-tuck game by 4 goals to 3, but the soldiers are confident of turning the tables on Friday. They need Friday night's game as an Electric win would put the Peterborough team well in front. The boys in khaki will have their strongest line-up of the season out on Friday, including Windsor, who performed so well for them on Monday night, and from this distance it looks like the game of the season. The soldiers will be out in force with a Rooters' Club and brass and bugle bands in action, while the Electrics will have their share of supporters.

GOTCH WANTS FORTUNE TO MEET JOE STECHER

World's Champion Thinks He Can Draw $100,000 for Wrestling Bout.

BUFFALO, Jan. 26. — Frank Gotch, the retired world's champion catch-as-catch-can wrestler, replied to the offer made him by Hary Pollok and Jack Curley to wrestle Joe Stecher in New York. This offer was a $15,000 purse. Gotch replied, in effect that he would come out of his retirement and wrestle Stecher provided he was assured that the public demanded such a match. But Gotch will not consider a $15,000 purse.

The champion says a meeting between him and Stecher would draw $75,000 or $100,000 in Omaha or some other Middle Western city where wrestling flourishes and both men are so favourably known. He invites another offer, but says he must be given a much larger guarantee.

Stecher, the American catch-as-catch-can champion, is a young giant, scarcely out of his teens, who is considered by his Nebraska neighbours to be the greatest wrestler of all time. He will make his first appearance in New York the latter part of this month, provided a suitable opponent can be found for him. It was hoped that Gotch might condescend to come here, but it now appears unlikely, as his terms seem exorbitant.

UNIFORMITY FOR COMMERCE

Radical Change in Bankruptcy and Company Laws.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—Uniformity throughout Canada in regard to company legislation and in regard to bankruptcy legislation is proposed by Hon. A. K. Maclean of Halifax. He has given notice of two resolutions in the Commons, one declaring that it is desirable to enact a Bankruptcy Act for Canada, and another declaring that the Canadian Companies Act should be amended so as to secure uniformity in company legislation throughout the several Dominions of the Empire and all the Provinces.

Better Qualified Teachers, etc.

Promotion Examinations

The system of promotion by annual uniform papers has now been tried in the County for seven years a period sufficiently long to test its efficiency. It has been found to be unsatisfactory for the following reasons, chiefly:

1. Uniformity, even if desirable, is not secured as the teachers' estimates of the answers given vary quite as much as the character and efficiency of the teaching.

2. Is it not desirable that promotions should be confined to any one period of the year. Cases are constantly occurring where classes that are not ready for promotion at one examination, are hindered by waiting for the next, and frequently special examinations have to be set.

3. In spite of promotion papers and other outside suggestions the teacher must be the final court of appeal in determining fitness for promotion. Efficient and conscientious teachers are hampered by uniform papers and regulations, while others find a way of "Doing as they please any way."

After careful consideration of the matter, the inspectors have decided to recommend that the uniform promotion examinations be discontinued and that other means be adopted for rendering assistance and guidance to inexperienced teachers and for guarding against tendencies to premature promotion.

Superannuation of Teachers.

A matter of some interest, educationally, is the bill to provide for the superannuation of teachers now before the Legislature of the Province. In that connection, attention might fittingly be called to the following considerations.

1. In this matter, Ontario is behind many other provinces and states, in that it makes no provision for the retirement of teachers who have completed their periods of effective work. So much has this been felt that some of the cities, Toronto and Ottawa, for example, have originated superannuation schemes of their own.

2. The Government of the Province, convinced that such a measure is in the best interests of education, has for some years, in consultation with experts, been trying to devise a plan that would be fair to all the interests concerned. The present bill is the outcome.

3. A noteworthy feature of the proposal is that, unlike most superannuation schemes, it requires the beneficiaries themselves to contribute a large share 40 per cent., of the funds necessary to finance it. In that respect it is much less favourable to the teacher than the Toronto and Ottawa plans mentioned above.

4. While this scheme will benefit the teachers, especially those who spend most of the effective working period of their lives in the work, yet that was not the primary purpose the authorities had in view. The main object was to promote the interests of education by retaining for a longer time the services of teachers who have gained proficiency, making it easier for boards to secure teachers, and decreasing to the province, the cost of training and adequate supply of teachers.

The scheme is one that commends itself strongly to all who desire better things for our schools, should have the hearty support of all who are interested in educational progress and efficiency, and the hands of the government should be upheld in their efforts to improve educational conditions.

I would respectfully suggest that this Council pass and send on to the Minister of Education a resolution approving the general principle of the bill and commending his efforts toward greater efficiency in our schools.

MURPHY WAS FIRED AND MADE FORTUNE

Charles Weisecat Murphy, who made a million dollars in baseball through his part ownership of the Chicago Cubs, was "fired" into making a fortune.

"I started life as a drug clerk," said Murphy. "I had hopes of some day becoming owner of a drug store. That was my life's ambition at that time. I was working for a German druggist at the time one of the opening ball games were staged in Cincinnati. I wanted to see that game, but I knew it wouldn't do any good to ask to get away. My boss thought baseball was foolishness.

"So I framed up a story. I told him that I was going to one of the Cincinnati suburbs where I hoped to sell a druggist a nice bill of our goods. The German was pleased — and he let me away for the afternoon. I went to the ball game and when I got back to the store in the evening I explained to my boss that I wasn't able to sell the country druggist any goods.

"'Id iss liddle vonder!" sneered my boss. "Yoost a few minids ago vun of my frients vas here. He sait you vas so bisy yelling at der ball game voul couldn't half sold anything but peanuts. You iss fired. Get oudt of my store—ged oudt!"

"I got out. There was nothing else for me to do but get out. I hunted around for a job, and finally landed with Charles P. Taft's newspaper. While I was working on that sheet a chance came to buy the Cubs. I enlisted the financial aid of Mr. Taft—and we became owner of the club."

Hardil, Cavanagh, Hagerman and the rest of them are all here in the same barracks as I am. Alex Butcher has gone to France. I expect some of our own fellows will be going in a couple of weeks. Well father I think I had better close my letter and get back to barracks. Hoping you and mother and the rest of the family are all quite well I remain

Your loving Son,
HAROLD.

P. S. Am going to take my kodak down to Aunt Alice's so I will send you some pictures of her.

The Soldiers' Club of the 93rd Battalion had a very enjoyable musical evening on Monday. A very interesting programme was given including a number of selections by the battalion band. The Club meets every Monday and Thursday evening in the recreation room.

Among those who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion yesterday was Stanley Ballard of 68 Murray St. He is a brother of Pte. Horace Ballard, a Peterborough boy with the 21st Battalion, who was wounded some time ago and is now in hospital in Bromley, Kent, Eng.

Battalion Sergt. Major T. Miller, of the 93rd Battalion, has returned to duty after having been off a few days on account of illness.

Albert Clemett, reported wounded in yesterday's casualty list, is a member of the 21st Battalion, and a former resident of Omemee, Ont.

Charlie McDougall Gets D.C. Medal.

In the recently issued honours list of the Canadian army, named from London, appears the name of Sergeant (42,053) McDougall, Artillery, as having been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for valour on the field of battle. His many Moncton and Peterborough friends will be delighted to learn that Sergeant McDougall, Artillery, "stands for no other than Mr. Charles McDougall, son of the late Fulton McDougall, manager of the Royal Bank, Moncton. He is a noted athlete; and on the outbreak of the war joined the 5th Peterborough Battery, C.F.A., going overseas with that unit.

From time to time there has come back to Moncton friends from others serving in the field, stories of the unusual activity of Sergeant McDougall. For one thing it is known that after the battle of Langemarck he and twelve others were publicly thanked for some valuable service by General Alderson, while he was a member of the gun crew which, under Lieut. Ollie Mowat, of Campellton, a few weeks ago, carried out an exploit in connection with the shelling at musket range of a trench full of German infantry.

Just what was the nature of the services which won him the D.C.M. is at present unknown, but a large circle of friends in Moncton and Peterborough will rejoice to know that McDougall is making such a splendid showing with the army in the field. He is now in the 4th Battery—Copied from the Moncton Transcript, Jan. 17.

The Kingston Standard says:

Mr. Bruce Mills is in the city to take a course in the P. S. I. He will be given a commission, and if he succeeds in the course of the P.S.I. will find a place in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Mr. Mills is a son of Lt.-Col. Mills of Peterborough, who recently returned from the front, and who himself has been in the thick of the fight with the 16th Battalion in France and Belgium. Mr. Mills was wounded slightly at the battle of Ypres, and was only ten feet away from Lieut. Day of Kingston, when he fell at Langemarck. Mr. Bruce Mills is a cousin of Major Mills of the 14th regiment and is modest in talking about his part in the fighting. He is anxious to get back again to the front and is preparing himself for another go at the Huns.

Kingston, Jan. 25.—In orders of the 146th battalion appears the following, issued by Lieut.-Col. Low: "N.C.O.'s and men must be particular in approaching possible recruits on the street. It is noted that munition workers in the Locomotive Works have been jeered at as slackers, and remarks have also been made relative to 'yellow, cold feet,' etc. This practice must be discontinued. There is a fair way of obtaining recruits by straight soliciting and reasoning addressed, and no other way will be allowed."

Kingston, Jan. 26.—The new depot batteries will be known as follows: Queen's battery will be known as the 50th battery, the 32nd battery will be continued as the 51st battery, the 33rd battery will be continued as the 52nd battery, the 34th battery will be continued as the 53rd battery. With "C" battery as a depot battery for the R.C.H.A., the city will have five batteries of artillery after the present batteries have gone overseas.

Twelve members of the Peterborough squad in the 33rd Battery are home on final leave from Kingston, to-day.

TURKS LOST HEAVILY IN A RECENT CAUCASUS BATTLE

LONDON, January 26.—In the Caucasus, in the region of Erzerum, the Russians continue to press the Turks closely and take prisoners, according to yesterday's official communications.

While no battles of importance have been reported from the Russian front, Vienna says the Russians have shelled several sections of their line, and that they are actively reconnoitering. Unofficial advices from Petrograd say the recent successes of the Russians have brought them to within less than three miles of the town of Pinsk, in Volhynia.

TOOK 4,000 PRISONERS.

A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says: "The rout of the Turks in the battle which resulted in them being driven into Erzerum appears from later accounts to have been even more decisive than shown in the first reports. Apart from the Ottoman losses in actual battle, the Russians captured during the pursuit 50 officers and 4,000 men. They also took scores of machine guns and enormous quantities of munitions.

"The influx of 120,000 Turks in Erzerum is considered to reduce the defensive power of the fortress."

Difficulties experienced by the Russians in the Caucasus are described in an officer's narrative received at Petrograd.

"For weeks," the narrative says, "our column at the summit of a mountain 10,000 feet high, east of Erzerum, was exposed to blizzards which buried shelters 15 feet under drifts and blew the huts to pieces. Our position was most critical when at length we were ordered to march. A hurricane of furious proportions was raging when we began to descend the snowclad precipices. The men marched in single file and forced their way shoulder high through the snow, firing their rifles to guide those behind them. Uniforms became sheets of ice and masks of ice covered our faces. Guns were lowered on the ropes but not a man was lost. We had our reward in the panic which our unexpected appearance produced among the Turks."

Advices received by the Overseas News Agency from Persia say that Rahib Hussein Khan, a prominent Persian leader, and his son, joined the native volunteers, numbering about 4,000 men, and attacked the Russian troops near Saro. The Russians, according to the report, lost two machine guns and a quantity of ammunition as well as a number of prisoners.

Brutal Torture Tales Are Told

BERNE, via London, Jan. 24. — Evidence accumulates that the Austrians are learning frightfulness from their Prussian masters. Russian prisoners, captured by the Austrians in Galicia and removed some time ago to the neighbourhood of Gorizia to dig trenches for the Austrian troops operating against Italy—a breach of international conventions concerning the treatment of prisoners of war—succeeded in escaping and reaching the Italian lines. They have sworn information about their treatment by the Austrians which reflects on the Hapsburg monarchy, and admissions made by an Austrian cadet who fell into the hands of the Italians confirms their accounts.

Many of the Russian prisoners refused to dig trenches for their captors, whereupon they were subjected to all sorts of cruel tortures. They were deprived of food for several days consecutively; they were suspended from trees by ropes passed beneath their arms and around their waists. Sergeant Alexander Sergeieff, of the 378th Russian infantry regiment, deposes that the Austrian General Hoffman interrogated Russian prisoners while they were hanging from trees in this way. The General asked them if they persisted in refusing to dig trenches, and those who defied him were thrashed as they swung helpless and at the mercy of their tormentors.

Most of the Russians who escaped into the Italian lines were eye witnesses of the barbarous deaths of four of their comrades by the Austrians. One hundred and fifty Russian prisoners stubbornly persisted in spite of all punishments and threats in refusing to dig trenches for the Austrians. Four of them were condemned to death as a warning to the others. Young Austrian cadets—budding officers—were assigned to the duty of killing them. This in the part of the Russians' statements confirmed by the Austrian cadet in Italian captivity. The deaths took place and all the other Russian prisoners were compelled to be present at the horrible scene of butchery. Full details of these and many other atrocities committed by the Austrians on their Russian prisoners are in the possession of the Italian authorities and will be communicated officially to Petrograd in due course.

GERMAN COTTON MILLS IDLE.

Lack of Raw Material the Cause — Substitute Fibres a Failure.

So acute has the crisis in the German textile industry become because of the closing of the cotton mills for lack of the necessary raw material that the authorities of the province of Silesia have been compelled to hold a special meeting in Breslau for the purpose of forming some plan to provide the textile workers with employment. Many representatives of both the employers and the employes, as well as of different divisions of the Government, were present, according to a report in a recent number of the Schlesische Zeitung, and it was agreed to establish a central bureau in Breslau which would obtain all the work possible, especially that given out by the military authorities, and see that it was equitably divided among the different sections of the province.

A great deal of the work in prospect is evidently to be done in the home, as the report refers to its division among the individual working men and women. The Silesian Branch of the Union of Patriotic Women is taking a leading part in the movement to aid the unemployed and will have charge of the central bureau in Breslau.

A correspondent writing to the Frankfurter Zeitung from Glatbach, an important cotton manufacturing city in Rhenish Prussia, says most of the mills in that section have shut down or gone on part time, because of the order limiting the supply of cotton and yarn to those concerns working on army contracts. The use of fibre from nettles as a substitute for cotton and similar inventions frequently reported from Germany are not noted as giving much work to the employes of the textile mills.

Scholarship of Teachers In Rural Schools Has Reached Standard of the City Schools

Significant and Gratifying Progress Referred to By Inspector Broderick in Report to the County Council.

Mr. G. E. Broderick, Inspector of the Public Schools in West Peterborough, presented his annual report to the County Council this morning.

His statement of salaries and certificates during the past autumn term follows:

Smith Township—12 schools; all 2nd class certificates; assistant to principal of No. 8 has a limited 3rd, whose salary is $450; salaries range from $575 to $650.

Ennismore—Four teachers; all 2nd class certificates; salaries, $575 to $635; continuation school has two teachers, each holding a first-class certificate.

Harvey—Eight schools; 4 second-class certificates; 3 limited 3rds, and 1 temporary; salaries, $400 to $600.

Galway and Cavendish — Four schools: 3 temporary certificates; one extended district, and one limited third; salaries, $525 to $500.

Totals—3 firsts, 20 seconds, 5 thirds, 4 temporary—31.

Satisfactory Increase.

It will be observed that the number of 2nd class teachers is steadily increasing. During 1915 a change in the regulations made it legal to engage limited third-class teachers in sections having a low assessment. Under present regulations, out of a total of 31 teachers, 28 are qualified.

Mr. Broderick stated that there was now absolutely no reason why any school, except one or two of the most remote, should be without a teacher qualified under the regulations. A most gratifying feature is that the great majority of rural schools are now taught by teachers possessing the same ability, same scholarship and professional training as teachers in urban schools—a condition never before existing in the history of the county or of the province.

School Attendance.

The enrollment per township during 1915 was given as follows:

	On roll.	Ave.	Per cent.
Smith	469	316	59
Ennismore	167	105.50	63
Harvey	295	139.46	47
Galway and Cav.	119	64.64	55

Attendance for 3 years:

1913	On roll.	Ave.	Per cent.
Smith	476	330	63
Ennismore	167	115	63
Harvey	185	101	54
Galway and Cav.	112	67	60
1914:
Smith	495	291	59
Ennismore	169	109	65
Harvey	295	128	43
Galway and Cav.	104	50	48

"While the attendance is creditable it will be conceded that on the whole conditions are far from satisfactory, and I have first hand knowledge that in some sections there are children who have reached their teens, passed the compulsory age without attending school for any time worth considering."

A recent regulation requires teachers to report monthly the names of pupils between 8 and 14 who have attended school less than 80 per cent. of the time. The inspectors will then take up these cases with the parents.

OBITUARY

MISS JEAN EASON.

An old and most highly respected resident of Otonabee passed away on Friday last, January 21, at the home of Mr. J. H. Fife, lot 28, concession 4, in the person of Miss Jean Eason. The deceased was 91 years and 8 months old, was born in Otonabee, and resided there practically all her life. Death was due to old age, the deceased suffering no illness nor pain. She was a life long member of the Methodist church. The funeral took place on Jan. 24, to the Fife cemetery and was very largely attended.

MRS. R. W. MUNCASTER.

"The following is taken from the "Daily Times," of Florence, S. C., January 14th, 1916:

"Following a stroke of apoplexy last night shortly after retiring, Mrs. R. W. Muncaster, one of the best known and most beloved women in Florence died at noon to-day without recovering consciousness. Everything possible was done by physicians who were hurriedly summoned to the home on South Coit street, but the attack was fatal.

"Mrs. Muncaster was born in Peterborough, Canada. Twenty years ago she moved to Charleston, settling there just after the earthquake. For the last ten years she has made this city her home. Her gentleness of spirit, her nobility of character, her charming personality and her good works have drawn to her a large circle of intimate friends. She was identified with every charitable movement inaugurated in Florence since taking up her residence here. In the King's Daughters she was particularly active. Her death will occasion sincere sorrow in Florence. She will be missed.

"Her husband and six children survive: Lieut. J. R. Muncaster, U.S.A. of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; R. C. Muncaster of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. A. M. Smith, Montreal, Canada; Mrs. C. B. Arrington, of Macon, Ga., and the Misses May and Lillian of this city. In addition to the immediate family Mrs. Muncaster leaves two brothers and three sisters: Dr. W. J. Delaney of Naugatuck, Conn.; J. F. Delaney, New Westminster, B.C.; Mrs. (Dr.) Ward, and Miss Delaney, of Montreal, Canada, and Mrs. W. J. Morrow of New York.

"Mrs. Muncaster was a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church of this city."

PROHIBITION PETITION IS LARGELY SIGNED

Mr. Ald. Langford, chairman of the committee of fifty of the County of Peterborough, a local branch of the Citizens' committee of one hundred Toronto, has received the following telegram from Mr. G. A. Warburton, chairman of the Central committee:

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 25, 1916.

W. Langford, Peterborough—

Meeting with most favourable response all over province. Thousands signing petition who have never favoured prohibition before. Only need to work together and absolutely cover all voters to succeed beyond highest anticipations. Don't let over-confidence, especially in local option centres, take place of hard work. Advise us of progress.

G. A. Warburton.

Mr. Langford, speaking for Peterborough, says the local canvassers are meeting with great success in obtaining signatures to the prohibition petition.

REEVES WANT CONTROL OF BOARD OF HEALTH

On a motion by Reeve McIntosh, seconded by Reeve McKee, at this morning's session of the County Council, it was decided to memorialise the Provincial Government to have the employ and dispensing with the services of Medical Officers of Health placed in the hands of the Councils, and that all the meetings of Boards of Health take place at the instance of the chairman of such Boards.

Reeve Fennell of Havelock and Reeve Squire of Norwood were not in accord with this idea.

The general opinion of the Council was that the rural Health Boards had little business and some meetings had been called when there was practically no business before them.

Chandos did not hold one meeting last year. Most of the others held one or two meetings.

THE CHILD CAUSE.

Stand firm, Allied heroes!
Staunch-hearted men, stand fast!
Though victory's long in coming,
'Twill be with you at last.
Fight on! the foeman weakend.
Fight on! with all your might.
And the day will soon be breaking,
When you'll have won the fight.

Stand firm, Allied nations!
Your cause is true and just;
Stand firm! and right will triumph,
As it always did, and must.
Take heart; your aims are noble,
No glory do you seek,
You only fight for justice
And protection for the weak.

Stand firm, British Empire!
Your sons are true to you;
The fight that you have entered,
You have been forced to do.
You always stood for freedom,
As your annals plainly show.
Now Belgium's wrongs need righting,
Once more you strike a blow.

Stand firm, France and Russia!
Stand firm, Italy too!
Strike hard! the ruthless foeman,
'Till victory is in view.
Let all of us united,
Be patient, firm and strong,
And in the end we'll conquer,
And right will vanish wrong.

Says German Fleet Will Soon Prove It Really Exists

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The German experts have been working on the aerial torpedo, which, according to my information, is now perfected," said Mr. MacMeehan.

"The torpedo tube, or pneumatic gun, launching the projectile, is about eight feet long. Air pressure is used because of the danger of using powder for a gun of that calibre on an airship.

"The projectile issues from the mouth of the gun with a velocity of 650 feet per second. This great velocity overcomes all the cross-currents of wind in the air, and the motion of the airship which made the bomb so useless a missile. It goes straight to its mark with an ever-increasing rate of speed, and strikes within a few seconds, even from so great a height as 15,00 feet.

"The projectiles, weighing four and a half pounds, has a point as hard and sharp as a cold chisel, and lands with a striking impact of fourteen tons. It will pierce armour plate, and then explode inside," said Mr. MacMeehan.
